Herbert's Vast Resources of Tenk.

In acquiring Burmah, England has got possession of vast forests of teak, which never flourished in India, was introduced many years ago, but was never properly cared for. Teak is a valuable. It is neither too heavy nor too hard; it does not warp or split under any severe test and does not shrink. It is easily worked, takes paint, varnish, and gilding well, and, when properly seasoned, will last for centuries. Teak is, indeed, a most valuable wood, of several varieties of color and grain, and takes a good polish.—Foreign Letter.

REVENGE IN FLAMES.

DISCHARGED BURGLARS GET EVEN WITH A VERMONT TOWN

By Carrying Out a Threat Made Three Years Ago—An Entire Destruction of the Thirty Yankee Village—Fifteen Dwelling Houses.

SOUTH ROYALSTON, Vt., Sept. 1.—The entire business portion of this town were burned, and also seven dwelling residences. Many people are rendered homeless, and the town presents a scene of desolation.

Four years ago two suspicious characters were arrested and charged with burglary upon the premises of M. J. Sargent, a druggist of the place, whose buildings were burned early Sunday evening. The fellows were very angry, and swore that whenever they should get their liberty they would paint this village in flames. It is now over three years since they were set free a few days ago, and many believe that they have fulfilled their threats. The railroad company has about 100 large stores and dwellings, and the depot, which is situated just south of the passenger station, and will at once occupy it for a freight station.

A co-operative building association was also built a few years ago, to take the place of those burned is proposed. It is now estimated that more than $100,000 worth in buildings and goods were consumed by the flames in about two hours' time, upon which there was but $40,000 insurance. Twelve residences and thirteen stores were burned, and but little furniture was saved. In several instances it was saved only the clothes upon the backs of the persons whose houses were burned. That the fire was kindled by incendiaries is the firm opinion of nearly all the people. The fire was first discovered in the basement of J. R. Burke's store, and at the time of the discovery another fire was discovered in the basement of Chester F. Sargent's block, about two rods from Burke's. When the fire was first discovered an appeal for help was telegraphed to nearby places. The Gardner fire department at once sent special trains with five engines from Keene, and one each from Winchendon and White River Junction, but before they could get here the fire had gained such headway that nothing could be done. All of the business portion of the village was burned to the ground, and now every merchant is without a store. The outlook for the business men is very discouraging, but they are putting their shoulders to the wheel, and already many are getting ready to build.

Following is the loss in detail, which is about one-third covered by insurance:

Adams, flour and feed, $12,000; E. B. Delano, groceries, crockery, domestic and furniture, $16,000; M. P. Sargent, drugs, fancy goods store and dwelling, $8,000; Sargent Manufacturing Co., $7,000 on house and stock; A. P. Wilmot, dry goods and stock, $3,000; C. M. and A. H. Lamb, tin shop, $3,700; W. H. Martin, dry goods store and stock, $14,000; L. C. Hall, dwelling, $1,000; drugs and stock and furniture, $9,100; W. H. Whitcomb, drugs and stock, $3,500; M. V. Adams, groceries and stock, $4,000; R. SCIENCE AND PROGRESS

HOW A FIRE PATROL STEAMER EXTINGUISHES FLAMES.

Important Government Document on Industrial Education—News and Nugget. What Makes Telegraph Wires Hum. Fire Steamer Throwing Water.

Cities with long water fronts are obliged to have fire patrol boats. These are swift little steamers with powerful pumping machinery. They must put out fires upon burning steamers, upon the great wooden docks and piers, and also in the huge warehouses that are always situated close to the water fronts.

The model boat of this kind is said to be the Zophar Mills, of New York. That city has now two fire patrol boats, both are capable of nobly serving. The Zophar Mills has calls on an average of every other day some months.

ZOPHAR MILLS AT THE DOCK.

The Zophar Mills is 125 feet long. When the fire boat lies at her dock her bow is pointed to the river in readiness to dart out, and all her connections with the shore are severed so that they can be slipped and she can be cast in the stream within a minute after an alarm is sounded aboard. At the bow she is held by a chain 1 inch with the highest bower, and that can be thrown off instantly; the telegraph and telephone cable has a detaching on its shore end that slips into a socket in the back of a little house like a sentry box on the pier, and can be disconnected in a second; the stern line is hitched over a snubbing post on the pier, and can be cast loose by the man who manipulates the cable connections with a deft motion. There is always a pressure of sixty pounds in the boilers, which is ample for immediate service.

The capacity of her main engine is 250 horse power, and her two pumping engines are thirty horse power each. With this power she can throw from each pump, when worked at the top of her ability, 1,400 gallons a minute. Her ordinary service from both pumps working together is about 2,400 gallons a minute. That seems like an enormous quantity of water to throw at a fire. At that rate she must have thrown about 20,000,000 gallons on the Reed street cotton fire during her 101 hours of work there some time ago.

THROWING WATER.

Fire boats at the seacoast cities have an advantage over others, since salt water puts out a fire sooner than fresh.

The Marine Fire company stay upon the Mills all the time, except when they go ashore for meals. Their captain is paid $1,800 a year.

A 6-inch hose pipe forms a powerful stream of water upon the Mills' deck. They could have been rigged upon the steamer. These are to throw water to a height. A hose leads from the pump to a stand pipe and is secured by fastenings. By means of a valve, a thumbler and cog wheel the hose from which the stream plays can be elevated or turned in any direction.

The Mills can throw water three-quarters of a mile, that, too, faster than four ordinary steam fire engines will do. It is a machine of tremendous force.

In putting out fires it is found that burning cotton is most difficult to extinguish.

One of the crew of the Zophar Mills, a strong young man, has served already in the course of his career, seventeen fires. He has two silver medals. The fire steamer has done considerable life saving in her time, also.

Important Educational Work.

The government printing office, at Washington, occasionally issues a really valuable book. One of the best it has ever published is a large volume called "Industrial and High Art Education in the United States." It defines the occasion of the word "high" from the title would improve it vastly, but still the book is valuable enough for the absurd heading. "High Art," so far as applied to this volume is a collection of educational and industrial facts. It will be the standard authority on the subject in the United States for many years to come. The author, Col. L. Edwards Clarke, of the United States bureau of education, has put much of his life work into this and other valued volumes are to follow the one already issued.

The body of the bulky book is composed of a series of papers, under the general title of "The Drawing Schools of the United States," relative to industrial, decorative and church art in America. The progress of technical drawing in the public schools is shown by them.

The work contains ample statistics and facts showing how the art movement of the country has grown. In this connection numerous wood-cut pictures of art and engravings make an admirable showing.

A report is made on the governmental aid to industries in Great Britain. In brief, the book is full of facts in detail everybody will find useful. Some of the facts are gratifying, others the reverse.

Bird-Killing Sparrows.

So much has been said of late for and against the English sparrow that the following may not be uninteresting as evidence:

Quite recently, upon the Capitol grounds, I observed a sparrow in the act of killing a brown hummingbird. When discovered, it had seized the struggling victim in its talons and was picking it vigorously about the head. Whenever disturbed, it caught the neck of its fluttering prey in its bill, and, after flying a few feet, alighted and renewed its bloody work. I think I supposed the victim to be a sphinx moth; but, although every attempt to release the captive was futile, the affinity of the hummingbird was unmistakable. Soon the first sparrow was joined by another, and then the scene of murder was carried into a copse beyond the reach of my observation.

To those who attribute the destruction of our American birds entirely to the demand for wings for ladies' hats, as well as to those who deny the quarrelsome habits of the sparrow, this piece of information may be of value.—C. D. White in Science.

ONE OF THE GREATEST SAFEGUARDS IN RAILROAD ENGINEERING.

Why a Train Can Not Travel on a Straight Line Down Grade—A Simple Explanation of the Matter—But Little Danger on Graded and Flat Curves.

"You may live till the jolliest day fades from history," said a conductor the other night as the train hummed along, "but you'll never see a straight railroad down a steep hill."

The curious passenger with the wart on his nose rolled up his eyes in astonishment. "My dear fellow," he replied, staring at the conductor, "I do not understand what is to prevent a train from running straight down hill."

"Just this," continued the conductor; "curves are necessary on a very steep grade. The engineer can not run straight with the great momentum of curves on the road while it is up among the hills. They lounge the curves up nearly seventy degrees on the road, and they climb right up hill. This is only partly true. If the railroad were run across directly at heavy grades it would still be necessary to have the curves. No train can get at a high speed down a heavy down grade on a straight track with safety. The explanation is simple. The tendency of a heavy body like a train is to move in a straight line in the direction of gravitation. It is not sufficient to overcome the tendency to keep up the great speed of momentum by the brakes alone. The engine flying down a straight track on the hillside, instead of keeping the track would shoot off on a tangent into space.

A Safeguard Sometimes.

"The curve," continued the wise man in the blue uniform, "is one of the greatest safeguards to railroading. Speaking of curves is particularly noticeable in the case of a freight train. It very frequently happens that an engine, drawing a heavy freight train, can not get up a heavy grade on a track; when going down a heavy grade, to control her speed. An engine going down hill is really more helpless than the strongest engine up hill. That is, she can pull a greater weight up the hill than she can hold back in going down the hill. It is a very common occurrence for a freight train and engine to have their brakes literally pull them down heavy grades at a high rate of speed. In such instances every curve is the safeguard, at the same time that the curve retards the speed and enables the wheels of the rolling train to get a strong grip on the rails. Without the curve the hills would be very dangerous were it not for the curves sprinkled along at frequent intervals.

"On some railroads it is the custom to disconnect the lever from the driving rods when a passenger train is descending a heavy grade at a speed for many miles. The train is managed altogether by the air brakes. Every curve acts as a brake of the speed, and in this way the train can swing along for miles at the highest speed with reckless speed, with the aid of the air brakes."

Just then the train went around a curve and the curious passenger was thrown to one side of the seat.

"It's a wonder to me," he gasped, "that these measly express trains don't fly off the track in going around every curve."

"Well, sir," said the conductor, "I've been railroading for twenty-five years and I never yet knew or heard of a train jumping the track on a curve. You can always get danger on a graded curve, and hardly any on a flat curve."—New York Mail and Express.

The "Thompsonian" Cancer Cure.

Dr. Samuel Thompson, the founder of the Thompsonian system, grandfather of the modern eclectic, botanic and physio-medical schools, describes in his book a method of treatment which may have something in it. It is to be taken as related in the following way:

Fill a brass kettle heaping full of the blossoms of the red clover, add a little water, place over a fire, and let it boil for some time; remove the kettle to the edge of the fire, straining, and evaporate the liquid carefully to a solid extract. With this material he directs a plaster to be made, which acts as a poultice to the cancer. The rest is applied; the patient to drink freely of tea made from the red clover blossoms.

The latter is said to have cured many cases of cancer in this way. No recent mention of this cancer cure appears to have been made. It certainly should be tested again, now that the different botanical remedies are more readily made, one than forty or fifty years ago, when Thompson flourished.

What Makes Telegraph Wires Hum?

The humming of telegraph and telephone wires, so often heard, is generally considered to be caused by the wind. Mr. R. W. Mc-Feeley, of Wabash, Ind., who specially studied the matter for several years on his private wire, which had a strong gift of humming, is satisfied that the wind is not the agent; for he found the same humming when the wire was on a dry, clear, cool and calm evening than at any other time. He is also convinced that the sound is not produced by electricity, for he could hear the humming when the battery was entirely disconnected. The conclusion of gravitation is not sufficient to overcome the tendency to keep up the great speed of momentum by the brakes alone. The engine flying down a straight track on the hillside, instead of keeping the track would shoot off on a tangent into space.

A Safeguard Sometimes.

"The curve," continued the wise man in the blue uniform, "is one of the greatest safeguards to railroading. Speaking of curves is particularly noticeable in the case of a freight train. It very frequently happens that an engine, drawing a heavy freight train, can not get up a heavy grade on a track; when going down a heavy grade, to control her speed. An engine going down hill is really more helpless than the strongest engine up hill. That is, she can pull a greater weight up the hill than she can hold back in going down the hill. It is a very common occurrence for a freight train and engine to have their brakes literally pull them down heavy grades at a high rate of speed. In such instances every curve is the safeguard, at the same time that the curve retards the speed and enables the wheels of the rolling train to get a strong grip on the rails. Without the curve the hills would be very dangerous were it not for the curves sprinkled along at frequent intervals.

"On some railroads it is the custom to disconnect the lever from the driving rods when a passenger train is descending a heavy grade at a speed for many miles. The train is managed altogether by the air brakes. Every curve acts as a brake of the speed, and in this way the train can swing along for miles at the highest speed with reckless speed, with the aid of the air brakes."

FROGS AND THEIR USES.

THE LEADING CHARACTERISTIC OF ALL SPECIES IS VORACITY.

A Dozen Varieties Common in This Country and Europe—Preparation of Edible Specimens for Food—Other Frogs Are Caught.

Almost every one is familiar with the appearance of the frog, as the frog family is distributed over every part of the globe. In America there are a dozen varieties, but only four of these are used for food. The bull frog lives in water the greater part of the time, but it is often found on the land a long distance from any water. The notes of the bull frog, that they are usually heard at night, are well known, and has often proved of great annoyance to persons of delicate nerves, keeping them awake for hours. The bull frog, according to Shakespeare, is a "croaking chorister of the fen." The bull frog, whose note resembles in a distinctive degree the bellowing of a bull, is probably the greatest consumer of insects and other forms of the parasitic life it makes. They are very handsome of size, even as much as an ox cart, which is said to have been driven by a bull frog. The bull frog is very tenacious of life, and is not to be easily killed, and yet survives the wounds. Indeed, frogs are frequently found minus a leg or arm, swimming about as well as when their fellows are in full possession of their entire store of legs. After they entrails and heads have been removed, and advantage has been taken of the skin by soldering it for the purpose of experiment, and 90 histrionic many important phenomena.

The characteristic of all species of the frog is voracity, they eat flies, insects, worms and anything that is alive, singular to relate, they do not touch them unless they are alive and in motion. Prof. Dowson used to relate a story about some frogs he was keeping in a box for experimental purposes, which shows their voracious propensities. There were about a dozen of the frogs, and entering the room one morning he found large ones. He had kept them for several weeks, but the attendants had neglected to feed them for a number of days, and upon going to the box he found the frogs had all fed upon the frogs which was dead and greatly swollen. Upon closer inspection he found that the two large frogs had eaten all the small ones, and when they could hold no more fed the larger of these two had swallowed the smaller, but had died in the effort.

Of the dozen or more varieties common to this country and Europe only five or six species are considered eatable and used as food for man. The celebrated edible frog, or green frog, or fontinalis, which the naturalists call rana esculenta, is found in Europe, and is one of the most sought after in the European countries. In the United States the spotted bull frogs, or rana halecina, are the largest kinds that are used for culinary purposes. The European edible frog is of a bright green color above, with black spots, three prominent yellow lines down the back, and white color underneath. Our bull frog is familiar to almost everybody, and somewhat resembles the common European frog.

As a general rule the hind legs of each of the frog are eaten, but in Germany every part, with the exception of the intestines and skin, is used. The hind legs of a frog are tender, juicy, nutritious and delicately flavored, and when nicely cooked, is one of the most dainty dishes that the gustatory nerves of an epicure could desire. They are cooked in various ways, in all of which their extraordinary delicacy is apparent. They can be made into a fricassee, or they can be broiled, fried, or even made into a soup, which is delicious. They are many dainty, but most people who eat them prefer to have them fried. The manner in which they are fried in the prominent restaurants of Paris is to parboil the legs in boiling salted water for a few minutes, and then parboiled for about five minutes in slightly salted water; they are then plunged into cold water for a few minutes, and are then dried in a cloth, after which they are placed in a hot pan and fried in the usual way. The broth can be made in the same way as cold.

In many of the large European cities it is a common thing to see the woman fishmonger with a barrel or tub on each side of her, containing live frogs for sale. She first cuts off the portions that are unfit to be eaten. When a purchaser buys the frogs, the fishmonger plunges her hand in the barrel holding the frogs, pulls out one of the frogs, and places it on the edge of the other barrel, and with a dexterous stroke of the knife severs the hind legs from the rest of the body, which falls into the barrel. The legs are then skinned carefully, and are then ready for cooking. The operation is repeated until the order is filled.

The season for frogs extends from March until November. They are in the best condition for table use in the fall, just before going into winter quarters, although there are those who prefer the spring, when the frogs are emaciated from the long winter's fast. The most delicate frogs are those that are caught in the summer at this season of the year. They are caught in various ways by the natives, some hooking and line, and sometimes by hunting them with long poles as they sit on the banks of the streams and ponds. The extreme voracity of the frog is easily taken advantage of, as it will leap after and chase almost anything that floats on the waters near the banks having the appearance of life and motion. A hook and line baited with a red rag, or covered with a piece of red flannel, serves as a good temptation to the frog, who will generally seize it without much or any difficulty.

After being caught they are preserved in large frog ponds, or "froggeries," as they are called, until they are required for the market. The frogs are kept in these "froggeries" and the frogs to market at regular intervals, and they are kept alive until the customers purchase them. The principal places where they are sold are the markets of New York and Boston markets, where they can be obtained from a number of fish dealers. The prices range from fifty cents to $1 per dozen, according to the quality and condition of the specimens, depending upon the personal inspection of the customers.—Cor. Boston Budget.

Reporting a Big Fire.

Mr. Dana, of The New York Sun, declares that the most difficult subject for a newspaper reporter to handle well is a big fire. It has, he says, so many elements of varying aspects, its cause must often be mysterious, its loss that any panic-stricken; its immediate and remote effects the most to be noted; the companies in which the insured property was insured, the amounts of the several risks, and the extent of the damage to owners and tenants, must be learned promptly and accurately, although the managers are loath to impart such information, because of the next morning they may wish to revise their estimates. Particularly when the fire occurs at night, and cannot be reported at once, is the task a difficult one. No good city editor would "kill" good descriptive matter along a big fire. Mr. Dana's best experience in reporting such a fire was at the Chatham fire in 1857, when ten or twelve buildings were burned.—Chicago Herald.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications for the introduction of its system of electric lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as a sufficient number of lights are applied for, in each and every section or portion of the city, the company's machinery will be put in operation, and the current turned on. The rates at which electricity will be furnished will be very moderate, and dependent upon the number of applications received.

Having regard to the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the adjustment of the contract with the city for lighting the streets, which will probably be made before the expiration of the month. Private lights will be furnished in connection with the public lamps, and the wiring from each of the poles to the buildings will be done without expense to the consumer. Applications for lights may be left at the residence of the President, Mr. Jas. M. Stillman, or at the office of the company, which will be opened for business in a few days.

A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Jas. M. Stillman, on Park avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will receive applications and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 8.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m. daily.

Runaways.

About seven o'clock this morning a horse attached to a hucksters wagon, the property of Henry Leighton of West Front street became frightened on Grove street and ran away. The horse broke the wagon and ran down the line for Bonich Plains, but was caught some distance on the west of that village before any damage had been done.

At a little before eleven o'clock to-day a horse attached to a two horse wagon and driven by Charles Arnold, was hitched to a post in front of the owner's place of business on Liberty street, when he is supposed to have become frightened by a passing train and ran away. The animal ran up Second street into New, and taking that thoroughfare to Front street, "struck for home" by way of the airline, the wire fences to the sidewalk on the opposite side of Front street and cop tured. The shafts were wrecked and the wagon more or less injured.

The Dunellen Trial.

The largest number ever in attendance at Justice Vars court at Dunellen were present yesterday to hear the trial of the case of Albert S. Manning vs. Nathan Blackford and wife brought to recover damage for trespass by chickens, pigs and cows on the plaintiff's (vegetables, vines, etc. Besides the interest in the facts of the case, the prominence of the parties and the reputation of counsel engaged lent additional attraction. The plaintiff was represented by Messrs. Jackson & Codington of this city and the defendant by Robert Adrain of New Brunswick. After a most animated trial, in which there was a fine display of wit and eloquence on the part of Mr. Adrain and characteristic good judgment and skill on the part of plaintiff's counsel, the jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff of fifty dollars and costs.

Attacked by a Dog.

Councilman J. R. Duncan was riding along West Seventh street one afternoon this week, when a large and vicious looking dog belonging to a family at the corner of Seventh and Liberty street attached his horse in a most savage manner, lacerating his flanks and fore and hind legs. The horse was returned to the stable and a veterinary surgeon was called in to attend the wound. The same dog is said to have attacked John W. Murray of Central avenue and Eighth street, as he was passing along West Second street yesterday afternoon, but was not finally driven off and Mr. Murray escaped unharmed.

Another Match of Mormons.

A second instalment of Mormons passed through the city about half-past eight o'clock this evening over the Central of New Jersey route on their way to Salt Lake City. The party numbered about 300 and nine passenger cars and six express cars were required to convey them to their destination. The route over which these S. and O. trains are run by way of Jersey City and to Wayne Junction, Reading to Shoberry, Harrisburg, over Wilmington and Northern to Wilmington, where the Philadelphia extension of Baltimore and Ohio is reached. The time to Chicago is said to be 36 hours.

Knocked Down by a Bicycle.

Bertha, the ten-year-old daughter of Seaman and Mrs. West Front street was knocked down by a bicycle in front of her home, about seven o'clock last evening. The child was running the street, when she was run into by a careless rider and thrown violently to the roadway, receiving severe bruises about the face, right hip and knee. She was carried into the house and the wounds were attended to.

Union County Court of Special Sessions.

At the opening of the Union County Court of Special Sessions in Elizabeth yesterday, Jack Mandeville, better known as "Liverpool Jack," an alleged notorious character, was arraigned on a charge of assault and battery on a police officer. He stoutly denied the charge and pleaded not guilty. His trial was set down for next Wednesday, and Judge McCormick assigned counsel to defend him.

Open for Inspection.

The Board of Education will open for inspection by the public, on Friday, Sept. 3d, instant, between the hours of two and nine p. m., the new school building on East Sixth street. The public are invited to make a tour of inspection.

—The fifth annual re-union of the First Brigade, New Jersey Volunteers will be held at the old homestead of Gen. Phil Kearny along the Passaic river on Tuesday, September 7th. The meeting will be held in the afternoon and a reception given to the guests in the evening. Mr. Kearny, a son of the General is making extensive preparations to have the affair crowned with success.

WEDNESDAY'S RACES.

Happy Girl, Annie Colligan and Monte M. the Winners—Seven Moats in the 2.30 Class—Superb Racing.

Yesterday, the second day of the Union and Middlesex County Agricultural Society's Trotting Meeting, drew together a large number of members of horse racing, including many ladies, who were present, mostly in private carriages. The day was a most delightful one, and the track and the racing good, which was most of the spectators came to see, at the best of sports. The first race was the 2.30 class, and there were seven horses entered for it, by five owners. Happy Girl was the favorite over the two straight heats. The 2.30 Class was called at 2.30 p. m., and the horses were named from the beginning to the end and Mr. G. T. Waring's bay horse Colligan, ridden by himself, took the lead, which he kept, winning the race and the money and making the best time of the day, 2.28 1-4. Time by quarters: 0.37, 1.13, 1.50, 2.28 1-4.

Three Minute Class.

FOURTH HEAT.

Happy Girl took the lead and was never headed the balance of the mile. Wm. J. Woodruff's bay mare Annie Colligan was in front of the owner's place of business on Liberty street, when he is supposed to have become frightened by a passing train and ran away. The animal ran up Second street into New, and taking that thoroughfare to Front street, "struck for home" by way of the airline, the wire fences to the sidewalk on the opposite side of Front street and cop tured. Latest Dispatches

FROM CHARLESTON TO-DAY.

Another Shock—The People's Misery—The Search for the Dead.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 2, 11 a. m.—The last shock of earthquake occurred here at 11:37 o'clock last night, causing additional terror to our already helpless people, whose lamentations are heart-rending in the extreme.

To-day people are more calm, but so greatly have they suffered from fright that many are unable to move. Some have received courage enough to move about, but in great fear, expecting any moment to be swallowed up in the earth.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 2, 12 m.—Efforts have been begun to clear pathways through the streets. For two long days and nights of horror men, women and children have been camping out in the fields, and nothing has been done to them. In their present terror to return to their houses, think of them as having any houses left. It is impossible to give any estimate of the loss of life and property.

Another Dispatch.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 2, 1.30 p. m.—Since Tuesday night the people have done nothing toward getting to their houses, even for food, and it is feared that some will starve unless the present state of affairs change. Everything is in confusion. The daily papers were not published to-day as the press can not be hoisted to work. Here-living camped once with their lives, they do not wish to run the same risk again. Efforts are being made to bring food out to the most terror-stricken who can not be persuaded to return to their homes.

Later Dispatch.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 2, 2 p. m.—Small detachments of men are engaged this afternoon digging out the dead and others are giving succor to the wounded. The first systematic efforts to get at the details of the calamity are now in progress. The list of dead recognized and reported up to the hour (two p. m.) numbers sixteen, but the search has only begun. The list of wounds already runs up in the hundreds.

Another Dispatch.

CHARLESTON, Sep. 2, 3 p. m.—Fully seven-eighths of all the dwellings and public buildings in the city are found to be either damaged or totally wrecked.

The historic St. Michael's Episcopal church, which stood in the days of the revolution and whose spire two hundred feet high, was the target for Gilmore's guns, when he bombarded the city in 1865, during the rebellion, is so badly damaged that it will need to be pulled down and entirely rebuilt.

The Average Number of Shocks.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 2,—3.15 p. m.—The earthquake waves from 9.50 p. m. Tuesday night, when the first one was felt, have averaged about one every six hours since. Hence the difficulty to get people camping out to return to their homes.

Not Allowed to Graduate.

A German lady of the cosmopolitated school attempted to brave public opinion a few years ago and attended the lectures of Professor Du Bois Raymond. She was so annoyed by ogling students, who one and all fixed their monocles on her physical features and by the words of the lecture go by unheeded, that she had to be screwed from their imprisonment and finally leave the room. A rather gallant young student, who was inquiring after who tried to overcome the lady. She was a poor girl, and disguised as a young man entered the varsity with honors, and took her place in the lecture room as a fellow student. She applied herself assiduously during three years, and distinguished herself beyond her fellows. For graduation she applied for admission and was informed that the "thing" because of her feminine appearance, the students little dreaming how near the truth they were came. But, how to get rid of her? Her examination was the most severe ever known for weeding.—New York Tribune.

A Queer Natural Chevalier.

Walking down Chestnut street the other day, I spied a man whose face seemed familiar, yet it was a moment or two before I could recognize positively in that shabby, seedy, with a tall hat, his long mustache carefully trimmed, and walking arm in arm with a handsome, dignified gentleman, attracted not a little attention by the passing throng. Yet the last time I saw him on Chestnut street, a few years ago, he was dressed in outlandish attire, his face rouged like a ballet dancer's, and he carried a monstrous bunch of bouquet as large as a head of cabbage. Shortly afterward he was conveyed to an insane asylum, from which he has only recently been released. It was Dr. Mitchell's patient, and it is any wonder that I did not recognize him until after he had passed?—Philadelphia Press.

Gold Discovered in Illinois.

A new gold mine has been discovered in Illinois. About 200 years ago gold was mined among Pottawattamie, at the foot of the spelicipe, on the old shafts are still visible. Of late a Mr. Sabery, who had lived in California and been interested in gold digging, observed certain indications which induced him sufficiently large to cause him to put up a steam crushing machine, which is giving satisfactory results.—New York Graphic.

The Absurdity of Having Ushers.

The foolish of having ushers at an afternoon tea or reception is simply absurd. The hostess who does not know the people she invites had much better not be able to call them by name. Ushers are a convenience at wedding receptions, where a large number of guests are strangers to either bride or bridegroom, but as an informal "at home" they are as out of place as a policeman.—Boston Beacon.

A REIGN OF TERROR.

Charleston Presents a Scene of Unprecedented Suffering.

STILL FINDING VICTIMS

Buried Beneath the Debris of Ruined Houses,

Which Swell the Number of Killed by the Terrible Earthquake—Many Poor People Camping in the Parks Without Even a Canvas Covering—A Fatal Panic.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 1.—Fresh accounts of the shocking scenes of the earthquake of Thursday are coming in. Not one during the whole terrible night of the city has been free from the shock, and the consequent state of terror. The city is literally in ruins and the people are living in the streets. Many of the houses still standing are unsafe to enter, and it is impossible to depict the truth that doubtless that proverb. Not a single piece of business is being done, and in every part of the city, which up to last Friday presented a prosperous appearance, there is now a scene of desolation. Provisions are being distributed from the city. Telegraphic communication is also cut off, save one wire of the Western Union company, which is working. It is crowded with persons private messages. It

SCULLING RACES.

HANLAN RUNS AWAY FROM COURTNEY WITHOUT DIFFICULTY.

Hanlan Has Little Trouble in Defeating the Toronto Oarsman Over Nearly the Entire Course—Large Crowds Witness the Two Events—Ten Thousand Dollars Change Hands Over the Big Purse.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The single scull match for a purse of $2,000, between Edward Hanlan, of Toronto, and Charles E. Courtney, three miles and a half straight away, after several postponements on account of bad weather, was finally settled with a turn, was decided yesterday afternoon on Jamaica bay, Long Island, and resulted in an easy victory for Hanlan. It was estimated that fully 15,000 people witnessed the contest. What little betting there was done on the course at the odds of $100 to $60 on Hanlan. Ex-Senator J. M. Oakley, of Long Island, was referee. Hanlan rowed in a cedar boat, 21 feet 11 1-2 inches long, weighing 24 pounds, and Courtney in a boat 21 feet 11 1-2 inches long, weighing 24 pounds. Hanlan was the first to appear for the race, and at once began to paddle up and down. Courtney followed a little later, and both were loudly applauded as they paddled to the starting point. After the course had been cleared, referee Oakley called the contestants up and ordered to get ready, Courtney being on the inside. When the referee gave the word "go" Hanlan was the first to catch the water and got away with a long lead. After going about one-third of a mile Hanlan was leading by nearly a length. Up to this time Hanlan had been rowing thirty-two strokes to the minute, Courtney thirty. At the big hotel dock Hanlan held a two lengths' lead and turned the stake boat seven seconds ahead of his opponent. The latter then increased the speed to thirty-four strokes to the minute, Hanlan rowing in the same position, and leading by six lengths as opposed to four when they started. Hanlan kept rowing, and in response to the applause of the spectators raised to 34 several times. He finally won the race by six lengths. The official time was given out by the referee at 22 minutes 38 sec. Hanlan's actual time was 22 minutes 20 seconds later. Courtney said after the race that he was fairly beaten. Hanlan, he said, will meet Elias Beach to a single scull race on the Tyne, England, for a stake of $5,000 a side.

THE TEEMER-BEACH RACE.

Won Easily by the Australian, With Time to Spare.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The sculling was brilliant and the day was fine with a light breeze, which caused ripples to appear on the water. The course was the longest that ever succeeded on the banks of the Thames to witness a race. Beach was made their appearance on the river by their boat was the first to appear. The start, but the start was delayed owing to the numerous craft crowding the river. Teemer started off at 10:45 o'clock, Beach at 10:46 minutes, and was the quickest in starting. Beach rowing thirty-eight strokes almost immediately took the lead and quickly forged ahead. At Duke Head, Beach was leading Teemer by a length, and, Mr. Wilson's tug, the former was two lengths ahead. Teemer then spurted, and with the utmost gameness put forward every effort to overtake his opponent but without avail. Beach without increasing his rate of stroke kept the advantage, leading at Craven Cottage by three lengths, and at Chiswick Eyot by four lengths, where Teemer was rowing a hopeless stern race, but still pluckily doing his best. From Hammersmith Beach paddled home with consummate ease, and won the race by four lengths. Teemer, rowing, after the finish declare that Beach is the greatest sculler ever seen in England. He started at thirty-two and could row for an hour at that speed. The betting at the start was 2 to 1 on Beach, and was 20 to 1 on him at Hammersmith. Beach's time was 22m. 52s.

The time for the race beats Hanlan's record against time by three-quarters of a second, and Teemer's record in a match by 31 3-4 seconds. The referee, Mr. F. Davis (Hanlan's backer), says he will not allow Davis that he took the time correctly. Yet neither man seemed to exert himself greatly, and the race appeared to be a mere exhibition.

Coal Deliveries.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—The circular of eastern prices, for coal delivered at Port Richmond for shipment beyond the capes, and at Bloomingdport, N. J., has been issued by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company. Broken and stove are advanced 10 cents per ton, and chestnut 5 cents per ton. The prices at Port Richmond for coal at Port Richmond will be: Broken, $3.40; egg, $3.55; stove, $3.70; and chestnut, $3.75. For free burning white ash coal the rates will be: Broken, $3.60; egg, $3.75; stove, $3.70, and chestnut, $3.85. At Elizabethport, the prices for hard white ash will be: Broken, $3.60; egg, $3.75; stove, $3.80; chestnut, $3.85. The prices of free burning coals at the same point will be; Broken, $3.40; egg, $3.55; stove, $3.90; chestnut, $3.95.

Cincinnati's Exposition.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 2.—The city is alive with flags and banners floating from all the house tops and from the streets. Speakers by the thousands are here and all the city people are making merry. All this is in honor of the opening of the thirteenth exposition, and the first and chief thing to signalize the event was a grand street parade, which was put in motion by the ringing of every fire bell in the city. The formal opening of the exposition took place last evening. The doors were thrown open and streams of people passed through the turnstiles with a steadiness that gives promise of a gratifying return from the first day's attendance.

CHURCHES DEAMED

For the Ballot Stuffing Campaign, It Is Charged.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—During the debate in the house of commons last evening, Mr. Sexton charged that the ballot had been tampered with in the interest of the Tories. He declared that the Tory agents had committed wholesale frauds in the recent election. He denounced the action of the returning officers in refusing to grant a recount without the preliminary formality of a declaration of perjury against Chichester Fortescue, who was returned for Louth. Mr. Sexton's charges were denied by Lord Randolph Churchill, who was responsible for the British vote. He praised the Irish constabulary, and said he hoped the house would not censure the government for the conduct of the police, who, he confidently avowed, had acted impartially.

Political Rallies Booed.

BELFAST, Sept. 2.—Rioting was resumed to-night on the Shankhill road, and the police were stoned until they fled from the ground. Reinforcements were sent for, and the rioters were driven away. Fifteen of them were arrested.

Uncle Sam's Bank Account.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The reduction in the public debt during July amounted to $12,000. The net cash balance in the treasury to-day is $70,527,561 against $60,206,525 a month ago.

Customs receipts for August amounted to $20,771,570, nearly $3,500,000 more than in August a year ago. Internal revenue receipts were $6,707,924—$600,000 more than the August of last year. Miscellaneous receipts from all sources for the month of August amounted to $28,196,320 against $26,061,580 in August, 1885, an increase of more than $4,000,000. The total receipts for the fiscal year were $28,000,807.56 against one, or $4,000,000 more than in August a year ago.

Rolling Mill Statistics.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—As compared with 1884, a new directory just completed by the American Iron and Steel association shows that the slightly decreased number of rolling mills and steel works in 1885, notwithstanding the great increase since 1884 in the production of steel plants, is accounted for partly by the fact that a number of rolling mills which were built in 1882 have been practically abandoned, and partly by the fact that the increasing use of steel tends to diminish the demands for the products of iron rolling mills. The annual capacity of the rolling mills in 1885, added iron and steel is virtually the same now as in 1884.

The Rebels Captured.

SOFIA, Sept. 2.—M. Zankoff, one of the the leading conspirators recently condemned to death by a court martial, has been placed under surveillance, as he is feared that he will either attempt to leave the city or commit suicide. The rebel troops who have been occupying the heights of Sofia were surrounded by the loyal troops. The latter compelled the former to surrender, when the rebellious officers were placed under arrest, the men under them being paroled.

DR. THIERS' STOMATINE
FOR THE TEETH, BREATH AND GUMS.
Destroys the germs of decay in the teeth, purifies the breath, and makes the gums hard and healthy. Being entirely vegetable it is specially recommended to those who are subject to bad breath, sponginess of the gums, or any form of disease of the mouth and throat. Prepared only by Dr. Chas. F. Thiers, Dentist, 207 Broadway, New York. Sold by druggists. Price 25 cents.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From Mrs. Mary Ann Hall, Plainfield, N. J.—"I have used Dr. Thiers' Stomatine, and find it all that is claimed for it. I have been troubled with bad breath for years, and have used many remedies, but never found any that did me so much good as Stomatine. I have also used it for my children, and find it very beneficial for the gums and teeth. I cheerfully recommend it to my friends."

WOMAN AND HOME.

ADVICE CONCERNING THE CARE OF THE 2-YEAR-OLD BABY.

A Warning to Young Ladies — What Thackeray Says—To Keep Preserved Fruit—English Women—Mexican Babies—A Mistake—Paragraphs.

When a child arrives at the dignity of 2 years he should be presented with a high chair. If he is an exclusively private baby he will take his meals in his own apartments. But if he is only the common, every-day 2-year-old he can be assigned his regular place at the family table and allowed to partake of the appetite with the same viands as his elders. His pride in the distinction conferred upon him will be enormous, and he will soon appreciate very keenly the liberty given him in regard to food.

Woe to him, however, if upon this promotion his mother carelessly permits him to eat as he wills. That little digestive apparatus will scarcely be capable of wrestling with an unlimited amount of pie crust, boiled cabbage or corned beef. And if he is allowed to eat his fill of cheese at supper his remorseful nurse will probably keep his doting mamma and papa from enjoying their customary balmy slumbers. The dinner of the 2-year-old must be most carefully dealt with, for on the treatment it receives largely depends his future health, vigor and beauty. If too heavy meals are imposed upon it at this early age it will retaliate with dyspepsia and be miserable for all after years.

If the little fellow wants a "piece" do not hand him a dime novel "with all page covers." He should be given some simple, easily digested lunch between every two of the regular meals, and not permitted to go so long without food that he devours at the table. Many a crying child that refuses to be soothed by toys or plays is really suffering from fretfulness and nervous torture caused by an empty stomach. He does not realize that he is hungry, he only knows that he is wretchedly uncomfortable.

A teaspoonful of lime-water given in milk or water will sweeten the sour stomach, and is not repulsive to children, as it is almost tasteless. It readily relieves vomiting, but if the latter proceeds from an overloaded stomach, it is best to begin with some low-down way until the superfluity is removed. Then the lime-water can be administered to take away unpleasant tastes from the mouth and throat. The bowels should be regulated by the diet, and this can usually be accomplished if the mother is observing. If a child is subject to constipation, give him oatmeal mush and cracked wheat, fruits, coarse breads and vegetables. If he has diarrhœa, eliminate them and all other food of a decided laxative nature from his menu. If it is an obstinate case that will not submit to the gentle suasion of ordinary diet, resort to other means.

It is wise to avoid all of the patent remedies recommended by advertisements and displayed on the druggists' shelves. A syrup made of blackberry roots steeped in water and well sweetened will cure the most obstinate attack of dysentery in children. For constipation feed the small lad plenty of onion syrup and relieve his bowels with injections of warm water.

Worms are popularly supposed to be responsible for a vast variety of unpleasant sensations in the youthful stomach. Whether they actually do so or not is a question that is not imagined in a debatable question, but there is no doubt that their reputed prevalence has proved an immense boon to the medical profession. In years gone by every young physician could find no excuse for imputing a juvenile illness to the eruption of the teeth he seldom failed to assert stoutly that the disturbance, of whatever character, was due to the presence of worms. If there is really reason to believe a child's system infested with these parasites you must look to its general health, and not to the cure of the trouble. If his stomach and intestines are in a condition to breed them they are needed as scavengers, and if in that condition they are capable of being that they are present. Cleanse the entire system by the use of plenty of pure drinking water, wholesome food, fresh air and exercise, and the worms will disappear. If children can be induced to eat freely of onions, either sliced raw or cooked, the system will be kept in so clean a condition that worms cannot exist.—Ruth Ortion in Chicago Herald.

A Warning to Young Ladies.

It has become high time that a protest was entered in regard to the abuse of confidence by photographers. In spite, however, of the ridicule to which they are subjected, fashion, which they contribute pictures which should never be allowed to go out of their hands.—Boston Courier.

English Women Dress Badly.

The English women dress badly. Many of the families are very decidedly stylish. Their clothes do not set well on them; and they are not often enough renewed. The ball costume, and even the scarce gowns, not seldom look fresh and shabby. Many an elegant lady is true, cannot afford to dress well. Two hundred pounds a year for dress is a large allowance for the daughter of a peer. I know a merchant, a woman of immense fortune, who declared she never spent more than £800 a year on her clothes. Of course, her laces and jewels were inherited. One of the "great" matrons in England asked me if it was true that American women gave £15 and even £20 for a bonnet. She said she had never paid £20 for a bonnet in her life; £7 or £10 at the most she thought enough for any one—laces, feathers and all.

Of late years some of the great ladies of gentler genius from Worth. But they spoil all these. Some of them said to me: "We ruin ourselves making ourselves hideous." This is because they have no eye for color—in dress. It is astonishing. Many an elegant lady is furnishing their houses is so exquisite; who live in old mansions where walls and tapestries and panelling or so rich and harmonious in tone, and the ceilings, and every up among great pictures and deliciously decorated China, whose landscapes and gardens are a marvel of refined effect, yet make such mistakes when they attempt to adorn themselves. Pink and yellow; scarlet and green, all at once are heaped on one unfortunate figure, aggravating every defect and wasting every charm with their discordance. Mrs. Mary Wakefield grave said to an American woman with whom she was intimate: "Why is it we cannot dress like you? I got this gown from Worth, but it does not look as yours. Yet it is just as he sent it to me, except that I took off some bits trimmings and put on grass." My countrywoman told me that this was the reason of the failure. The countess was blind to the harmony of color.—Adam Badeau's Letter.

Mexico Flooded With Babies.

Everything concerning Mexico is of interest just now, and it is pleasant to be assured that among the characteristics of the country are children. Thus, an observant correspondent in that country notes the large acquaintance of the people with multiplication, in saying that Mexico is the land of children. The land is flooded with them, and a small family is a thing unknown. They greet you, he says, at every window, at every corner, on every wagon and basket. They fill the carriages on the plaza; they are like a swarm of bees around a honeysuckle—one on every tiny flower and hundreds looking for their chance. A man died in the city of Mexico, followed to the grave by eighty-seven sons and daughters, and had buried thirteen, so that he was father to the grand total of 100 children. There is another man living in Mexico who has had two wives, and who has living forty-five children. Allowing the small average of five to the family, one can see how numerous the grand-children would be. I am acquainted, he adds, with a gentleman whose mother is but thirteen and a half years older than he, and she had eighteen more of a family. It is a blessed thing that the natives are able to live in a state but and cheap as they are, else the fate of children by starvation would be something dreadful.—St. Louis Critic.

Thackeray in Praise of Women.

Thackeray, in one of his novels, says:

"There are more clever women in the world than men think for. Our habit is to despise them; we believe they do not think because they do not talk; because they do not write books. Our conceit is the vanity we have."

I am only going to know women as he grows old; and for years and years my business has been nothing else but to study them. Of course I am not going to tell my readers that I don't know them. Every single woman I ever met is a puzzle to me, so complex and so changeful as they are. They are not clever! They are constantly revealing clevernesses of the finest sort.

"You see a dexterous-looking woman, faithful in household affairs, a light hand, obedient to her lord and anxious to please him in all things; silent on politics or literature, and, if referred to, saying with a smile of humility: 'Oh, women don't judge upon such matters; we have learning to men.' 'Yes,' says Jones, 'attend to the house, my dear, and leave the reading to the delighted Jones.' She has long ago taken your measure; she knows your weaknesses and ministers to them in a thousand artful ways. She knows your obstinacies points, and may turn round them with the most curious art and patience, as you will see me an end on a journey turn round an obstacle."

The Tyrant Man in Germany.

Not content with persecuting the women's club in Berlin, the German male is at present snarling bitterly at the female students at colleges and universities. One young lady actually had the bitter mortification of hearing Professor Hofmann's lectures on organic chemistry at a Berlin college, and, what was far worse, she even showed considerable intelligence in the matter. Hereupon a number of her friends for copies of any of his work that pleases them, while young lady is informed that at one of the principal establishments. Nevertheless, "the Russian fashion" seems to find favor, for no sooner had the first "elegantly - dressed young lady" appeared in the lecture room than the male students than three others, two of them elderly ladies, graced one of Professor Schulze's lectures on zoology with their presence. The fact was that the lecturer had been wise enough to illustrate his rather ticklish position. It was some foolish caprice of a number of conservative students that would not have realized either the folly or the fact that a photograph meant a permanent record of an ungrateful whim; yet here was the photographic picture of a whole class, and that, too, on the mantel of a bachelor who was not personally acquainted with the girl, although he knew by reputation. There was no harm to the young lady, and very likely might have argued that if a girl was willing to sit before the camera in that style she would hardly object to having it kept in her father photograph displayed along with the row of nervous and ballet girls adorning the young man's pipe-laden shelf. Thoughtlessness and a desire to annoy have played a part, with a spark of sensitive honor in the amateur photographer, who had given to a friend a copy of the photograph, and thereby resulted in a situation which might very easily have very serious and unpleasant results.

It is bad enough to have to endure all the bad pictures with which indefatigable amateur photographers flood the country; but this matter of violating confidence and of misbestowing copies of photographs should be regarded as confidential, if they must be taken at all, is one which is a thousand times worse. Young ladies will do well to be on their guard against the rashness of their acquaintance, since there is certainly no other means of safety as complete as not to have one's photo taken unless in a way that may be shown to all the world without causing the sitters vexation. As for the photographers, many of them deserve pretty sharp rebukes for the thoughtlessness and lack of tact, not to say discourtesy, fashion, in which they distribute pictures which should never be allowed to go out of their hands.—Boston Courier.

To Keep Preserved Fruit.

In order to keep preserved fruit in condition it is necessary that the jars be air tight, and that they be kept in a cool, dark place. Light and air are "deadly enemies," and it will penetrate even by microscopic openings, and thus injure the product of jelly formed in the tumblers or jars. Heat is likewise with a temperature considerably over 100 degrees. The top of every jar with a screw or rubber fastening should be sealed. Wax bottle seal. Jelly glasses should be secured with bladders, or with paper dipped in white of egg and pressed down to the glass without a wrinkle.

Many persons prefer this precaution to wrap every glass jar or tumbler in paper, and then pack each of them in sawdust or sand, so that they will not be affected by light nor by atmospheric changes. This is a good plan where we are kept should not to damp nor should it be in close proximity to the kitchen. In two above freezing point. Jelly glasses should be secured with bladders, or with paper dipped in white of egg and pressed down to the glass without a wrinkle.

To Preserve Paste and Glue.

It is found that the wholesome and offensive effluvia from decomposing paste and glue can be overcome by a very simple method. If, when making the paste, glue, or gelatine, a quantity of carbolic acid is added to it, it will continue in a sweet condition to the end. A few drops added to mucilage or other liquid glue will prevent it from becoming moldy. Of course, the carbolic acid is added to each gallon of wash it will prevent mould, and also the disagreeable odor which arises from pastes and glues from damp apartments. Another peculiar advantage claimed for the use of carbolic acid in paste for wall paper and in whitewash is that it will drive away insects. The cheapest and best form of carbolic acid is the crystals, which dissolve in water or liquefy at an excess of temperature.—Boston Budget.

Bad for the Young.

When the wisdom of our forefathers declared that idleness was the devil's workshop, it was heard, a deeper significance was meant, perhaps, than the mere words expressed. It is bad for the young to assert themselves, and for the law to encourage it in its professors. It is that more they fall into the pit of self-conceit, if no deeper; they lose the most refreshing charm of youth and innocence. Affectation grows into priggishness, and so into all manner of offensive qualities in manhood.—London Standard.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

Stocking Supports.

The Elizabethan shows a very convenient form jacket for a lady to wear while combing her hair, before putting on her corset and dress in the morning.

COMBING JACKET.

This combing sack of white batiste, with ruffles of batiste embroidery headed by an insertion of torchon lace. The sleeves are in the shape of a bell, and are finished by a ruffle of lace. The jacket is fastened by a bow reaching the right. Front to four inches wide, and is set on at an inch and a half from the edge, so that it covers the buttonholes and buttons. The pocket is square and finished with embroidery, and set on the sides, and a ribbon bow is placed at the throat and on the sleeves.

worn. They are often made of wool or satteen and worn over a different skirt, or a skirt of the same can be made. The skirt in this case is usually without draping, either left plain, plaited, or with a broad flounce at the bottom.

The model illustrated is of figured pink print, lined with surah of the same shirt. The body is double breasted, and is delicately adjusted to the figure, the fullness at the back being taken out to bring it close. Place enough on top to project half the thickness of an apple above the top of the cup of the barrel. Cover the top on these apples, and with a screw press gently force it into the barrel. Mark on the head of the barrel; a plain stencil makes the best mark. Use the brand only on the best parcels. If inferior fruit is to be sent, it is better to vary the mark. A reputation for good fruit may be established by the use of a brand, and inferior sorts. Some brands are so well known that the fruit does not even need to be weighed at the sale. Let an inferior lot go out with a brand that is widely known, and reputation will surely be lost. The expense of sending a barrel of apples from New York to the market at Liverpool is about $1. To this must be added the freight from the place of packing to New York, and cost of handling in the city. The agent charges $ per cent. on sales. An agent in Liverpool will do the same. Baldwins, Russets, Jonathans, Kings, Greenings, Spitzenburgs, etc., all do well on the trip.

Sorghum Sugar.

New Jersey's experiment station has demonstrated that sugar can be grown more worked without loss or sheath is of superior quality. The expense of evaporation is also notably lessened. All that seems to be wanted now is some clever method for getting the juice to make sorghum sugar manufacture a financial success. Certain disagreeable odors and flavors have been attributed in a general way to the juice, but it is thought that the method of pressing the juice from the cane more than half the sugar, in the best equipped mills, was responsible for the difficulty. Much skill is employed in the manufacture of loaf sugar is applied with great success to the manufacture of sorghum sugar. The stripped cane, when ready for grinding, is cut into short lengths in the cell. Cane with the leaves on is so much lighter, and lies so much more loosely, that it requires nearly twice as much water to fill the spaces in the latter case, and the resulting more dilute juice and the need of more evaporation.

Dislikes of Bees.

A correspondent of The Bee Journal writes that a brood of chickens were in the habit of frequenting the yard where his wife kept her bees. The bees stung all the dark colored ones to death, yet did not molest the light colored chicks. Why this preference? The editor writes that he has frequently noticed the advantages of wearing light clothes among the bees. We wear black bee veils because they are more easily seen through than white. Woolly, furry and dark materials are objected to by bees. A man with a ping hat on rarely gets stung, unless by a bee that is trying to "clean the hair" also for lice and bits the face by mistake, while a companion at a suitable distance is perfectly safe.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Trap For Drain.

During dry weather soil, stone and other substances find their way often exist into the mouth of drain pipes and choke them. To prevent this, Robert Crain, a farmer in Bucks county, Pa., invented the hinged cover here shown.

COVER FOR MOUTH OF DRAIN.

The trap is made of galvanized iron, heavily wired around the edges and for the lid to rest on. A brass hinge is used, to prevent rusting. When the water is turned on through the drain the trap is lifted by the force of the water until it assumes the position shown. When the water stops flowing, the trap falls of its own weight, and when the water comes, the opening is closed. Mr. Crane found that mushrooms crawled up his drains to the fish pool to destroy the carp, and the fish could not get out. The use of the drain prevented any further trouble. One placed on the end of the house drain will give good satisfaction.

Things to Do and to Know.

Cut fodder when the corn begins to glaze.

Next spring try that culture of potatoes, written in February.

The Mammoth apple, so highly recommended, is not proving hardy in the north.

It costs more to take a bushel of potatoes from Albany to New York by rail than from Liverpool to New York by steamer.

A. cross of the Jersey with the hornless Galloway cattle is said to be productive of excellent results. The calves from this cross are hornless.

A good-sized bag of charcoal hung in a cistern, will sweeten the water if it has entered or become foul. The charcoal should be broken into small lumps.

A bread-mouthed fruit jar partly full of cornmeal and water will ensure the cabbage moths. Have several such jars around the cabbage patch.

In setting milk for cream to rise this simple principle must be remembered: The depth of setting should vary with the temperature; the lower it is the deeper milk may be set; the higher, the shallower it should be.

Four million dollars' worth of potatoes are imported into the United States every year, and the farmers are complaining that the raising prices for the home product. The cause is that internal revenue taxation is so high.

Pickled olives and dry bread are said to be a tonic and appetizer. The olives are simply pickled in weak brine. The patient must eat no sweet. Olives are beginning to be raised in California in abundance.

HOWELLS STUDYING COLOR.

Photographing a Party Who Were Drinking Wine and Beer.

There was an amusing scene at Music hall, Boston, the other evening. A party of ladies and gentlemen, coming in a little late, seated themselves at a table at which one solitary middle-aged man of comfortable exterior but grave demeanor had already placed himself. The solitary man had a rather heavy tolerably handsome face, with a mustache combed north and south instead of east and west, and long, flowing locks, artistically disposed in a way down his forehead, which was surmounted with iron gray hair. His figure was full and portly, and he was clad in a suit of plain Scotch goods. There was nothing about him to attract attention. He was just an ordinary, good-looking sort of man, who acted as though he had come widely for hear the music, but who sipped a little of his Rhine wine now and then to save himself from the consequences of drinking nothing. The party of newcomers included a somewhat the middle aged man, who seemed not in the least put out, but, on the contrary, rather friendly, although he did not say anything. The party ordered wine, and with the talk and merriment. Then more beer, more talk and more merriment. The middle-aged man seemed to take it all in without changing anybody.

There was one lady in the party, a peculiarly sharp-featured, red-haired lady, who had never been there before, and who said: "Well, if I must, I suppose I will drink the beer that is ordered, and then drink it with an air of martyrdom, though a gleam of satisfaction could be detected in her eye. The middle-aged man looked at her with a quiet, peculiar gleam. At another time she caught him looking at her husband, a stout and very florid person, who acted for all the world like a boy just home from school. He got full, and the party were full of spirits, and the whole table was replete with life and color.

The middle aged man listened attentively to the music and sipped his Rhine wine reflectively, but it was evident that he continued to take the table scene in completely. Indeed, the lady he took for her with so much unlogical reluctance and abhorrence leaned over and whispered to her next neighbor at the table:

"If that man were not evidently a perfect gentleman I should say that he was watching us."

"Indeed! I've noticed it," was the reply. "Well, let's forget him and we has a perfect right. So have I, I suppose."

The merriment deepened, and the middle aged man was forgotten. But by and by a waiter came to the man at the table came and stood by him.

"Look here," said he softly, "do you know whom you have at the table with you?"

"No, I don't," was the reply.

"Howells, the novelist."

There was a low whistle from the man to whom this information was imparted.

"What in the world does he come here for?"

"Color."

"Heavens! that must have been what has been taken glance at Mr. and Mrs. B—— so frequently. They've been photographed by this time."

The last speaker turn off a corner from the programme, wrote "Howells" on it and handed it around. It read faithfully. The sharp-featured lady turned pale, and the florid gentleman colored two shades deeper.

The conversation languished, and the party untouched in the glasses. Five minutes later the middle aged man sipped his Rhine wine alone.—Boston Cor. New York Sun.

Howard, Knapp, a young son of Mr. Knapp, who formerly resided on Cranford avenue, this city, met with serious accident in the Adirondack mountains a few days ago which resulted in the loss of one of his arms. The boy was out hunting when his gun was accidentally discharged, the load entering the right arm between the shoulder and elbow. The wound was found to be serious and amputation of the arm was necessary in order to save his life.

Lincoln Hose Company of Perth Amboy recently held their annual picnic at Eagle-wood Grove and the affair proved most satisfactory. Among the guests present was Chief Baltzman of the city. The Middlesex County Democrat thus alludes to Plainfield's Chief. "Among the representatives of outside companies present was Chief Baltzman of the Plainfield Fire Department, and friend, who was a general favorite with the boys. Chief J. H. Terrell, of our little department here, and if we judge not forcing Chief Baltzman enjoyed himself hugely; the only difficulty we noticed was his inability to keep the gay and festive mosquito from the shining portion of his anatomy every time he removed his tongue cap to salute a brother fireman or his country cousin."

A Brutal Northwood Steam Engine Knocks Down and Kicks a White Woman Who Happens to Be Crippled by Chief Dodd Mercilessly Wounding Her.

The colored head waiter at the Netherwood hotel is alleged to have seriously injured and kicked a white woman employed at the hotel on Tuesday evening. The hostler is said to have assisted by the woman being knocked down and kicked. The particulars, those worth while exchanging, have to be ferreted out. It is alleged that the trouble originated in the kitchen and otherwise almost over until the woman concerned, Mrs. H. L. Young of this city was removed to attend the services of the physician. Instead of a description of the affair as it appears that on the night above the waiter and hostler were engaged in a fight. The waiter is a big, strong fellow, and the hostler is said to have been quickly subdued, although he was not without spirit. The waiter, however, got the best of the encounter, and the hostler was left on the floor. He was carried out of the house by his friends, and otherwise almost over until the woman concerned. Dr. H. L. Young of this city was summoned to attend the wounded man. The hostler remained in the house for a short time, but at about 8 o'clock on the night above he was seen to leave the house

A WOMAN DRUGGED.

HER MONEY IS STOLEN AND SHE IS HELD A PRISONER.

A Story of a Dastardly Crime Committed by a Mackman—The Terrible Discovery of a Savannah Gentleman—Another Victim—Treatment of His Sister.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 3.—Several weeks ago a beautiful woman about 35 years old arrived at the Hotel Bristol with her brother from Savannah. Their visit was for the purpose of selling some property which they owned at Arlington. The sale was made for $20,000 and they divided the money. The next day the young lady went to Hackensack to see an uncle, returned to Newark in the evening and engaged a hack, driven by Henry Stanle, to take her to the hotel. Six days later her brother found her, ill, half asleep, and in a dazed condition, in a room next to his own, in the same part of the city. After medical aid had restored her to a normal condition she explained that she was enticed into the hack and driven to the back part of the house, where a glass of wine for her, that she soon afterward became drowsy and appeared to be drugged; that the driver put her in the house, getting into the hack with her and recollected nothing more after being stuck in the room and part of the time that followed was coming in and out. The attention of the police was then called to the matter and the result was that Stanle brought the woman's purse she was unconscious. He said they were newly married couple, and that his wife had drank from the contents of her wedding cup and fainting home. He took a room, and for several days thereafter kept running to the bar and ordering fancy and expensive drinks, which he took to the room and shared his wife. He showed plenty of money and lived very high. He seemed like a decent fellow, but found his match in Stanle's wife. All that the proprietor of the place, Capt. Duncan, was sick about, and knew nothing of what was going on. When he recovered and went into the office and saw Stanle preparing to take his departure, he suspected foul play, and when he heard about the woman upstairs he began investigations, which led to the brother finding his sister sitting by her self in a room looking silly great anxiety. Meanwhile Stanle fled. It was found that the money he had been spending so freely on the bahalf was the woman's own, and that he had $270. Fortunately he did not know that the $10,000 that she had received for the property was in her satchel. This remained. The brother and sister soon left for Savannah. The authorities withheld their names for the present. Steeds has been found and is under surveillance, and the police have been notified from Savannah to take action against him. Stanle confessed the truth of the young woman's story, and realizes that he is in a serious position.

A POSTMASTER LED OUT

And His Successor Installed—Special Inspector Threatened.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 3.—Col. Wilson, the postmaster, who was removed from the office to George W. Lamar, recently appointed to supersede him, was formally and forcibly put out of his office yesterday by Special Inspector Simpson, who came here from Atlanta for that purpose. Simpson, accompanied by Lamar, came to the postoffice in the morning and found the ex-postmaster Wilson in the office. Simpson told Wilson he had ordered Lamar in possession of the office, and that if necessary he would forcibly eject Wilson. Wilson refused to surrender the office and asked the special agent who constituted the force to relied upon to put him out. The inspector replied by asking two gentlemen present to assist him. They readily responded and assist him in ejecting Wilson. They acquiesced, and Wilson, turning round, said, "Three men against one." He then went to the back part of the office and returned, remarking that he would send the inspector's response for what he was about to do. Inspector Simpson put back Wilson by the arm and marched him out of the office.

Indiana Republicans.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 3.—After reading and adopting the platform the Republican convention proceeded to nominations. R. S. Robertson, of Allen county, was nominated for lieutenant governor, and Charles L. Griffin, of Lake county, for secretary of state. Bruce Carr, of Orange county, was nominated for auditor. Treasurer, J. A. Lemcke, of Vanderburg; judge of supreme court, B. K. Elliott, of Marion; clerk of supreme court, W. T. Noble, of Wayne; attorney general, W. T. Hickman, of Shelby; superintendent of public instruction, S. M. Lafuntain, of Boone. A resolution extending sympathy to the Charleston sufferers and pledging the conventions to material assistance in their behalf was approved with great enthusiasm.

Washington Irving was Honest.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Register Rosecrans' recently published list of diplomatic creditors of the government included Washington Irving as receiving $9,000. The publication has brought a letter from Mr. Irving, a son and distant relative of Irving, residing at Kittanning, Pa., inclosing three cents to close Irving's account with the U. S. He says he understand that Washington Irving was a scrupulously honest man."

A New Whaling Help.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 3.—Great interest is manifested among shipping men today in the new whaling bark William Badger, which arrived from Bath. The old salts, after careful inspection, pronounced her a triumph of the shipbuilding art. After obtaining and supporting she will sail in about two weeks for the Arctic whaling fields, under command of Capt. Horace Monroe.

PHILADELPHIA MAYOR

Accused of High Crimes and Misdemeanors—Investigation Ordered.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—A crowd and a rush attended the meeting of councils this afternoon. Long before the appointed hour the corridors and approaches to Mr. Roberts' committee room were filled, awaiting the appearance of the committee of seventy, a committee appointed at a mass meeting of citizens to investigate the conduct of Hon. William R. Smith, ex-mayor of Philadelphia. The preamble and resolutions set forth that the mayor has wantonly violated his oath of office by the high crimes and misdemeanors in office by the embezzlement and misuse of public moneys which have come into his hands, and by the willful neglect and refusing to make deposits to the order of the city treasurer in payment of fees due the city of Philadelphia, as are by statutes required to be deposited, and by a positive breaking of his word to his accusers, and unfaithfully retain, misapply and misuse the moneys realized therefrom, and of other acts and deeds done and committed by him, contrary to his duty and the peace and dignity of the commonwealth and the laws thereof, and of the department under him.

The committee is instructed to make report to councils at the meeting to be held on Thursday next, Sept. 9, at 8 p. m., as to the truth or falsity of such accusation. And if the truth of such accusation be established, by the said committee, that they report to councils, before any other business is transacted, the necessary articles of impeachment to be presented to the Hon. William R. Smith, mayor of Philadelphia. The resolution was agreed to without a dissenting voice.

A THRESHER ACCIDENT,

By Which Two Men Were Killed and Others Injured.

TROY, Sept. 3.—Two men, David Phillips, who was killed by the explosion of a threshing machine boiler on Rutger Vanderburgh's farm, at North Greenbush, yesterday, was a well-known farmer of that section. Phillips had been invited by agriculturists to a number of the farmers of the vicinity, and they had gathered around him for instructions as to how to run a threshing machine. The boiler, from some unexplained cause, burst with great violence, and the larger fragments of it flew 200 feet through the air, striking Phillips and Vanderburgh. Mrs. Vanderburgh, who was Phillips' father-in-law, was quite badly hurt by the explosion; Archibald Hutchins, Jr., of Troy, was instantly killed, lived at Bath; the boy, Dr. Frost, will probably die of his injuries. He was a baker-on. A farm laborer, from near West Sand Lake, was also badly hurt.

The firebox of the boiler was blown 300 feet in a different direction from the boiler. It struck another barn and set fire to it. The barn, some outbuildings and a quantity of hay and grain were destroyed.

Tanners Elect Officers.

BOSTON, Sept. 3.—At the session of the Tanners' and Blue Leathers' association, George W. Allen, of Milwaukee, was elected president of the association, and James McLean, of Shippensburg, Pa., secretary in place of the gentlemen of Philadelphia who declined to serve. An essay on the tanning trade and the use of extracts was read by Dr. E. T. White, of Philadelphia. Last night Theophilus King grabbed, and taste were responded to by Mayor O'Brien, Governor Ramsey, ex-President James R. Hayden, Governor A. Rohson, of New York, Edward Atkinson, Congressman Collins and others.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The Stock Market Reopened Somewhat, but Still Dull.

New York, Sept. 3.—Money 3@4 per cent. Exchange steady at $4.85½@4.86. Government firm; currency 6s, 125½ bid; 4s, coup., 125½ bid; 4s, coup., 126½ bid.

The stock market opened strong but quiet. Prices showed advances of ½@1¾ per cent. over last night's figures, and the first sales were at those figures. Some of the lowest quoted depths since midday there was a better feeling, and on supporting orders the list recovered in the last part.

A MEXICAN ART TREASURE.

The Newly Discovered Statue of Hercules Reputed to be by Phidias.

We are enabled to present our readers an engraving from a photograph of the statue of Hercules, recently discovered in Mexico. This magnificent piece of art work is of Jasper, and three feet in height, and is supposed to be the work of the famous Greek sculptor, Phidias. It represents the mythical Hercules throwing the slave, Lychas, into the sea. Lychas was sent with a message from Hercules' deserted wife. That the footprint the messenger recently discovered in Mexico, and that worn is the infirmous one would draw from the action which the sculptor has shown as such a masterly manner.

THE MAXIMILIAN HERCULES.

This treasure was discovered in a pawnshop by a Catholic priest, Padre Giovanni Giamonoli. The good padre visited this shop with a young student for the purpose of redeeming some clothes and books that the latter had left obliged to pawn for bread. On seeing the statuette the priest wondered at it being in such a place. On inquiry he found that eleven years before a Mexican brought there and $36 was borrowed on it. The priest was too poor to buy it, so he went away and informed a wealthy gentleman that the statue was from the hand of a master. The gentleman purchased it at the priest's earnest solicitation, and he soon after found that he was in possession of one of the art treasures of this continent. Padre Giamonoli, who by the way is a nephew of the late Pope Pio Nono, is an archeologist of considerable knowledge; he unearthed the statue's history which proves to be this: It was discovered in the ruins of Pompeii some forty years ago and was presented by the king of Naples to Maximilian, on the occasion of the latter's acceptance of the throne of Mexico it was given to him. On the day of his death, in 1867, the statue disappeared from the palace in some unknown way, and the search of Padre Giamonoli unearthed it. It is likely that there may be legal and possibly international disputes over the possession of this treasure yet.

Prince Alexander of Bulgaria.

All Europe woke up one fine morning recently and were dumbfounded at the news that Alexander, the apparently popular governor, whom the great powers had appointed over Bulgaria, had been hustled from his throne. It occurred so unexpectedly that it required days before the perpetrators of the deed could be determined. They were instigated by some government, undoubtedly, but this is not so easy to locate. The wily Metternich pulled the silly strings accordingly fog the change that they had anything to do with it. It is a question that may remain as far from a solution as the one in regard to the party who assaulted "Billy Pinkerton."

PRINCE ALEXANDER.

The sympathies of the outside world will undoubtedly be with the unfortunate and unpolished his enemies, because he is so handsome for one thing. If he doesn't get his princedom securely back again and retain it he ought to, simply because he has so much the prince. He is a brother of that German Henry of Battenberg who married Queen Victoria's daughter Beatrice. European nations naturally would like England was going to do about it, and English papers hastened to assure the world that England was going to do nothing.

Russia is believed to have been at the bottom of the plot to depose him. It was a thoroughly Russian trick, that of surrounding him one day with officers of his own waking him from sleep, telling him he was deposed and marching him over the border.

However, there came in an element which Russia had not counted on. Next day his people rose in a rage and declared they would not have it, that Alexander was the prince of their choice and they would have him back. It seems to be the first time in the history of these regions that the people have had anything to say about anything.

United States Envoy to Mexico.

The international complications which are liable to grow out of the arrest and imprisonment of Cutting in Mexico for an libel on a Mexican published in the United States and circulated in Mexico City, through the release of Cutting. To avoid further difficulties, between the sister republics Mr. Arthur G. Sedgwick, of New York has been chosen a special envoy from the United States to Mexico to confer with the laws of the latter country for the purpose of bringing about a method of extradition and punishing offenders on both sides of the Rio Grande. Mr. Sedgwick is both a journalist and lawyer. As editorial writer and counsel for the International Copyright league he has made himself familiar with many of the intricate points of international law.

ARTHUR G. SEDGWICK.

JAMES BLAINE, OF MAINE.

PICTURE OF HIS SEASIDE COTTAGE AT BAR HARBOR.

The Reception Rooms of State and Cold. An Important Point in His Selsago Lake Speech for the Labor Organizations to Consider.

Whether rivals like to admit it or not, so long as he lives, James G. Blaine will be the leading Republican party. He is like Gladstone with the Liberal party of England in that respect. Since the election of '94 he has been silent, guiding his body, resting and breathing in new harvest energy with the pine airs of Maine.

But at the first gun which sounds the note of the fall political campaign in Maine the leader must emerge from his quietude and open the ball. He has always taken part in the state campaign of Maine, and he knew of no reason why he should not do so now. He said:

"I know no reason why I should sit silent now. I am a citizen of the United States, without office or responsibility. There is nothing to fetter me in any way."

His simple, carefully prepared speech at Selsago lake, has beyond doubt found its readers than any other within a year. Mr. Blaine is always alive, very much alive. Prohibition in combines an issue to be settled by each state for itself.

One passage in the address commends itself to the judgment of all races and all parties. It is the part calling the attention of the various labor organizations to the colored artisans of the south. He says:

"They (the labor organizations) seem to have taken little or no heed of the existence of more than 1,500,000 able bodied laborers in the south, with dark skins, but with expanding intellect, increasing intelligence and growing ambition. While those men were slaves, they built the cities, raised the corn and cotton fields, in the rich swamps and on the sugar plantations of the south, the skilled labor of the northern states felt no competition from them. But since they became freedmen there has been a great change in the variety and skill of the labor performed by colored men in the south. The great mass of course, still engaged in agricultural work, but thousands and tens of thousands, and in fact hundreds of thousands, have entered and are entering the mechanical and semi-mechanical field. They are making pig and bar iron in Tennessee and Alabama. In fact, they are generally entering into all the avenues and channels of skilled labor.

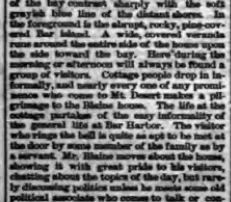
READING AND SPEAKING.

Of course they are undisputed. They receive for their labor about half what is paid for northern mechanics for similar work. They are able to take no part in making laws for their own protection, and they are consequently not benefited by the tariff. Within a fair standard of wages, or to receive a fair proportion of their proper earnings. I do not dwell on this subject at length, though it would easily be presented in a convincing detail. I mention it only to place it before the labor organizations of the north, with this respectful address to them. Do you suppose that you can permanently maintain in the northern states one scale of prices, when just beyond an imaginary line on the south of us a far different scale of prices is paid for labor?

HOME AT BAR HARBOR.

Mr. Blaine has two houses, both in Maine. His winter dwelling place is in Augusta, Me., the summer mansion, and its picture, is that in the picture, at Bar Harbor. Mr. Blaine is well off, and his houses are what might be expected of a rich man inclined to generous hospitality. The house is a very large one, but it is called a cottage in seaside fashion. It is on the crest of one of the highest points overlooking Frenchman's bay. It is a handsome summer home which could be built for $20,000. It is perched upon a rock. The road to the cottage winds around the back of a hill from Bar Harbor village up through a stretch of pine scrubs over a new made gravel road to the very crest.

From this striking and erotic nook the visitor enters a large cool room with furnishings rich and dark. The woodwork is of oak. A very large oval window looks out upon the water. A newspaper correspondent says of the view and of Mr. Blaine's greetings:



ON THE VERANDA.

"Through this window the beauties of Frenchman's bay present a constantly shifting scene of color and light. The blue waters of the bay contrast sharply with the soft grayish blue line of the distant shores. In the middle distance the rugged, rocky, pine-covered Bar Island. A wide, covered veranda runs around the entire side of the house upon the side toward the water. Here Mr. Blaine's morning or afternoon will always be found a group of visitors. Cottages people drop in informally, and nearly every one of any prominence who comes to Mt. Desert makes a pilgrimage to the Blaine house. The life at the cottage partakes of the easy informality of the general life at Bar Harbor. The visitor is in the habit of walking in at the rear of the door by some member of the family as by a servant. Mr. Blaine never shows the house, showing it with great pride to his visitors, chatting about the topics of the day, but rarely discussing politics unless he meets some old political associate who comes to talk or consult."

Mr. Blaine looks remarkably well and in good spirits this summer. He has made a large amount of money with his books. "Then that has gone, the Bible says," was a remark made by a certain spinster a long time ago.

THE MINNEAPOLIS SHOW.

A GREAT INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION IN A YOUNG CITY.

A Fine Manitoba Stone Building That Covers Seven and a Half Acres—Beautiful Mrs. Cleveland, Twelve Hundred Miles Away, Starts a Fine Sensation.

The event of the northwest this fall is the Minneapolis industrial exposition. The twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul have reason to be proud of this marvelous enterprise. The two cities together now have a population of perhaps 225,000. In the ten years from 1870 to 1880 Minneapolis increased her inhabitants more than three and a half times. She has the most extensive flouring mills in the world. Everybody knew that before. But now, also, she has one of the finest exposition buildings to be found anywhere.

The exposition building is built on seven acres solid, and is three stories high. It is of substantial and handsome stone, with a tower 250 feet high. The material used is pink Manitoba stone and brick. The stone is heavy and hammered faced, and terra cotta is lavishly used in the construction with very pleasing effect.

EXPOSITION BUILDING.

There is an open gangway 100 feet from the ground, and above that the spire and electric mast, supporting a ring of lights 300 feet above the level of the street. The building is lighted by a great light well, 40x150 feet, extending from the basement floor to an ornamental skylight in the roof. Surrounding this light well are the galleries for the band and speakers' stands, etc., and each floor is slightly inclined and provided with seats, accommodations for about 20,000 persons. By this arrangement every seat has an opportunity offered for seeing and hearing, without the necessity of removing the visitors from the main building to the separate music hall to the detriment of the interests of the exhibitors.

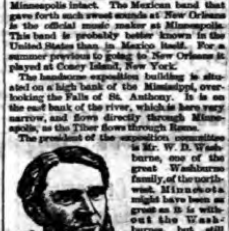
The building is provided with a number of fire-proof vaults, freight and passenger elevators, rest rooms, smoking rooms, writing rooms, observation galleries, etc., which will make it more convenient than any other exposition building ever constructed.

The Exposition association has a cash capital of $300,000, besides land valued at $200,000. Its stock is owned by nearly 2,500 enterprising citizens of the city, which shows the general interest taken in this great affair.

It is not by any means a mere exhibition of the products of the northwest, great as that region is. Almost every state has articles from all parts of the Union. Its visitors will embrace as wide a range. Numbers of the exhibits shown at New Orleans were taken to Minneapolis, and the Cuban relics that had gave forth such sweet sounds at New Orleans is the official music master at Minneapolis. This band is probably the best band in the United States than in Mexico itself. For a summer previous to going to New Orleans it played at Coney Island, New York.

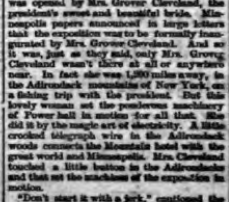
The exposition building is situated on a high bank of the Mississippi, overlooking the Falls of St. Anthony. It is on the east bank of the river, which is here very narrow. On the west bank is the town of Minneapolis, as the Tiber flows through Rome.

The president of the exposition company is W. D. Washburn, one of the great Washburns family, of the northwest. Minneapolis has grown as it is without the Washburns, but they have helped to develop the young state greatly. Indeed Minneapolis is the whole region of the northwest, which grows the wheat that pours into the city's hoppers through the mills of the Washburns.



W. D. WASHBURNE.

The exposition opened with stately ceremonies Aug. 1, and will continue six weeks. An excellent feature of it was the promptitude with which it was ready. The directors announced beforehand that every engaged space must be occupied by that date or be considered vacant, and they kept up to the rule. Consequently exhibitors were ready. The great northwest is on time.



"Don't shoot it with a fork."

But the most pleasing feature of the auspicious beginning of the show was that it was opened by Mrs. Grover Cleveland, the president's sweet and beautiful bride. Minneapolis papers announced days beforehand that the exposition was to be formally inaugurated by Mrs. Grover Cleveland. And so it was, and she was formally there. Grover Cleveland wasn't there at all or anywhere near. In fact she was 1,200 miles away, in the Adirondack wilderness of New York, on a honeymoon trip with the president. But this lovely woman set the ponderous machinery of Power hall in motion for all that. She did it by the magic art of electricity. A little button in the hall of the Adirondack woods connects the Mountain hotel with the great world and Minneapolis. Mrs. Cleveland touched a little button in the Adirondacks and that set the machinery of the exposition in motion.

"Don't start it with a jerk," cautioned the president's wife, and just as the electric impulse glide off her gentle finger deftly. In two minutes a reply came back from Minneapolis that all was working smoothly. Mrs. Cleveland wore a white dress, pink sash and roller hat.

A SUBMARINE TORPEDO BOAT.

Peculiar Vessel Recently Built for a Small Government by Mr. Nicholas Zahriskie.

There is now in New York harbor a marine wonder in the shape of a boat that will sail under water for days without coming to the surface for any length of time, and will carry the boldest sea dogs that ever trod a deck. The boat is the invention of Professor J. P. Holland, of Paterson, N. J. Mr. Holland, and is intended for use in harbor defense by attacking torpedoes to the bottom of hostile vessels, then backing away to a safe distance and firing the torpedoes through electric wires connected with them.

THE PEACEMAKER UNDER A VESSEL.

This boat is aptly called "the Peacemaker," from the fact that its possibilities of destruction are so great that it renders it a question whether it will pay the powers to go on constructing ever more expensive navies at cost of dollars apiece, that can be demolished in an instant by a little vessel like this, costing but a few thousands. The larger and heavier the vessel the better she serves would she be as a prey to a destroyer that would steal on her from underneath. When war is carried on with such weapons destruction will be so great as to destroy it all a halt, and invention like this boat tend toward a more general peace.

The Peacemaker is 20 feet long, with a beam of 6 feet and 6 inches. Her depth is 7½ feet. The bow and stern taper off from amidships, and the forward end of the vessel is surrounded by a dome 12 inches high, which holds the pilot. Through this dome sight the pilot to get his land fore. Admission to the boat is through a circular steeple shaft of the dome. All the stern there is a propeller and a rudder of ordinary fashion, and two horizontal rudders with which the boat may be deflected up or down. The interior is half filled with machinery and machinery. Electricity is the motive power. There are two engines. Compressed air is stored in six-inch pipes running around the interior, and arrangements are made by which air may be supplied from chambers. A gauge registers the depth of the vessel beneath the surface. Light is furnished by the three-candle electric lamp.

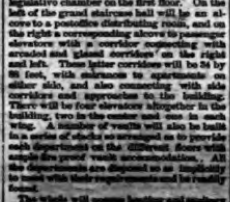
THE TORPEDOES ATTACHED.

When used in warfare the Peacemaker will sail away from its place in sitting on shore, under water, under and against the approaching vessel. The pilot reserves the dome and stands in a diver's suit in a well with half of his body projecting above the boat. He reserves the torpedoes attached together with a chain, and planned to surface-sail, which will attach themselves immediately to the iron or steel bottom of the vessel. When the boat is then steered away to a safe distance, and the torpedoes fired by electricity.

In a recent experiment the Peacemaker sailed for a considerable distance in the Hudson river, coming to the surface and diving under vessels at will. She was then sunk in fifty feet of water, and the crew left her and came to the surface to demonstrate how easily they could abandon in case of accident or hide her on the bottom in a war emergency.

FOR THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

The New Parliament Buildings to Be Erected in Toronto, Canada.



THE NEW ONTARIO PROVINCIAL BUILDINGS.

The new Ontario legislative and departmental buildings to be erected in the Queen's park, Toronto, Canada, will be in what is known as queen's court style, will have a frontage of 405 feet, the total depth of each wing being 244 feet. The size of the legislative chamber, situated in the centre of the structure, will be 65 by 85 feet. The main building will be approached by terraced steps 65 feet in length to a stone porch, treated in a series of arches and columns, with carved cornices with molded bases and carved capitals, rockets and enriched arch molds. Accenting a grand vestibule, 20 feet in width, will be the main hall in the centre proportions of 60 feet. The grand staircase hall is 50 feet wide by 69 feet deep. The grand staircase, 8 feet 6 consecutive, of the main flight being 12 feet in width, will, ascending two side flights, will ascend to the legislative chamber on the first floor. On the left of the grand staircase hall will be an alcove to a public reception room, and on the right a corresponding alcove to passenger elevators with a corridor connecting with extended rear wings, and with the right and left. These latter corridors will be 24 by 66 feet, with staircases to apartments on either side, and also connecting with side entrances to the grounds on the building. There will be four elevators altogether in the building, two in the centre and one in each wing. A number of vaults will also be built in the basement. The architect of the Adirondack woods connects the Mountain hotel with the great world and Minneapolis. Mrs. Cleveland touched a little button in the Adirondacks and that set the machinery of the exposition in motion.

DARWINIAN EVOLUTION.

Which?

In the suburbs of a quiet little town in Westchester county, a county of our colored brethren has established itself, and with characteristic willingness and general cheer pure the little chain is flourishing. There are a few morally black sheep in the community, and one of them got himself into a corner the other day in this manner:

Deacon Jenkins, of the selectmen of the town, has an unusually fine collection of bloated fowls and has been very much annoyed by midnight excursions parties from the "Rose Hill." In another "Rose Hill" is another town, which resembles him wonderfully in person and speech, is a state game commissioner. They were walking in the woods last Sunday, when they came upon a flock of turkeys, which they were lying on a moss-bed asleep, with a fine string of quails partly covered and hid in the coat. A thick armored bird, but it enabled to life flesh. "What have you got under your jacket?" asked the town councillor, while his brother stood behind a tree. "What's your business?" replied the other, as he gazed at the fine specimen of game.

The coon looked around uneasily, fingered his shirt front up and down, and blurted out: "Say, boss, if you'se Mistah Frank Smith, deputy game warden, I'se got some chickens, George Smith day's quails. Which is yer?"

They let him go.—Tid-Bits.

How to Catch Trout.

Let me give you a pointer for an impromptu method of catching trout, which has recently come to my notice. It is not only time-saving but luminous and economical.

Go off into the wilderds of the mountain fastness, where there are purling brooks which have never been fished through in the speckled beauties. Carry with you an old pair of trousers, with the end of the legs carefully tied with string, and having fastened the other end to the limb or outlet of one of those deep, mysterious holes in which the trout love to bask, whip the stream, front twenty feet above down to the trousers, and if you don't have to wade ashore with fish bungleable the gentleman who first explained this method to me is an enemy of an honest man's confidence.

It may be well to call attention to the fact that this is a fish story.—Life.

Sittings.

"I'm very fond of little boys," she said, as she tripped on a string stretched across the pavement. "I feel as if I could eat a couple of them this minute."

"How to select a piano," is the heading of a newspaper article. If some people had the selecting of a piano they would select that it remain with the manufacturer.

Sins was a crank on the subject of music. A gentleman knocked at her door and asked: "Does Mr. Smith live here?" "No, sir, his room is an inch higher—" the next fact, she replied, in a plaintive andante tone of voice.—Texas Siftings.

A New York Court Scene.

Hebrew Lawyer—Vitness, vat vas your name?

He Drew the Line.

The late Dr. Kemper, the theologian, once commenced service at the table a bodied lean that was doing duty for the second or third time.

"Why, my dear!" exclaimed his wife, in surprise, "you have forgotten something. You have not asked the blessing."

"Yes, I have, too," tiartly responded the doctor. "I asked Mary Lizer to bring the old hash all I'm a going to."—Chicago Tribune.

A Laconic Letter.

"In the days of '49" a member of a party of men was stayed away from his companions and was discovered by wild Indians. The friend upon whom it devolved to break the news gently" to the bereaved parents showed himself equal to the occasion by writing the following letter:

JOTTINGS.

—Oysters are ripe and the "festive" bivalves will appear at Dixon's Monday.

—Allen the stationer, offers great and timely inducements in his new advertisement to-day.

—The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders held a meeting at Elizabeth on Thursday afternoon.

—The corner stone of the new M. E. church in course of construction at Flemington was laid yesterday afternoon.

—A benediction service was held in St. Mary's church at eight o'clock last evening, it being the first Friday evening of the month.

—The subject of furnishing a system of water works for the borough was noticeably absent at the Council meeting last evening.

—New Jersey has a mile of railroad to every four square miles of territory, and in this respect exceeds every other State in the Union.

—A Plainfield nine defeated a quad Brook nine in a game of base ball in this city yesterday afternoon by a score of seven to three.

—The Knights of Labor of this city have arranged to go to Newark on Monday and take part in the grand labor demonstration in that city.

—The Sunday-school of the Holy Cross church will be ready for occupancy and the school will reassemble therein one week from to-morrow.

—The labor organization in Elizabeth subscribed over $1,000 and will have a grand open-air demonstration on Monday afternoon next to celebrate labor's holiday.

—One week from next Monday, the North Plainfield public school will open for the fall and winter term, and the school children are happy (?) in consequence thereof.

—The Middlesex County Gun Club will shoot a match with the Knickerbocker Club on the grounds of the former club at Dunellen, on Wednesday afternoon of next week.

—Messrs. Fisher Pidcock and Jacob Van Doon of White House, Somerset county, have been awarded the contract for building the line bridge over the Lamington river.

—Charles Williams and Albert Cook have returned from their summer "outing" at Elizabeth, having arrived at Bethlehood per freight train this morning, thence to this city on foot.

—The scaffolding around the new addition to the county jail at Elizabeth broke yesterday afternoon, precipitating two bricklayers to the ground. The men were severely bruised and one of them had his finger broken.

—Five boys named Cox, Lyons, Conway, Mahew and Kane were announced to appear before the City Judge yesterday afternoon to answer to a charge of throwing stones at a soldier named Terrell on Tuesday. The Judge gave them a severe reprimand and discharged them.

—There are plaster-of-Paris smiles on the faces of the political paupers and pettifoggers who are causing the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield so much trouble, but this is the last year they will have such a state of ill feeling and discord would be barely possible. Obnoxious boroughites seem to glory in making themselves even more obnoxious.

—Walter Scott & Co. have shipped to C. S. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., sarsaparilla medicine manufacturer, four new printing presses, one of which is of novel construction, specially designed to produce "Hood's Latest," an eight-page publication with lithographic page outside and letter-press printing inside. The machine delivers ten complete papers, cut and pasted, at each revolution of its cylinders. The same firm have now under consideration a large machine for J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., which will turn out 15,000 complete, folded almanacs of 32 pages per hour.

After the Rioters.

The borough authorities were apparently powerless when a mob of over four hundred excited citizens gathered in the streets and about the lock-up in North Plainfield a few days ago, and the evidence of the fact is the fact that Justice Mathison, as committing Patrick Lynch, a boatman from this city, to jail for five days, for alleged violation of the boat ordinance. The state of affairs undoubtedly took a more positive, when it was made known that warrants were out for the arrest of the alleged ringleaders. Marshal Beiker lodged complaints against eleven of the alleged instigators of the riot, and Marshal Weaver yesterday afternoon arrested Watson Dungay as one of the eleven. He was also held to the sum of $200 for a hearing on Monday morning next. Later in the day William Mabell's was arraigned before Justice Mathison on a similar charge. He furnished a like amount of bail for his appearance at the same time.

Marshal Weaver also had a warrant on David Carney for alleged participation in the riot. He waived examination and Mr. R. F. Gray became his bondsman to the sum of fifty dollars to await the action of the Grand Jury. Marshal Weaver says that immediately after his release Carney began to show him and kept it up until it became intolerable and he again placed him under arrest, but Justice Mathison refused to entertain the complaint. Others say that Weaver aimed Carney.

John McWilliams, the baggage-master on the night train, which passes through this city at 8.40 p. m., had an accident, with a serious accident when nearing the Grand station last evening. He was adjusting the brake on the roof of a freight car, when the chain broke throwing him backwards from the car. The injured man was carried to the Grand station and brought to this city on the 10.45 p. m. train, and Dr. Fritts summoned. The man was found to be suffering from contusions about the head and he is thought to have been injured internally. He was made as comfortable as possible under the circumstances and the doctor accompanied him to his home in Easton on the 5.10 a. m. train this morning.

On July 5, 1886, the same man was struck by an overhead bridge at Phillipsburg and thrown from a car, sustaining injuries which confined him to the house for three months.

An Alleged Nuisance.

Frank DeCamp resides with his family on Linden avenue, North Plainfield. He says that four of his children have just recovered from an attack of scarlet fever, which he attributes to the proximity of his feed stable to the rear of the slaughter house of Ludtke & Simmons's abandoned slaughter house, which is situated but about thirty feet from his back door. He says that several other persons in the immediate vicinity of the slaughter house are sick and their illness is thought to have been caused by foul air. Mr. DeCamp says that he, with others, sent a remonstrance to the Council at a former meeting, but no attention has been given to the matter. The subject was brought to the notice of the borough Council at its last meeting, and Mr. DeCamp says if that body does not act in the matter the residents thereabouts will apply to the courts.

Fair For the Fresh Air Fund.

A very pleasant "Children's Fair" took place Friday afternoon on the grounds of Charles Hyde of this city, and over $125 were obtained for the Fresh Air Fund. The grounds were beautifully decorated with flags and bunting, and a large number of visitors were present. Among the attractions were a flower table, fishing pond, soap bubble table, soda water and refreshment and candy tables, boats on the lake, and pony rides. The large summer house was devoted to fancy articles. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hyde received the guests and contributed much to the pleasure of all present.

—The last grand excursion of the season will be given by Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., from this city to Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, during the first week in October.

—Borough Surveyor Dunham yesterday afternoon arrested Mary Leahe Jones, a colored woman, who was in charge of three children of Edwin Stevens of Grandview avenue. The woman was arrested on Somerset street for being drunk. The children were cared for and the drunken nurse was locked up to sleep off her debauch. She was subsequently released.

—Burglars entered the residence of Mr. Brainard on East Fifth street during Thursday night, but were frightened away by the barking of dogs before accomplishing their purpose. The same night the cellar of Mr. C. C. Shaffer's residence on East Fifth street was broken into, but the burglars were evidently frightened away before gaining admittance to the upper part of the house. Nothing of value was missing.

—A number of persons visited the new school building on Fifth street yesterday and were greatly pleased with the structure. It is a credit, both to the gentlemen of the Board of Education and the skill of Mr. Teale, the architect. President John W. Murray and Judge Harper were very happy last evening showing visitors around the building and explaining the various provisions for the comfort of the pupils and their instructors.

—Councilman Goddard, the general manager of the District Messenger service, has had an alarm bell placed in position in front of the company's office on Park avenue which begins striking at one minute before noon, and continues to sound until half a minute before noon, then omitting one tap the bell is sounded every second until within ten seconds of noon when it becomes silent, and at exactly twelve o'clock the ball is tapped once. The bell is rung from Washington Rock and is intended to be a guide whereby watches and clocks may be set by Washington time.

Borough Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Council was held in the Council chamber on Somerset street last evening. The roll call showed the following Council-men present: Mayor Van Winkle and Councilmen Arnold, McCutchen, Ritter and Slater—4. Messrs. Thickston and Weaver were absent. The clerk read the minutes of the last regular meeting and they were approved as read.

The clerk read the following applications for licenses, none of which had already been granted, and upon motion of Mr. Slater they were referred to the Licenses Committee: Biggs—Albert O. Perry; beer—Dennis T. O'Brien, A. Unsinger, Kate Newman, Thos. Clark, P. Lynch (another person) Biggs to W. P. Foster; wines, selling—William Cook; grocery—N. T. Babbitt; same—Thomas J. McCann.

Mr. Slater presented a petition relating to an alleged nuisance, but it was tabled for the present.

The following bills were presented, audited and subsequently ordered paid:

F. V. Weaver	$1.62
Thos. J. Young	1.75

The clerk then read monthly statement which showed the total amount of money on hand at the beginning of the month together with the receipts during the month, amounting to the sum of $914.78. $60.00 had been disbursed, leaving a balance of $854.90 on hand.

Mr. Slater moved that the Committee on Laws and Ordinances, presented "An Ordinance to regulate the construction of sewers and prohibiting the discharge of sewage into Plainfield for the laying of pipes and repairing the same," which was adopted on motion of Mr. Slater, seconded by Mr. Arnold and carried.

Mr. Slater from Committee on Streets and Public Health offered a resolution that said Committee be authorized and empowered to notify and require all persons owning land along each street where property owners shall failed to comply with an official notice to fill up, grade, drain or otherwise improve said property, as ordered.

Mr. McCutchen from same committee reported on petition of H. K. Carryl and others asking for grading of Craig Place, and reported favorably. Said report was adopted on motion of Mr. Arnold, seconded by Mr. Slater and carried. Mr. Slater moved that the petition be referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health, with power. Motion carried.

Mr. Slater called up for second reading the above ordinance relating to the construction of streets, etc. It was read for the second time and took the usual course.

Mr. Slater from Committee on the matter of riding bicycles on the sidewalk and asked whether the Council had any redress in case of accidents resulting therefrom. The mayor thought it would be wise to have an ordinance prohibiting the riding of bicycles on the walks, and the Law and Ordinance Committee was instructed to prepare an ordinance relating to the matter and present it at the next meeting.

The Council then adjourned.

Patents to Jerseymen.

The following is a list of patents granted to residents of the State for the week ending Saturday, August 28, 1886: Design (5 patents) J. Ashmead, Newark; design, T. The Fall Crop in Somerset County.

There is no lack of candidates for the Democratic nomination for sheriff this fall. The list as revised to date includes the following well-known party leaders. Our only regret is that they cannot all be sheriff: Richard Brophy, Montgomery; Jacob V. Tunison, Franklin; Charles Middleton, Bridgewater; C. H. Staats, Franklin; C. L. Hoagland, Bedminster; John Van Doren, Bridgewater; Wm. V. Lane, Bridgewater; Wm. Hoagland, Franklin; Austin Moore, Bridgewater; Adam Hummel, Hillsborough; Wm. Stryker, Hillsborough; Wm. Hoagland, Montgomery.—Somerset Democrat.

—The Somerset County Temperance convention will be held in Veghte's grove, near Somerville, on Saturday, September 11th. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, ex-Judge Morrow, and Thos. V. Cator will be present and address the convention.

—The following named have been selected for the Congressional Committee for the Third District which comprises the counties of Monmouth, Middlesex and Union: John S. Applegate, J. F. Babcock and Amos Clark, Jr. The committee will appoint the date for holding the next Congressional Convention at its first meeting.

—Yesterday, while the farmers are pretty well excited with the crops this season. On account of the wet weather the grass crop is an abundant one, probably the best for twenty years; wheat, rye and oats have never been better, corn is looking prosperous, especially in this county, apples are plentiful, vegetables as a rule have done well and the melon crop, which it was predicted would be short, will give a fair return. Peaches are fine and a full crop.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

His Breath Good for the Grocers.

RACOON EVENING EXPRESS—We are glad to see that the grocers, unlike the dry-goodsmen, have not allowed themselves to be overruled by one who refused to accede to so sensible a plan as the early closing. The clerks, their families and friends, and all right-thinking people who have any feeling for their fellow-men, will find an effectual way to resent that one's inhumane treatment, and withhold their patronage.

Now the people are returning home from their summer trips and ready to give their thoughts to business interest, this matter will be encouraged. Decision on their part will accomplish the object. How many ladies are there in this city who would want their father, his-band or brother confined in a store, needlessly long hours, when their pleasure are at home with their families? I am venture to say there are none. I hope that some of our people will take hold of the subject and help us, through the columns of this paper, and otherwise. The grocers have taken a decided stand in the seven p.m. movement, and I hope the remaining will come them to break, not even if any one of them should be small enough to stoop to such a thing, which I don't think will be the case, as there is a sensible class of gentlemen in the business. AN ADVOCATE.

PERSONAL.

Miss Della Randolph of East Third street has gone on a ten days' trip to Asbury Park.

Mr. F. C. Green and daughter of West Front street have returned from the seashore.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Slater of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, started to-day on a trip to Niagara Falls.

Mr. A. R. Bunnell and wife of Second street, who have been for two weeks at Saratoga returned home yesterday.

Miss Lizzie Dowling has returned to her home in Brooklyn, N. Y. after a two weeks' visit to friends in this city.

Miss Maggie O'Dand of Westfield is spending a few day with her friend, Miss Allie Callahan of East Third street.

Mrs. Seaman Williams and daughter, Miss Minnie of this borough, have been visiting on a visit to relatives in Bogardville.

Charles B. Stephens of the Scott Press Works together with his family, started today for a week's visit in Morris county.

The family of Mr. E. Woltmann have returned to their home on Madison avenue, after an absence of several weeks at Lake George.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, wife and mother returned from yesterday after a pleasure trip abroad, and were warmly greeted by their many friends.

Miss Mary Galbraith of West Fourth started yesterday for a pleasant sojourn among friends in New York, Brooklyn and other points of interest in that vicinity.

Elias Hand, the wife of John A. Woodhand, died at her home on Somerset street Monday, after a long and tedious illness. The funeral will take place to-morrow.

James Q. Miles, the North avenue letter-er, has just completed a large sign on the building of the Scott Press Works. The sign is 120 feet long and the letters are four feet high.

Rachael C. Tilton, an aged Quakeress of Shrewsbury, died recently at the advanced age of seventy-six years. She was well known here, being a frequent speaker at the Friends' meeting house on Peace street.

Mrs. J. F. Hotchkiss of Madison avenue and Fourth street, together with her children, Mabel and Ralph, have returned from Atlantic City, where they have been sojourning for the benefit of Mrs. Hotchkiss' health.

Grand Keeper of Records and Seals K. of P. Eugene V. Lorton and Cadwallader Jones of this city were in attendance at the seventeenth annual encampment of the uniformed rank of the Knights of Pythias at Long Branch on Thursday.

Noah T. Pike and William Demarest of this city are among those who went on The Unionist-Gazette 1,000-mile excursion to Niagara Falls and the Thousand Islands from Newark on Monday last. The party left Albany this morning on their return trip.

John Lindsley, one of the oldest, wealthiest and most respected citizens of Somerville, died at his home in that place on Wednesday evening. He was over seventy-three years old, and was for a long time a director of the Somerset County Bank. He leaves an estate valued at $200,000 and a wife and daughter survive him.

Mr. J. A. Powlison of North Plainfield not being at his place of business at the usual time this morning, a messenger was sent to his house to ascertain the cause of the delay, when it was learned that he was detained at home, entertaining company in the shape of a son of Rev. Dr. Hall, who made his appearance at seven o'clock this morning. Mother and son are both doing well.

Sarah Green, who was so seriously kicked and beaten by an inhuman negro at the Nottorwood hotel on Tuesday, and who was taken to the Muhlenberg hospital for treatment, is slightly improved to-day. Dr. Long, the attending physician, says that a large abscess is forming in the region of the abdomen, and this alone will require several weeks to heal. The doctor says that he does not anticipate any fatal results.

Freeholder Vanderbeek returned home yesterday, after an extended trip to the "wild West," going as far as Fargo, Dakota. Mrs. Vanderbeek, who accompanied her husband, will not return for the present, she having gone to Saratoga to be with her mother, who is confined to the house by illness. Mr. Vanderbeek says he has gathered thirteen pounds during his absence, and says he is very much pleased with his trip. The genial Freeholder greeteth his friends accordingly as a spring chicken, as with the eye askance it blissfully contemplates its first worm.

THE MAGDALEN.

Only a Magdalen found in the river,
Nobody's darling, nobody's wife;
Nobody's heart to throb and quiver,
Nobody's life to hope and strive;
Only a Magdalen found in the river,
Tossed on the drift of the incoming tide.

Beautiful shrine of humanity,
Where the world's best treasure is found
No one but the sea and drift of the rivers
No one but Rachel to lift you to mourn!
Our Heavenly Father will judge you,
He knows your sorrow and your shame,
Only the voices of the river kept calling,
Up from the gloom of its ooze-bed in shore.

Stories of wrong and of sin and of sorrow,
Ripples of mystery, shudder and moan,
Boulders, like shadows, rock by on the river,
And one from the darkness the harbor light gleams.

A shrieking piece of humanity crouching,
Nerveless white hands on the sin-battered breast,
[illegible]
Standing, despairing, her arm upon mirror,
A picture, and shrinks to her shroud and her bed,
Dead wall, no one Carolina and harbor lights glide on,
And Can waves roll unseen over the face of the dead.

Over the wet weatherbeat hills falling,
Wanders away heather and berry and pine,
Of a poor Magdalen found in the river,
Sorry hearts throughout all the restless singer

A Magdalen found in the dark, dowing river,
The dead white face against weather and sun.

IF MADDENS BUT KNEW.

A good wife runs from her bed-room more
And [illegible] between dread
Of the children's noise, and has to be washed
And the chores or sweater to be fed.
"There's the sun a-lighting for the men in the field,
And the whistle's a-blowing for breakfast,
And all the rest is to shrivel and shorten,
And all to be done this day."

It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was full of cool, fresh, [illegible]
There were [illegible] and pine in bale
And a lot of calls for [illegible]
And the [illegible] her aching head

And a busy voice up to his listened true
And [illegible] [illegible] tell.
"It was this:" And coming near to [illegible]
"It was this: That you are the best
And the dearest wife in town."

And the pain in her head was gone, and her

The night came down,
The wife smiled to herself as she "slid:"
"The secret to labor for those we love
It is not strange that smiles will wed."

Of the Buildings that Were Left Standing, Many will Have to be Condemned and Pulled Down—A Day of Gloom. Confidence Somewhat Restored—Help Asked From the Government—The Death List Increased.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 4.—At precisely 11:51 o'clock last night while worshippers were clearing away the ruins of the great earthquake, the people of this city were again startled by the wildest excitement by another shock. It came like a clap of thunder, with a rapid succession of explosions, and shook the city from one end to the other. People rushed pell mell from their homes, and, as if by magic, the streets were filled with terrified, distracted people.

For an instant it seemed as if the buildings already so badly cracked and wrenched must certainly come down. The shock, however, lasted less than a minute, and, as it was not followed by others, but few remnants of already shattered buildings fell, although many sound ones were badly shaken.

The worst effects were noticed at the Charleston hotel, where a fresh shower of bricks fell from the cornice of the portico to the sidewalk, adding to the terror of the hotel and its occupants in the street before it, happily injuring no one. The moral effect of this shock, however, is disastrous, for the people, worn out with constant vigil for three nights and days, who had returned to their shattered homes in the hope of getting at least one good night's rest are now in the streets and gardens again, waiting in trepidation and momentary expectation of worse to come. Not one person of these thousands can be induced to go indoors again just now. The effect of this renewed anxiety is appalling, and men talk to each other with an expression akin to despair. A few days of this sort of thing, even if it be attended with no additional loss of life, will render this city absolutely helpless. Then buildings fall down, and no other season was killed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—At about 11 o'clock last night another shock of earthquake was felt all along the southern Atlantic coast. It was not attended by any damage, so far can be learned, but it was sufficiently severe to cause a stampede from their instruments of the telegraph operators in Charleston, Augusta and Columbia and other places. They soon returned, however, and resumed business. The shock was quite perceptible to Washington. It was plainly perceptible in Washington, but not so strongly as on Tuesday night.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 4.—At 11:02 p. m. a well defined shock of earthquake was felt here. It was preceded by a light, rumbling noise. The oscillation of buildings was marked on the upper floors.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 4.—At 10:41 p. m. another shock was distinctly felt. The streets are again filled with people.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 4.—Another distinct but not severe earthquake shock was felt here at 10 p. m. Many things were upset, and many people frightened, but they quickly returned to the streets.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 4.—At 10:03 p. m. a distinct shock of earthquake was felt here, lasting five seconds. It caused great excitement.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 5.—Savannah has again been thoroughly terrified by an earthquake shock; extending in severity all felt here except the first one Tuesday. It occurred at 11:01 o'clock, standard time, and was followed by a severity that other occupants quickly fled into the streets and refused to re-enter them. Improvised tents and other arrangements for spending the night in the square were made. Many ladies are hysterical, and serious results are feared. At the Pulaski house a guest was badly prostrated from fainting from a window. Many previously damaged were further injured, and additional plastering fell, but no more serious damage is reported as yet. The newspaper and telegraph offices are surrounded by excited crowds. Augusta and other small towns felt this shock severely.

A weary, haggard look overspread every face, telling of distress. As far as the eye could reach, in every direction, there were tents and [illegible] stretched, underneath which the inhabitants, driven from their homes through fear of a repetition of the terrible earthquake, had spent the night. Not many were dozed in restful sleep during the darkness. There is but little shock advocated by scientists as to the cause of the earthquake and that is that it is due to some kind of settlement in the earth's crust, or to upheaval. At all the places where surface indications of trouble are visible the earth is sunken for several miles. Immediately outside of the city the sinking was so positive that the railroad tracks were thrown out of level, and sections have been at work putting it new railroad ties, raising old ones and relaying the tracks. Many of the roads are badly damaged and bridges were thrown out of place and had to be repaired.

At a special meeting of the city council yesterday the mayor and aldermen were constituted a committee to investigate the condition of buildings in their respective wards and to confer with any committee of buildings as to [illegible] It is estimated that will be condemned. A prominent real estate agent says that while some of the wooden buildings are badly shaken, which could be repaired, the majority of the brick ones will have to be torn down. It is estimated that there will be over 1,000 buildings destroyed in the city. The same gentleman estimates the loss and damage of real and personal property in the city at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Yesterday morning the patients were all removed from the hospital to the asylum on account of the danger to the former from falling walls, where they were being cared for comfortably. No more deaths or new cases were reported at the hospital during the day. There are now in the hospital 119 patients, 100 of which are those suffering from injuries received on Tuesday night. About half of them were brained by falling buildings and the others are prostrated by the fright. Many of the wounded are doing well, and sufferers are being cared for at their homes. There is considerable sickness among children owning from exposure and sleeping out at night.

is the name suggested for a little one brought into the world a few hours before the great shock. Rosanna Hagood is the child's mother, and she is doing well, notwithstanding the fact that they are quartered in Washington square with the police quartered in the main station house and a heavy guard of negro policemen stationed around the building, but later it was determined that sufficient security was already secured in the vicinity of the hospital to dispense with them, as the officers who are designated as sentinels buildings to spare as many as can be saved by repairs. Merchants inform The United Press reporter that their losses will be heavy, and many must be replaced by new ones. There will be many repairs, however. It is proposed

TO SAVE THE WALLS TOGETHER.

By bolts, and as most of the buildings have but two stories, and very few have more than three, the damaged walls can be made to stand together. This is the case with the double-quake business. Telegrams have poured in from northern and southern cities to the mayor and president council, tendering sympathy, and assistance have been made. A delegation of citizens has arrived from Wilmington with $1,000 and a promise for an additional $5,000 if necessary. Contributions of what more should be done by that city. The money was placed in the hands of the mayor, and, as fast as it is needed by the sufferers, it will be distributed.

They could learn nothing. Telegrams flashed up in the offices here and were not delivered. In many towns the news was suppressed, and at the returning citizens learned Charleston they learned her fate and the true condition of affairs, and their

SURPRISE BEGAN AGONIZING.

They could not wait, and the Union Depot of the counties were thronged with trains and crowds of people. Even the outgoing passengers, who were hailed by those in the cars, could give no information of the true situation. Only the most courageous of the citizens returned to the city. Many stopped at suburban places, and opened up stores for the accommodation of the sufferers or telegraph. Up to yesterday it was still doubtful that the railroads could run trains into the city, owing to the [illegible] and especially the colored men, forced to evacuate the city. An old colored porter when informed at one of the cities above Charleston that he had been ordered to leave the city, turn pallid with fear, and stammered to his superintendent, "Please me capting, but I down want to go to Charleston," for he feared that the earth would open and swallow him up.

GREW WEARY OF HER COACHMAN'S HUMBLE HOME.

Victoria Morosini-Schilling's Whereabouts Still Unknown—A Belief that She May Have Sought Seclusion So as to Commit Conflicting Rumors About the Matter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Victoria Morosini-Schilling's sudden disappearance continues to excite public interest. Why she left such a desirable home as Kinderwood and has so studiously divested herself from her father's relatives, whom she sloped with and married about two years ago, remains a mystery. Giovanni P. Morosini, the former partner of Jay Gould, declares that he does not know. Schilling's brothers-in-law, Ernest Schilling and Frederick Schilling, say they have heard nothing of his wife's movements since she left their home on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Schilling, of Hudson, at Riverdale, and tired of the love and home her coachman husband gave her. It is thought that she was thrown off

THE LATE ANN S. STEPHENS.

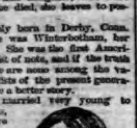
Rich, Old and Famous, She Wrote Till the Last.

The death of Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, the veteran novelist, will recall to many a person now middle-aged the absorbing interest with which, in days and years ago, he read "Fashion and Famine," "The Rejected Wife," "The Gold Brick" and other novels by the same author. Many years ago this industrious pen began to wag, and it has kept at it without intermission ever since till now.

Ann Sophia Stephens died at Newport, R. I., Aug. 20, aged 72 years. She wrote no more than thirty books in a period of twenty years. Those, with a sea and daughter, who were with her when she died, also leaves to posterity.

She was probably born in Derby, Conn. Her maiden name was Winterbotham, her ancestry English. She was the first American woman novelist of note, and if the truth must be told, there are none among the various female novelists of the present generation who can write a better story.

Miss Ann Lidy married very young to Edward Stephens, and went to live in Portland, Me. She had written even before this early marriage. In the old days it was thought that women were fit to write only verse, therefore all female literary aspirants, like Mr. Wegg, "dropped into poetry." Mrs. Stephens followed the fashion. Her first published writings over her own name were poetical. One of them was "The Apple Tree."



ANN S. STEPHENS.

She was editor of The Portland Magazine awhile. Then she came to New York and Frank Leslie engaged her as editor of the first magazine he published. She wrote serial novels for it, and became thereby a popular that the Peterson of Philadelphia engaged her to write novels thereafter exclusively for them. She married Frank Leslie as editor of The Ladies' Companion four years, then she went to Philadelphia to edit Graham's Magazine after the same charge as editor of Peterson' Magazine and was its editor over a quarter of a century.

She started two magazines of her own, but they did not have a distinguished success, and were soon snuffed out. Her greatest novel was "Fashion and Famine." It went through three London editions, and three different translations were made of it in French within a year from the time it first appeared.

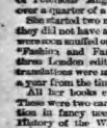
All her books except three were novels. These were two early volumes giving instruction in fancy needlework and a "Pictorial History of the War for the Union." This was published in two thick volumes in 1865. It is said that Mrs. Stephens was the anonymous author of the famous story "That Husband of Mine," and that she got money enough from it to buy her a handsome house in 9 Waldo place. This house was the first woman who ever received a message across the ocean. It was sent by Queen Victoria.

She long ago became well to do from her novel writing, which is more than one author in ten thousand can do. For many years she has lived in a pleasant home of her own in New York city. She died at Newport about two years ago. She was an indefatigable worker and a kindly, bright, good woman.

OFFICERS OF THE LAND LEAGUE.

President, John Fitzgerald, of Nebraska, and Treasurer, the Rev. Dr. O'Reilly.

John Fitzgerald, the present president of the Land league, elected at the recent convention in Chicago, is one of Nebraska's millionaires. Forty-two years ago he landed in New York, a poor emigrant boy. He began work as a railroad laborer in the east, and worked west in laying down the path for the locomotive, and by laying away little savings at the same time he soon became able to undertake contracts for himself, which prospered, and he finally settled in Nebraska, and is now identified with nearly every prominent industry of the state. But notwithstanding all his prosperity, he is the same John Fitzgerald he was during his early days. On his arrival in Chicago he registered at the hotel, and the clerk thought that the countryman, who wished to register, was evidently going beyond his means, little thinking that the name on the register on which he signed could wield a check of sufficient amount to cover the cost of the hotel. Mr. Fitzgerald has to-day at least 2,000 men on his pay roll. He has always been one of the largest in the funds which have led for their object the amelioration of the condition of the people in Ireland. He cares for money only as it can be turned to be extracted from the pocketbook of his patriotism.



REV. DR. O'REILLY.

The Man Who Swam the Rapids.

Whatever he was before, William J. Kendall ought to set in and be somebody. He is the only man who ever attempted to swim Niagara rapids and came out alive. Capt. Webb, the great swimmer, attempted it and was drowned. Kendall himself says he would not try it again for the whole city of Toronto. He certainly has the nerve, nothing else, that brought him out alive. He knew it was a bad water in there, but not half how bad. Surely, fools have some good luck in this life.

He is a young fellow, 26 years old, six feet high, and powerfully built. He weighs about 200 pounds. The only preparation he made for the frightful swim was to put on a cork jacket.

He repeats says that he got $5,000 for the exploit, and that he got nothing at all, but was merely trying to throw the life away. Nobody was unhappy and desperate. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. He had been a policeman in Boston, and was at one time one of the pluckiest men on the force. Finally he got tired of him. But he took to drink. He lost his place on the police force, and his wife, to whom he was greatly attached, was forced to leave him. Now he's him straighten up, and the world will give him a chance again.

UNCLE SAM'S NAVY.

NEW VESSELS THAT ARE TO BE SOMETHING MORE THAN TUBS.

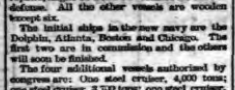
Description and Appearance of the New Steel Cruisers Authorized by the Last Congress—Their Construction to be Begun Immediately.

In the closing hours of the late session of congress an appropriation was made for the construction of four new steel cruisers that will equal in efficiency anything of their size afloat. So it would appear that Uncle Sam is at last taking steps toward additions to his navy that will be war ships in fact, not targets for the humorist's shots.

The navy of the United States consists now of about 100 vessels of all classes. Of nineteen are monitors, five are double turreted monitors, and the rest, with some repairs, might be made serviceable for harbor defense. All the other vessels are wooden through out.

The initial ships in the new navy are the Dolphin, Atlanta, Boston and Chicago. The first two are in commission and the others will soon be finished.

The four additional vessels authorized by congress are: One steel cruiser, 4,000 tons; one steel cruiser, 3,000 tons; one steel cruiser, 1,700 tons; and gunboat, 800 tons.



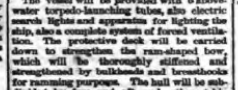
FOUR THOUSAND-TON STEEL CRUISER.

This vessel is to be 310 feet long, with 49 feet beam and a draught of 18 feet 9 inches. She will have twin screws driven by her engines of 18 knots. Her coal capacity will be 850 tons, and her complement of men will be 300.

Her main battery will consist of 12 6-inch breech-loading rifles, mounted in broadside. Her secondary battery will pushes 10 pieces of revolving cannon, besides gatling guns. The battery will be protected in armor, and special provisions supporting segmental shields 2 inches in thickness—2 under the forecastle, 3 under the poop, 4 under the main bridges and 6 in the forward amidship. Four guns will be able to concentrate within 40 feet of bow or stern; either broadside of 5 guns will concentrate on an object within 100 feet of the ship's side.

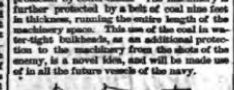
The vessel will be built of steel throughout, having a double bottom 3 feet 3 inches in depth running the entire length of the machinery space, or 120 feet. The machinery, magazines, steel rooms, torpedo rooms and steering gear are placed below an armored deck, which is 2 inches thick on its sloping sides and 3 inches on the horizontal part amidships. Above this armored deck the entire length of the vessel runs the berth deck, containing the sleeping rooms for the officers and crew.

The vessel will be provided with 6 above-water torpedo-launching tubes, also electric lights and signal apparatus for lighting the ship, also a complete system of forced ventilation. The protective deck will be carried down to strengthen the ram-shaped bow, which will be thoroughly stiffened and strengthened by bulkheads and breastbooks for ramming purposes. The hull will be subdivided by fore and aft and athwartship bulkheads into over 150 watertight compartments.



SEVENTEEN HUNDRED-TON STEEL CRUISER.

This boat will be in many respects a counterpart of the 4,500-ton cruiser, but will reduced destroying power. Her length will be 320 feet, beam 50 feet, draught 14 feet; twin screws, and a speed is expected of 18 knots. Coal capacity 400 tons, complement of 350 men. Her battery will consist of six 8-inch breech-loading rifles and six smaller guns. The engines, boilers, magazines, shell rooms and steering gear are placed beneath a water-tight steel deck, running the entire length of the vessel. The ship will be slightly ram-shaped and stiffened for ramming. The hull is divided into numerous water-tight compartments. All openings in the water-tight deck are protected by doors which are protected by coffer-dams. The machinery is further protected by a belt of coal nine feet in thickness, running the entire length of the machinery space. This coal is kept in water-tight bulkheads, as an additional protection to the machinery from the shots of the enemy, is a novel idea, and will be made use of in all the future vessels of the navy.



EIGHT HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TON GUNBOAT.

This vessel will be constructed on the composite system, viz: double bottom, frames, stringers and bosheon of steel, with the outer planking and decks of wood. The planking will be in two thicknesses, and will be fastened to the steel frames by screw bolts, 1¼ inches and copper. The engines and boilers are placed beneath a water-tight steel deck three-eighths of an inch in thickness. Its outer edge is 3 feet below the water line. Above the water line, rising to eight inches above at the center line amidships. The vessel is divided into numerous water-tight compartments by steel watertight and fore and aft bulkheads, thus localizing the damage due to the hull being penetrated by shot or ramming.

Her length will be 180 feet, beam 32 feet, draught 11 feet 10 inches; coal capacity 160 tons. One hundred men will be required to work her. The battery will consist of six guns.

The remaining one of the four vessels ordered by congress will be a duplicate of an ironclad constructed in England for the Japanese government, and which is considered one of the most effective cruisers afloat. It will be a 3,730-ton steel cruiser, possessing many of the principal features of other cruisers. Her armament consists of two 10-inch 30-ton guns, two 6-pounders and twelve machine guns.

It is proposed to get these vessels under headway as fast as possible. Their cost will be at least $5,000,000.

Second-Hand Information.

Indignant Ticket Agent—I've told you three times already that the next train leaves at 6:30. Don't bother me any more!

Inquisitive Passenger—I'm sorry, sir, it's not for myself at'm askin' the boime; it's for a lady outside, sor.—Rural New Yorker.

Queer Weather.

Tramp—It is to hot as arsh, dry, and—

Passer by (to himself)—Sorry, but I haven't seen anything of it.

A Coming Tragedy.

Brown—What is the matter with you and Robbins, Dunlop? I hear that he has threatened to pull your ears the first chance he gets.

Dunlop (jumping up and down)—He will, will he? Pull my ears? Well, you can bet your sweet life he won't be the chump.

A Curious Case.

"You say that he is deaf, dumb and blind?"

"Yes."

"I am astonished. I saw him leave church yesterday just before the collection was taken up, and I supposed, of course, that he was in possession of his full faculties."

An Answer.

"Do you realize," said the long-faced passenger, "that there is One who sees and hears all we do, who can solve our inmost thoughts, and before whom we are but crushed and bruised worms?"

"Give us your boat, stranger," replied the other. "I know just how you feel. I am married myself."

A Safe Consolation.

"Ish Jove, Charley," said a young man at a ball, "Miss Rich is homely, but I wouldn't be kind enough to bring her some coffee, and don't ye know, we've never been introduced. What do you think of that, eh?"

"Well, I don't see it," replied Charley. "Why, I think she mistook you for one of the waiters."

Reading Architecture.

Stranger (at various places in town)—What is that enormous building across the way?

Guide—That's a hotel.

Stranger—And that large handsome brick one?

Guide—That's the club house, sir.

Stranger—I see. Well, what's that long, odd-looking building behind the enclosure?

Stranger—Oh, yes. It's all very beautiful, but I should think the authorities would remove that unsightly little frame building directly behind the hotel. It mars the general effect. What is it? Some sort of a bee house?

Guide—No, sir. That's a church.

The Good Things of Life.

"That's what I call a good dinner," remarked Bobby, as he leaned back in his chair with an air of repletion.

The landlord was dining with the family, laughed heartily.

"Bobby appreciates the good things of life," he said, "like all the rest of us."

"Then I take it that you had a good dinner?" Bobby asked of the minister.

"Yes, indeed. I enjoyed it very much."

"Ma said she thought you would, because she didn't suppose you got very much at home."—New York Sun.

A Beginning.

"Hello! lyur's Mister Tommy a-cuttin' up some ob his circus shines on a rope, I reckon!"

"Oh, no, sum; it's a hammock. It's gwine ter make it bigger when I git more rope."—Harper's Bazar.

Home From The Harney Hooter.

We deem a word of explanation due our readers in regard to an error published in last week's Hooter. It stated that our worthy fellow citizen, Judge Hon R. Fuller, had been arrested and bound over for getting drunk and fighting on the streets of this town. What he had stolen from a neighbor and shooting right and left and committing several persons, we have every right to believe, as it should have read that "Baldy" Ford was the man that was arrested, and our esteemed friend, Judge Fuller, the justice before whom he was arraigned. It's entirely make the correction. In the hurry of getting the forms to press for a large paper like The Hooter small typographical errors like this will sometimes occur and we regret them more deeply than ourselves.

There was a shooting affair in Ed LaFleur's Marvelous Palace last night. The facts in the case appear to be as follows: Henry Barton, a well known and respected citizen of Harney, went into the saloon at about 10 o'clock and called for a drink. A rough character known as Soda Land Bill, The ruffian was drunk and attacked Mr. Barton, who drew a gun and shot him in self-defence. We must congratulate the community on thus getting rid of a low-lived and villainous whelp.

LATER.—Just as we go to press we learn that we were grossly misinformed in regard to this trouble. It seems that it was Hank Barton, better known as "Skinny," and generally supposed to be a tough, who crawled from the stable, who was killed. The shooting was done by Mr. William R. Price, mentioned above, who has a fine ranch up in the Bad Lands. He is a perfect gentleman in every respect and undoubtedly understood his character. He is a gentleman in every respect, and has the thanks of all for ridding the community of the man Barton.—Clipped by the Rebellion Bell.

A Dakota Contemporary.

"By an unfortunate typographical error," says a Dakota newspaper, "we were made to say last week that our distinguished townsman, Prof. Kenaday, proposed to rig up a nobby bebcon for the comfort and enjoyment of his daughter on her wedding trip over the prairies. What we meant to say was a nobby bellows, by which the wife of our left hand while lying on our spare bed, with one eye entirely closed and the other hand painted, and an inverted chair across our stomach, could fan the flies. The mistake of our regret for the blunder may be measured by the difficulties we have encountered in explaining this explanation."—Rubon Register.

Remembrances.

Lieut. George Monroe had a day off and went to Nantasket. On the boat, with several friends, there was a talk about personal remembrances.

"Well! I have been taken for Bismarck, in Berlin," said a German gentleman.

"I used, at a time in Paris, I was, as the Count de Paris, called to the like I remembled," said a teacher of French.

"That's nothing," said George, "a fellow came up and stopped me on the street, right on Tremont street, the other day, and actually cut: 'Great Cæsar! Is that you?'"

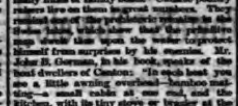
THE WORLD'S PROGRESS.

INVENTIONS AND SCIENTIFIC FACTS AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Photographed by the Lightning—Shall Man Soar Like the Birds?—Professor Lancaster's Remarkable Invention.

A Chinese Death Mask.

China is so crowded that thousands of families live in boats on the water. They tie up to shore, and move from town to town as their trade requires. At Canton there are very many miles of family boats. Chinese pottery makers live on them in great numbers. They fish in the day time, and work at their trade in the evening, while under the protection of the Union Jacks, which show that the privileges may extend that upon the water protect them from surprises by his enemies. Mr. Asher D. Hewlett, a leading banker of the head dwellers of Canton: "In each boat you see a little awning overhead—bamboo matting, with tiers of rooms below and the kitchen, with its tiny stove or brazier at the other. Every boat is crowded with children. The Chinaman raises the largest, best and even chicken on his boat. You see the poultry coops on the side decks. You hear the chanticleer crow amid stream."



CHINESE HOUSE BOAT.

The hens lay and cackle like other hens, raising their little heads on the floating barn yard. The ducks don't stay aboard all the time—they must go out to swim; but at night every duck comes home. Then there are boats set apart especially for raising ducks. Ducks are not hatched by the thousand. The number or minimum soon learns the proper quack by which the ducklings are controlled. They too, are penned at night in their floating coops, and they until they are ready for market. At night the blindest duck always goes a-dribbling for his berthmost in quiet, cozy coop. One blessed birds ought to be lauded by one man and raised in this way. Women and older children generally row the boats in the Pearl river. The paddle go about the stern and the children are born on the boats, and often their mothers have never been on land. Land is dear and life is cheap. Those unable to rent a garden accommodate perfect little floating islands or rafts made of bamboo, and cover them with soil, upon which they grow their vegetables. If a boat gets upset, the first impulse is to save its contents and then the occupants afterward.

New Street Dress.

Ladies who keep up with the prevailing styles have already learned that the underskirt of the coming costume need not in any way correspond with the upper suit, and as long as it is striped or of fancy colors it is quite the approved fashion. To select, therefore, from the stock of goods the suit that seems the lower part and side panel of a walking skirt is the objective idea of many shopping excursions. Judiciously used, five and one-half or six yards of these elegant materials will make the required underskirt, and be sufficient for any combination in the basque, if it is desired.

In heavy fancy goods there should be no foot plaiting or fullness of any sort for the bottom of the skirt. The breadths should be plainly sewed up and finished with a flat seam at the extreme bottom, so that the width will not extend to the bottom account of its weight and for economical reasons as well. The drapery should be carefully pinned so as to form long breadths on one side over which the front and back draperies must part to show the panel from the foot nearly to the knee of the edge of the drapery. Very rich silks with fancy stripes, striped plushes, velvets and moires will be made up for these skirts. A few very heavy high cost brocades are to be similarly employed. The overdress should be of wool, with long sweeping draperies, plainly bound, or in the goods showing the panel to the edge of the drapery. The basque must be short and with the generally simple effect of a riding habit. This is to be the characteristic walking dress of the coming season.—Demorest's Monthly.

The Fly Pin.

A decided novelty is the "fly pin." In reality this is not a pin, but an ornament to take the place of brooches and other pins, especially in delicate lace and thin fabrics. Instead of its design a large number of wings, insects and representations of the smaller number of pins to fasten ornaments for fancy purposes. It is made in this way: A gilt or silver fly or wasp, a butterfly, a humming bird for a brooch, a gorgeous butterfly for a hair pin, or a dragon fly for a bonquet holder, and so on through the family of insects. Fabrics are fastened by pins are of plain gold, others are set with gems, while others are enameled in faithful copy of nature's hues. The novelty consists in the manner in which the perforated needle ornaments are fastened on to the ribbon, the dress or in the hair. In the body of each fly is concealed an ingenious contrivance whereby the wings are moveable. On being pressed together backwards, two little gold prongs underneath the wings open and, being laid against the lace or fabric, gains a firm clasp on the same, when the prongs resume position and the wings are permitted to spread themselves. The advantages, especially for delicate fabrics, are obvious, the frailest web of lace cannot be torn, and as the ornaments are of light weight there is no pulling or sagging when fastened to thin materials. It is believed by fashionable modistes that this attractive on ball and evening costumes, for hair ornaments, and fastening up lace draperies and holding on corsage bouquets.—Jewelers' Circular.

The Bodice, or Corselet.

The fashion of bodices or corselets is on the increase. They are made chiefly of velvet of a color to correspond with that of the dress. Even women no longer young now wear corselets, which are completed at the top and sometimes also at the high corsage by two fronts of the dress material a little shirred. Beyond a toilet of pale gray silk worn by a lady of a certain age. The corselet will be of dark gray velvet, embroidered in silver, and the fronts, which simulate a draped fichu, will be of pale gray silk like the rest of the dress. The sleeves will be long, but the hands, the bodice or corselet is given to the point of an actual corset put on over the corsage of a dress.

Beauties of Nature's Dress.

It costs Maine yearly about $6,000 to keep her bears. The town of Orono will, at the present rate, have to pay $1,000 taxes in the bear business. Last year they have drawn $700 for sixty bears killed in its bounties.—Chicago Herald.

Small Hats Now Worn.

Professor Isaac Lancaster has promised to the American Association for the Advancement of Science an account of a discovery made from time to time in the study of the habits of the family number 844 wonderful achievements which must be something like this: "Have I a right to a print of 200 for the total purpose of my own use?"

Professor Lancaster has devoted his attention to the feeding or nesting of birds. He observed that a large bird will move forward with a single leap or motion. A small bird with a single hop or motion. He thought if he could get the secret of it then any substance shaped like a bird's wing, and no heavier in proportion to its size, would be capable of flight.

He studied birds carefully for months, overwhelmed with grass and brown cotton. Then he dissected a bird to see what was the artificial soaring wing he found must have the under surface rough to motion from rear to front, and smooth from front to rear. It must have the front edge of the outer stiff. It must have the elastic feather tips and be longer than it is wide, and if it closely follows the birds it must have from one to three pounds weight for each square foot of surface. He constructed birds plane which he sent for lack of a better name he has turned effigies. They would draw into the breast when the front edges of the wings of the bird flew. Then a plane of the weight and dimensions and position of a frigate bird ought to move in the same manner if similarly placed.

The next step is to construct a plane. Can a machine be made which will also soar in a wind? The question is open.

How Iron Wears Out.

When a worn car wheel tread is examined under the microscope it is perceived that the surface of the metal consist of in thin flakes or plates. The greatest wear and tear of the roads are found by assemble upon one of a brick wall, the fractures being not in the particles of iron, but in the material which unites the particles of iron together, and which is the mortar unites the bricks of a wall. Continuous jarring breaks this cement or uniting material, thus allowing iron so treated to fall in pieces.

Sound and Impact.

An American scientist has ascertained that the moon has an influence on a magnetized needle varying with its phases and its declination. The phenomenon is said to be more pronounced by continued than by single impacts upon the earth, and to be very marked when she is passing from the full to her first or second quarter. The disturbances are at their maximum when the moon is in the plane of the equator, and greater during the southern than the northern declination.

FASHIONLETS.

The marquise is the newest lace.

Red finger rings are out of fashion.

A glove must be long or it is nothing.

Skirts are gathered, draped or plaited.

The beryl and the opal are fashionable stones.

Black and white silk bone in pin checks are imported.

Blanket cloth with wide meshes is combined with woolen lace.

Velvet jackets, sleeveless of course, are worn with lace dresses.

Tissues are good again. The jewelry trade has improved 25 per cent. over last year.

White gloves with beaded cuffs, gauntlets, are worn with fancy dress dresses.

Women will wear large and splendid ornaments in jewelry, but very small and quiet ones.

It is considered more stylish in France for a bride to wear a long plain tulle veil than a lace one.

Very large ball earrings of dull gold, sometimes with a jewel set down deep in them, are coming in fashion.

Shoes are low pointed, and have renounced the high heels which gave such an unsteady gait and projected the body forward.

Plush jackets are made without any extra trimming of fur, are very stylish, and are beautiful from their very simplicity.

Fodder Clamps.

By its use much is gained in time, when hauling and feeding. The bundles are as the loose blades can be gathered and placed in the clamp and bound with the longer fodder. The clamp is made from a piece of sounding deal board, by 2 feet 6 inches, with a hole bored and a board nailed crosswise to the bottom, to prevent the clamp from falling over. The uprights are 18 inches high and placed in mortises 14 inches apart, and nailed on each side of the other. The uprights should stand two inches farther apart at the top than at the bottom.

A new barf is made half an inch deep in the top of each to receive the twine. (I use ranger twine.) The clamp is light and valuable in field or barn. To use it, make a loop at the end of the twine, and place it in the barf at the top of one upright; leave the slack as shown, and pass the twine on through the other barf. Hook on around of fodder and lay it in the clamp, and so on until it is full. Place one knee on the bundle and bring the twine together, and tie by passing through the loop and making a simple knot. Cut the twine; place one foot on the bundle and lift the handle out and replace the twine as before. The bundle can be easily bound as tight as you will by one clamp of this size will make about four bundles from a sheek of 100 bills, and once used will always be wanted. —W. C. JOTTINGS.

—An action upon contract case brought by McVoy vs. Ham will come up for trial before Justice Nash on Wednesday.

—An unknown man was knocked down by a horse in front of the Farmer's Hotel on Saturday evening, but escaped injury.

—A large delegation of the Knights of Labor went to Newark this morning to take part in the labor demonstration in that city to day.

—The regular September meeting of the City Council will be held in the Council chamber on West Front street at eight o'clock this evening.

—A farm wagon loaded with lumber broke down on the corner of Park and Fourth streets at noon to-day, and the lumber had to be transferred to another wagon.

—John Kean, a farmer of Union Township, while intoxicated drove along the railroad tracks at Elizabeth on Friday trying to race with a train. He narrowly escaped being killed. Fourth arrest and locked up.

—Mrs. C. A. Boice of East Front street has been improving her property along Elm Place and Chatham street. The thick undergrowth of weeds and briers have been cut down and the place has been otherwise improved.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of the Dunellen M. E. church will hold a posie and ice cream festival in the basement of the church on Tuesday evening, Sept. 7th. The admission is free, and everybody is invited to be present. An enjoyable time is anticipated.

—Every few nights thieves have beautifying lumber from Don A. Gaylord's lumber yard. Friday night Lewis Wyckoff, the night boy and night watchman, fired shots after them, but failed to hit the mark. He proposes to keep up his shooting and hopes eventually to hit the thieves.

—Two men named Taylor and Murphy were arrested by Police Officers McCue and Lyons, the former on Saturday night and the latter this morning, for causing a disturbance on West Second street. This morning they were arraigned before the City Judge, who reserved his decision.

—The trustees of the Crescent Avenue church have fashioned through their chairman, Hon. Cornelius Low, a contract made with the Plainfield Electric Light Company to put in electric lights into the Crescent avenue church and upon the Crescent lawn in front of it, to be ready in time for the forthcoming organ recital.

—Mr. Ratmon of Broadway on Saturday lodged a complaint before the City Judge, charging Frank Pfeiffer with having wilfully and without provocation attacked his son Harry on Friday last. Hefner was arraigned before Judge Ulrich on Saturday and was remanded for trial until this morning, when he was again arraigned and fined ten dollars.

—The trouble in the borough over the arrest of Patrick Lynch for violating the borough ordinances, is leading to some exposures of political secrets by the two factions of Democrats there who are at present bitterly opposed to each other. The action of the majority of the Democratic caucus in trade

Government Distribution of Seeds.

[Rec: Perley Poore.]

Gradually appropriations were made for the purchase of seeds, which were distributed by members of congress, who sent their constituents packages of seeds, and also sent them Mr. Riley, who sent out the women to plant the experimental seeds. In 1862, Mr. Rhodes, of prominent Polis Alphon and man, was tended on him and represented to him the folly and evil of this practice. Commissioner Rhodes admitted that the government was wrong in giving away seed that might be bought anywhere in the country. He thought the distribution of rare seeds, collected by or raising from remote countries such plants, etc., as might not reach us through commercial channels.

But in some instances the garden seeds, so familiar now to us, were introduced in unusual quantity by members of congress. They would be raised at home, and then sent to their constituents. When President Pierce appointed Judge Chase, Hon. Edmund Burke, commissioner of patents, in 1853, Mr. Burke, a prominent Polis Alphon and man, was tended on him and represented to him the folly and evil of this practice. Commissioner Burke

IOWA'S GREAT WELL.

Gushes Being Made to Control Its Rush of Waters.

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 6.—The great well still flows. If for a short time the overflow is was partially shut off. The great column having been enlarged to 20 inches was too much for the capacity of the well, and the 6 inch pipe was put in. It became necessary to drive it and the 1,000 pound hammer was applied to the 6 inch pipe connected with the cone. This pipe is about 20 feet above the ground. After a few strokes had been given, the flow of water was so much diminished that the people began to shake hands and many bags of sand were thrown in. To give still more weight to the cone to fill up the aperture. The big hammer was again applied and after a few strokes the pipe shot down into the vortex like a rocket does upward. A swift gush of water, a gurgle and the hopes of all were buried out of sight with the cone and its connecting pipe. The 10-inch pipe heretofore mentioned is at the bottom and the belief is that the cone has gone down until it struck rock. That would have it 120 feet from the bottom and the water 40 feet from the surface. Excavation trains are coming in to see the sight.

AN EXCURSION TRAIN COLLISION.

Many People Injured and all Nearly Frightened.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 6.—The excursion train on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad which left Curtis bay at 6 o'clock last evening with 800 passengers, collided with a freight train a few miles from this city about 6:30 p. m. The locomotive drawing the passenger train was badly damaged, and the windows of several passenger coaches were broken. Some of the coaches demolished and the passengers badly shaken up and scared.

There were between twenty and thirty persons injured more or less, but none of them seriously. The engineer cannot be learned, for the reason that shortly after the accident, being near the city, all the passengers hastily left the many minor ailments. Mr. Young was badly cut about the body by glass and splinters of wood. Frank Schiele was badly cut upon the arm and face. A young lady, who declined to give her name, had her face very cuts and bruises. An infant in its mother's arms had its scalp laid open, but will recover. A lady's wrist was thrown down and badly cut and bruised.

Robbed by Burglars.

PATER, Ill., Sept. 6.—Saturday morning William Muehlmann, a druggist of this city, was awakened by a slight noise, and found at his bedside a masked burglar, who placed a revolver at the head and demanded all the money. Mr. Muehlmann grappled with the burglar, and a desperate struggle followed, in which the burglar was thrown from the window. Carl Muehlmann, a son, fired four shots at the robber, one of which took effect, but the man managed to cross the river and escape. Mr. Muehlmann has a deep cut over the eye, where he was struck with the butt end of the burglar's revolver. About the same time the residence of Judge N. W. Green, Col. T. McGraw, John Rose and C. H. Backer were visited and ransacked, but the occupants were not awakened.

An Italian Shooting.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 5.—Annello de Angelo was shot and almost instantly killed at 7:30 last evening, in Liberty alley, near the centre of the city, by Antonio Mezzo, the leader of the Italian band in the temple. Two men were seen running away from the spot, and Angelo La Penta was at first suspected and arrested. Mezzo went to Charlotte, and officers are now after him. Policemen met him on the way to the train, but having only a description of Penta did not hold him, and he was allowed to board the train. All the parties are Italians.

Met the Political Boss.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.—At a meeting of the Democratic congressional committee of the Ninth district, Saturday, Ed. Butler, the great political boss of St. Louis, had a fight with Tom Fitzpatrick; a member of the committee, and was seriously hurt that the fifth is in danger. One of his ribs was broken and a broken end driven into his lungs. The trouble was over the renomination of John M. Glover for congress.

Took 600 Ballots.

LONGVIEW, Tex., Sept. 6.—After a four-days' session, during which 600 ballots were taken, the Third District Democratic convention yesterday nominated C. B. Kilgore, of Van Zandt county, for congress, unanimously. The struggle which was between Congressman Jones, of Rusk county, and J. F. Perkins, of Hunt county.

AN OLD VIRGINIA TOWN.

ALEXANDRIA, WHERE GEORGE WASHINGTON WORSHIPED.

The Tomb of the Female Stranger, a Romance of Seventy Years Ago—The Alexandria Markets—Queer Characters and Characteristic Southern Scenes.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Thousands of tourists who come to Washington never visit Alexandria. Still it is one of the most interesting sights along the Potomac. Old and dull it may indeed be, but every stone in its cobble pavements is full of history, and the crumbling wharves and the great moss-grown mansions lead one back to the days of its prosperity, when it was one of the greatest towns in the south, and when Jefferson and Washington delighted to do it honor.

AN ALEXANDRIA WHARF.

Alexandria is only seven miles from Washington. Ferry boats and trains run every half hour, and a pleasant way to go to it is to cross the Georgetown bridge in a carriage and drive past Arlington, where Gen. Lee used to live, and on down the Potomac shore. The ferry takes you from the ragged edge of the capital city, and a half hour's ride down the Potomac lands you on the Alexandria shore, very near where Braddock jumped from his boat on his way to his disastrous defeat. The city has 15,000 people now, but it covers enough territory for twice the population. As you approach it from the river it is not hard to recognize its ancient grandeur. The buildings are old and many of them are breaking with age. Empty warehouses line the wharves, and the hand of decay points his palsied finger at you wherever you turn. The place seems to have fallen into a Rip Van Winkle's slumber. Your feet echo along the chanel stones as you pass through what were once busy thoroughfares, and the chief signs of life are here and there sleepy looking negroes, in ragged clothes, lounging against the brick corners of buildings whose edges have been almost rounded by time. The main business street of the city is livelier, but even the business men move as though they were youthful Methuselahs, with centuries of life before them, and the very wagons go at the pace of horses.

The people, however, are well bred and kind. The raggedest boy will tip his hat to you if you speak to him, and if you ask a direction of a business man he will leave his store and go four blocks or more to show you what you want.

The citizens of Alexandria have a great reverence for the past. Washington, and the town is full of unwritten tradition about him. Mount Vernon is only nine miles away, and

THE OLD CHURCH.

Alexandria was Washington's town. Old sailors will tell me that he had a little office here and did a great part of his business in it. He used to ride up from Mount Vernon daily, and while he was a young man he was such a lover of horses that at one time it is said he rode ten different horses during the same day through the Alexandria streets. He owned property in Alexandria, and one of his first investments was a couple of lots in the city. During the greater part of his life he went to church at Alexandria, and the old church he attended still stands and is used now as it was then by an Episcopal congregation. It has queer green window shutters which lift upward from the bottom and under which show the small squares of the old-fashioned pane of glass. A large lawn surrounds the church and this is filled with the tombstones of generations long passed away. Quaint are those they are. Slabs of slate with death heads and cross bones. Slabs of broken marble with cherubs above the inscription, and a whole volume of obituary poetry below it. Most of them date back to 1700, and none are later than 1830. The interior of the church is filled with high box pews, and a wide gallery upheld by yellow pillars runs around the walls below the ceiling. On either side of the pulpit is sunken into the wall a marble slab, one of which reads:

In memory
of
ROBERT RICHARD LEE.

and the other,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Washington's pew was in the center of the church, and it is still preserved as it was when he and Martha used to occupy it. Old Alexandrians tell me that Washington was not half so pious as he is painted; that he often got up and left before church was out, and that he did not stay for communion. There has always been a good deal of doubt as to the religious faith of Washington's religious belief. He had no preacher at his death but, and though he undoubtedly believed in the Christian religion, it was a question whether he was not a little more liberal than the people of his day.

CITIZENS OF ALEXANDRIA.

The Alexandria market is a quaint sight. It is kept inside of a great court on the spot where Payne was tried with Washington. Lieut. Payne was a candidate for the legislature against a man named Fairfax who lived at Alexandria. Washington supported Fairfax and during the campaign he and Payne meeting one day on the side of this market began to talk politics. Payne thought Washington installed him in a room that he made and he resented the insult by promptly knocking Washington down. Washington was a colonel at this time, and the report went like wildfire through the camp that Lieut. Payne had killed Col. Washington. Washington's troops wanted to take charge of Payne, but Washington, as he picked himself up, his black eye, said that the assault was his affair and he guessed that he could manage it. Every one thought that this meant a duel, and when Payne got a note from Washington the next morning asking him to come to the hotel he expected nothing else than a challenge. He found Washington with his head tied up, and with scars and plasters on the table before him. As Payne entered Washington apologized for his words of the day before, and the two drank to show friendship over the wine. The Alexandria market is filled with hundreds of little booths where the farmers bring their produce and display it for sale.

In the Alexandria cemetery, surrounded by pines through which the wind moans a continuous requiem, lies the grave of the female stranger. A great slab of marble, big enough to cover the coffin of a giant, rests over it, and the inscription on it, though fading against the brick corners of buildings whose edges have been almost rounded by time. The main business street of the city is livelier, but even the business men move as though they were youthful Methuselahs, with centuries of life before them, and the very wagons go at the pace of horses.

TOMB OF THE FEMALE STRANGER.

day sun beats upon it now as it did when it was erected. Around the outer edges of the marble wall the grass is now green, and a spray or two of ivy is growing here and there, but under the slab the black earth has sunken, and the coffin and the contents have long since crumbled into dust.

In this grave is buried one of the most mysterious stories of American romance. It is a story which has puzzled for years, but which they are no nearer solving now than they were when Washington was a village and Madison was president. Before I tell you the story let us read the epitaph cut upon that big marble slab. The type is well engraved, and the letters are sunken deep into the stone. They read as follows:

To the Memory of
A FEMALE STRANGER,
Whose Mortal Sufferings Terminated
On the 9th day of January, 1816.
Age, 23 Years and 8 Months.

This stone is placed here by her disconsolate husband.

In whose arms she sighed out her latest breath,
And with whom she lived but six utmost even to soothe the cold dead ear of death.

How loved, how valued once avails thee not,
To whom related or by whom begot.
A heap of dust alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be.

"To whom gave all the prophet's witness that through his name whosoever believeth on Him shall receive remission of sins."
Acts, 10th; 43rd verse.

In 1816 Alexandria was greater than Washington. It surpassed Baltimore in size, and it was one of the leading shipping ports of the interior. Many of the old houses which were the mansions of those days still stand, and they are as large as the homes of the millionaires of the present. Ships from all parts of the world then came to the Alexandria wharfs, and there was a great deal of trade with the West Indies. One of the big West India ships brought among its passengers in the October of the year 1 well known Englishman, and his beautiful wife. Two French maid servants accompanied them, and the party took up quarters at the old City hotel. Gen. Washington, whose Washington used to stop, and which was then one of the fashionable taverns of the south. It still stands on the corner of Cameron and Royal streets, and is used as an auction house. Here the young wife became sick; and within a few weeks she died. During her sickness her husband, for so the men called himself in the register of the hotel, never left her bedside, and he and the maids watched tenderly over her. But he would have nothing to do with the citizens of Alexandria, and would give no account of himself or of his wife. He refused to see the Catholic Church priest when the call of the town, and the gossips of the city were trying to learn something about them. They were baffled at every point. The husband and wife could not speak a word of English, and the physician who attended the beautiful lady's last hours would say nothing in regard to her. After her death even the features of the face and the husband alone beheld the face of the dead wife, and they alone were present when the funeral services were celebrated. The citizens were not admitted to the upper rooms of the hotel, and the closed coffin was carried directly to the hearse, and from the hearse to the grave. By some it is thought that the female stranger was an American, and by some she is supposed to be the daughter of Aaron Burr, Theodosia Burr, and the ship on which she embarked from Charleston disappeared two years before the female stranger died at Alexandria, and she was, I think, about 23 years old. Why the stranger's husband would permit no one to see her face after she was dead gives rise to the supposition that he may have feared its recognition by those who looked upon it. Another story is that the female stranger had two rival lovers and that the successful one brought her to this country to avoid the vengeance of the other. Those who tell the latter story believe that the unsuccessful rival followed the couple to this country, and murdered the widower near Alexandria, and that this murder was the mysterious one for which Monroe offered a reward during his presidency. The circumstances are such, however, that conjecture can be made to apply with regard to it. Remembering the wealth of Alexandria at this time and the fact that it was often visited by the diplomats and great men of the West Indies, it is thought by some that it may be that the lady was a member of one of the noble English families, and that her husband or lover, whoever he may have been, feared that the slightest delay in getting away would recognize her. Who she was will never be told. The actors connected with her burial have long since died, and this tomb alone remains as a monument of this mysterious love of seventy years ago.

FRANK GEORGE CARPENTER.

A QUEER STORY.

The Psychic Experience of a London Doctor.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—At the house of a literary friend of Brooklyn a few weeks ago I met Mr. and Mrs. Gustafson, of London. Mr. Gustafson is a Swede by birth, and a Swede in his country by his book on the drink question entitled "The Foundation of Death." His wife, Hadda Barrow Gustafson, is an American and brought up in a poet and magazinist of distinction, and while in this country is the special representative of The Pall Mall Gazette. Mr. Gustafson is a big, well-built man, a Swede, who retains enough accent of his native tongue to mark his nationality distinctly. He talks as well as he writes, though not so well as his wife, who, with a young-faced beauty with gray hair.

After the larger part of the company left, the conversation turned to the power which arises from the constraint which is the unavoidable flavoring of the atmosphere of a large company, found ourselves chatting without reserve to a highly intelligent couple. At all such times conversation is really spontaneous. Bright thoughts, interesting experiences, humorous adventures come forth in attractive form and with sufficient ease to prove absorbing for the entertainment of those who called them forth.

Somebody said something about the superstition of the Norwegians regarding sleep. "Is it true, Mr. Gustafson," asked another, "that they never wake anybody from sleep, for fear of terrifying the spirit which they believe to be away from the body when one sleeps?"

"Yes; when the spirit travels they think it should be permitted to finish its journey. A sudden awakening is a shock."

"How I wish I lived in Norway," said a tired woman, who looked as though she could take a six weeks' sleep and not nap if the cares of life would but permit her.

Then the talk drifted toward the psychic and mysterious, and Mr. Gustafson told this story:

Some years ago I was visiting my home in Sweden. My sister was to be married in a few weeks and was waiting to have me stay, main for the wedding. Though I wanted to do so, I could not. Business affairs called me back to London a month before the wedding occurred, and I did not see my home again for five years. Then, when I went to visit her and her husband, after greeting me, she said: "Oh, brother, I have always been so grateful to you for coming to my wedding, although you stayed such a very, very short time."

I, knowing that I had not been there, and believing she was teasing me, said, "Come to your wedding, indeed; you know very well I wanted to come, if I did not."

"Oh, to be sure you were not here for the ceremony, but you were here a little while in the afternoon, and I have always felt so grateful to you for coming to me, and not objecting to stay for the dinner and reception and ball afterward, though I was very young in years, I was old in much trouble."

Seeing that she was quite serious, and not wishing to startle her husband, who looked puzzled, by charges of being where I had not, but should like to have been, and where I ought, if possible, to have been, I begged that she would tell me all about it, as five years had somewhat impaired my memory of the incident.

"Why, you know, brother, when you were entering the gate Ansel and Hans hurried to meet you, and I started to meet you. I kissed you and so did Ansel. We walked, holding your arms, to a summer house and sat down. But you surely remember?"

"No, not clearly. Go on and tell me all about it."

"Well, Christine, the old housekeeper, who had known you since I was an infant's size down, said was delighted to see you."

"What! did Christine see me and talk to me?"

"Yes, surely. Don't you remember?"

"No, not exactly. Tell me, did I eat or drink while here?"

"You drank some syrup, but you did not stay to eat. Yes, and you made a speech."

"I made a speech! Why, what did I say?"

"Oh, we have it written down. And wrote it down, and we have it yet."

"Did I say anything of import?"

"Only those who were in the garden with Ansel and me at the time. You would not go up among the house, and you said:

"How did I leave? I cannot remember."

"In silence and rather superciliously. You said my husband and I started to walk. We did not see you go, but when we turned around you were no longer with us and out in sight. We supposed you had gone to the house. But you had not, and we saw you no more."

"Did the people we met look at us much when we were walking to the house?"

"Yes; I never thought of it until now. Everybody stared at you with the greatest interest. I am sure I don't know why. You were looking exceedingly well, and were well dressed, and had a suite of rooms."

Then I told her that I had not been there at all; that I was not even out of London at the time. She could not believe it. At last she said:

"Why, brother, if you were not really here then, perhaps you are not now. You are not in the least different from what you seemed to be then.

I assured her that I was there in the flesh, and not likely to vanish suddenly. We talked over the mysterious visit. Her servants, the housekeeper, and such of the guests as saw me corroborated the story. The speech I was said to have made was read to me. It was quite new to me. I have no recollection of ever thinking of any part of it.

"How do you explain it?" some one asked.

"I don't explain it. It is perfectly in accordance to me."

"Perhaps it was one of those strange appearances of the spirit while the body sleeps which the Norwegians believe in," some one suggested.

"But I wasn't asleep. My wife and I distinctly remembered that on the evening of the day we worked very hard all day."

"Are you sure you did not tell your self of your before or since?" I asked.

"Yes," answered Mr. Gustafson, "a lady in London asserts that I once spent an hour in her house with my spirit with other guests, when I wasn't there at all."

Who can explain it? Surely there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in any one's philosophy.

EDSON OLIVER.

FROM BOSTON.

A Scrap from Prentice Mulford About Writers.

[Special Correspondence.]

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—Able and interesting writers are increasing at a rate alarming to those long in the profession. "Everybody" writes now, and writes everything—and writes well. New literary stars of second and third class magnitudes are constantly appearing in the horizon. Just as constantly meteors rise, sets and starve about once in seven years. The average pay on newspapers may be $12 a week. When the literary horse is weakened by age he is shot off in a corner and dies quietly and miserably. Of late people's writings are most valued who have done something worthy of note and can tell of it. As ex-Confederate or Union general we think his story in a magazine probably gets as much for it as the mere Bohemian receives for half a year's work in telling other people's stories. An article from Jay Gould or John L. Sullivan would bring the average Bohemian's yearly salary. This is as it should be. People want that those who know something should tell themselves how they did it. The mere writer who can do nothing but write is really not considered a gentleman. Besides, any profession, as connected with newspapers, is not respectable. To be known as a "newspaper man" or "correspondent" is to be practically ostracized in the best literary and social circles. A "newspaper feller," male or female, is regarded as a sort of spy on mankind—proper, ready to pounce out on any body's gossip, real, manufactured or inferred, and sell it for a price. Of course, the public wants the gossip, still they are disposed to regard its collectors as lads only when they are poaching on other people's preserves. These observations are intended only for the latitude of Boston.

PRENTICE MULFORD.

ENGLISH WOMEN.

What Costs Does for Them Over the Sea. Four Things.

Gen. Adam Badeau, in one of his recent articles on the aristocracy, tells the following unpalatable truths: The women of the aristocracy are peculiarly affected by the institution of caste. Their lives and characters are widely different from what they would be without the influence. Born dependent on the other sex; ineligible, for the most part, to independent rank; only the daughters, or wives, or sisters, or mothers of peers; debarred from equal participation of fortune; doomed to be, more than any other women, the mere appendages of men—all the disadvantages of sex are for them intensified in a peculiar degree.

The two facts of their absolute dependence and their consequent and necessary anxiety to please a man or other more powerful than the natural desire of woman for it, affect their character but tell upon the character and develop traits not in themselves attractive or lovely. They make the women less fruitful, less unselfish. They destroy the finest grace of delicacy which is woman's greatest charm. The woman who is known to seek a man is despised by him, though a yet more highborn woman in England feels that also is in the market waiting for the highest bidder; concerning, and I did not, thinks he has but to throw the handkerchief.

Finally, the English women are inferior in power, in force, in energy, in individuality, in character, but because the attractiveness of their helplessness they are something above them when compared to the men that makes you think of the difference the second rate people of a herd—a relative sameness of distinction. No man can possess perfect manhood who is the inferior of a woman; and no woman in England is the equal of a man. This is one result of caste.

A PRUSSIAN'S OPINION.

HIS CHAT CONCERNING THE MANAGEMENT OF RUSSIAN AFFAIRS.

A Country In Which Stealing Is Said To Be a Venial Offense in a Public Officer—How a Customs Officer Is Supposed to Get His Pay.

I had a conversation with an educated Prussian, whose father, I understood, commanded the Prussian troops, in which I cited the Polish war became Emperor of Russia by election of Poland. In the course of the conversation he found occasion to sound the praises of the United States, and closed by saying:

"Your financial has been consistent; your credit is maintained; your currency in good shape; you have brought in par; your bureau of exploration, in locating the classification etc., do very well. There is not the least comparison in this respect between the American and Russian system. In Russia stealing is a very venial offense by a public officer."

"Have you an instance of this?"

"Yes I can give you one which I can vouch for. The czar of Russia made a visit to Berlin, and became greatly annoyed at the treatment of his baggage by the customs officers. He complained to him if he would not go to Russia and be his aid-de-camp. The officer said that he was subject to the orders of his king, but if the czar would abdicate and come to Berlin he would appreciate the high respect shown him. The czar applied to the king, and the officer was dismissed. He was then appointed to the czar, where he was given some dignity, and he did his work, German-like, with thoroughness, but there never came a payday. The czar, poor, unpolished, complained. Finally his circumstances became so bad that he went to the czar and said: 'Your majesty, I must return to my own country.' 'Why,' said the czar, 'have you not satisfied here?' 'Oh! yes, I am with my social treatment; but, sire, I have no money. I am a poor man.' 'Nothing has been paid me.' 'Oh, is that all?' replied the czar; 'I will attend to that.'

RUMLER, RUHLEN EVERYWHERE.

"In two or three days the customs officer got a warrant, or commission, empowering him to go along the Russian frontier and inspect the custom houses. He had an audiority well made out, and he started on his journey. At the first custom house he came to he found everything in an outrageous condition. All the officers were not kept in any shape; there was an appearance of entire irresponsibility. He expressed his disapprobation of the system and said he should report it just as it was. But there was no other place for him to stop except at the custom houses. It was an isolated place, and the whole hospitality was under the roof of the customs officer. He said he would take his dinner there. When he turned up his plate at the table he found 100 rubles under it. He was indignant, and explained that he had been insulted, and handed the money over to the Russian customs officer, saying that he should report it. The officer opened very much surprised.

"At the next place he went to word had been sent in advance that he was coming and the end of the week. There he found he looked at the badly kept books there he found at every few pages a 10-ruble note. This, also, he put aside, and regarded them as bribes, and would have nothing to do with them. He went on and finished the inspection and went back to St. Petersburg, and reported everything as bad as he could to the chief of that department; and there, also, he found money ready for him, which he refused. He got no pay for his errand, and again he told the czar that 'that is all' said the Prussian officer; 'I considered it my duty to you as paramount.' 'Why,' said the czar, 'you did not understand me at all. I wanted you to go on that trip in order to get your pay.'"

TAXED ACROSS THE FRONTIER.

Said he, "Russia is so large that if they do not keep their customs accounts well, keep their police department very clean."

"Oh, yes. A friend of mine had written a book, which he sent to me to bring forward. On one occasion he wanted to go over into Poland, and he stopped at a hotel and registered his name. On the next morning when he awoke he found a Cossack by his bedside. The Cossack said to him: 'Oblige me by getting up and packing your trunk, for you are to be taken right over the frontier.' The man had never done anything that he was aware of to call for such treatment, and he loudly protested. 'I demand,' said he, 'to be informed why I am insulted in this manner. I will not leave until I know the reason.' The Polish officer, who was close by, came in, and he found that a copy of his friend's book with a paragraph which he had written years before about Russia all marked, so he had to go over the frontier without being able to attend to any business whatever."—Gath's Washington Letter in Cincinnati Enquirer.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications for contracts for lighting for the coming lighting for both of domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient number of lights are obtained, in each section of the residence portion of the city, the necessary mains will be put down, and the work of introducing the lighting will be commenced. All desired information in regard to the number of applications for light and their location.

The supply to the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the contracts for the same are signed. Also for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in consequence of the contemplated extension of the plant and their building line after having commenced building operations, as also on account of the loss by fire of material which caused a like unavoidable replacement.

The company has decided in lieu of expensive meters upon a canvass for light consumers to appropriate the amount which would have been paid for meters to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 200 lights, to be put in the business section and 300 in the resident sections.

A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Mulford, and will be open to receive agent, 31 and 37 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will be in attendance to afford any desired information between the hours of 7.30 and 8.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

A VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

"Yes, I had a very narrow escape," said a well-known citizen to a friend. "I was induced to buy coal for a year and my friends gave me up for a lunatic, but when I got it home I found it was the best coal I ever had in the house. It burned clear, without dust and hardly any clinkers, and there was no smoke to speak of. You can't go wrong if you buy of J. Sharp, corner Front and St. 2-2-17 —About five hundred persons were in attendance at the invitation picnic of the Plainfield Turn Verein in Keller's grove last evening.

—Fred Nels of West Fourth street, says he hopes that the man who stole a quantity of mackerel from a wagon in front of his store this morning, enjoyed it.

—A "scrub" nine defeated a nine composed of the employees of the Electric Light Company in a match game of ball on the Somerset street grounds this morning.

—Bishop O'Farrell of Trenton will administer the rite of confirmation to a number of children in St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, on Sunday, the 26th instant.

—Mr. J. J. Winchler of the borough will soon begin the erection of a handsome new dwelling on the site recently purchased by him on Mercer avenue near Rockview avenue.

—The third regatta in the river at Cranford given under the auspices of the Cranford River Improvement Association will be given on Saturday of this week at four o'clock in the afternoon.

—The work of painting the school building on West Fifth street, at Liberty street and also the new building on East Fifth street has been completed and the same accepted by the Board of Education as satisfactory.

—A little boy is said to have been knocked down by No. 3 horse cart on New street last evening and severely injured, as the how was being laid along that street, but he was carried away before his name could be ascertained.

—The various lawyers of the city are practicing every pleasant afternoon with a view of competing with the legal lights of Rahway in a friendly game of ball. The match will probably take place in this city during next week.

—Sarah Green, the woman who received such brutal treatment at the hands of a waiter at the Netherwood Hotel last week, is slowly recovering at the County Hospital, where she was taken for treatment. Dr. Long, the physician in charge, says he hopes to have her out in a few weeks, although she is yet suffering intensely.

—The Manhattan Temperance Association of New York, J. B. Gibbs president, commenced its fall, winter and spring campaign on Sunday, Oct. 3, at the Grand Avenue Tabernacle, Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street, 2.30 p. m., with the following eminent speakers: Hon. John B. Finch, the Western orator, Rev. Dr. Funk, editor of The Voice, Chauncey Beadle, Esq., Rev. Dr. Crafts of Plainfield.

—The formal call for the Democratic State Convention on Sept. 28 has just been issued. The counties in the State will be entitled to 328 delegates, divided as follows: Atlantic, 14; Bergen, 20; Burlington, 27; Camden, 24; Cape May, 8; Cumberland, 11; Essex, 36; Gloucester, 17; Hudson, 30; Hunterdon, 25; Mercer, 26; Middlesex, 29; Monmouth, 26; Morris, 24; Ocean, 12; Passaic, 25; Salem, 17; Somerset, 17; Sussex, 17; Union, 23; Warren, 18.

—About two weeks ago Mrs. John Martin of Green Brook took into her family as boarders a man and woman, who claimed to be man and wife, and who gave the residence as New York city. Last week they started out for a walk in that picturesque locality, and as they did not return when the shades of night began to fall it was thought that they had lost their way. But as the people here have yet failed to return it is now thought they were afraid to face a board bill which was overdue at the time of their departure.

—A public meeting of the Plainfield Prohibition League was held last evening in Reform Hall, the Rev. J. B. Cleaver presiding. The attendance was rather small. The Rev. Mr. Phelps of Newark addressed the meeting for nearly two hours and was cheered by stateing that the Prohibition Party was the only party that could thoroughly regenerate the country and in which all good citizens should unite. At the close of the address the collection went at heart instead of party ties. At the close of the meeting Prohibition literature was scattered among the audience.

Another Barn Burned.

Shortly before nine o'clock last evening a small frame barn on New street between Third and Fourth streets was discovered to be on fire. An alarm was sent in, and together No. 1 and 2 and Deputy Hood and Builder Orr soon quickly at the scene and rendered valuable assistance in saving adjoining property. The barn was owned by Mrs. Ann Eliza Drake, who lives on the opposite side of the street. The fire was set, Robert Walker, whose home is directly in the rear of the barn. The police conducted an investigation into the matter, the residents of the vicinity, including two boys of Italian parentage, who were playing in the yard in the barn yesterday, were questioned. The loss is covered by insurance. The adjoining barn is owned by Mr. Ed. Sayre, and that of Mr. P. Casey & Son in connection with the undertaking business. The contents of the latter barn, including a hearse and other wagons were saved, but the roof of the latter was slightly damaged. The loss to the latter is covered by insurance. The paint on the house of Robert Walker was blistered, but otherwise the building was not damaged. Burns applies on a trespass the barn was rounded by the heat. The fire is undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, as the night had been warm and there was no fire. Among the young men who resided on the premises were those who had been at New Market on the Sunday evening and early next morning, apparently tramps, coming from the direction of that place. On Monday night was the second attempt made to burn the barn, the first one having been extinguished. Tuesday night the barn was discovered about this morning, but was extinguished with a few buckets of water. Mr. Walker, in attempting to subdue the flames, fell from a ladder and severely injured his back and is somewhat inconvenienced thereby.

Arrested for Stealing Melons.

Elizabeth C. Price of Piscataway Township entered a complaint before Justice Vays at Dunellen last week, charging five boys, Dennis Kenny, David Wells, Patrick Wilkes, Patrick Lyons, Frank Mulvaney and John Cahill, with entering the complainant's watermelon patch on the night of August 25, and stealing therefrom melons valued at about ten dollars. Constable Price of Piscataway Township made the arrests on Saturday, and apprehended the boys yesterday morning and arraigned them before Justice Nash. John Cahill and Patrick Lyons were each held in the sum of $50 to await the action of the Middlesex County Grand Jury. Frank McInerney, Dennis Kenny and David Wells were each held in the sum of $50 to appear for trial before Justice Vays at Dunellen on Thursday afternoon next at 2 p. m. The boy Lyons is said to have but recently been liberated from the Reform School. Each of the boys furnished the necessary bail and were released.

Three more boys who were alleged to have been implicated in the affair were arrested, but as there was no direct evidence against them they were released by Justice Nash.

A Supposed Rabid Dog.

An overgrown worthless cur of the black-and-tan species showed marked signs of the rabies on Front street, between twelve and one o'clock to-day. The animal ran wildly and strangely and pedestrians scattered as though a local earthquake had struck the town. The dog passed a party composed of two ladies and one gentleman four of the ladies being Misses Mary and Frances Lyons of No. 3 A. M. Griffen's hardware store on East Front street, where they took refuge in the counting room and were safe. Others took the door behind them. The rabid dog next made a rush for the stairway leading to the basement of Mr. Griffen's store, where he remained until Policeman Lynch came upon the scene and ended his earthly career by shooting.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Fred. J. Wells and child of West Fifth street have gone on a visit to Westerly, R. I.

Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Honeyman of Somerset street have returned from Drakesville, Sussex county, N. J., where they have been for about six weeks past.

After an absence of several weeks from the city Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Chapman have again taken up their residence at the corner of Central avenue and Eighth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Avery of Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, left this morning for an extended tour through the Western States. They intend to be absent for about six weeks.

The funeral of the young son of Thomas Clarkson, who died on Saturday, took place from the home of his parents on Liberty street, at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. The body was interred in the Methodist cemetery.

The wife of Hon. J. N. Fidler, of Somerset, from the Fourth Congressional district died at her home at White House station last week, after an illness covering many months. The funeral took place from the late home of the deceased on Saturday morning.

Miss Georgette B. Gibbs, daughter of Mr. J. B. Gibbs, president of the Manhattan Temperance Association of New York, will be united in marriage to James Cummings Wagstaff of New York city, at the Netherwood Union chapel to-morrow afternoon at half-past two o'clock. Rev. Dr. Ray, pastor of Grace Episcopal church in Harlem will officiate. After the ceremony the bride and groom will leave on an extended bridal tour to Moosehead Lake, Maine, going via Newport and Boston.

The remains of Herman Godfrey Madams, who was kicked by a horse belonging to Henry Stevens of East Second street on Saturday, and was subsequently taken to Babcock hospital, where he died on Sunday evening from the injuries he received, were buried from Messrs. A. M. Runyon & Son's undertaking establishment on New York avenue this afternoon. The funeral cortege consisted of a single wagon, which contained the body of the deceased, which was taken to the grave in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield. Rev. Mr. Knowles, the pastor of the Second Baptist church, officiated at the funeral rites in the presence of a few sympathizers, who had gathered about the grave.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

SIXTEENTH MEETING.

The City Council met in regular session in the Council chamber last evening, beginning about eight o'clock. Tax Clerk Sayre called the meeting to order and in the absence of the President, Councilman F. E. Mayo was unanimously elected President pro tem. The roll call showed the following gentlemen to be present: Messrs. Catchert, Dunham, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Marsh, Mayo and Thornton—8. The absent members were Messrs. Ingerson, Bowers and Cox—3.

The clerk read the minutes of the last regular meeting and they were approved as read.

A communication signed by Messrs. W. E. Boston, T. W. Honeyger, W. Raymond and others was presented and read calling the attention of the Council to the thoroughfare known as "Cedar avenue," to the Rear of the city which has been formally accepted and opened by the city about the year 1869, and stating that the owners of property thereon desire the same for farm purposes. The matter was referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances.

A petition from Mr. H. E. Hopkins and others was read asking Council upon what conditions an ordinance could be framed granting the said H. E. Hopkins and others a franchise for furnishing the city with a system of power known as the "West System." The petition was referred to the Law and Ordinance Committee.

A petition from Edward C. Mulford was read asking permission to erect a two-story frame building with slate roof at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets, said referred to the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee, with power.

Mrs. A. Bergenthal, agent for the Edison Electric Light Co., presented a petition asking for the right of way to erect poles and wires on certain streets in the city, said for the purpose of stringing wires for electrical purposes. Referred to Fire, Water and Lamp Committee.

The following applications for licenses were presented and referred to the License Committee: Peddler—Vanderhoof & Co., H. Miller; Hack—Morris Higgins.

Petition for sidewalks were presented and referred to the various committees:

Mr. Dumont presented the monthly statement of the treasurer and collector. They were read, referred and subsequently received and ordered filed.

Mr. Dunham from the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee, reported back the petition of the Edison Electric Light Company, and recommended that the proposition be appointed to confer together as to the advisability of constructing an ordinance. The report of the committee was read a motion and amended by Councilman Goddard so as to read that the Council meet in special session on Friday next, at eight o'clock, to consider any and all propositions relating to water works and sewerage which may be brought before the Council. So ordered.

Mr. Dunham from the License Committee reported on above applications for licenses. The report was received and the licenses granted.

The various committees reported back the bills referred to them and with the exception of the bills of Mr. H. J. Butterworth, $20.00, and the Globe Gas Light Co., $150.32, which were held in the hands of the committee, they were transferred to the Auditing Committee. The bills referred to the course. At half-past one the Mayflower was off the point of Sandy Hook a mile and a half ahead of the Galatea.

DUNELLEN.

Mr. W. S. Stevens has been confined to the house for the past week with slight illness.

Rev. Mr. Compton, late pastor of the M. E. church here, occupied the pulpit Sunday. He is now at Long Branch on a visit.

The membership of the Presbyterian church was largely increased Sunday morning, some by letters and some new members.

The Round Brook Band gave their closing out-door concert Saturday evening, which was enjoyed by a large number of people. The evening was cool, and some complaint of the band have already taken cold by the exposure to the damp night air, hence the discontinuance of the concerts. The series of concerts have been a great success.

Rachel Hirsch, age fourteen, of New Brunswick, while loading some alcohol yesterday, upset the liquid, which set fire to her dress. She was badly burned, but it is believed that she will recover, having inhaled the fumes of the burning alcohol.

THE INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACE.

The Mayflower and Galatea Contest. The Mayflower Wins.

(Per B. & O. Tel.—C. M. Goddard Manager.)

The race between the yacht Mayflower and the English cutter Galatea for the Queen's cup, was started this morning at 10.30 there was such an immense fleet of boats crowding the course that a start was found to be impossible. By 10.56 the yachts got started with the Mayflower at 10.59 her length ahead, which was increased at 11.30 to a lead of a quarter of a mile, and by 11.45 to half a mile. At 12.15 the Mayflower was a mile ahead with both yachts off the hospital ship, and about sixteen miles sailed of the thirty-eight miles which is the length of the course. At half-past one the Mayflower was off the point of Sandy Hook a mile and a half ahead of the Galatea.

A Night on Shore.

Everybody now knows what the poet meant when he sang, "'Tis midnight on the stormy deep, and wide my lonely watch I keep." It was a Wanderer and he was sitting up all night in the wind, so that he might know when to get up in the morning.—E. J. Burdette.

SENDING THE NEEDY AWAY.

Free Passes For All Wanting to Emigrate.

The Work of Removing Dangerous Buildings Actively Begun—Many Laborers Refuse to Work, Alleging Fear of More Quakes—The Work of Relief Pent by Impostors—Saving a Damaged Steeple. Forty Thousand People Under Tents.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 7.—Considerable confidence has come to the people. A week ago yesterday the earthquake shock first startled the four hours ago. The scientists who have been exploring the city and adjacent country say that no more serious shocks are expected, though there will be rumblings and tremors at intervals during the next two or three weeks.

The citizens have argued in their minds and among themselves that it is unreasonable to suppose that robust shocks will continue. Thus they have formed upon themselves the conclusion that the worst is past. Yesterday

MURDERED BABIES.

HEARTLESS METHOD OF DISPOSING OF INFANTS.

The Revelations of an Ash Heap which is Shocking the College of a Methodist Missionary Society Situated in Darning Needles.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Pauline Mittelstadt, who has been running a lying-in hospital at this city for a year or two, has been arrested, and the most startling developments regarding her alleged crimes have just been made public. Mrs. Mittelstadt has always been at work, although Mrs. Mittelstadt was unaware that she was under police surveillance.

It now appears that the woman has for months back made a regular practice of putting the babies left in her charge to death by sticking a large darning needle into their brains. How many innocents have been thus made away with it is impossible to estimate, but the number promises to run considerably over a score.

The police were given the first clews regarding this alleged wholesale slaughter of the infants by a servant girl named Lena Myers, who had worked at Mrs. Mittelstadt's for three months. Acting upon the girl's information the detectives raided the house and some horrible discoveries were the result.

A newly-made mound of earth is reported to have been noticed in the cellar, and upon being excavated the bodies of three babies were found. Running through each little heart was a darning needle, which had been ground down to a fine point, and then evidently pressed right through the tiny bodies.

One of the bodies was a mere skeleton, while the other two had not been long buried, and the babies had probably not been dead more than a week or two.

The officers continued their search, and it is claimed that in an ash heap at the back of the house found two more bodies buried only a few inches beneath the surface. In fact the fifty fingers of one baby protruded through the ashes, and it seemed strange that nobody had discovered the buried mystery before. This, it seems, was partly explained by the fact that Mrs. Mittelstadt lived entirely alone with the exception of one servant girl, and was careful to keep all intruders away from her premises. Besides that, dancing was also running through them.

An unused well in the backyard was next investigated, and the detectives say they were rewarded by discovering three more bodies of little ones, some of them having been evidently more than four or five months old. In every case the needle was left in the skull or brain of her crime sticking in the hearts of the little victims.

There is great excitement in social circles over the ghastly exposure, as many prominent society people are said to be implicated in the scandal, having left babies with Mrs. Mittelstadt to take care of. The woman was usually paid six months' board for the infants in advance, but, as alleged, killed them after a week's residence with her. When an inquiry was made by the parents she explained the infant's absence by saying that she had sent it into the country for the summer to the home of a relative.

It is also said that in several cases Mrs. Mittelstadt was paid considerable sums of money for putting the babies out of the way. The wife of one of Milwaukee's best known merchants is believed to have paid the woman $200 for the death of her child, and a child left her without the knowledge of the deceived merchant.

The feeling against Mrs. Mittelstadt is intense, and threats of lynching are made. She is a stout, German woman, and takes her arrest philosophically. She denies her guilt, but the girl Lena Myers, who first exposed her, asserted that she saw Mrs. Mittelstadt run a needle through the heart of one of the babies.

Further startling disclosures are expected by a diligent examination of the premises. It is expected that the number of babies thus killed will exceed even the high estimate made by the police authorities.

MAYOR SMITH'S ACCOUNTS.

He Admits to Carelessness in His Bank Business.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—At a meeting yesterday of the committee appointed to investigate the charges of irregularities against Mayor Smith, the city comptroller and retiring teller of the city treasury presented the accounts of the returns of moneys made by the mayor.

The chief bookkeeper of the bank in which Mayor Smith kept his account presented detailed accounts of the deposits, etc., during the years. The account was kept in the name of "William B. Smith, treasurer." The statement made by the bookkeeper proved that the balances in the bank belonged to the city, and for the month of July, ranged from $2,300 to $5; that on Aug. 30, when the balance was $30, the mayor few wanted to the city treasurer checks to the amount of over $6,000, and of a total of a little over that amount was made. The mayor, in his letter of explanation, acknowledges that he has been somewhat careless in his bank book-keeping, and states that he knew his ability to pay the amounts due the city at any time.

SMALL SILVER CERTIFICATES.

The Business Public Will Make Large Demands.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The treasury department will continue to destroy all the $1 and $2 treasury notes that come in. They will be redeemed in silver dollars, silver certificates, or silver dollars, until the $1 and $2 silver certificates are ready to be issued. The department is very anxious to get the $1 and $2 silver certificates out, and it is expected that $20,000,000 or $40,000,000 of silver will be put in circulation through this medium. The department receives about every day's delay in getting them out, but it will be impossible to get the engraving and the printing done so as to issue them before the middle of October. The bill holding $1 treasury notes from circulation an immense number of silver dollars have been issued, but the demand for convenient small notes is very great in the south, and there will be a call for almost as many as they will get.

Trouble Brewing Among Convicts.

BOSTON, Sept. 7.—Trouble is brewing at the state prison. The nuns are dissatisfied at not receiving money from contractors. During the past month almost $1,000 worth of leather and manufactured boots and shoes have been destroyed by convicts on the Blanchard contract. The nuns do not object to working, but many of them are unable to do what other nuns perform in two hours. It is said that the management now propose to strike the nuns. What the outcome of this will be remains to be seen. It would be surprising if there should be some exciting times before the nuns become acquainted with the new and genial, but determined warden. The officers, too, want shorter hours of work, and think that the ten-hour law should be applied to the prison. The officers have to be on duty twelve hours, day or night. The convicts work about seven hours a day, except Sundays.

Harvard's 250th Anniversary.

BOSTON, Sept. 7.—The official programme for the celebration of the 250th anniversary of Harvard college has just been issued. November 8, undergraduate's day, will be celebrated by the usual athletic sports. At 2 o'clock athletic sports in the afternoon and a torchlight procession in the evening. On Sunday, Nov. 7, foundation day, there will be commemoration sermons in Appleton chapel, conducted in the morning by the Rev. Francis G. Peabody, and in the afternoon by the Rev. Phillips Brooks. On Nov. 8, alumni day, dinner in Memorial hall will deliver address, and Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes a poem to the graduates and invited guests. The association of the alumni will have a collation in the afternoon.

Colored Laborers Causing Trouble.

MOBILE, Sept. 7.—Some 200 colored men gathered around the fifty laborers who had just broke ground on the new line of the Mobile and West Alabama road yesterday morning, and ordered them quit work, saying that they should demand $2 a day instead of $1. The laborers were intimidated and quit work, after which they paraded the town. Since the strike the company have obtained other men, and work has been continued under the protection of deputy sheriffs, who are constantly menaced by crowds of negroes. The company expects to have the road to-morrow, and if this proves to be effective the company will begin work at the other end of the line. This will deprive some 500 Mobile negroes of work.

Racing in Spain.

MADRID, Sept. 7.—Serious rioting has prevailed in Cartagena during the past few days, caused by the opposition of the people to the collection of certain local taxes. The continued force of the military and police has been called into requisition to quell the disturbances, with only partial success. Several of the ringleaders have been arrested, but the people are not yet entirely reconciled.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do. Mr. W. Frost street, Plainfield, N. J., June 19, '86.

Dr. Chas. S. Thiers,

Sir: I am in receipt of your Stomatine, for which I thank you. I have used it, and with much pleasure, and find it to be a good remedy, and I do not hesitate to recommend it to my friends. I find that it does not injure the enamel of the teeth, as many of the tooth washes do, but on the contrary, it whitens them, and gives them a beautiful appearance. I am, Yours truly,

WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. S. Thiers,

Sir: My daughter will speak for herself, as to what the Stomatine has done for her. I have also used it, and find it to be a most delightful preparation for the mouth, throat and gums. Yours truly,

C. RAY SMITH, Druggist.

Plainfield, N. J., August 19, '86.

Dr. Chas. S. Thiers,

Dear Sir: I have much pleasure in saying that the use of your Stomatine has done my daughter a great deal of good. Her throat was very much run down when she commenced using it, and it has built her up wonderfully. Yours truly,

E. M. STELLE.

Plainfield, August 17, 1886.

SOME MATTERS OF INTEREST TO BOYS AND GIRLS.

A Young Naturalist's First Day Afield.

Harmless Tricks—The Boy or Girl Who Will Blame A Comic City Avail of Little People.

"Stop, Hallie! See what you are doing!"

"I'm a kicking up a dreadful dust," said Hallie, innocently.

"It's destroying a whole city with all its wealth, and may be killing whole families, babies and all."

Both boys looked at Uncle Frank in a bewildered way, and then looked quickly and curiously at the ground.

"It's only an old ant hill, uncle."

"Only an ant hill. And what is that but a city of many thousand people, a few hundred times smaller than you, 'tis true, but alive and capable of feeling and planning and working?

"I believe you about the numbers—just see them scurry! But weren't you joking about the 'wealth' of the city? I don't see any wealth and all."

"There were banks and stores, nevertheless, and all this year's crops and goods in them."

The boys looked, rather than asked: "What kind of goods, pray, are in an ant hill?"

"There was stored in that city what was worth as much to its owners as your own father's stock of goods and all built around its hive—wheat seed, crumbs of bread, grain and sugar, shreds of meat, dead bugs, etc., enough to last all winter. Suppose you take all the provisions out of Chicago?"

"Well," said repentant Hal, "I'll bring my pockets full of wheat and things, and that will pay them all back."

"Ah, but you'll be but the trouble of assorting and storing them."

"Storing! Storing! Do they go to that trouble?"

"Does your papa in his store mix flour and hams and coffee and molasses together? Pussy these ants mixing crumbs of bread, grains of rice, bits of sugar or apple and dried insects all together! They have a place for everything, and put everything in its place."

"But what about the babies?"

"Don't you see those white things they are carrying away?"

"They are grains of rice, I suppose."

"They are nothing of the kind, but baby ants being carried to a place of safety."

"I'd awfully hate to be one of their babies and get nothing for breakfast but dried bugs and musty wheat seeds."

"Mistaken again. Their babies are fed the sweetest and richest of milk."

"Can these fellows carry away milk, too, or have they milkmen as well as banks and stores?"

"Better than that: they keep their own cows—the babies, a kind of plant louse, which exudes drops of honey-like fluid just adapted to baby ants. They watch these creatures—sometimes shut them up to keep them from running off—and milk them by pressing the body with their forefeet."

"I'll watch what I kick after this."—Morning Guide.

Harmless Tricks.

If while we cannot recommend the following "tricks" as either new or brilliant, we print them below now and then a "trick" of this kind causes some little merriment on the part of the young people at father, mother or uncle's expense.

Can you place a newspaper on the floor in such a way that two persons can stand upon it, and not be able to reach one another with their hands? Answer: You by putting the paper in a doorway, one half inside and the other half outside of the room, closing the door over it; two persons can easily stand upon it, and still be beyond each other's reach.

Can you put one of your hands where the other cannot touch it? Easily; by putting one hand on the elbow of the other arm.

Can you place a pencil on the floor in such a way that no one can jump over it? Yes; if I place it close enough to the wall of the room.

Can you push a chair through a finger ring? Yes; by putting a ring on the finger and pushing the chair with the finger.

You can put yourself through a keyhole by taking a piece of paper with the word "yourself" written upon it and pushing it through the hole.

You can ask a question that no one can answer with a "no" by saying, "What does y-e-s spell?"

You can go out of the room with two legs and return with six by bringing a chair along with you.

THE EDITOR'S DRAWER.

Quaint Anecdotes of Real Life Vouched for by Harper's Monthly.

The Rev. ——, ice "Father" ——, as he was called, was the long pastor of the Congregational church in ——, Massachusetts. He was a man of great sobriety of deportment, yet was noted for a dry humor, which, though chiefly exercised in private, sometimes crooped out in public. His people have fond of him, and at the fiftieth year of his ministry was completed, made a grand celebration in honor of the event. He preached a historical sermon. In this sermon he made an extensive review of the half century that had passed since his ordination. He spoke first of the changes it had witnessed there in the town. Next he spoke of changes in the state. Then he spoke of the country in the same strain, and finally of the world, showing how fifty years had in the course of both wrought wonderful transformations. "But," he added, "there is one thing, my dear friends, that has not changed—that through all these fifty years gone by has been the same, and that is the well described lament: 'Fanny Lane,' her end was even more miserable. After spinning out a long life, which was rendered by poverty and suffering and countless sorrows—having seen great princes at her feet and led captive great capitals—she was forsaken by all the world except a tatterdemalion boy and a disreputable young doctor. She, too, had once the honor of being called—from Paris. It was Fanny, after leaving the active fortune or her and being thrown over, a few years, and joined Duval shot himself in her antechamber.

I am afraid that there are not wanting fair American Fannys, also. In all the varied histories of their adventures I believe I have heard of one who bids fair to take such a position by storm, being more nearly of such unhappy superiority. She is a singer with great musical talent, once a very sweet, rich voice, but whose triumphs thus far have been more owing to her opulent charms of person than to her artistic merits. In fact, she herself thinks little of her art in comparison with the is said to be nearly bloatrous of her own beauty, and to glory in the power to maddle others. Some of these others are of whom she has many, for "the fools are not all dead yet." No beneficent plague ever carries them off, no war ever thins their ranks. Last year there came to this country to sing in Milan a telegram from a theatre in a distant city, saying: "Send me a good soprano, beautiful and without any incumbrance."

Among the incumbrances—a father, mother, sister, brother and, above all, husband, is called "an incumbrance." Our fair country-woman was solicited.

She went and all alone went she.

A few months later she returned to Italy gay and triumphant, with, as she boasted, "a hat full of diamonds." Since then she has gone forth "conquering and to conquer." Indeed she is the type of singer most successful on the continental stage nowadays; not that we enjoy Arcadian tranquility even here in "well ordered Philadelphia." We had a ridiculous little "scrimmage" about the time of the real insurrection in Belgium. Ours was half a frolic. One of the leaders of the insurgents was a young man who protected himself by means of a nasal mask grotesque and huge. Whenever the police were about to grab him he retreated, a few steps into the park, pocketed his nose and was absolutely unrecognizable. Italian working people can ill afford to strike. They have nothing to fall back upon. General starvation marches into the field and all surrender. Three hundred women rice gatherers and cleaners have, however, just struck at Mantua. But they will soon be striking on their empty stomachs. During the late Buda Pesth riots the strikers sent forth the startling shouts of "Vive Kossuth!" It was a far cry out of Hungary to Turin. Yet amid the last years of the octogenarian exile in Turin have been stirred by merely hearing of it! The heroic old dreamer has so far passed into history that his poor, discomfiting countrymen might as well shout for Charlemagne.

The cholera has not yet come near us, as an epidemic, and is hardly likely—to allay to any great extent a city so open, densely country. "Such a condition of affairs," says the doctor, as a raconteur, "might at times become embarrassing except for the thorough sensibility of all concerned. I confess, however, to a slightly disconcerted feeling when shortly before my third marriage I was approached by one of the high-born. A girl of 5, and one who called my second wife mother, with 'Papa, will you let me go to see you married? I have never been at any of your weddings!'"

BEES UNFORTUNATE WITH HIS DAUGHTERS.

A gentleman traveling through the mountainous and thinly settled districts of North Carolina was overtaken by a severe storm. As he was on horseback, and therefore quite unprotected, he beheld with delight a log cabin in the distance, and speedily betook himself thither. The old farmer greeted him with true southern hospitality and soon found himself seated at the dinner table beside "the old woman," as his host designated his wife, while one by one a seemingly endless line of daughters filed in, and, after bowing to the farmer, he mildly observed, "You have a fine family of daughters, sir."

"Well," said the old man, mournfully, "we've been kinder unfortunate with our darters. The chimbly fell in and killed all but nine on 'em." The historian dares not guess how many there were at first.—Harpers' Monthly.

HEARTS THAT ONCE BEAT IN UNISON.

For a year past a pair of souls in Flushing, Long Island, have been accustomed to share a thought between them, and two devoted hearts have been in such close and perfect unison as to produce but one rounded and complete throb. Now, alas! they do so no more—one has fallen an accept of a cough.

Miss C—— and her fiance, Mr. L—— attended the sociable at the Baptist church parlors recently, and were happy as usual in their love-affair. Mr. L——, they does is take was somewhat disturbed by a hacking cough with which Miss C—— was suffering. When at last the sociable was over, and the pair were bidding each other good-night at the door, C——'s house—which, it being moonlight and not too late, it is safe to assume was not to be reached very quickly—the lady was seized with a violent paroxysm of coughing. In great distress, Mr. L—— supported her tenderly, wishing he might cough for her, when suddenly she remembered that she always carried troches in his pocket; possibly one was about him then. A quick search filled him with triumph.

"Take this," he said, pressing it upon her; "it will give you relief, I am sure," and the young woman gratefully put the small flat disk upon her tongue.

They walked on. Miss C—— sucked upon the troche and lung upon her lover's words, and one or the other acted so soothingly that her coughing gradually ceased and she became herself again. Mr. L—— inquired with solicitude if the troche were dissolved, receiving such time the assurance that it was not yet.

Then was a prolonged and interesting walk as well at the door, in which, for the time both enough and remedy were forgotten. As Mr. L—— moved away, however, his anxiety returned, and he called back, "Shall I have another troche?" And in the light of later events it struck Miss C—— more than a little cadence in his tone.

She slightly declined his offer, and entered the house. A few moments afterward, by the light of her bedroom lamp, a discovery took place which so startled her that she stood for a moment Cupid fled, and before she slept the letter containing the fatal words "all is over" was written.

In his anxiety he had unwittingly given her a trumors lozion.—Harper's Monthly.

Where Real Americans Go to Die—She Was with an Adjustable Nose and the Heathen Tuby — Bloodless, Deformed and Downfish Italians of Lowly Life.

[Special Correspondence.]

MILAN, Aug. 31.—Another American born queen of the demi monde, "Cora Pearl" Illinois Crouch, has lately closed her wild life in Paris, a poor, sick, broken down woman, to die. Many famous and powerful men she has lamented "Fanny Lear," her end was even more miserable. After squandering enormous sums, she was reduced to poverty. A CAMP IN INDIA.

THE NATIVE TROOPS OF GEN. ROBERTS' COMMAND NEAR DELHI.

The Ghoorkas and Sikhs—Pastimes and Spring Festivals—An Elephant History of Heavy Guns—Many Sports and Exercises—A Picturesque Assembly.

The native troops struck me, and I believe our accredited officers are equally impressed with them, as the Ghoorkas and Sikhs being especially selected, the latter from their great size and physique, and the former for general fondness for military service. They were among the last of the native tribes to yield to British rule, but have since shown the most loyal of the country's faithful subjects. They were thoroughly devoted during the mutiny of 1857, and did good service against the rebels. Their swords, about 2 feet long, are called kookeries, and whose blade is a segment of a circle. They have one of their most secret weapons, known as the Golden temple. The swords come from Nepaul, in the Himalayas, and show much the make of the Mongolian type of feature. They are a rather short, but sadly looking set of men, armed in addition to rifle with a large, heavy, single stroke knife, which is worn on the belt. They are very unrelenting, and rarely spare the life of even a fallen foe.

The Sikhs are a fine looking set of the service is made of a material called kirkee. It is a species of American duck of a yellowish clay color, and consists of a jacket, short trousers and a turban. The latter is a long piece, being a roll of cloth wound round the leg in a spiral form from the ankle to the knee, in a manner similar to that in which men bandage a sprained ankle.

UNIFORMS OF NATIVES AND EUROPEANS.

For full dress the native as well as the European wears articles of various colors and of different fabrics. Red is still the prevailing color, but in conversation with officers I gathered the impression that the British do not care to see so much of this many favor, as it so nearly approaches that of the soil as to make the soldiers almost indistinguishable; and I observed that when on the field during the review that the native wear at all times, it was difficult to discover a body of troops especially if they were at a distance of 200 yards. They also like you as his toys to put his belt with the harness, and is less observable than the native. The Ghoorkas are an exception, and do not wear the belt, but in lieu thereof a species of shell cap, not unlike the jaunty headpiece of the English soldier, with which, by the by, he fraternizes more than any other of the native troops.

One of the features of this command that is especially striking to an American is the splendid array of heavy guns. They took the pains to examine quite minutely. There were really two kinds of draught for the elephant and the bullock, these being eighteen of the former and 300 of the latter. The wheel elephant is placed in a pair of wide shafts, and has a very large, heavy set of wood and metal harness like a large cart saddle. This is attached by a broad leather band and iron chains to the shafts. He has also a strong breast strap and breeching. The bullock hitches in much the same manner to that in which the lead horse in a tandem team would be. The bullocks accompany the battery not only for draught purposes, but to carry the loads of four to six yokes for each gun, but because they are indispensable in time of action, as the elephant will not stand fire. He, indeed, will turn and run with the gun, and stampede the guns, and leaves is detached when the enemy is near, and bullocks yoked to. There were several specimens of the latter attached to the battery. There were also two or three mountain batteries, in which the guns and parts of carriages were on the backs of mules.

MANLY SPORTS AND EXERCISES.

Not the least interesting or noticeable feature of the Indian service is the great attention given to manly sports and exercises. Every opportunity is furnished for the development of the physique and for acquiring skill in the exercises of arms. The most daring and probably the most popular is pole pegging. This consists in riding at full tilt and taking with the lance a rather short and broad tent peg from the ground, and you may be a little surprised when I tell you that Gen. Roberts led off in this sport, and with his team of four made the best score of the evening. There were numerous other mounted and foot sports, such as lance against sword, sword against bayonet, sword against sword, sword against lance, tent pegging with sword, cutting lemons with swords, tug of war, foot racing, and acrobatic and gymnastic feats.

The march past by the entire force, some 25,000, closed the camp of exercise. It was done in the midst of a pouring rain. By the time the cavalry and horse and foot artillery had passed the reviewing point the dark soil had been churned into the consistency of a thin kind of mortar, and when the mighty battery of heavy guns, by many of whom were only the slipper, came on the scene of loss of this rather necessary appendage of the foot soldier, and I rather think this is not to be bought at the canteen. They came on, however, as nearly as European, marched by with great precision, and the line and draw of the drivers' whips, in groups of seven, divisions were admirably observed. As the elephant battery passed, the knowing natives raised their trunks and saluted, for which purpose they bend the trunk into the form of the letter S, holding it square to the front.

The appearance of the ground in and about the night's mound when the reviewing officer was pooled calls for some attention, as it was made up of all sorts and conditions of men, from the native who was in the hands some four-in-hand with four spirited horses, to the humble peasant who had trudged out five miles to see the grand parade. There were all sorts of conveyances, from the tumbrils were the camels and elephants. I counted seventy-five of the latter, many richly caparisoned and provided with howdahs and canopies, and gorgeous in the extreme. Many of the native women were in holiday attire, and the gaudy colors of their dress made the assembly all the more picturesque.—Col. Floyd-Jones' Military Correspondence.

The Wife of Gen. John C. Fremont.

One of the most noticeable of the women visiting was Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont. She had with her her son, Francis Preston Blair Fremont, with. Mrs. Fremont, although looking somewhat older than when she was last in Washington two or three years ago, has lost none of her energy or decision of manner. She is a strong lady, her head a little large, perhaps, for her figure, which is only of the medium height.—Washington Cor. Chicago Tribune.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications for lights from all parties desiring Incandescent lighting for both business and residence purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient numbers of lights are obtained, in each section of the residence portion of the city, the company makes the necessary extensions of its plant at which time lighting will be commenced. Will depend upon the number of applications for light and their location.

The supply to the business section of the city is now complete, and will be at all hours for the accommodation of the customers with the city for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily occurred in completing the plant, but the company having commenced to set back their lighting after the business of the day is done, and to build the necessary extensions, as also on account of the loss by fire of material which cannot be immediately replaced.

The company has decided to let by contract to appropriate the amount which it will be required to expend for the purpose in the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 600 lights, namely 200 in the business section and 200 in the residence sections.

The company has been created trust Mr. Mulford, real estate and insurance agent, 35 and 37 North avenue, opposite the Park House, where all applications for the company will receive application and further information between the hours of 8.30 and 9.30 a. m. and 4 and 5.30 p. m.

Facts of Interest.

Midway Island, one of the Hawaiian group, belongs to the United States, and is used as a coal station.

It is said that within a radius of 100 miles around Asheville, N. C., every known mineral can be found.

Dr. R. Pusely Brown declares that the excessive use of salt is one of the main factors in the destruction of human teeth.

Divers in thirty feet of water, at Holyoke dam, near Hartford, have kept up communication with the men at the pipes by means of telephones.

Prof. Pickering, of the Boston Institute of Technology, with several skilled photographers, went to Grenada, one of the West India islands, to take notes and records of the six-will-last-for-more-in-your-county. After such a sweep as this:

1. Fill your whole wealth, estimated with the utmost care and an weary; also latest assessed at ation of his property and amount of taxes paid or due for '85.

2. Tell when you was in control, whether land or stock, with any manufacturing or other investments you can learn of.

3. How you got the by his wealth, whether inherit d or self-seven united, and whether sum is by increase in value of land held or sold, by regular farming, fruit-raising or breeding of horses, mules and cows. If party has become wealthy in connection with ownership or sale of mineral or timber land, give a true fact.

4. State's nativity and point of birth alone, with mention of any public office held by him.

5. How long he has been in the section where he now resides.

6. The general condition of the re ds and highways in your county.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Very cute business is that of the fishermen of the Hawaiian Islands have established connection to buy turtle-boats with which to surround the occupants of these fishes, by a foreign power. Most of the donations come from the religious orders.

BOSTON'S CRACK BOAT

Sped Away From the Big British Cutter

IN A LIVELY FASHION.

The First Contest Ended in the Sailing of Races.

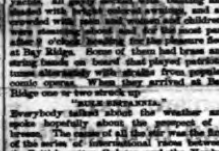
A Great Day in New York Harbor and On the Bay—Thousands Witness the Greatest Aquatic Contest of the Season. Boston's Yacht Does Herself Proud, but the Finely Britton Followed Close Upon Her Track.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—A murky, gray veil of fog lay in huge folds over the harbor yesterday morning, clinging to the tops of the tall masts and to the outside of Sandy Hook, and giving a ghostly appearance to the tugs and other craft that were being puffed and hurried to and fro. Liberty Island, Governor's Island and the Battery, could be seen dimly, stretching her bulk afar off to the south, the dozens of ferry boats plying to and from Long Island City and Brooklyn, fixed against the wind to come later on. The clouds were thick and motionless above, and about the only moving thing that could be seen was the tide and the waves of passing steamers.

But although the elements were still, there was no lack of excitement among the shipping. All the little steamboats, the tugs, the small yachts, all gaily decked with bunting and flags, were astir and busy as a swarm, and all crowded with excited people. Before 7 o'clock the people in the Bay Ridges had begun to gather on the docks and on the piers at Bay Ridge. Some of them had brass and drums and fifes, and they made the morning hideous almost early with strains from popular comic operas. When they arrived at Bay Ridge one or two struck up

"YANKEE DOODLE,"

Everybody talked about the weather and spoke hopefully about the prospect of a breeze. The manager of all the pier had the flag of the American Yacht Club flying with the British cutter Galatea and the Yankee sloop Mayflower, selected as the two to race for the America's cup, the emblem of the world's yachting championship.



THE WINNER.

At Bay Ridge the spectators found the champions at anchor. The Galatea had her her mainsail and her queer, lubber-like cloth trysail set, and her jib and staysail aloft in the stays. Lieut. Henn appeared in a straw hat and white yachting suit. Mrs. Henn stood in the companionway, and she and her host and stockholders. She wore a red Tam O'Shanter hat and a light-fitting blue waist. Sam Gibson was aboard to act as Yankee pilot. Lloyd Phoenix, one of the admirers of the tropid, boarded the cutter as the representative of the New York Yacht club, and Mr. Fred Mar was invited on board the Mayflower.

"Do you want one of your men to sail on the Mayflower?" asked Chairman Chase from the jigger boat the Zachariah.

"No," replied Capt. Hall Thomas.

"Do you want a pass on the boat?"

"No."

Saucily Capt. Bradford, in his shirt sleeves, and Designer Webb, in a blue yachting suit, walked about among the Galatea's crew, giving an order now and then, and finally standing ready to cast up her head stays. The tug Joseph Stickney passed a line to the cutter, and towed her clear of the shoal of fogs, when the sailboats that were waiting around her like fish around floating logs, put those she set sail and forward and jogged off toward the lower shore. The monkey was nowhere in sight. Even the conspicuous in flower to sail the race in her. Capt. Joe Elsworth, as pilot, had his usual decks in his shirt sleeves, and Capt. Hall Thomas, of Newcombe, of the Fortuna, and a lot of the Fortuna's crew to help, looked after the pilot-boat which was soon seen getting ready to run up to Sandy Hook. At last the Mayflower slipped her anchor, with a jerk and a sway to her gaffs, and slowly moved after the Galatea. By this all the boats, as ordinary, piles wanted to do to stake the best through the gathering fleet of excursion boats, but Capt. Bragg directed his way out into the lower ocean, and the contestants followed in a single line.

The wind was light, never a sight to see even of this time. They seemed to grow up out of the water like marine monsters, at first through the mist, and then as the sun shone on the mainsails could be compare it with some of the fleet. There was one by

Then they crowded in behind the Galatea and the two racers, which were then, at about 10:40 o'clock, filling and backing above the line, and waiting for the preparatory signal.

The fog had been slowly clearing all this time, rolling off up North river under a bank of clouds. There was no more promise of business weather than before the tide, for the skippers had become more cheerful under the impact of a wind, and began to salute each other.

Finally, the way having been cleared a little for the big racers, the long preparatory gun was fired at 10:45 o'clock, and the starting gun at 10:48 o'clock. Both boats were then heading toward Governor, the Mayflower with bones well aft and to starboard and gaff to port, and the Galatea with her sheets flying free. They hung in the wind for five or six minutes, and then both slowly subsided on the starboard tack for the line. Their sails had been put to [illegible] by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE BOARDER'S PUN-ISHMENT.

The boarders at breakfast were jolly, alas;
Said Jones, "you had better the coin pass."
Then Deacon Smith cried, "I'm heah skeered of you, Jones,
For getting up plate—do tripe picking there bones."

"I woke cup and saucer the sun beef fore you,"
Jones grinned, "an egg sample you water pan soon."

"And then took a napkin, you pass me a look?"
Brown shouted a-laying in food for a week.

"How can knife fork get chew," mulled Green to Miss White.

"This beef here you'll find is just right."
"Well, I mustard mit, sir, you're very well bread,"
"And that's why you cut him so often," Brooks said.

"Lettuce smoke some;" Jenkins tried filling up,
When the landlady caught him, with glucose his cup.

"O, which I ate steak," snapped out Podgers, "he means
A pipe, as for mocha—he doesn't know beans."

The landlady's turn came as sharp as a sword,
"Now stop all this nonsense—you see I have board.
And for your bad puns I will pun-ish you, so You'll go no more down to dinner or what they grow."

LYRICS OF BOSTON CULTURE.

A husband once seized a large knife
And attempted to carve up his wife,
But the neighbors ran in,
In the midst of the din,
And succeeded in saving her life.

A model, with expression benign,
Whose graces were copied by mind fags,
Was wooed by a youth,
But she dobbed his truth,
And to give him her hand did decline.

A maiden was scared by a gnome,
As she climbed up the stairs to the glome
Of the stale house one day
For a view of the bay
And she uttered a shriek and ran ghome.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Pray Cholly dear, she laughing said,
The difference tell to me,
'Tween capital and labor, so
That I may clearly see.
He sat the maiden on his knee,
And stroked her pretty head:
Now this is capital, my dear,
The lauded lover said.
The garls maiden gravely said,
Oh, yes, my dear, I see;
It's capital when we're wed,
And then 'twill labor be.
—Boston Courier.

No Practicing Around Here.

Influential Citizen—So yer thinkin' uv locatin' hyur, air ye?

Young Physician—Well, yes, I had thought some of practicing here.

Influential Citizen Practicin'! Look hyur, young man, that's a good openin' hyur fur a doctor as ourcetain's his biz, but we don't need no suicide', docterin's what we want.—Harper's Bazar.

A COOLER.

He wet a great big cabbage leaf,
And put it in his hat;
He wore the thinnest seersuckers,
White neckties, and all that.

He lived on sherbert and ice cream,
And ate a cake of ice;
He slept, at night, but did not find
It much like paradise.

In short, he did most everything,
That people fool,
And racked his brain for novel schemes—
Still, he could not keep cool.

But one day on the street he met
A girl he'd never seen;
Her face was angel fair, but proud
And haughty was her mien.

Then in his simple, New York way,
He murmured, "Ice cream?"
The Boston maid just looked at him
And froze him on the spot.
—Somerville Journal.

A BUTCHER'S OBITUARY.

I shall meet you in the sweet bye and bye,
In the land where no slaughter is rife.
A butcher you see in his turn has to die
When death comes along with a knife.

I shall meet you in the land of the shade,
Where man for his sins must attone;
You for the bills you have left unpaid,
And I for the excess of bone.
—Detroit Free Press.

Tragic.

It was summer. And Long Branch. He came there. We met. He was handsome and manly and I a coquette. He proposed. I refused him. I loved him. But then I thought that if you made me would ask me again. But he didn't.—Life.

THE FARM AND GARDEN.

HOW TO RAISE PEACHES AND WHAT VARIETIES TO PLANT.

A Fodder Clamp and a Trap to Keep Rats and Snakes Out of Your Drains. Of Advantage to Apple Shippers—Seed Wheat—Peach Culture.

Hale's Early is considered by many to be the best early peach now in the market. It is said to have originated in Portage county, O., from seed planted by a German. It ripens very early, from the middle of July to the 1st of August, is a fair, healthy grower, the leaves are glossy, flowers large, and it is an abundant bearer. The fruit is of medium size, nearly round, skin mottled red, dark red cheek, flesh white, melting, high flavor, and parts freely from the stone. Since its introduction into New Jersey and Delaware, the peach season begins at a period very perceptibly earlier than before.

Peaches will grow in the most parts of this country. But the central portion of the United States is where they thrive the best, notably in New Jersey and Delaware. The Delaware peach is now the fashionable one in city markets.

Where this fruit is known to do well, it may be planted in large quantities, and is a valuable crop. In other localities it should be experimended with cautiously. Nearly every farmer has had experience of the curses, both loud and deep, with which an unprofitable peach orchard has been cut down.

It is said now that the practice of budding the peach tree, year after year, has weakened its vitality and made it liable to disease, but nobody knows. If you want to begin carefully with peaches, plant first a few trees near your house and shade to see if they will do well. That is for places which you do not know to be adapted to them.

This fruit does well trained against a wall or a house where it will be sheltered. A few trees will be all that are needed for home use, guitting an assortment of both early and late ones. Planted in an orchard the peach thrives best in a dry sandy or gravely loam. If peach raisers get an average of three crops in five years they do well, and make the business pay. In setting out an apple orchard it is a good plan to set the apple trees the proper distance apart, then fill in the spaces between with young peach trees. They will have got their growth, borne their fruit, and died and been cut down by the time the apple orchard is large enough for them to be in its way.

Select a western or northern slope for your orchard. This helps it back in spring and makes the fruit germs less liable to be killed. A peach tree's best bearing life is from its fourth to its tenth year. Whole crops have of late years been destroyed by the disease called yellows. Plenty of spent lime mixed with the soil about the roots will prevent this and often cure it. In this disease the leaves turn yellow and the tree dies. Insufficient nourishment is one cause assigned for it.

Orchards may be set out either in fall or spring. In fall, the time from the middle of October to the middle of November, is the proper season for planting. In the spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground. Opinion is divided as to whether fall or spring planting is best.

Besides Hale's Early, another approved variety is Crawford's Early. Excellent medium late varieties are Honest John and Yellow Rosette.

Don't Know When to Stop.

How few people know when to stop. If the preacher knew when to stop preaching, how much grander the effort of his sermons might be. If the lecturer knew when best to stop telling his good stories, how much keener their relish would be. If the moralizer knew when to stop moralizing, how much longer the flavor of his philosophy would remain. If the friend knew when to keep still, how grateful his silence would be. If the Frank and candid creature who tells us our faults knew when to hold his tongue, how much less strong our impulse to strangle him would become. If the high liver knew when to stop eating, how much less sure dyspepsia would be. If the popular man knew when to withdraw, how much more regretfully we should see him go. If the politician knew when to retire into private life, how much whiter his record would be. If we all knew just when to die, and could bring it about, how much truer our epitaphs would be. The court fool who prayed, "Oh, God, be merciful to me, a fool," prayed deeper than he knew, but the man who prays, "Oh, God, teach me to know when I have said enough," shall pray deeper still.—"Amber" in Chicago Journal.

The Boy and the Philanthropist.

Early last evening a small, barefooted boy, with a bundle of papers under one arm was crying bitterly in front of the great iron dry goods house on Main street. A kindly looking gentleman stepped up to him. "What are you crying about, my boy?" "I lost a quarter." "Where did you lose it?" "On Michigan street." "Well, why in the deuce are you crying here on Main street, when you lost your money on Michigan street? Go right back to Michigan street and cry there and maybe you'll find it." And off walked the philanthropist.—Buffalo Courier.

Should Make Things Even Only.

"And you say Willie Jones hit you on the head?" "Yes, pa; but just wait until I get a good chance at him. I'll paralyze him." "Oh, Bertie, you mustn't show such a belligerent spirit as that. If you'd have to be hard on the head as he'll hit you it would make things even. You must learn how to govern yourself, my son."—Tid Bits.

How a Blind Man Plays Whist.

A blind man attracted considerable attention playing whist on a New England railroad train the other day. Cards with raised spots were used, the three players who had their eyesight assisting their cards as they played them. The blind man and his partner easily beat the other two.—Chicago Times.

Definition of the Latest Word.

The definition of the latest word is given by a Philadelphian: "There goes a gity," says he. "What's a gity?" was asked. "Why, a fellow that professes to be for you, takes your gifts and turns to be against you, dog and works his division 'agin' you."—Exchange.

The Little Folks.

"Why, Mattie, you have put your shoes on the wrong feet." "What'll I do, mamma? They're all I got I've got."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A teacher, in catechising her class of boys at Sunday school, asked, "Who was the strongest man?" A little chap of eight years answered, without a moment's hesitation: "Sullivan. Now ask me who is the best rower."—Harper's Monthly.

AN AVERAGE SCHOOL COMPOSITION.

A school teacher in Boston has at last had the following juvenile composition among her schoolhouse manuscript: "A codfish is the only Amynmal that ain't got no neck. There ain't but one kind of fish in the world that lives on the land and Flys round in the air, and that is a fish hawk. A codfish has a large mouth, and my sunday school Teachers got a large mouth, and she is a fish. I also got in the vestry one day and one of me pulled quite a lot of Hare out of the other kids Head and the other kid Hollered and then one of the Kerr with a look and so they quit. A fish would look funny if they had legs and could run."—Squirrel Island (Me.) Squib.

Where the Buttons Came From.

The minister's wife sat on the front porch mending the clothes of one of her numerous progeny. Another passing of his new suit stopped in for a friendly chat. A large work basket half full of buttons sat on the floor of the porch. After the usual remarks of a gossipy nature the visitor said:

"You seem to be well supplied with buttons, Mrs. Goodman."

"Yes, very well, indeed."

"My gracious! if there ain't two of the same buttons that my husband had on his last winter suit. I'd know 'em anywhere."

"Indeed!" said the minister's wife, calmly, "I'm surprised to hear it, as all these buttons were found in the contribution box. I thought I might as well put them to some use, so I—that is, we—took them off his suits and call again soon."—Merchant Traveler.

The Social Favorite.

Yes, he has a massive forehead and a manner debonnaire, and his lips seem framed to utter little trifles light as air. He's an artist without question, and he bound to make his mark in whatever line he chooses his fine talents to embark; he has such command of language, and his smile so very sweet every diamond sighs with envy when it has a treat to keep still and simply listen to whate'er he has to say when discussing any topic, whether grave it is or gay. What's his name and his profession? To what trade does he inclined? Well, he's chiefly known, my lady, as the "slugger of the nine."—Life.

Diplomatic Peddling.

Col. Bowser met Jenks the other day, and asked him what he was doing for a living.

"Selling a dandy baking powder."

"Last time I saw you you were selling an insect killer to be sprinkled on the floors."

"I know; now I'm going around to the same houses selling this disinfectant to get the smell of the insect powder out of the house. Next week I'll loom up with a mixture to drive away the smell of the disinfectant."—St. Louis Whip.

The Ready Answer Turneth Away Wrath.

Proprietor—So you're the young fellow that robs my orchard!

Innocence—I ain't been a-robbin' no one.

Proprietor—What makes your pockets bulge so?

Innocence—It's the way the pants is cut.—The Judge.

He Was Still Dead.

A good story is told of one of our local politicians who was canvassing for the nomination for a county office. One afternoon he attended a gathering in an out township, and meeting an intelligent-looking young man who he thought might have some influence, walked up to him and shook him warmly by the hand, inquiring: "How is your father?" The y. m. answered: "My father has been dead three years." "Indeed," replied the candidate, "I had not heard of it. I knew him intimately. He was one of my best friends, and I regret to hear it. He was one of the best and purest men I ever knew. You have my sympathy," and the same evening he met the same person in a village near by, and having forgotten his face, accosted him the second time with the interrogatory, "How is your father?" The young man looked at him for a moment and said: "He is still dead," and walked off.—Minneapolis Times.

Carter Harrison Unadorned.

The most conspicuous guest at the Ocean View is Carter Harrison, mayor of Chicago. He loves Hull-ond because it is such a grand place for mental vacuity. Now that the cable is broken, Hull-ond is as much out of world to the man of affairs as though it were on board a bark beating around Cape Horn. Mr. Harrison is excessively fond of sea bathing. He may be seen at the Creaver's bee-o'clock every fine morning at 11 o'clock. This casetul sketch of him will afford the reader a very fair idea of how Chicago's mayor looks when engaged in tossing up his system. His bathing suit has shrunk since last season, and his adipose tissue has increased somewhat. He appears to good advantage when in the water bathing the ladies on the subject of the science of natation, but when parambulating the beach in his abbreviated costume he is the most preposterous looking old bow-legged dyspeptic member of the amphibious sons in these parts since the wrecking of the Palatine.—New York World.

BROADSIDE VIEW.

The D. Should Get but His Due.

When the stock of Lake Superior iron mine lately jumped 75 per cent., owing to the strike of a rich vein, a Marquette man was severely criticised some of the holders, claiming that it was a speculation in which Satan had a hand. "That's all bosh," replied one of the victims; "we got a geologist here at $50 a day, and he run the vein until we tapped it; the devil, with his pitch, you preachers blow so much, couldn't have found it. Satan gets all the blamed sack, and I kick on his receiving any credit!"—Wall Street News.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications and to make contracts for incandescent lighting for residences, stores and business purposes.

It is impossible as sufficient numbers of lights are obtained, in each section of the residence portion of the city, the necessary mains will be laid in front of it. Data as to where the lights will be connected will depend upon the number of applications for light received from each locality.

The supply to the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the completion of the contract with the Arc Electric Lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in the construction of the new power house, necessary to meet the many applications received to set lamps for incandescent lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in the construction of the new power house, necessary to meet the many applications received to set lamps for incandescent lighting before having commenced building operations, we also on account of the loss of time of material which cannot be immediately replaced.

The company has been decided in lieu of expending money upon a canvass for light which would have to be repeated for each person to appropriate the amount which would have to be expended for that purpose, to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 600 lights, the light to be of the handsome motive and 200 in the resident sections.

A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Wm. Cook and Mr. Lawrence Cook agent, 25 and 27 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will be found ready for any further information between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

JOTTINGS.

—A vicious dog fight took place at the corner of Front and Somerset streets this morning.

—Joseph Holland of Cranford had his hips badly crushed on Monday night by a heavily-loaded wagon running over him. He was taken to the Elizabeth Hospital.

—A young man appeared before the City Judge yesterday to answer to a charge of fast driving. He enriched the city treasury by the payment of a five-dollar fine imposed.

—Mr. Charles H. of West Front street will over alone elsewhere that he will have a grand stand at the Waverly Fair next week for the accommodation of visitors from Plainfield.

—A regular meeting of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, was held in their room on Park avenue on Tuesday evening, when four new members to the order were initiated.

—At the regular semi-monthly communication of Winfield Scott Post, No. 32, G. A. R., held in the Post room on East Front street last evening, one new member was mustered in.

—An old and faithful coach dog known as "Jack" and belonging to Mr. F. M. Demarest while following a wagon through Ninth street, Plainfield, on Tuesday morning, suddenly died. The dog is thought to have been poisoned.

—Edward Wilson of Bound Brook was committed to the County Jail at Elizabeth to await the action of the Grand Jury some weeks ago, after which event he made an effort to get bailed guilty before the Court of Special Sessions last week, and was fined $100 and costs.

—A valuable New Foundland watch dog belonging to Mrs. H. Rosenbaum of La Grande avenue, died under peculiar circumstances on Monday last. The dog left the house about 10 A. M., and when returning at noon showed symptoms of poisoning and shortly afterward died.

—The case of McVoy, brought against James E. Ham to recover a debt, came up before Justice Hunt yesterday afternoon. The defendant failed to appear, and testimony to be presented and testify and the Justice rendered judgment by default in the sum of $111.66 and costs.

—A young son of David Smalley of North avenue narrowly escaped serious injury on Park avenue about 10 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The little fellow started to ride across the avenue near Second street when he was suddenly thrown under a horse's feet, the foot which was being driven along Park avenue at the time. The horse was stopped before it could do any harm, but the boy was thrown by the violent jerk. He was not run over by the heavy wagon. Mr. Smalley was and ran off apparently more frightened that the injured boy.

—The great tragedian, Frederick Warde, will appear at Music Hall, Tuesday evening, Sept. 14, with his entire company, in "Virginius," Knowles' Grand Tragedy in 5 acts. Mr. Warde's "Virginius" places him in the first rank of living tragedians. Mr. Scott, who plays the part of "Old Dentatus," is supposed to have reached the limit of the capacity of the human countenance to express fear, but Mr. Warde's delineation of "Virginius" is equally great. In some respects it was greater as a play of expression was varied. While the third and fourth acts were grand, as exhibitions of tragic power, the first two gave the artist his triumph. The distinction of the characters of the divided scenes, the discordant laugh followed by a mental collapse, the fear which suffused his eyes with tears, the gentle realism of his call for his dead daughter, with the thrilling whisper of the lines:

"I hear a sound as fine
That nothing lives 'twixt it and silence," were unequalled. Mr. Warde has not been out seen in many years. The part in which the death-defiance face of Virginius is presented, and the fine, full, manly voice of the tragedian, will be a treat to all lovers of superb performance. See adv.

DUNELLEN.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Giles arrived home from their honeymoon trip on Friday, and were received with the usual honors by a large number of their friends. After the usual presentation a collation was served.

The match between the Kingston and Middlesex Gun Club pigeon shooting resulted in favor of the latter club by eight birds. The score stood—Kingston, 34; Middlesex, 26. Very fine shooting was done by both clubs, Mr. Bergen of the Middlesex Club making the finest score of 15 straight birds. The Kingston Club said they would have highly appreciated all the hotel here by a complimentary dinner.

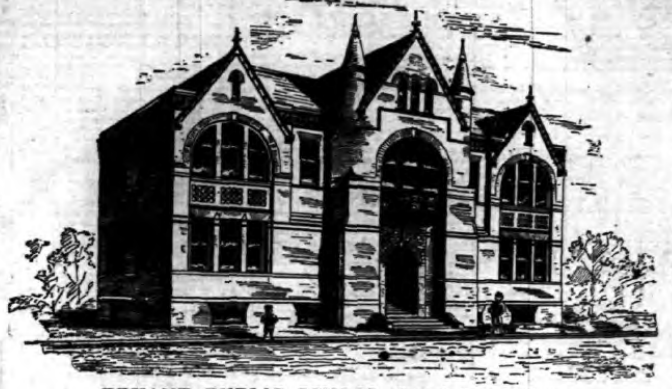
Alleged Cruel Treatment to His Wife.

Mrs. John Blatter of West Third street swore out a warrant before Justice Hubbell yesterday for the arrest of her husband, on the charge of cruelly assaulting her. Constable Smith arrested the man and he was locked up for the night in default of bail. The case was heard in the afternoon, Mrs. Blatter and several witnesses appearing against the defendant, and at times was the scene quite exciting. It seemed to hold him the Justice decided the case.

OUR NEW SCHOOL.

THE "BRYANT"—COST $36,000.

President John W. Murray, Rev. Dr. Hurlbut, Judges Harper and Wadsworth, and Mason W. Tyler, the Plainfield Board of Education, some time ago decided that the crowded condition of our public schools required a new building, and engaged the talented architect, O. S. Teale, to prepare plans. His plans when finished were approved of, and the handsome building opened last Monday on Fifth street, and illustrated herewith is the result. Miss Julia E. Bellamy, the public school principal, had selected a corps of teachers for the school, whose names are herewith for record published:



BRYANT PUBLIC SCHOOL—Oscar S. Teale, Architect.

Description,

STYLE.

The building which is a type of the Italian Gothic style of architecture, is substantially built of brick, with trimmings of Ohio Cartlief (red) and stone and Portland cement, with a slate roof. The principal front as appears on Sixth street, is a perfect representation of which is given in our illustration. The front facing Fifth street and that facing Park avenue is quite as presentable as the Sixth street front, and is almost its exact counterpart.

DIMENSIONS.

The floor plan of the building is of the cruciform, or the centre projecting. The front facing Sixth street is 70 feet, 6 inches in length, and the projecting portion of the extreme width of which is 24 feet, 8 inches front, and 54 feet, 10 inches in length. The building is two stories high, each story being 16 feet in the clear.

ARRANGEMENT.

FIRST STORY.—The main floor is divided into four large class rooms, each 30x30 feet. These class rooms are situated in the four corners of the building for the purpose of securing the best results in lighting, adjoining the class rooms are two large ward-robes, which connect with the class rooms by doors. The main portion of the story is occupied by the main hall, which connects directly with all the class-rooms on this floor, also with the ward-robes, staircases, teachers' ward room, which is situated in the rear of the hall, and also with the lobbies which communicate with the principal or street entrances. The hall is also provided with entrances from each of the two play grounds at the rear of the building. The latter rear is 16 feet wide, and is provided with a double door of the pupil. The side walls and ceilings in all class rooms and assembly hall are finished in hard wall plaster, and are tinted in water color, a solid soft French gray and blue being used for the purpose of softening the light and preventing injury to the eyes of the pupils, which would be likely to be reflected from white walls. The windows in all rooms are large and kept well up to the ceiling, which gives the best possible results in the way of good lighting. All windows are provided with inside blinds, which are used to regulate the light and prevent the direct rays of the sun from entering the rooms. All windows are provided with weights and cords, and in class rooms is provided about 200 hundred feet forty square feet of black boards

HEATING AND VENTILATION.

A great deal of care and attention has been given to this most important branch of the building, the object being to secure perfect ventilation so as to give the best possible results in the way of health and comfort. The system adopted is known as the direct and indirect system, and consists of two hundred cubic feet of air space for each pupil. The air is taken from the outside at a point 10 feet above the ground, and passed through a large chamber in the basement, and at the same time is heated by the passing of the air over the heating coils of the furnace, and is then forced into the various rooms by means of two large fans driven by steam power. The fans are of large capacity, and can change the air in the building every twenty minutes. The system is so arranged that in the City of Brooklyn, N. Y., and in the city of Rochester, N. Y. The heating is accomplished by the direct system, which consists of a large number of radiators placed in the various rooms. The direct system is used for the purpose of heating the rooms only in extremely cold weather. The indirect system is used for the purpose of heating the rooms during the greater part of the winter season. This indirect system consists of two large air ducts passing transversely under the floor of cellar, and extending entirely across the building and communicating with the outside air by large openings in the northeasterly and north-westerly walls, and provided with an arrangement of valves for regulating the supply. These ducts, which are built of brick, are intended to bring the air to the rooms above to have branch pipes of galvanized iron connected with the hot air chambers and steam coils in the basement, and to carry the heated air from these hot air chambers to the warm, fresh air, or indirect system of heating. A register is in each of the heating flues. Mixing valves are provided for the purpose of mixing fresh cold air with the hot air before it passes into the rooms above, when required, thus reducing the temperature to any degree desired, and also reducing the volume of air supply. The hot air registers are so arranged that they can not be shut off and the cold air valves connect in such a way that a supply of fresh air is obtainable at all times without subjecting the occupants of the rooms to unpleasant and dangerous drafts. The mixing valves are under the direct control of the teacher in each of the various rooms, and with the exception of the cold air room of sufficient capacity in connection with the hot air chamber to accomplish a complete change of air four times every hour. The basement is provided with a large and ample supply of fresh air which dimishes and expels the foul air from the cellar. By this process 30,000 feet of fresh air is supplied to the room per hour, which is about 750 cubic feet to each scholar. Water closets for the use of pupils are also situated in same manner. Two large foot warmers are provided in the front entry hall.

PLAY GROUNDS.

The play grounds which are on the Fifth street side of the building are for the use of the girls for their purpose, nicely graded and laid with fine broken stone and gravel, which is a preventive against wet and mud. The walks and paths from all the entrances to the building are flagged with blue stone. Anti-freezing pumps are provided in each yard for drinking purposes, which are supplied with spouts from the school house to the out-building.

The cost of the entire structure, including building and furniture, lot, fences, flagging, grading, and out-buildings, is about $36,000.

BUILDERS.

Architect—Oscar S. Teale. Mason—Isaac W. Pangborn; Carpenter—John Chandler; Painters—Woolston & Brooks; Plumber—A. M. Gribbin. Heating Apparatus—Smead Manufacturing Co. Engineer, Mr. A. Mercer of "The H. B. Smith Co., of N. Y."

Altogether the school building is ahead of any other in the State, if not in the country, in the matter of modern improvements for the health and comfort of those using it, and the taxpayers will be called upon to pay but about $16,000 of the cost, the balance being paid by the board from its reserve fund.

Another Unsuccessful Attempt to Rob.

During the past few weeks burglars have made many unsuccessful attempts to enter places on Madison avenue, their latest exploit being early this morning, when an attempt was made to enter the residence of James Connesly by prying open the catch on a parlor window at the side of the house. The house is situated on the block between Madison avenue between Third and Fourth streets. He says that the indentations left on the window frame would indicate that a knife had been used to spring the catch. The burglars have evidently remodeled the lower parts of the house and then entered the bedroom of Mr. Connesly's two sons who occupied a room at the rear of the house, and took their pants and took therefrom the boys' pocket books, but not finding any money in them, and but apparently disappointed, and before leaving threw the pocket books on the floor. The room of Mr. Connesly in the front part of the house was then entered, and the pockets of his clothes were taken from the room and deposited with the others on the parlor floor, where a large and handsome gold watch in the dining room and lighted was left when the intruders left the place. The first intimation the family had that the house was being robbed was when Mrs. Connesly was awakened by the burglars rummaging around, when a hurried search was made for the burglars, but they escaped. She says she distinctly saw a colored man leave the room, and disappear down the front hall. The boys were considerably frightened and lost articles awoke her but she said who thought she had been dreaming. Mr. Connesly was awakened and entered the room and Mr. Connesly jumped up, secured the revolver and followed the burglar down the stairs, emerging from the front porch, but apparently without effect, as no blood has yet been seen about the place this morning.

After the excitement had subsided, Mr. Connesly went to the examination of the place and found a large bundle of clothing and other articles piled up on the parlor floor, and in fact set in readiness to be carried from the place, as the intruders beat a hasty retreat through a window they entered, which was left open, and the glass in the lower sash broken. Mr. Connesly says he could identify them, a description of which is held for the present to assist a search for developments. Suspicion rests on a well-known character about town, and it is thought that he will eventually be brought to justice.

Pidcock for Congress.

The Democratic Convention to nominate a candidate for Congress from the Fourth Congressional District which includes the counties of Hunterdon, Somerset, Sussex and Warren, was held in Somerville yesterday. The convention was the largest ever held in the district, there being nearly all the thousand strangers present. Mr. H. Kent, chairman of the last convention, called the convention to order, and John Behoop of Somerset was elected temporary chairman. The usual committees were appointed, rules, resolutions and permanent organization were appointed, and a set of resolutions drafted, the nominations were called in turn and Hunterdon presented the names of James M. Pidcock and Warren those of Judge Quinton, who were presented as names and Mr. Pidcock was declared the nominee by the following vote:

Pidcock	1,111
Quinton	120
Van Syckle	34

Mr. Pidcock not being present owing to the illness of his wife, a committee was appointed to wait on him and inform him of the nomination. The convention then adjourned, when a telegram was received by the present says that "there are plenty of fire rum and horrah generally."

Union County Courts.

In the Court of Special Sessions before Judge McCormick, Harper and Hyer at Elizabeth yesterday, Richard Hendrickson of the borough was fined $100 and costs for selling liquor to John Mott, a minor, at his store on Broad avenue, Elizabeth. Hendrickson was sentenced to seven years in State prison.

Alexander Quinn an alleged boarding house thief from Paterson, who passed the counterfeit $5 bill recently in Elizabeth, was sentenced by her boarding house lady to depart the next day with a quantity of clothes, was sentenced to five years in State prison.

—The directors of the Dime Savings Institution held a meeting yesterday afternoon.

PERSONAL.

George F. Brown is having erected a beautiful residence for himself on Grove street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Brand of West Third street left town to-day for a two weeks' trip to Point Pleasant, N. J.

Rev. Dr. John B. Vincent, with and son of Fifth and Union streets sailed for Europe last week, expecting to be absent until spring.

The city's population was increased to the extent of one on Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. Joseph Fasck of East Fourth street gave birth to a young daughter.

After spending her vacation at home and in New York City, Miss Louise Green of Park avenue, has again entered Wellesley College for another year's instruction.

A happy event took place at the Methodist Church on Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Georgette B. Gibbs of this city was united in marriage by Wagstaff of New York city were married by the Rev. Dr. Ray of Harlem, N. Y.

John K. Allen is a veteran of the late rebellion having served in the Third New Jersey Brigade and was on his personal staff the first two years. On the return of peace he came to Plainfield, and some months ago went he returned to his former home here and located with his wife at the foot of Grove street, where they are now pleasantly known as the "home house." For fifteen years his daughter had not been heard from, but on Sunday last, while at church, she was surprised to see her father present. Mr. John H. Collier, a young and prosperous merchant of Jersey City, was also present and recognized the newcomer at the house of the old folks on last Sabbath, when joy reigned in that part of the city. The happy event was celebrated, the fatted calf killed, and a large reunion took place, for the last was for all.

—The property known as De Bevil's hotel on South Plainfield has been disposed of by the proprietor to a Bound Brook individual.

—An East Front street merchant says:—"We see by the morning papers that Alexander of Bedford will be elected. Hasn't he good grounds for a divorce?"

Westfield.

Fans are at for a new building for George Reabro, to be put up in Kimball avenue.

Clarence Street was made a happy father on Monday night by the advent of a young son.

John Ingram, Jr., has been obliged to keep his room for a week past, on account of rheumatic fever.

William Scudder, one of the oldest citizens, died on Tuesday morning at the residence of his son, Mr. B. Scudder. He was familiarly known to every body as Uncle Bill Scudder. He was over 87 years of age.

The friends and relatives of Miss Alice Frazee were alarmed on Sunday last by her disappearance from her home at William Connelly's. She was missed in the afternoon and search was made for her, different parties having seen her wandering aimlessly around. But no clue could be obtained until Monday, when it was found that she had gone to Elizabeth.

An unusual scene occurred at the station house yesterday morning. Alex. Leathem, who was kept in bed by the S.S. train from New York, entered into a controversy with some citizens over the superior merits of the recent yacht race, and at a demand that no American treatment shown to the Galatea by pleasure-sailing Mr. F. W. Rose asserted that in 1851 the Americans met the same treatment in England. This was denied, and words are said to have been exchanged which resulted in a knocking-out match. Blows were freely exchanged until the station agent separated the combatants.

Arrested for Stealing a Watch.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. William Jackson of Manning avenue went before Justice Magie and made complaint against one Charles Knight, charging him with having confessed a silver watch from her possession while in a state of intoxicant. Marshal Becker arrested the man on the bell go trudy near the Scott paper mills, and he was taken before the Justice and locked up. Yesterday he was arraigned before the Justice, but as no direct evidence was produced against him he was released.

Grant Avenue.

Don A. Gaylord has moved his lumber and coal yard from Union street to South Second street, near Grant avenue, this making three large business enterprises at this celebrated point, the Potter paper works near the Commercial mills. The sound of the hammer is heard in the land." Poor Schwalbinger was being erected on the avenue, and four others are about ready for occupancy. This suburb will make itself a thriving village soon. Nowhere can such a view of the mountains and pretty farms be presented as at Grant Avenue, and now that there is but one vacant lot on the Central road but there is no doubt but what this portion of Plainfield will grow very rapidly.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1886.

SEVERAL SANITARY PRECAUTIONS.

Knock Under for Impure Water—Typhoid Fever—Decomposing Matter—Food.

All should look out for impure water. Most country homes are supplied with water from surface wells and springs; that is, wells which are filled from the ground in their vicinity. The water falls upon the ground immediately around the house, simply trickles down through the soil and loses earth into the well. When surroundings are healthy, these wells usually contain pure water; otherwise they do not. Especially in the season of drought all such wells become low, and the danger of impurity is increased many fold. The result is too often seen in the great number of zymotic diseases in the country (perhaps better called filth diseases) in every period of drought. The danger cannot be exaggerated. A single grain of decomposing matter from a well and found seventeen grains of organic matter to a gallon, when the limit should not exceed one grain. Especially is this usually a disease of the country in the fall, and it comes because of danger in the well. There is no remedy why, when the proper care, the country should not be free from all these diseases. Look to the water supplies of all the homes in the city for a few days, only to see to some country resort where Cerebro is used to secure pure water, there to enjoy the season of rest, full of health.

Then, again, care must be taken to remove all causes of decomposing matter. Wash cisterns of pumps and wells with Sani-Hellop. Then a few heaps later in the sun, and decay usually reveals their presence and the cleaner and cheaper through the odor. But it is not enough to remove them. There is just moisture enough to trickle down into the ground and so poison the water. The gases which arise from these are not objectionable; they are chiefly carbonic dirtily acid. But it is very easy to remove them completely, for in this layer of dry earth will absorb all the products of decomposition, and the layer of dry earth in the proper condition must be country way, and it is always at hand when you should—in season of drought.

The Typhoid germ cannot exist which applies with any and country cities. It is to us all unhealthy food. There is much fruit in the market which was good food once, but is not always so. Decomposition has commenced, usually during some exposure or by neglect by such cases, and every one should guard against all such food, as it is poisonous. Avoid it.

Use Cerebro for Colera.

Cerebro is not only here forgotten Thirty, but have forgotten that a statue of the great little man is in the Park entire awaiting a location. Politicians best seek it. It will order and it gets it, and labor for the backers of. The interest which stimulated the people to subscription that paid the sculptor he did not, and nobody seems to care whether it is placed in position or not.—Boston Transcript.

Grapes from California.

The California Northern railway is sending out loads of grapes daily, and at a passenger train second car. The rate this year is $150 a car, or against $200 last year.

BREWERS' SENTIMENTS.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION.

Some Opinions Upon the Effects of Prohibitory Laws in Iowa, Kansas and the Southern States—Their Views of the Labor Question.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 9.—The United States Brewers' association is in convention at the Cataract House. About 200 members are present. The president, William A. Miller, New York, delivered the annual address, which was received with great applause. With respect to the labor agitations in this trade, he said that while all due regard should be paid to the rights of the workingmen to the hours of labor and compensation therefor, yet, on the other hand, "any interference with the rights of the employer on the part of any labor organization should be resisted to the uttermost as an invasion of personal rights not to be tolerated in a land where children of to be the freest on the globe. The right of the employer to deal with his employes individually, according to their merits, should be eagerly defended by every member of the craft, for upon it, if it shall be taken away the personal liberties of both are lost."

A resolution was passed during the convention with all the pomp of an annual convention, and ordering that this gathering be the twenty-sixth annual convention in place of the one which was to have been held in Milwaukee, as named by resolution at the last meeting, the principal cause of the change being the strike in that city.

The report of the treasurer of which was then read. With respect to prohibition in Iowa and Kansas it says that striking proofs obtained by the thorough enforcement prohibition in the southern states, where the sale of liquor is practically at an end, that it does not only not prevent drunkenness, but increase that vice in its most deplorable form.

The report added:

"The experience of the past year has shown that some of the more prominent and active supporters of prohibition in Iowa have been mightily interested in the sale of beer and wine, and it is equally well known that the object of these persons is to destroy the brewing industry, which they regard as an impediment to the sale of whisky. For this they are obliged, for selfish reasons, to foster."

From all reports, the most disinterested and impartial, as well as the most convincing from experience, are those which are furnished in by far the greater number of the larger cities and towns of Iowa prohibition has increased the number of drinking places, stimulated the sale of whisky, and greatly increased the consumption of malt liquors to an alarmingly low figure. The law is, in fact, neither more nor less better, but perhaps worse, than a tax upon the people to the amount of the profits of the saloons, and to inaugurate the era of "free whisky." At the mayor's convention, held at Des Moines on the 4th of last December, 1885, it was shown by official statistics that, as a result by reason of the enactment of the prohibitory law the number of drinking places in twenty counties of Iowa had increased 60 per cent. The agitation against the enforcement, or rather in favor of the abolition of the law, is strictly growing, and it is no uncommon thing to hear men who were formerly its friends as we have just mentioned, that the end of prohibition in this state is simply a question of time.

The joint report of the "Vigilance and the Publication" committees says that during the past year the committee caused to be prepared, printed and distributed an aggregate of 1,000,000 pages of literature, which has tended to influence public opinion favorably for the brewers' interest. The report adds:

From correspondents in Georgia and Virginia we learn that the cause of the temperance movement is mainly due to a desire on the part of the ruling party (Democratic) to keep the colored population within certain moral bounds.

It is claimed that for an exclusively white population southern Democrats would not find it necessary to make a political issue of the question on the basis of personal and industrial liberty, was entirely impossible, because, as per our correspondents writes, the advocates of the law practically disarmed all such arguments by claiming that the measure were intended to restrain only the "black man." Such style is beyond our comprehension. To us it seems that the greater the depravity of a population, the greater also the need of control. Prohibition and local option do always split all creed; Having the liquor traffic practically as free as it would be in the absence of any laws on the subject, but far more dangerous to society, because it is done in secret, and simply breeds a contempt for all laws and the evils directly connected with the constant recurrence of law breaking.

On the labor question the report says that some of the demands made by the workingmen were subject to the customs, and that with but one exception, the employers have successfully resisted the demands. The exception is on page 4 of the report, and is given in full.

The report says, in connection with the action, the report says, is exemplified by the attempt which the brewers of Philadelphia established in the spring of 1886 to induce the refusing to furnish beer to Ehret's customers, and by declaring that they would respect in every way the agreement made by the New York Brewers' Association.

Federation of Miners.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 9.—The entire day was taken up by the National Federation of Coal Miners in discussing the report of the committee on constitution. The report was not concluded, therefore were adopted on account of the per capita tax. Among the objects of the federation by electing organizers in the several districts, securing reduction of machine miners and equalizing of wages with pick miners, enforcing a uniform weigh bill, establishing Trades union of the United States and Canada, and opposing any merging with the Knights of Labor, recognizing the organization as capable of being directly dealt with, securing mines and miners, but the National Federation. When the Federation adjourned a resolution was passed providing for any other of the labor organizations.

IS IT A VOLCANO?

Smoke Seen Rising Apparently Out of the Sea.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 9.—A dispatch of grayish color was noticed at 1 o'clock this morning about 20 miles in the air from the sea, apparently 20 to 25 miles northeast of Tybee Island lighthouse, at the mouth of the Savannah river. The appearance has been increased in size until 7:30 o'clock, when it attained its maximum, and since that time has neither increased nor decreased. The light house keeper at the lighthouse on Tybee Island supposes that it is water spout was at sea, and was first greatly alarmed. The captain of the steamer Nacoochee, which was coming up the river from Tybee, reports that he noticed that the column was unbroken. Accidently one of marine instead of water, and the captain was surprised that a volcano had broken through the bed of the sea. A large number of persons have visited the point from the city, and the phenomenon is the subject of much discussion. Some think it is a volcano, others that it is a waterspout, and others that it is smoke from a burning vessel. The weather bureau officials are unable to account for it.

A later report from Tybee and observations taken from high buildings in this city definitely locate the smoke as directly east of Hilton Head light, at the entrance to Port Royal harbor. The smoke can be distinctly seen from many points in the city, and the general impression is that it arises either from a vessel or a vessel on fire at sea. If it is, none from the latter source, however, as not almost a continuous gush of smoke, and other signals of distress made. The first earthquake shock on Tuesday night last plainly came from a northwesterly direction, and this fact, coupled with the discovery of Hilton Head smoke, leaves little doubt that the least of the recent disturbances is at sea, otherwise of the coast between the city and Hilton Head. The appearance of a volcano in the vicinity mentioned would, therefore, not be surprising.

A logboat reports that the smoke arises from St. Helena Island.

PEACE ON THE FRONTIER.

The Apaches Ordered to Florida Except Geronimo.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—It is believed at the war department that the Apache war is now practically put an end to, and that peace reigns in this country. At present there is no active hostility throughout the Apache country. An army officer said this morning upon the conduct of the whites that if the Indians were treated by the agents as the whites were treated by the agents of the Indians there would be no trouble with Indians. If the Indians were treated properly there would be no trouble. Gen. Crook, who is now in Chicago, has been instructed to give trouble now for the Unemployed and those in the wake of Washington territory. These officers particularly speak in the highest terms of Lieut. Gatewood, who effected the capture of Geronimo. Lieut. Gatewood is a brave officer, and has been promoted for his gallantry

SOLID HEART SALVE

IS WHAT THE EX-COACHMAN IS SUPPOSED TO POSSESS.

He Will Ring Up Mr. Mead Fuess On Home Cure If Necessary—Some Trouble West to Grow Up with the Country—But Where is Vick?

New York, Sept. 8.—It was very apparent from yesterday's developments that the disappearance of Victoria Morosini-Schelling had been planned for nearly three months before she left town. Mr. James R. Keene, who arrived at Liverpool, England, Sunday, knows where Victoria is and possibly Mr. Morosini and one of the firm of brokers, the music publishers in Union Square, may know too. The secret of her hiding place has not been intrusted to Miss Pauline Hall or any other lady, it is supposed. Mr. Morosini has. It has been most officially stated that Schelling got $15,000 not to see Mr. Morosini for the less of Victoria, but he left this for Europe on the same week, however, he took Victoria's departure very coolly, but he has been absent from his car on the Sixth avenue line for two days. He left his boarding place yesterday afternoon. He took his baggage with him. He could not be found last night. It was not known at the Sixth avenue car stables where Schelling is going to work. Perhaps he won't come back. One of the stories circulated last night at the Casino was that Detective Robert Pinkerton had planned Victoria's departure, and that two of his men accompanied her as escorts to her retreat. Mr. and Mrs. Morosini continued to refuse all information of Victoria's movements.

One of the Casino brothers said yesterday: "I do not know where Victoria is. I have an idea, but I cannot mention even that. I know she took the 10 o'clock train from the Grand Central depot last Wednesday morning. Perhaps she is with relatives of the Morosini family. Who are they? Oh, I wouldn't be fair to tell, even if I knew which I am not prepared to say. Mrs. Schelling has come here every day for the last six months. Mr. Morosini has also been here every day during that time. Between 7 and 8 o'clock, Father and daughter, however, did not meet. It was not an involuntary leaving, for they left the two Victoria's apart. I saw in letters of his that he wrote three months ago. She was not a coquette, and she would be glad to return to her husband's home. Mr. Morosini had refunded to certain alleged intercessors with Victoria, which, he thought, reflected somewhat on him. Victoria assured me that the interviews were false, and, after a while, convinced her father that she told the truth.

"At first Mr. Morosini was very reserved when I spoke to him about his daughter's welfare. He is very proud, but he has a father's heart, and finally he intimated that he would never see his daughter again after anything. He assured me only yesterday, however, that he had not spoken to Victoria from the day she left his home. Victoria wanted to show her father that she could stay out the intimidation he opposed her elopement. She has gone away with that idea. I do not believe that Mr. Morosini will ever take her back to his home at Riverdale. He hasn't a mean hair in his head, however, and will provide her with money.

Victoria's leave of absence from the Casino expired last week, but she was not at the Casino. A bouquet was sent to her. One of the chorus girls appropriated it.

It is now said, that Schilling took a train last night for the West and that he did not go empty-handed.

Where is Stellbaker?

CLEVELAND, Sept. 9.—Where is Stellbaker, proprietor of the Academy of Music, has been missing from this city since last Friday, and his theatre has been closed. Nothing is known as to his whereabouts or the condition of his financial affairs.

Stellbaker is at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Sept. 9.—Col. T. E. Stellbaker, who is reported as missing from Cleveland, is in this city, and says that owing to extremely warm weather in Cleveland his theatre there was doing a poor business, and that he requested the owners of the building to allow him time on the rent. This they refused to do, and in consequence the theatre was closed. Col. Stellbaker's theatre in this city, the Adelphi, is running, and many improvements have been made in it.

Attempted to Break Jail.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Sept. 9.—The fact has just been discovered that Samuel Bean, confined in jail for the murder of Lawton, some time ago, recently made an attempt to escape. He had torn away some 300 bricks in his cell, doing the work at night, and replacing the bricks in such a manner that his scheme was for a time undiscovered. He made mortar of bread and water to put between the outer bricks, and covered this with lime scraped from the walls of the cell. His scheme was finally discovered, and he was removed to another cell.

Plunkett's Business Methods.

HARTFORD, Sept. 9.—The investigation of the affairs of T. F. Plunkett, so far as it has progressed, reveals no defalcation whatever in the Union Manufacturing Company.

It was found that of the $51,000 worth of paper belonging to the silk company, which was in Plunkett's possession, $10,000 was not negotiated and $41,000 went to the use of the company. This reduces the amount not yet accounted for to $26,000. Besides this he took $25,000 of negotiable paper, but does not appear to have realized on it.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Chicago liquor dealers have elected delegates to a state convention to enter politics with liquor as an issue.

John and Bridget Cassidy were married in Chicago last Saturday, and died in their burning house Monday night by coal gas. Their bodies were found recently in an advanced stage of decomposition.

The negroes of Liberty county, Ga., have quit work and about 500 have gathered in a religious enclave. A negress recently died and predicted on her deathbed that the world would come to an end Monday. The earthquakes have confirmed the belief and the blacks are ready to feast in their chucks.

Tramps have taken possession of the town of Campbell, Wilkie county, Miss., and are said to have ransacked houses and plundered. Citizens of neighboring towns have gone in pursuit and a riot is expected.

W. H. Langham, a druggist of New Zealand, has traveled 30,000 miles to attend the chemists' international tournament of wheelmen.

The Connecticut river has a sea serpent in it that is said to be 100 feet long.

Hungary and Italy, Ky., two of New York's hoodle ex-aldermen, have returned to Montreal from Europe.

The quarantine against Biloxi, Miss., on account of the yellow fever scare has been raised as New Orleans.

A movement is on foot in Indianapolis to erect a monument to Abraham Lincoln's mother, who lies buried in the woods in southern Indiana.

BICYCLE RACES.

The Connecticut Associated Meeting at Hartford.

HARTFORD, Sept. 8.—The first day's races of the Connecticut Bicycle club meet were opened by a crowd that packed the grandstand and covered the track with a Chester Oak park. The track was in fair condition. But very fast time was made. The first race, one mile, 3:30 class, was won by W. E. Price, of this city, in 3m. 39 1-4s. H. D. Hart, of New Britain, second and William Harding, third.

In the mile promenade, 3:45 class, F. S. Ives, of Meriden, won in 3m. 44 1-2s. Horace Crocker, of Newton, Mass., second.

The three mile professional race was won by Fred Wood, of Lynn, Mass., second, Frank Weston, of this city; third, Will Hamilton, of Boston, third. Time, 9m. 39 2-5s. Mr. Woodside, of Minneapolis, second, and John Prince, of Boston, third.

The one mile amateur handicap was won by Howard S. Hart, of New Britain, (300 yards.)

J. Barnes, of Newton, Mass., won the one mile professional tricycle race in 3m. 8 1-2s.

The three mile amateur, open, was taken by Foster, of Toronto, in 9m. 13s.; Rich, of New York city, second.

The ten mile consular lap race was easily won by Rowe, taking eight laps out of ten; time, 30m. 57 1-2s. Mr. Woodside, of Kings, Rhodes and Stone, but they were no match for Rowe. Rhodes took second place.

The one mile team race was between Hartford and East Hartford. It was novel, but not one best calculated to draw a day's present. The team race was won by a score of eleven points to ten.

There were 250 wheelmen in the street parade.

WHAT CHARLESTON NEEDS.

A Plea for Relief Telegraphed to the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—All reports from Charleston agree that the pressing necessities need of the hour are tents, and that no more than can be used to protect them from the rain.

A long telegram has been sent to the President by men of prominence advising him that means of shelter should promptly be sent to Charleston, and suggesting that the vessels of the north Atlantic squadron be used there, with orders to strip the vessels of all their canvas and turn it over to the people of the stricken city. Also to place the vessels at the service of the people, to be used in any way they can accommodate them. It was suggested that the president, out of his own purse, is not aware of the actual condition of the people, and the dispatch said, he has fully informs him of their deplorable situation.

Another Railroad Strike.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 8.—Yesterday all the engineers and firemen of conductors in the Pittsburg and Western railroad have struck for an advance of 20 per cent. Superintendent Johnson refused the request, but to appease the conductors, but refused the brakemen. Brakemen were sent here to take the engineers' places, but they would not go on the dispatch and then refused to go to work. Yard business is all blocked, to the great inconvenience of the road.

Being composed entirely of vegetable matter, it can be used freely by the most delicate child.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers:
Dear Sir—I purchased a bottle of your Stomatine, while in Plainfield, and used it for my wife, who was suffering from a bad breath. I am very much pleased to say that it has entirely relieved her of the disagreeable odor, and I would recommend it to all who are troubled in the same way. Yours truly,
WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers:
Sir—I take pleasure in stating that I have used your Stomatine, and find it a very pleasant and effective dentifrice. I can also say that it has given me the best results in the treatment of my gums, which were in a very bad condition. I have used it for some time, and find it does not grow stale. Yours truly,

WOMAN AND HOME.

HINTS ON THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN IN GOOD MANNERS.

What $120 Did in a Thousand Island Cottage—The Wife's Pocket Money—An Honored Title—Don't Bind the Babies. Paragraphs, Etc.

Some one has wisely said: "The teachings of childhood are the corner stones on which to build the foundations of character. If these are laid on wisdom and righteousness, we may look to see the superstructure rounded and beautified by the lesson of life's experience."

The training of children in good manners must be founded on respect and obedience. But authority should be enforced by parents without destroying the self-respect of the child. Every boy and girl should have a certain sense of what is just, and cannot listen to unkind words without first being wounded and then hardened. Nothing has so much power with children as love. Be kind and gentle with them; let them know how dear they are, and it will be an easy task to control them. They should always be governed mildly, yet firmly, thus retaining their respect and love; and even very young children will learn to dread their parents' displeasure through the fear of losing their affection.

Teach the truth, to respect age, to protect the weak, to be unselfish and forbearing with others, to be ashamed of nothing except wrong doing are the first lessons children should be taught, and it will then be easy to train them in good manners. It is not enough to teach simply; there must be the example of the daily life to enforce the lesson, and every motive can make so forcible an appeal to the parents' heart in favor of self-discipline as the desire for the welfare of their children. There is no soil so full of the graces of youth as the mother spirit that has gone through a long and useful life wrapped in the love of her children.

It is best, in rearing a large family of children, to give them as much liberty as is consistent with good management, and to make as few rules of obedience as possible, and then to enforce those given for the good of all. Never let punishment be administered in the presence of others, particularly to proud, sensitive children, as they do more harm than good by causing unnecessary humiliation. The child who is thus respected by its mother or father is very apt to preserve its self-respect through life, and avoid doing aught that would incur censure.

In training children in good manners, mothers often mistake an overflow of spirits, a natural playfulness of healthy childhood, for rudeness, and in subduing and correcting these seeming faults, rob the little ones of wholesome exercise and a large share of the sunshine of their lives. There is a time for playing, and even noisy out-door sports, that develop the young muscles and strengthen the fast growing bodies, and children should not be deprived of this privilege of their childhood, as essential to their health as to teach them in play is to respect each others' rights, to protect the weak, and to be fair even in their sports. Moral courage should be cultivated in children by leading them always to say boldly and do bravely what they believe is true and right, regardless of consequences. "There is no moral quality in the heart of every boy, something helpful and womanly in the heart of every girl," and these qualities should be developed. The sympathies of children should be quickly aroused, and can be rightly directed to their great benefit.

Pets are a great source of pleasure to children, and the possession of them awakens and increases the chivalrous spirit which enlarges the heart and ennobles the character. The care of a dog, a lamb or goat trains a boy for all that is manly; while the pet kitten or bird gives the little girl a sense of responsibility and teaches her kindness to the helpless.

Nothing is more demoralizing than quarreling, and children should never be permitted to dispute among themselves; but if they are early taught forbearance and unselfishness in their companionship with each other, this breach of good manners will never be the occasion of pain to the parents. Manners acquired in childhood are usually retained through life, as they do, a part of the character, not to be put aside at will. Some parents fancy that it is the duty of teachers to supervise and form the manners of their children, and leave the task to them rather than burden themselves with it, but all wise mothers should know that home is the best school for correcting faults and acquiring the self-control which is essential to elegance and ease of manner.

Few parents, however, ever anxious for the welfare of their young families, comprehend the influence of companions for good or evil. The choice of children's associates should never be left to accident, but should be carefully selected from among those whose behavior is in every respect becoming. Nothing will so readily injure the manners of even the most carefully reared children as the constant companionship of the rude and ill-bred. Next to evil associates comes the influence of books, many of which are dangerous in their tendency, giving children false views of life, and cost fluting very greatly to forming manners which are neither becoming nor attractive in real life, though they may seem so to the youthful mind. For, while evil may result from indiscriminate reading, when carefully selected books may greatly aid a mother in her efforts to cultivate pleasing manners in her children.—Mrs. Ellen H. Parker in Good Housekeeping.

What $120 Did in a Cottage.

Thirty-one dollars went into the sitting room and never came out; $15 sat down round in the form of rattan rockers, two painted in cherry and interwoven in the back and seat with a bright red cord; a rocker rolled tightly, two in black, with yellow, and two in the original, with blue; $5 lay on the floor in golden brown and all checked matting; and $1 bought a yard and a half of yellow Chinese pongee, hung with small brass rings on a bamboo cane, covering a number of inches, which when stretched at the top of the door, 73 cents dropped into the carpenter's hand when the last nail was driven in a two-a-tats, and $2.80 looked radiant in its light flowered, cretonne curtains, draped at the side of the kitchen stools, gayly decorated at the top of each leg with different shades of tissue paper.

In the dining room $8 was metamorphosed into cold plate chairs, three coats of white varnish, which, with a cushion, each cover with a different shade of China pongee silk, and tied to the legs with a pretty bow, looked well worth the money; $6 appeared very substantial in a dining table; $1.50 in a leather hearthrug, around a wide shelf, cheaply done the service of a buffet, and seemed proud of the family silver; $2.60 in 25c cent chaus cloth and lace, used as such draperies in all the windows, gave a charming appearance to the whole; $16 in an ivory white painted bedroom set, lighted up the cherry stained walls and floor of the first bedroom; the opposite room especially cool and airy with its white and baby blue and a $16 set of the same hue. The golden brown and seal matting 31½ cents per yard left $20 to slip into the next room and the hall, where it met the ash stained set and cherry colored matting.

When the summer came around the boys of the family shouted with joy, "Hurrah for the Thousand Islands!" The girls danced with glee, and the proud father called from the deck of the boat, as he waved his hand in farewell to his friend on the shore, "Come up and see us now, Bert, in our home in the bay." The friend seriously muttered under his teeth, but he never knew that the "Island Home" only cost $120 to build and furnish.—Decorator and Furnisher.

The Wife's Pocket-Money.

Most wives and mothers honestly earn all they spend. A woman who does her duty as a wife and mother earns more than any money can pay for. It must be very humiliating to a woman to have to humbly and tremblingly ask for her husband's money as she must have for her actual daily expenses. Any sensitive, womanly woman must feel it something of a degradation to have to time and, or even once, for money given grudgingly and complainingly at last.

I know of a woman who said once that the only way she could get money from her husband for other than her actual household expenses, was by watching her chance and slyly extracting bills from his purse when he was asleep or his back was turned. Such a wife forced to such a degrading act as that! Women are often compelled to practice mean, niggardly, cruel economy in order to make their expenses come within the limit fixed by inexorable husbands, who would furiously resent any interference with their own expenditures.

I believe that this single question of the wife's allowance has wrecked the happiness of many a household. Men are so often blind and unfeeling and unreasonable in this matter. And, of course, there are women who must have a tight rein kept upon them because of their tendency to willful and wofully extravagance. There is, I think, little chance for happiness in a home having such a misfortune. But the majority of women can safely be trusted. Let the husbands of wives thus worthy trust them, and this trust will not often be abused.

My own personal experience has been that money is safer with women than with men. Most women can beat a man "all to pieces" making a bargain, and the tradesmen and grocers seldom get ahead of them, whereas most men are careless purchasers. — Zonas Dane in Good Housekeeping.

Girls' Co-operative Society.

A co-operative society of more than ordinary merit and success has been in existence for two years on San Francisco coast. It is called the San Francisco Girls' union, and was organized in June of 1884. The membership, which at first was small, has increased rapidly, and it now amounts to a little over 400. The membership fee of two cents, retaining and beneficiary, dues for both sorts being $3 a year. The beneficiary class are entitled to a home while out of employment and a small sum to help them in fitting themselves for employment. The society also uses every effort to help them in finding work. The other class is only entitled to the privilege of the union classes. But this is no small thing when it is known that there is a training school attached to the union, and no girl is ever sent out with a call for recommendation until it is ascertained that she is thoroughly competent in her special department. In this school the girls are instructed in skilled nursing, domestic service and sewing. It has in the last year and a half trained and found places for 343 girls. Associations of women for their mutual benefit and assistance are springing up all over the country, but this one in San Francisco seems to be the most practical and business like of any that the public has heard of.—New York World.

Getting to Be the Rule.

Do you notice that nowadays this is getting to be the rule? The rich are marrying the rich and the poor are making matches among the poor. The sudden increase of wealth and aping of English rules of caste are frightening young men out of the old chivalrous spirit, when the humble fellow claimed the girl of his heart and defied the world to rob him of her. Do you think the girls are learning wisdom and won't look at poor men any more? That shows how little you know of femininity. Where the heart is the brain is not, and girls are just as big fools as ever in love matters. Of course there are some wise ones, who coldly determine to marry a carriage, a maid and thirty dresses a year, but I don't like wise girls; don't see any wends full of them anywhere, and would not wager a pound of French mixed that their wisdom would stand much of a test if the right young man happened along and came on them with the force and ardor of a hurricane, as any right minded girl likes to be courted.—Clara Belle's Letter.

Don't Bind the Babies.

Has it ever occurred to those who purchase carriages for their babies, and who make it a point to select the brightest colors they can find for the screen that is interposed between the eyes of the child and the sun, that they are liable to do irreparable injury to the vision of the little one? An infant generally lies on its back, its eyes, of course, upturned toward the bright covering above it, its gaze being more intense the brighter the covering and the more direct the rays of the sun upon it. Nothing but injury can result from such thoughtless exposure. Any experienced nurse says there cannot be a doubt as to the injurious effects of these bright so-called shields upon the tender eyes of children. Parents who have a wise regard for the darker and denser shades, even though they may not be as handsome or showy in their eyes as some of the bright ones are more fashionable.—Philadelphia Call.

Decorating Nursery Walls.

An ingenious way of decorating nursery walls and which gave eminent satisfaction to the children was devised by a thoughtful mother. She made panels of unbleached cotton a yard long by eighteen inches in width, and mounted them upon tailor's paper, finishing them upon round sticks at either end. On these pane she pasted colored pictures, or prints which she selected, and bordered the panels with gold paper. These were hung up about the room and changed from time to time. Each picture had a few verses or descriptive texts were appended. The children were devoted to their panels and often asked for a special selection to be hung. Sometimes they suggested changes in the arrangements, the changes could be made as frequently as desired.—"E. C. W." in New York Commercial Advertiser.

In Cases of Poisoning.

Make your patient vomit by giving a tumbler of warm water with a teaspoonful of mustard in it, and send for the doctor. If the poison is acid give magnesia and water, or chalk and water, or soap and water to neutralize the acid, and vomit by tickling the throat with the finger. If it is an alkali like potash, give vinegar and water, lemon juice or some other safe acid. Always vomit the poison first. If caused by newspaper. Darwin's Museum, Arthur's Magazine and Godey's Lady's Book were the only publications in existence of course, and they were all semi-religious and highly moral in tone and character, as befitted the literature and amusements for women and children.—Jennie June.

It is well enough to calculate upon difficulties, but to foster the possibility of defeat also evidences a weak mind.—Pal Ladgen.

WHAT THE FASHIONS ARE

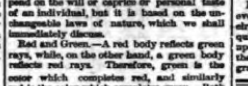
Change in Skirt Dressing.

It is probable that a great change will soon be made in the way of dressing the skirt. French fashion plates now gradually falling the hair off the forehead, which will abolish crimps, curls, etc. As this fashion is very different from anything ladies have been accustomed to for many years, it will naturally take a short time for the style to become general. It is well to make the change by degrees. For instance, the hair may first be parted in the back instead of the forehead, leaving some frizzes on either side. Then gradually rules the hair a little more, and the eye will soon become accustomed to the change. Next the hair may be drawn back and left rather loose, as with the Marie Antoinette coiffure. The hair is then twisted to the front of the head, where it forms a puff or loop, as the case may be. It is fashionable a little way back toward the left side. This is a very easy way of arranging the hair, except as to the trouble it is to keep the hair in which requires some care. The hair is left a little loose, and when the front is dressed push it up with the comb, twist it a little to the back, and fasten with hair pins. Gilt hairpins are generally employed for this purpose.—New York Times.

Scarf and Bonnet Pins.

Jeweled pins are if possible more worn than ever. They are either cheap or costly, as one pleases.

Now that ladies' neckwear is so much like that of men, they wear scarf pins that carry out the imitation. These are smaller and rather more costly than those worn by men; the favorite design for scarf pins is a horseshoe.



LADIES' SCARF PINS.

The illustration gives two fashionable styles. One is composed of pearls with a small colored stone in the center, the other of little turquoise with a diamond in the center.

These elegant little scarf pins are worn in the collar, the chemisette or the scarf. They also pin the bonnet strings handsomely.

Harmony of Colors.

By harmony of colors we understand colors placed side by side in such a manner that they do not injure the effect of each other; rather, on the contrary, complete each other, i. e., they gain in intensity.

The attention of the ladies is particularly called to the importance of harmony in colors, for the want of such in the selection of their colored dresses, bonnets and trimmings produces the greatest discord in the composition of the toilet, frequently more than one depend on the will or caprice or personal taste of an individual, but it is based on the unchangeable laws of nature, which we shall endeavor briefly to explain.

Red and Green.—A red body reflects green rays, while, on the other hand, a green body reflects red rays. Therefore, green is the color which completes red, and similarly red is the color which completes green. Both colors, therefore, gain in intensity.

Blue and Orange.—A blue body often reflects orange rays, and inversely an orange body reflects frequently much of the blue rays. Orange is, therefore, the complementary color of blue, and vice versa, therefore each color intensifies the other.

Violet and Greenish Yellow.—A violet body reflects greenish yellow, and inversely a greenish yellow body reflects violet. Both colors, therefore, complete each other, and intensify each other.

Indigo and Yellow.—Indigo reflects yellow, and yellow indigo rays, hence they are complementary colors to each other.—Lithographer and Printer.

In Jewelry.

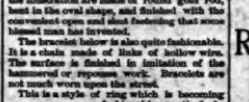
The general rule is now for showy jewels. The opal is going to have a rage. Bracelets, both gold and silver, however, are still neat and small. This style is much more tasteful and pretty than the large, clumsy chains and bands that used to be worn. Many are simply spiral circles that pass around the arm two or three times.

FASHIONABLE BRACELETS.

The picture shows some of the most fashionable bracelets. Those in the upper part of the illustration are worn on the round gold rod bent in the oval shape, and finished with the convenient open and shut fastening that some bright man has invented.

The bracelet below is also quite fashionable. It is a chain made of links of hollow wire. The surface is finished in imitation of the hammered or repousse work. Brooches are also made upon this order.

This is a style of ring which is becoming fashionable, particularly for men. The setting is a black onyx stone, with a carved or bent shape. In the stone is fixed a large gold initial letter. The gold initial is studded with small, brilliant diamonds. A ring of this sort, not too large, is very handsome and showy.



"PRINCESS" RING.

Gloves.

Undressed kid gloves are now in use on all occasions. They are in light, dark and medium tints in the different shades of Suede and brown. The dark colors are the most appropriate for evening wear, while the medium tints and the lighter shades are reserved for evening use. White undressed kid gloves are also worn for full dress, but they are not as fashionable as the Suede tints. For morning walking purposes large gloves called "gauntlets" are used. Men also wear these gloves, with an extra piece sewed on the back of the hand. People usually buy their kid gloves for afternoon and evening wear. Silk gloves are looked exclusively for dress. They should be very well made and in the shades of undressed kid. For traveling and horseback riding chamois skins continue to be favored, as is proved from the fact that which is taken from the style, as this color blends perfectly with black. They have broad bands of black silk embroidery down the back and are buttoned on the hands.

Fall Suits.

Many French seaside suits are of light, soft woolen fabrics. They are always combined with some bright color. Over the short round skirts are draped tunics, carelessly raised, with the bright color skirt forming a lining or arranged down the sides in revers or panels. The waist may cover the buttoned vests, the latter showing on the upper part a small plain linen front piece. The narrow gravat and collar complete this very masculine costume.

Desirable New Silk.

"Mousquetaire" silk is the title bestowed upon a new texture in silk, yet only made in black. The patterns resemble mats de Chine and appear indestructible. One special merit of this variety of silk, which every lady cannot but appreciate, lies in the fact of the raw material being dyed previous to entering the loom, and consequently nothing is or can be used to enlighten the silk when woven.

Engagement Rings.

A novel device in engagement rings is to divide the ring and have the two ends open and hold them so by a small gold bar. A jewel is then set on each end, and the result is that the ends are very close together, but still not united, and are thus quite typical of engagements.

FASHIONLETS.

Bright red snakes are to be very generally worn.

Emotion injures beauty, particularly the wrong kind of emotion—grief, rage, jealousy and fretting.

A word of warning to the wearers of transparent bonnets. Do not fail to cover the bald spot on your head before donning the bonnet.

There was never a season in which so many ladies in deep mourning changed to the many mourning materials in white as this, and the change must be quite as agreeable to them as to their friends.

Pink tulle veils are the latest novelty. They are intended for hats of all colors, but are particularly suitable for those in pale shades. This tulle is of the lightest texture, and is very becoming.

Strange to say, grenadines are in high favor this summer. Fine black lace trims them, and Chantilly is a bit of color at the throat or in the corsage relieves the somberness of them.

Heavy, lumbering carriages are the fashion now. It is an idiotic fashion, but it is English. The British carriages does not begin to compare with the American, but is adopted because our people are anglo-maniacs at present.

In the hair and on the open bodice, for evening, is placed the last new device in jewelry—a series of dainty diamond swallows, quite tiny, and placed three or five together upon a single silver thread, so lightly as if they had just poised themselves upon a telegraph wire.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications and to make contracts for immediate lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained in any locality in the more populous portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed. The date at which domestic lighting from the central station will be commenced upon the number of applications for light may then be known.

The supply to the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the fulfillment of the contract with the city for lighting the streets, lately let to the company, has been hastened in consequence of the company having been compelled to set back their building line after having commenced building operations, as also on account of the loss of a part of material which cannot be immediately replaced.

The company has decided in lieu of expending money upon canvass for light contracts to appropriate the amount which would have been used for that purpose to the following rates for the present: For lights of the first sixteen-c.p. aggregating 200 lights, rates by 3½ in the business section and 4½ in the residence section.

A reduction of 10 per cent. will be made to churches, parsonages and indigent families.

The company has been rented from Mr. Mulford, real estate and insurance agent, No. 21 E. Front street, and the office in the railway depot, where a representative of the company will receive applications and furnish information. Rates of lights: Lights of 7.30 and 8.30 c. m., and 6.30 to 8.30 p. m.

—A man and woman seated in an open side-bar buggy drove through Park avenue about eight o'clock Thursday evening on their way to town. The woman appeared to be greatly excited, and when in the neighborhood of the Park House she was heard threatening to have the man arrested. The attention of several passers-by was directed to the woman, but they did not interfere.

—Chief Dodd has acted with commendable promptness in securing the arrest of Woodruff of Meeker pond on the affidavit that was called in THE NEWS a few days ago to the violation of city ordinances against liquor selling. The laws must be enforced without fear or favor. People would like to know what Woodruff had stocked down so long. The story about his not knowing that liquor was sold on his premises will be considered the veriest bosh. Does anybody believe that Woodruff is not too wily to be considered such a fool, as to have his liquor sold on his premises without his knowledge, and without his receiving the proceeds. The wily sometimes get left, however, when they take the public simply for a collection of fools. The public occasionally become very sour unexpectedly. How about the prosecution to recover of a $200 shakeup by the city?

JUSTICE'S.

Justice Austin's Court.

Three more of the alleged rioters, William Krewson, William Smalley and Jedediah Smalley, against whom, it is said, complaints had been lodged, charging them with having been implicated in the recent riot in the borough, have given themselves up and their hearing was set down for to-day.

The suit of Newton J. Smalley vs. Councilman Bikr, brought to recover a balance of $2.75, has been amicably adjusted by the defendant paying over the amount of the claim.

Justice Martin's Court.

—Walworth Ward of Dunellen lost a valuable Jersey calf yesterday. The animal was valued at $5,000.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Fire Commissioners will be held in the city court room on Tuesday evening next.

—The sale of seats for Frederick Ward's appearance at Music Hall in "Virginius," Tuesday evening, Sept. 14th, commences tomorrow morning.

—The Railway Reform Club seems to be diminishing in the number of its members instead of being on the increase. Four of the members sent in their resignations at the last business meeting of the club.

—Many of those who drive do not understand that the law gives the right of way to pedestrians. A man or woman who is crossing the street is not obliged to look out for the man who is driving a team, but it is just the reverse.

—The National Board of Fire Underwriters has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set fire to the livery stables adjoining Laing's Hotel on the morning of Saturday, July 31st.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of Plainfield Public Library and Art Gallery was to have been held on the first instant, but there being no quorum present the meeting was adjourned, and a special meeting will probably be called for next week.

—The following persons were elected officers of the New Jersey Horticultural Society at its meeting yesterday: James R. Richter, Short Hills, President; J. F. Knorr, Orange, statistician; Thomas Meehan, Germantown; Theodore H. Spaulding, Llewellyn Park, treasurer; John Parr, Short Hills, secretary.

—Mrs. B. Sheridecker has secured the services of Borough Counsel J. H. Jackson and William K. McClure to represent her in a suit brought to recover $6,000 from the Philadelphia and Reading Company for damages received from the injuries she received when alighting from the Reform Club excursion train at the Peace street bridge a few weeks ago, and by which she has since been confined to the house.

—"The Crawford Boot Club" is the name given to a new organization which has just been born in the Crawford district and the organization starts out under most auspicious advantages. It is intended to make it a chartered institution. The initiation fee is five dollars, and the dues are placed at one dollar per month. The membership is limited to fifteen, and the young boys have already joined. A handsome boat house is about to be erected on a site donated to the club.

—Police Officer McCue says he was talking to the nightwatchman in front of the electric light company's building on Madison avenue at about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, when he heard some one moving about in the south of the railroad. He went over to Borough Councilman Talcharn's coal office, where he supposed the noise originated, but could see no one. The noise evidently was made by burglars entering James Connard's saloon next door, for shortly after a large number of burned matches were found under the window through which the burglars effected an entrance into Mr. Connerly's house, and a ladder was found lying at the side of the house.

A Complicated State of Affairs.

Justice Rodyne on Tuesday rendered judgment in the cases brought by Henry Voehl and Henry Koehler to recover debts from Henry Graeder, Jr., to the sum of $200 and costs in the former case and $41 and costs in the case of the latter. The Justice also issued writs of execution and Constable Bannerahe made a levy on a horse, wagon and harness alleged to belong to Graeder. The constable found a number of the sale in front of the most conspicuous places in the borough, and on Wednesday Charles Graeder, sr., is alleged to have torn down some of the notices, thus placing himself liable to arrest. He claimed that the official notices posted by the constable advertised his property for sale, when in reality it was his son against whom the levy was made. A new phase in the case was brought out when it was learned that Henry Voehl also held a chattel mortgage on the horse, wagon and harness for $25 which was given him by young Graeder himself. Mr. Voehl's chattel mortgage will therefore stand good, while the two other claims it is thought will be greatly compromised by the sale.

Certificates for Teachers.

The Union County Board of Examiners met recently at Westfield for the purpose of examining candidates for teachers' certificates. There were ten candidates present and all but one were granted certificates. The following were the successful candidates: Jessie T. Folwell, Westfield; Carrie O. Halliday, Rahway; Lizzie Condron, Rahway; Blanche Leonard, Rahway; Mamie O'Neil, Rahway; Lottie Gomoll, Lyons Farms; Gussie Eaton, Elizabeth; Susie B. Kain, Elizabeth; Minnie L. Kendall, New Providence. Mr. W. T. Vance, the county superintendent, says the board is well satisfied with the work done at the examination.

The Netherwood Trouble.

The negotiations for the transfer of Hotel Netherwood are not yet completed. At the meeting for that purpose held recently new difficulties were presented.

Some time ago the story was started that Catholics were negotiating to buy the property for a convent, from Bridget Meehan, the owner, who is a Catholic.

That aroused the Netherwood residents, who feeling that such an institution in the vicinity would destroy the value of the property, arranged to purchase the hotel themselves. Bridget Meehan, in turn is said to have become indignant over the supposed objections on her creed, but the stable understood the reason for the objection, which is against any institution not likely to attract desirable residents such as come from the hotel, when properly conducted, as it will doubtless be by Mr. F. E. Miller, the new proprietor, judging by the excellent reputation he has.

Netherwood residents seem determined to rid themselves of Woodruff, and such of our newsheats as have suffered by their dealings with him, and all the community who sympathize with them, will say, may success crown their efforts.

Woodruff's lease of the hotel expires at the end of the present month, but he holds a lease until next April of the stables, which though known as the Netherwood stables do not belong to the hotel owners, and we understand that he is assuring people that he will keep possession until next April, and that he will charge $100 per month. It is supposed to be merely a bluff, whereby creditors may be thrown off their guard and enable the one person who has virtually been to steal away like a thief in the night.

PERSONAL.

Miss R. Crosby of Newark is visiting friends on Park avenue.

Mrs. and Mrs. J. J. Van Dyke of West Second street are at Ocean Grove.

Alex. D. Mellissen and wife of the borough are visiting at Mamaroneck, New York State.

The family of Mr. H. Eggerding of Park avenue left town yesterday for a short sojourn at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Schermerhorn started to-day for a few weeks' sojourn in the Catskills. They went by excursion to Kaaterskill.

Miss Annie Plaig of East Front street and Miss Linnie Wilcox of North Plainfield are stopping at "The Waverly," Ocean Grove.

After an absence of three weeks at Asbury Park, Mrs. Joseph Noel and daughter have returned to their home on North avenue.

Mr. W. R. Clarkson of East Front street sailed for Europe a few days ago to join his wife and daughter, the latter being in ill health.

Mr. I. W. Rushmore of West Seventh street is erecting two substantial dwellings on the two corners of Third street and Grant avenue.

Julia, the three months'-old twin daughter of August and Margaret Jacot, died at the home of her parents in North Plainfield on Wednesday.

Mrs. Edward Pound and children of West Fourth street returned home last evening after an absence of ten days at Asbury Park and upper New York State.

Rev. Mr. Adams of Metuchen, a Prohibition candidate for the Assembly from this district, will address the Reform Club meeting on Sunday evening.

Miss Julia E. Bulkley, principal of the Plainfield public schools, is slowly recovering from her recent indisposition which prostrated her while on a visit to Bealright.

Rev. Dean Rodman rector of Grace church will spend his vacation in Chicago next month, where he will go as a member of the Episcopal convention which meets in that city in October.

Peter Duryea of West Seventh street sailed for Europe on Wednesday. During his absence Mr. Duryea will endeavor to arrange a match between Hanlan and Beach the celebrated oarsmen.

The Rahway Advocate says that John H. French, President of the Plainfield Reform Club, will probably run for the Assembly as the Prohibition candidate from the Third Congressional District.

Principal Boss of the North Plainfield public school together with his family returned yesterday from central New York where they have been sojourning for several weeks past.

Lawrence O'Reilly of Clifton Springs, New York State, has returned home after a pleasant visit to the family of Eugene A. Laine of Front and Liberty streets. Miss Belle, his sister, who has been on an extended visit here, returned with him.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brokaw of Crescent avenue celebrated their golden wedding on Tuesday, having been married on Sept. 7, 1836. Four children have been born to them, all of whom are living, Mr. A. Swaim the North avenue decorator being among the number.

A reception was tendered by Mrs. James Cook of West Seventh street to her daughter, Mr. Colville of Chicago, who is on a visit here, on Tuesday evening, there being a large number in attendance. Vocal and instrumental music formed a prominent feature or the evening's enjoyment.

Mr. H. S. Mason and family of East Sixth street will leave soon on Saturday for New York, N. Y., where they will permanently reside. In their departure from the city the Congregational church and Sunday school lose some of its most active workers. Mr. Mason was also musical conductor in the Sunday school and frequently presided at the church organ.

Miss May Thomas, one of the highly gifted and esteemed teachers of the North Plainfield Public School, returned to-day from her vacation east. She is accompanied by her mother, who will make her home here. During the absence of Miss Thomas at her home, Centerville, Cayuga county, her grandpa, one who was completing a course in one of the leading eastern colleges, died suddenly one day of heart disease. Her many friends in this city sympathize with her and had intended which would have enabled him to make a mark in the journalistic realm.

Matrimonial.

Newton J. Smalley, against whom a complaint was lodged by Borough Marshal Becker for alleged participation in the recent borough trouble over the arrest of herdsman Patrick Lynch, and who was subsequently arrested and bound over to await the action of the Grand Jury, has brought suit against Justice Mattison to recover a debt of $2.61 said to have been contracted by the purchase of poultry from the complainant. The Justice has signified his intention to contest the case, the defense being that no bill has ever been presented for the payment of the same. The case will come up for trial before Justice Austin to-morrow afternoon at half-past two o'clock.

Election of Officers.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of the Dime Savings Institution held Tuesday the following officers were elected to serve the institution for the coming year: President—John W. Murray in place of Enos W. Runyon, resigned; Vice Presidents—Judge Nathan Harper and William White. The following committees were appointed: Investment Committee—Levi Hetfield; W. White, J. F. Hubbard, J. B. Coward, Geo. W. Rockfellow. Auditing Committee—F. Gardner, Clarence Paine and R. Tilesworth.

WESTFIELD.

John W. Beebe has rented and moved into one of Mr. Hosford's new cottages on Rossmoor Terrace.

Mr. S. B. Green of New York has moved into Mr. J. L. Miller's house on Elm street.

Mrs. John Tobin, aged 31 years, of North avenue, died very suddenly on Wednesday night, having been ill but two days. She leaves a husband and two children.

Samuel Godshalk has sold out the stock, fixtures and furniture of his hotel to a Mr. Oakes of New York. Sam is going to New Brunswick.

Mr. A. Morales of New York has moved into the house of Morris K. White on Spring street.

—The various churches in Rahway will take up a collection on Sunday to aid the Charleston sufferers.

—A subscriber wants to know "how long it will be before Plainfield is entitled to letter carriers?" It will be remembered that an act was before Congress some years ago establishing a grade by entitling cities of 10,000 inhabitants and upwards to letter carriers, but the act failed to become a law and consequently the established rate is 20,000, as heretofore. The present population of Plainfield is something like 9,000, and consequently the city will have to increase to double its present populati n before it will be entitled to letter carriers, unless the population of North Plainfield may be counted in.

STATE NOTES.

The lithographers employed at the National Bureau of Engraving, in Burlington, have gone on a strike for a reduction of six hours work per week.

The Gloucester County Prohibition Convention met at Woodbury on Wednesday and nominated Samuel Gaskill, a glass blower of Clayton, for the Assembly.

Mr. J. E. Dale, an Engli-hman, has been appointed organist and choirmaster of Christ church, Elizabeth. This is the church where such a commotion was caused some time ago by the removal of H. H. Wood, the blind organist, who for thirty years had held the position.

Adam Hammar, the postmaster of Millstone, while on a visit to Asbury Park, was knocked insensible by footpads on Monday night. His pockets were turned inside out and his diamond stud taken from his shirt front. Mr. Hammer had about $500 in cash and a large amount in checks and notes, all of which were taken.

George Crockett, a resident of Elizabeth and switchman in the yard of the Central Railroad Company at Communipaw, had both legs cut off by being run over by a drill engine Wednesday night. He died yesterday at St. Michael's Hospital, Newark. He had been employed only a few months. The man whose place he took was also killed in the same manner.

Herman Brehmer and William Graham were suitors for the same lady's hand in New York. Brehmer won her affections, and after the marriage they started housekeeping at New Durham. Graham found employment on the railroad, and induced Brehmer to join the gang. Three or four days ago Mrs. Brehmer went out for a walk and has not since returned. Graham is also missing, and there is little doubt they have eloped.

James Noble, a Hoboken silk weaver, eloped with Mrs. Mary Ann Fields, wife of Frank Fields. Mrs. Fields took her two children with her, and the couple left Hoboken in May. Mrs. Fields' husband is in Paterson. Fields followed the couple and yesterday had them lodged in jail as they could not furnish bail. A similar proceeding was also begun yesterday in the Recorder's Court against Noble by another weaver's wife. A vigilance organization is to be formed in Paterson some time ago.

MORE OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

Is Cuba Gone Down?

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 10.—An evening paper here publishes a dispatch to-day from Charleston saying that it had been reported by the captains of three different vessels that have just arrived at that port that they have been unable to find the Island of Cuba, and it is believed that it was destroyed by the earthquake which wrecked Charleston. Not a vestige of the island, they say, is to be seen anywhere.

THE RACE A FAILURE

AFTER BEATING ABOUT IN THE FOG AND CALM.

The Contesting Yachts Had to Get Home the Best Way They Could—The Trial to be Made Again on Saturday.—A Steamer Ashore.

New York, Sept. 10.—It was what a yachtsman on one of the boats called the silliest yacht race that ever was sailed. With the exception of a spurt of breeze early in the afternoon the whole course was characteristic of a New York yacht club affair—no wind to speak of, and the whole affair a drag through which nothing under sail could make headway. Early in the day, the two big steamers left Sandy Hay Ridge anchorage to help unbecalmed boats in the English outer Gabelan in tow from her anchorage to the lightship and the tug Seminole was carrying the flag of the Mayflower for the start during the day. It was then shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning, and inside of two hours later they were thrown off new near the Scotland light. At 11.30 the preparatory gun was fired, and half a minute after the start was proclaimed from the judges' boat. The two yachts crept slowly and unwillingly, the Mayflower unchecked at 11.30.30 and the Galatea three seconds later. They both started off on the starboard tack, but within a few minutes the Mayflower worked to the windward of her adversary.

A fall of drizzling rain began and drove all the guests from the outer decks of the score or two of steamers which followed the race.

The course was then declared lightship, and was officially designated to be covered to windward east by north for twenty miles and back.

At 11.42 the Galatea went about, followed by the Mayflower, which had gained considerably in the matter of lead. A few seconds after the Galatea went about, and off on the port tack to the northward, and, as it were, stole the thunder from her adversary. Half an hour later they went about again, and the Mayflower came up with the fleet of steamers clinging to her stake. A mild fog loomed up from the Jersey shore, enfolding the far astern Galatea in its folds.

At 2:45 p. m. the Mayflower was laying northeast, half west on the starboard tack. The fog increased in density, and hid in the British cutter, and about 4 o'clock the wind threw out. The Mayflower's sails came up again, and at 4:56:22 the Mayflower rounded the turning point, but the Galatea did not follow her, though at that time the British cutter had ostensibly given up the race and headed home, or, at least, for harbor.

Then the Mayflower tried to run home before sphenpsker and balloon jib, but it was evident that she would not complete the race. In the event of such a confession it became evident that the Mayflower's outside course should be directed by the committee.

About 4 o'clock a dense haze enveloped the boats, and made navigation without chart or compass mighty uncomfortable.

It was 4:56:22, official time, when the Mayflower rounded the Scotland lightship, amid a volley of cheers from the fleet which would not lift. At that time nobody knew where the Galatea was.

When the Mayflower started home before the wind, a score or two of steamers went up a monstrous howl to emphasize their good feeling, but before they were through their creations were cut short by the wind dying out. Then the fog came down in the worst fog that ever veteran salts in those waters had encountered in summer time.

It enveloped the Highland and Sandy Hook lights in a rush of spray and drizzling rain, which hid their identity from the fleet of tugs.

On rounding the lightship the Mayflower broke her spinnaker out of stops, and an instant later she was lost in the fog.

A fleet of tugs led the Mayflower from the rounding point, twenty miles to windward, until they lost her in the fog on the home-stretch. It was evident that the Galatea had given up the race, and had headed for Bay Ridge, and, like little Bo-Peep's sheep, nobody knew where to find her.

On the run home before the wind, the wind died out, and the Mayflower lagged behind. Night grew on, and the accompanying steamers headed for the point of Sandy Hook and home, leaving the Mayflower alone in her glory to be towed to the city.

On the police boat Patrol, which accompanied the race, a select assemblage of politicians and lawyers were gathered to watch Gen. Stoker, Judge Gildersleeve, Police Justice Fowers and others.

The boat on its return from the lightship party was in full of the Merritt wrecking steamer, which was run down off Sandy Hook yesterday.

Nobody knows when the Mayflower finished her race at the lightship, but every one knows that she did not finish within the prescribed seven hours.

The Galatea returned to her anchorage when she became convinced of the hopelessness of completing the race, as she was at the time about three miles astern of her Boston adversary.

Yesterday's race will be sailed again on Saturday next over the same course and subjected to the same conditions of serve hard limitation and the windward or leeward course.

The steamer Empire State, with 800 excursionists aboard, ran ashore on Fish Hook, off Sandy Hook. There were nearly 800 people aboard, but no panic ensued, as the steamer struck gently. Hawsers, bags and lines were thrown and tried in vain to pull her off the sand. She has no immediate danger. The passengers were taken off by other boats and reached the city and were landed, but had to walk across the Hook to the railway station, where they waited until a late hour for a boat to be sent down for them.

A train was made up at Sandy Hook about 11 o'clock and took the passengers of the Empire State to Jersey City by the consolidated route of the Central railroad. The Empire State is a Boston steamer. The steamer is badly listed and lies in such a position that a southeast wind would use her pretty severely. The life saving crew were promptly on hand, ready to render assistance, but their services were not required. There were many people from Boston on board the steamer, and they were very much inconvenienced, having arranged to take the early evening trains for home and not being able to get there. Many of the ladies were in tears. The many ladies as found behaved coolly, and seemed as if they were accused of aiding the passengers themselves as aided to step on board. Indeed, the accident seems to take the accident as one of the ordinary incidents of an excursion.

The cause of the accident was said to have been that the whaleboats misunderstood an order. The steamer has quite a list, and should the weather remain favorable it is expected she will get off with assistance the next high tide.

The coast wrecking steamer, T. J. Merritt, went down to the Empire State and took some provisions along.

The Empire State left Providence at 6 o'clock on Monday night with a party of 800 excursionists from Boston and Providence, destined to follow the race on Tuesday. She reached Pier 3, North river, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, picked up some passengers, and started out to see the yachts coming in through the Narrows. She laid up at Pier 3 on Monday, and the excursionists went on expecting to have all over town. They went for the most part young men. About fifty of them got to bed so late that they missed the train. Yesterday Capt. Phillips in the Boston manager of the Empire State. She is 25 years old, and is owned by Staples & Pettis, of Taunton. She ran for a long time on the Fall River line.

A Steamer Ashore.

About 5 p. m. yesterday, as the steamer Avalger Queen, which has been employed for nine months in dredging out the Sandy Hook channel, was leaving the channel to go into and sank in Gedney's channel by the Alexandre steamer City of Alexandria, which was proceeding to sea in the fog. The crew of the Queen were all told. None of them were taken on board the steamer by reason. The others were rescued by the steamer Robert Robinson, Capt. John Morrow, who transferred them to the tug Argus, which landed them on the railroad wharf at the Highlands. Nearly all of the Queen were slightly injured. The Queen sank so quickly that the crew had no time to save any of their effects. After rescuing the men the City of Alexandria put to sea. The dredge was sunk in a position very dangerous for the steamer and sailing craft bound in from the yacht race. The Grand Republic passed within 150 feet of the sunken dredge.

A singular thing in the experience of the sunken tug, when working in and around the Hook, was that the bell of the Fire Island light, which is 150 feet above the water line. It could be plainly heard at intervals, and then would be utterly lost for from fifteen to twenty minutes. The scientific explanation of this is that the fog is the varying resistancy of the fog. The thicker the fog the greater the sound waves.

GERONIMO'S FUTURE FATE.

He Will Be Taken to An Open Country for Safekeeping.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The president has telegraphed Adjt. Gen. Drum, the acting secretary of war, giving him full and discretionary authority as to the present disposition of Geronimo and his band. When the president returns to Washington he will decide on the permanent disposition of the prisoners of these Indians. Gen. Drum, in pursuance of this discretion, telegraphed Gen. Miles—who is on the ground and more familiar with the circumstances—that the adjutant general can be transferring this discretionary authority to that officer. It is learned that Gen. Miles will not follow her, though it is said that the British cutter had ostensibly given up the race and headed home, or, at least, for harbor.

Then the Mayflower tried to run home before sphenpsker and balloon jib, but it was evident that she would not complete the race. In the event of such a confession it became evident that the Mayflower's outside course should be directed by the committee.

A GLOOMY PICTURE.

SANITARY SITUATION OF CHARLESTON THREATENS DISEASE.

Consternation Arising Over the Matter of Burials for Deceased Negroes—The Mayor Calls Upon the People to Leave Their Tents and Return Home.

Charleston, Sept. 10.—The past day has, in some respects, been the gloomiest day since the eventful 31st of August. The shock at 1 in the morning was felt by comparatively few persons, but at 9:51 and then two others, one at 9:55 and one at 11:10 a. m. The earthquake, however, is of small consequence compared with the September rains which seem to be in store for us. Tons of men many thousands of persons unsheltered. The people are huddled together in the public parks, and the authorities hardly know how to protect them from the storm, and utterly unprovided for as far as sanitary precautions are concerned. What the effect of all this will lead to, even in a healthy climate, is not difficult to understand. In this climate, and at this season, it is appalling, and not exaggeration. To add to the dangers of the situation, the sewerage department seems to be paralyzed, and but little has been done to clean up the debris and the refuse which is scattered about the city. In all about 60 tents have been received and distributed. The effort made to obtain 3,000 more has, at the outside, proved a failure. The police force has been increased, but not nearly enough to meet the necessities of the occasion. In the early morning the city presented a beautiful appearance. Cotton was coming in freely, and the work of repairing buildings was well under way, but the heavy rain which set in at about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon has put a stop to all this and has thrown over the entire city. A rumor has reached here of earthquakes in Cuba. It has not at this writing been made public, but great fear is entertained of it. The duty of the city is now this proves to be true. The relief work is going on, but the ruinous to 7,000 persons must be given clean shelter and clothing to protect them from the storm, which is now raging in all its fury. The committee, however, are making out necessary work with untiring energy, and will before night have supplied them with rations. The committee are also supplying medicines.

The stoppage of industrious looking of from every direction has somewhat had a very decided effect diminishing the number of refugees. It is not pleasant to say that in one or two instances persons have applied for relief who were fully able to pay for them. Since the earthquake about 5,000 persons have left the city, and others are departing daily. Only yesterday 1,000 certificates were issued by the health department to parties who have died from the effects of the earthquake. Then was Sarah Riley (colored) who died at the residence of Mrs. Ann E. and M. C. Nowell (white) 30 years old, shock.

Mayor Courtenay, in an address published to-day, earnestly urges the people to return to their homes rather than run the risk of disease. He says:

I return this day to occupy the uninjured part of my house, and, if in all such cases as mine there is found a home it is possible I earnestly invoke the assistance and united action of my fellow-citizens. Where individuals are responsible, by reason of the dangerous condition of the house, I recommend a temporary refuge in the interior of the state or elsewhere, or the hiring of tents in the suburbs of the city, number of which are to-day uncompiled. The next sixty days in Charleston should be busy days, in preparation for the winter. Whether the dwellings or tents may be under a roof, the penalties to follow a continued use of the present arrangements will make them endurable. What our people need is encouragement, hope and relief—from the terrible nervous strain to which they have been suddenly subjected, and which will certainly continue in the tents and streets, and in the streets and parks and public squares. A renewal of the home life of the city alone will restore confidence, rest and cure.

Every one acknowledges the soundness of the advice, and yet it will be difficult to persuade people to follow it. The horror of another shock is terrible, and no one has experienced the shock of that awful Tuesday night can be realized by no one who has not been through the ordeal.

A meeting of the state of affairs exists with regard to the question of rent. A large part of the houses in Charleston are owned by rich people, who will not display a very marked indifference to the condition of the property. On the part of tenants there is an indisposition, or, perhaps, a feeling of inability, to pay rents, and trouble in this direction is threatened. Applications have in instances already been made to the trial justices for writs of eviction, and the number is very few, but these applications have in every instance been refused thus far.

The total amount of contributions to the relief fund up to the close of business to-day is $136,148.72.

Wedded in a Hospital.

New York, Sept. 10.—Henry W. Sampsonville, the young man who shot himself last Saturday in the abdomen, was married at Bellevue hospital to-day to Miss Annie Ogborn, the young woman with whom he has been living. The wedding took place in the hospital corridor, where he still lies and is still confined. The Rev. Bidwell Lees performed the ceremony. The young lady said that her husband worked on the Long Island railroad, and that he went to Long Island Wednesday night the day on the shipboard before and started out of the harbor at full speed for Canarsie waters.

A Prison Guard Arrested.

St. Paul, Sept. 10.—Deputy United States Marshal Ryan arrested W. J. Glynn, at the workhouse, on a charge of being implicated in the Minneapolis postoffice robbery. For the last four months Glynn has been employed as a guard at the workhouse. The officials of the outside say Glynn is dark, and that other parties are yet to be arrested.

Seventy Vessels Lost.

Machias, Me., Sept. 10.—The British brig Dart, Capt. Hall, from Parrsboro for Cuba, sailing from Halifax, ran on Flinty reef, Jonesport and will be a total loss. The crew are saved. The schooner Florence P. Hall, of Jonesport, with coal from New York to Moosehead, ashore on Marsh's island Tuesday, and is a total loss.

Money and Valuables Frozen Together.

Trenton, Sept. 10.—Three residents who have been at work for two days have collected $1,100 for the benefit of the Charleston sufferers. The money, which will be sent to the mayor of that city. These hundred wall and hospital tents were shipped to Charleston by Quartermaster Gen. Perrine from here.

Died of Lockjaw.

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 10.—Charles Mills, a prominent young man, who died one morning two days ago accidently discharged his gun, resulting a wound in his hand. He died yesterday from lockjaw which resulted from the accident.

CONFEDERATED MINERS.

Executive Board and Officers Recommended to Lewisburgh.

Indianapolis, Sept. 10.—At the session of the federation of delegates and miners' representatives, which met in this city on Sept. 8, Secretary and Treasurer Pearce submitted a report touching on matters of interest to the organization, and the evening were passed in discussing the report and in respect to the Gough Creek, Ill., strikers, urging the miners everywhere to vote for representatives workingmen on state, county and municipal tickets, and to elect men who will pass laws for the abolition of the "free barter" system; that the consideration of the reduction of wages ought not to interfere with nor impede the eight-hour movement.

Pledging the members not to vote for any candidate for any office who will not first agree to support a law prohibiting the owners of mines from paying their employes in any other legal tender in any one day, and a law compelling the owners of mines to pay their employes every two weeks in the lawful money of the United States, and ordering the coroners every case pending to the intimidation of miners of the several states.

That the executive committee, of Pittsburg, are instructed as the official organ of the federation. Members were urged to work for the enactment of laws providing for the weighing of coal before screening; also the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that no officer or member should engage in the business of coal carrying, but connect themselves with any organization from motives of self-interest to the abandonment of objects of our organization.

Resolved, That federated districts shall be composed of miners working in states or parts of districts where coal is mined, and that the executive board of the miners of these districts shall be vested in general convention of the district and executive board, each of which, in the absence of the other, have power to remove the chief officer of the district, provided that they do not in any way interfere with the management of the local unions. Where state organizations exist miners may first attach themselves to such organizations before they can belong to the federated district. They shall not be subject to the laws of state organizations in all cases where they affect the interest of the federated district is concerned.

Resolved, The executive board of each state shall investigate the question of prison paid for machine mining in the several districts.

George Harrison, of Ohio; Patrick McAdams, of Indiana, and George Morris, of Pennsylvania, were appointed a committee to revise the constitution. Christopher Evans, of New Straunville, O., was elected executive secretary, and Patrick McLaughlin, of Illinois, executive treasurer.

The Water Works Burned.

Dayton, O., Sept. 10.—J. S. Gary & Co.'s door mills; and Cahill & Russell's ice houses, east of the city, were burned yesterday, and also a large stock of lumber. A great deal of such material was destroyed. It was partially insured. The loss cannot yet be approximated, but will be very heavy. Continuous high pressure in the Holly water mains, two miles from the works, and the same distance from the scene of the conflagration, and no water could be got.

A Hot Milk a Snake.

Lula, Ga., Sept. 10.—R. Engelke, a merchant of this place, has a large collection of live rare birds, snakes and lizards. He concluded to feed his snakes on some of his white rats. He put a rat into each of the cages of the rattlesnakes, and then put the cage in front of their game, but in the case of the king snake there was trouble. The rat was only half grown, but fought desperately; killing the snake, which was a large one, and dining upon it.

Convention Nominations.

Hamilton, Sept. 10.—At the Republican state convention yesterday Senator O. H. Platt was selected as chairman. Hon. P. C. Lounsbury was nominated for governor on the first ballot. Other nominations were as follows: For lieutenant governor, James L. Howard, of Hartford; for secretary of state, L. M. Hollister, of Wallingford; for treasurer, Alexander Warner, of Pomfret; for comptroller, Thomas Clark, of North Stonington.

Against the Land League.

London, Sept. 10.—The chairman of the Westport (Ireland) board of guardians, who was formerly a prominent member of the league, has accused the league of investing American contributions instead of devoting them to the aid of evicted tenants. He asserts that the league shamefully rejected appeals to aid tenants in Galway and Mayo, saying that these people were fit only for emigration.

Ravaged by Cholera.

San Francisco, Sept. 10.—A correspondent of The Bulletin, writing from Seoul, Corea, under date of Aug. 2, says that since July 23 from 207 to 300 persons have died daily from Asiatic cholera. From July 15 to July 31 there were 3,140 deaths. Owing to a lack of coffins the dead are buried in straw or in matting. In many places the bodies had been unearthed and devoured by dogs and vultures.

A Canadian Tug Rescues.

Buffalo, Sept. 10.—The Canadian tug Hercules, Captain Ferland, arrived at Tonawanda and was hailed at the instance of the Alice Transfer company for grave carelessness in towing a scow more than four years ago while towing her into open water. Wednesday night the crew put the shipwrecked sailors and started out of the harbor at full speed for Canarsie waters.

POSTAL EXPERIMENTS.

WILL THE STAMPED LETTER SHEET BE A SUCCESS?

Novelties in the Way of Stamps, and the Special Delivery System—Only About 600 Special Delivery Letters Per Day. The New York Office.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Two little changes have since the introduction of the new combined letter sheet and postal envelope, in the opinion of Postmaster Pearson, furnish the data for any decided opinion as to whether it comes to supply "a long felt want" or not. The sales of it have reached about 30,000 a day—but whether that is merely because it is simply a novelty as yet, or is any indication of what they will continue to be when everybody has given the thing a trial, is still an open question. Will the small economy in the use of the postal stamp and the convenience of being independent of idle chance and exasperating lack of envelopes, be deemed a sufficient offset to the far from fascinating necessity of wetting the letter to the extent that this invention compels? Will some crank rise to remark upon the alarming danger of distributing baleful disease germs and bacilli by means of the sheet? Will women object to having the faults of their letters rigidly fixed to the confined space of a single sheet, and will they persist in trying to cross-line the guaranteed surface? Will it help the sale of the new sheets to the ladies if the gum that is to be wet is flavored with vanilla, rose, lemon, etc.? All these weighty questions must and will answer until the postoffice authorities know a little more about the matter themselves.

Novelties cannot be depended on to last. The postal note was considered almost a public blessing when it first came out, but has declined in popularity as experience proved its demerits. It does not afford the protection that the "money order" does in sending money; the limitation of amount to very small sums makes it only a sort of small change for a service where bank bills would do equally well, and last quite as safe. The only possible advantage is that if one wants to send a small sum in a way that looks more formal than the sending of the money would be, the postal note is a little cheaper than the money order. That consideration, to a people who are not distinguished for economy in petty economy, is not enough, and the demand for the postal notes is constantly growing less, though, of course, once having been introduced, it will probably never be altogether dropped.

The "special delivery" stamp, too, is less of a success than it was expected that it would be, and the sales of it in New York are now limited to about 600 a day. It is found that however brilliant may be the services it obtains in places where the ordinary local mail delivery is hardly conspicuously infrequent and slow, it does not shine conspicuously in New York, where the system is exceptionally good and well carried out, without the "special delivery" two-cent stamp. It does not expedite letters at all in transmission between mail points. That would be impracticable, unless the price of the stamp should be sufficiently large to send a messenger with each individual letter the moment it was dropped into mail care, which would be preposterous. It simply hastens the delivery from the last mail point to which is sent the letter to which it is affixed, and that in New York is as expeditious as possible anyway. It does not always be in the letter carrier's favor is that it impresses upon the mind of the person getting it that his correspondent is probably in a hurry.

Crushed by Hotter Irons.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Sept. 10.—At the boiler shops of the Kerr-Murray Manufacturing company yesterday afternoon, four men were engaged in moving along on the floor a piece of wrought iron plate twenty feet in length and eighteen feet in height. This piece of iron was being moved on its edge and got into position alongside of another piece of similar size. The other piece fell against it, causing both pieces to fall on their sides, crushing Fred Schnur under them, causing instant death. Louis Miller was seriously injured in the head; William Max badly hurt in the back, and it is feared his injuries will terminate fatally. The dead man was 34 years of age, and had been married but two months.

The Brakemen Succeeded.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 10.—The strike of brakemen and conductors in the yards of the Pittsburg and Western railroad has ended in a triumph for the strikers. Superintendent Johnson granted the conductor's demands, but refused the brakemen. The conductors refused to continue work unless the brakemen's demands were conceded. Superintendent Johnson came here at noon and granted the brakemen's demand, and all the strikers returned to work.

Murder of a Stockman.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 10.—News of a shocking murder in Stone county was received last evening. Gilbert Miller, a stockman, a resident of Missouri, was waylaid while buying cattle, shot three times and left for dead in the road. His wife was found by a farmer who happened to pass along the road. He cannot live. He was robbed of $800. Three unknown men made the assault upon him.

The Dam Gave Way.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 10.—The reservoir dam, on Walnut creek, near this city, broke, and the water washed away Jones & Ellis' flouring mills, causing a loss of $6,250, and washed several bridges and part of Eatman's mill. Several other streams have risen suddenly and swept away their dams.

Cheap Advertising.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The manager of the Casino says that Mrs. Scheiling will sing there as usual to-night. She was in the city last night, and notified him of her return.

CONDENSED NEWS.

A quarrel between Dr. J. W. Youngs and Scott Swann, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has culminated in the latter shooting the former through the body. The parties were prominent citizens.

Eighty-seven Chinamen are reported to have been driven away from Douglas Island, Alaska, by a mob of miners. They were sent to sea in two small yachts, with only a little raw rice, with a twenty-five days' journey before them. It is supposed they all perished.

The body of John Whalen, an assistant steward on the steamer Italy, was found dead in the hold of the ship in New York harbor.

The Rev. Thomas Harrison, the "boy preacher," is ill and threatened with paralysis, at Milford, Mass.

The reported uprising of the Pinto Indians proves to have no foundation in fact.

Boston proposes to raise $50,000 for the Charleston sufferers.

The collector of customs at Eastport, Me., has notified Canadian fish dealers that all fish caught in Canadian ports and shipped into the United States shall pay a duty. Hitherto fresh fish have been admitted free.

HERR MOST IN DANGER.

Wanted in Chicago for Complicity in the Haymarket Massacre.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Anarchists in this city begin to fear that their imprisoned leader, John Most, stands a chance of being the seven condemned men in Chicago company.

A telegram from that city announces that Judge Gary will draw a special grand jury, and that Cook county officials are busily preparations for demanding the extradition of Herr Most, in order to try him on a charge of conspiracy in the Haymarket massacre.

The possibility of such a course has been considered probable among a great many of those who followed the big trial of Most and his comrades. The worst piece of circumstantial evidence is the letter on the Hocking valley agitation, written by Most, and found upon Spies at the time of his arrest. The obtaining of dynamite is in that subtle sphere of as an absolute necessity, and Most says he can supply the party with any amount that might be wanted.

Another feature of Most's supposed influence upon the Chicago Anarchists and the inciting to riot was pointed to by the testimony of the historian pamphlet, "Elements of Revolutionary Warfare," as evidence against the accused men. The report which at once came was that Most, alleging that Most had paid a secret visit to Chicago while eluding the search of Inspector Byrnes' detectives last May, is, however, pronounced utterly false.

A prominent Chicago official visited the district attorney's office of this city yesterday in relation to the extradition of Most, and it has been ascertained that there is an effort made to have him brought to Chicago this month, although his term at Blackwell Island does not expire until April next.

Bicycle Racing.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 10.—The second day of the bicycle meeting was very successful. G. G. Dresser won the Hartford club mile handicap in 2m. 42 3-4s., R. A. Dobbes second, George C. Pratt third. Rowe won the 2½ mile handicap in 6m. 8s. Dobbes, Ives second. F. Wood, of England (scratch), won the mile professional handicap in 2m. 35s. This beats the record. F. T. Merrill (105 yards) got third in record.

The three mile tricycle race was won by Burnham, defeating Ives, in 9m. 30 1-2s.

A. R. Ellis won the one mile amateur open race in 2m. 46 1-2s.

Woodside won the five mile professional lap race in 15m. 7 1-2s., with Nelson second, Morgan third.

Crist and Brown won the tandem tricycle race in 5m. 56 1-4s.

H. R. Hart, of New Britain, won the five mile state championship race in 17m. 8s.

A Clergyman Hangs Himself.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—The Rev. Nels Rydes, ex-pastor of the Swedish Methodist church in this city, was found hanging to a bedpost in his room dead. Recently he was compelled to resign his pastorate on account of his liberal views on religion, which conflicted with the creed of the church as interpreted by his congregation. Then he took to drink, and a few days ago his wife left him. It is believed that he committed suicide when partly intoxicated.

TWO FAMOUS BRIDGES.

High Bridge, Kentucky, and a New One Across the Hudson.

In one of the most beautiful and picturesque locations in America stands High bridge, Kentucky. It spans the Kentucky river, and is the railway crossing of the Cincinnati Southern road on its track to New Orleans. Pictures to High Bridge are the fashion in summer in that region for hundreds of miles around.

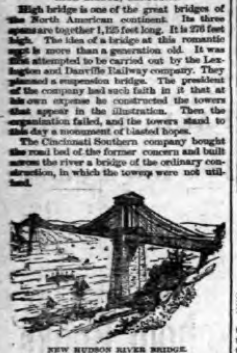
A flight of 600 steps leads the foot passenger down beside the bridge to the water below.

Once an unwary traveler fell down the steps and was killed.

HIGH BRIDGE, KENTUCKY.

High bridge is one of the great bridges of the North American continent. Its three spans are together 1,125 feet long. It is 276 feet high. The idea of a bridge at this romantic spot is more than a generation old. It was first attempted to be carried out by the Lexington and Danville Railway company. They planned a suspension bridge. The president of the company had such faith in it that at his own expense he constructed the towers that appear in the illustration. Then the organization failed, and the towers stand to this day a monument of blasted hope.

The Cincinnati Southern company bought the road bed of the former concern and built across the river a bridge of the ordinary construction, in which the towers were not utilized.



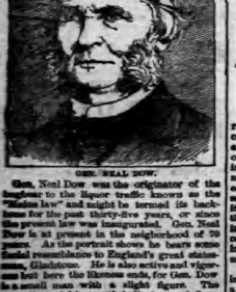
NEW HUDSON RIVER BRIDGE.

The bridge across the Hudson river at Poughkeepsie is not built yet, except upon paper. It is not, but it is to be by the 1st of January, 1888, its charter says. The Union Bridge company, of New York city—Gen. W. C. Hazel, president—has the contract for its construction.

It is to be a suspension bridge, patterned after those at Brooklyn and Cincinnati. Overhead a picturesque and wealthy town on the left bank of the Hudson, forty-two miles north of New York city, chiefly noted for being the summer home of Henry Ward Beecher. Close by is Anthony's Nose, a mountain 1,500 feet high. The bridge will cross from the side of this mountain, at a height above the Hudson river of 155 feet. This will leave room below for the passage of ships and steamers. Washington Irving in his highly voracious history says the mountain got its name from the nasal organ of Anthony Van Corlear. The bridge will cross from Anthony's Nose to old Fort Clinton on the west bank. The height above the water of the towers supporting the cables will be something tremendous, 310 feet.

It is proposed to connect on the west side of the river with the Erie railway, the Lehigh and Hudson, the New York, Susquehanna and Western, the Ontario and Western, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Pennsylvania railroad, the bridge, the Baltimore and Ohio, the New Jersey and New York, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, the Pennsylvania coal & Navigation and the West Shore railroads; on the east side of the river with the New York Central and Hudson River railroad and the New York City and Northern railroad—thus giving direct communication with the elevated railway system of New York city and the New York and Harlem, the Housatonic, the Naugatuck, the New York, New Haven, Hartford and Springfield, and the New York and New England railroads; a direct all-rail connection between the great western and southwestern states and all New England, the western river counties of New York and the city of New York.

A Veteran Prohibitionist.



GEN. NEAL DOW.

Gen. Neal Dow was the originator of the laughter to the liquor traffic known as the "Maine law" and might be termed its backbone for the past twenty years, or since the present law was inaugurated. Gen. Neal Dow is at present in the neighborhood of 70 years old. As the portrait shows he bears some facial resemblance to England's great statesman, Gladstone. He is also active and vigorous and here the likeness ends, for Gen. Dow is a small man with a slight figure. The stern lines of his mouth indicate great firmness of character and this is carried out in his career. He has been an enthusiastic advocate of principle throughout his whole life. He is to-day one of the principal leaders in the movement to establish an independent political party which will have for its platform the prohibition of the sale or manufacture of spirituous liquor, except for the use of the arts and medicine in this country. This party no doubt will hold the balance of power in the presidential election of 1888.

THE EARTHQUAKE.

WHERE ARE SAN FRANCISCO'S LITTLE SIDE SHAKES NOW?

Earth's Crust Rising and Falling in Billowy Waves Over a Third of Her Circumference—Heart-rending Scenes in Ragtag Charleston.

Of the remarkable series of great events that have been happening the week now from 1851 to the present, earthquakes form a leading feature. And of these the one to be longest remembered in North America, will be that which laid Charleston, S. C., in ruins. It makes one feel, somehow, as if there was safety nowhere. If any place, next to the great western plains, was to be considered safe from earthquakes, it was just that part of the country which has been shaken up. If the theory of the cause of these ground disturbances is correct they ought to be manifest mostly along mountain ranges, as indeed they are.

Scientific authority declares they are caused by the cooling and settling of the earth's mass. It was a gigantic, red hot ball to begin. It commenced to cool upon the outside. At length a thin crust was formed as it cooled, naturally. It shrank. That made the crust crack open and settle, in order to readjust itself to fit the molten kernel within. The process still goes on, and will till the earth is cooled through. Hence earthquakes. Mountain ranges are where the great cracks have broken the surface and thrown the edges of the split up and sideways. When the earth is cooled through it will be dead, and there will be no earthquakes.

To get the attention properly it will be well to consider a moment the location of Charleston. It is in the peninsula by the junction of the Cooper and Ashley rivers. They unite here and flow to the ocean seven miles distant. Here is a fresh water and salt water mill in one, and this estuary forms the noble Charleston harbor, landlocked on three sides.

The earthquake came from the sea on the southeast and struck Charleston a beautiful, hapless city toward the northwest. What made the visitation still more distressing was the fact that only six days before it a terrific cyclone had swept over Charleston, doing vast damage. When the dull, awful roar of the earth tremor was heard on that last night of August many thought that it was another cyclone.

Mr. Dawson, editor of The News and Courier, was in his office at the time. How a man feels in an earthquake is thrillingly told by him. He wrote:

"From the first to the last it was a continuous jar, only adding force at every moment, and as it approached and reached the climax of its manifestation it seemed for a few terrible seconds that no work of human hands could possibly survive the shock. The floors were heaving under foot, the surrounding walls and partitions visibly swayed to and fro, the crash of falling masses of stone and brick and mortar was heard overhead, and without the terrible roar filled the ears, and seemed to fill the mind and heart, dazing perception, bewildering thought, and, for a few paralyzing breaths, or while you held your breath in dreadful anticipation of immediate and cruel death, you felt that life was already past, and existed only as one of the victims of the falling ruins, on the east side of the river with the New York Central and Hudson River railroad and the New York City and Northern railroad—thus giving direct communication with the elevated railway system of New York city and the New York and Harlem, the Housatonic, the Naugatuck, the New York, New Haven, Hartford and Springfield, and the New York and New England railroads; a direct all-rail connection between the great western and southwestern states and all New England, the western river counties of New York and the city of New York.

FLEEING FOR THEIR LIVES.

All of us remember the pictures the geography books give of earthquakes in torrid countries—walls and towers tumbling over and people fleeing for their lives. But none of us ever thought the scene could come to us in our safe latitudes. It has done so, and now we know there are no latitudes safe from earthquakes. Many of the scenes that commanded the scene in the school books, even as it was in Charleston. Women were braver than men, and the first thing suggested was getting their children together and leading them coolly into the streets, after the men had fled in terror. This feminine courage is great beyond question.

Gen. Sumner, the commander of the post, was the first shock that did the damage in Charleston. There were nearly, or quite, a dozen altogether, occurring within the next thirty-six hours. The first shock came in waves, as, indeed, everything else does. The first ones were from ten minutes to half an hour apart. Those who were cool enough to observe the motion of the houses noticed that the earth rose and fell like the billows of the sea. One man speaks of having seen the sidewalk rise and fall in waves. The effect on the mind of thus seeing the loosening of the only fabric we have always believed to be stable is indescribably awful. It is this that makes an earthquake so terrible. All the foundations of creation are broken up.

"Upon the first shock of light," said one, "I ran out of doors. All damage done by most, men can resist. Even in a tornado or cyclone he can cling to the earth or take refuge under ground. But when earth herself gives way, what is there to do? Man cannot even run away, for he knows not where the ground will open next. He might run into the very jaws of the destroyer."

The first part of Charleston is a mass of ruins. It was a beautiful city. The churches suffered grievously, owing to their having very tall spires. The Unitarian church was a noble specimen of architecture. Its tower was wrecked. Some of the best private houses are piles of debris and ruins.

Fifty thousand people spent most nights and days of terror in the streets and in vacant lots. Infants were born in several instances, while their mothers were lying out on the ground.

The earthquake area appears to have been the most extensive in modern times. Shocks were felt from British America to Florida, and as far west as Missouri. Cable dispatches bring the news that on the same night distinct shocks were felt at Athens, in Greece. The gas wells at Pittsburg caught fire. The waves of the earth were shaken up for more than a third of the planet's circumference, and death and destruction were to pay generally.

The center of the quake on this continent seems to have been at Summerville, S. C. This is a fashionable summer resort for aristocratic Charlestonians and is twenty-two miles from the city. The whole face of the earth seems to be changed here. Where before were ordinary sand and clay are now found great cracks in the mud, brackish water and sulphur smells. It will be a long time before it becomes known just how many persons were killed. In such calamities it is found out how generous human nature is. All has been poured into the stricken city from all quarters.

The tall, slender spire of St. Philip's Episcopal church stands the highest in the city. The graveyard lies the body of John C. Calhoun. On its site the first church in Charleston was built, a structure older than the present one. Its beautiful tower is ruined.

The most frightful sounding of all, however, must have been experienced by the train load of excursionists on their way from Columbia to Charleston. To find their train suddenly waving up in the air, then bumping down upon the earth, then going up, then down, and so on for several seconds without any known cause for it is the maddest idea with which mortal sounding in their ears, is an experience utterly unique in history. The front end of a car waved upward, while the rear end was depressed, and vice versa. The engineer put the brakes on as hard as he could, and still that marvelous train moved onward. It actually kept the track through this billowy section of earth. When the rails were examined they were found to be bent in serpentine waves.

The most celebrated building in Charleston, however, is the picturesque old St. Michael's church. It was designed as long ago as 1759 by a pupil of Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of St. Paul's in London. In the now demolished graveyard of the venerable church hung the sweetest chime of bells upon the continent. So famous is it, so precious to the people of Charleston, that during the late war it was taken down and sent to Columbia, so it might not be damaged by the Federal cannon known as the "Swamp Angel." The chime is very old. An incident that is said really to have happened in connection with the belfry of St. Michael's forms the foundation of a fine and pathetic poem that is frequently recited by elocutionists. The hero is a slave negro.

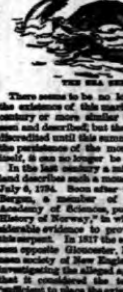
Charleston has been particularly unfortunate. War, fire, tidal wave, tornado, and now an earthquake, have spent their forces upon the doomed city. Several times the town has been almost ruined. It is enough to discourage the inhabitants.

THE SEA SERPENT.

Portrait of the Monster Seen Recently—those by Capt. Robert Bruin.

From a careful description of Capt. Robert Bruin, of the Gloucester Maid, a sea serpent is added to present our readers with an accurate engraving of the sea serpent seen in the Hudson river by the captain, and by many others on several occasions since.



THE SEA SERPENT.

There seems to be no longer any doubt of the existence of this marine monster. For a century or more reports have been made and described; but the stories have been discredited until this summer, when, through the persistence of the monster by striking itself, it can no longer be regarded a myth.

In the last century a missionary to Greenland described such a monster. This was on July 6, 1734, when Hans Egede, bishop of Bergen, a member of the Copenhagen Academy of Science, published a "Natural History of Greenland," in which he collects considerable evidence in favor of the existence of this serpent. In 1817 the sea serpent was first seen opposite Gloucester, Mass., and the Linnæan society of New England, after carefully investigating the matter, published a report that it considered the testimony obtained sufficient to place the existence of the animal thirty-six hours. The shock to come in waves, as, indeed, everything else does. The first ones were from ten minutes to half an hour apart. Those who were cool enough to observe the motion of the houses noticed that the earth rose and fell like the billows of the sea. One man speaks of having seen the sidewalk rise and fall in waves. The effect on the mind of thus seeing the loosening of the only fabric we have always believed to be stable is indescribably awful. It is this that makes an

PRESIDENT'S VACATION.

JEFFERSON QUITOONE IN DEMOCRATIC SIMPLICITY.

President and Mrs. Cleveland Exchange the Luxury of the Million Dollar Mansion in Washington for the Quiet of a Log Cabin in the Adirondacks.

THE PRESIDENTIAL RETREAT.

The tourist traveling through the Adirondack mountains next to the vicinity of Upper Saranac lake, N. Y., might come across a party of four, with a guide and servant, hunching on the bank of a quiet stream. But if the tourist was unaware that President Cleveland was spending a month in that neighborhood, he would never suspect that in the group before him was the head gentleman with the great broad back, covered by a checked flannel shirt, and whose head is partly hid under the gray slouch hat, was the ruler of the greatest nation the world ever beheld. Neither could he detect that there was any more deference paid to him than to any other gentleman who might be restricting his three days' fishing to the waters he entrusted the execution of the principal laws governing 50,000,000 of people. He cannot truly be termed their ruler, for no ruler in the world governs more completely his people without police or military protection, as the president of the United States does. The broad-backed man is President Cleveland, and in the handsome, athletic-looking lady in the plain, gray woolen dress and broad-brimmed straw hat is his wife. The other lady is her mother, and the jolly looking fourth person, the most richly attired member of the party, in the bottle green suit, is Dr. Ward, of Albany. The spot that the president has chosen for his vacation is the most secluded portion of the Adirondack wilderness, twenty-four miles away from the nearest railroad station. The log cottage which the presidential couple in one day was constructed by the guides thereabout in the winter season. On the ground floor are a sitting room and a bedroom, and above the latter is the room occupied by Mrs. Folsom. Here is a picture of democratic simplicity for you. The bench outside the back door with the pail of water and tin dipper by its side is inviting, but wooden buttons are on the doors instead of knobs, the bedsteads are made of pine and bark, the quaint furniture, the strips of rag carpet on the floor all remind the president that he is many miles from the White House and its anxieties. The whole cabin and its contents, which the president and his wife purchased, as if it could be duplicated for $300. Quite a contrast this with the palatial mansion which they left behind in Washington with its expenses of over $100,000 a year.

THE PRESIDENT FISHING.

The president is an enthusiastic fisherman. He is said to be a splendid shot, and excelled as an adept fly thrower, which may all be, but President Cleveland will always be known as the better all around fisherman. He goes at it in a business like way. He never takes anyone nor asks any advice from guides. He listens, of course, attentively to any information offered, but in the interchange of points in the piscatorial art he is more likely to give instruction than receive it.

One of the guides who accompanied the president on a fishing trip has already approached on Davy Crockett with the following: He said that when the president first threw his line in Lake Saranac there was quite a commotion among the fish. A great trout stuck his head out of the water with a frightened look on his wet face, and asked, "Is that you, Jefferson Quitoone?" "That is my name in Cleveland." "All right, Mr. Cleveland, I am at your service." The fish leaped out of the water to the president's feet and died on a carpet machine.

This story, other guides claim, is a fabrication. They hold that the tremendous fatcher the president secures is not due to any partiality on the part of the trout, but to the skill and attention which Mr. Cleveland brings to bear on his rod. Mrs. Cleveland always takes to be fascinated with the sport, and under her husband's tutelage is quite likely to become as celebrated as he in these parts. In a report of one day's catch of trout the president is known to have had 118, while his wife is credited with 40 more of the speckled beauties. As she has had but little experience her success can be attributed to luck, but the chances are that the fish which she handles the rod should be enough to capture the most timid fish.

Next to the president's cabin is the Saranac lake, which is accommodate about seventy guests. It is owned by a company of the president's friends, who run it not to make money, but as a sort of private club house. The lakeside commands the place with affirmation.

The president left the White House on Aug. 16, and it is his intention to be back at his desk on Sept. 17. Then will the president's woolen shirts be put away where the moths cannot reach them. And the trout without fear may rest for another season.

EAVESDROPPING.

They sat together in the soft moonlight,
Upon the rustic, and gazed out o'er the lake.
He was a young, manly fellow, and she
A maiden for such a lovely girl as she.

Their mystic glow was a romantic spot,
Knowing, and the lovers thought, no other;
For, as old Shakespeare would say, they did not Think that I had made their secret all my own.

They were engaged. She'd named the happy day.
When a month they twain would be made one.
Meanwhile they spooned; and I'm ashamed to say,
I used to hide close by, and watch the fun.

This special night they sat there, slow to speak
As lovers are when they're alone, you know.
Until he drew her close and on her cheek
Impressed, as lovers will, a tender kiss.

She started, shrieked, and threw aside his suit.
Then turned away her head and sobbed, "Oh, why,
Why, darling!" he exclaimed, "what was the harm?
Whatt can't a fellow kiss his future bride?"

But still she sobbed. And then down by her side
In wild despair he knelt, and begged that she would look.
"What can I do to soothe my sweet?" he cried.
"What was the meaning of that dreadful shriek?"

She raised her head a little, dried a tear,
Then looked down into his face in sore worry;
"I think," she sobbed, "that if you really loved me, dear,
You would go off somewhere, and get a shave."

THE SEA SERPENT CORNERED.

Oh, thou serpent, dragon, demon, hibernia to common seamen, from Alaska to Van Diemen, thou last divers thy devil's work and thy length of scaly hell; but soon will doubt thy being when a committee of Gloucester and a policeman of Boston will have thee in the round and declare that they have seen thee—how thy sleepless orings and quail!

The Plainfield Electric Light Company
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications and to make contracts for incandescent lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, in each section of the resident portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed. The date at which dwelling lighting will be commenced will depend upon the number of applications for light and their location.

The supply to the business section of the city will commence on the 1st day of July, the fulfillment of the contract with the city for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in procuring the land upon which the company proposes to set the building operations, as also on account of the low bid of material which cannot be immediately replaced.

The company has decided in lieu of expending money upon a canvass for light to make a reasonable allowance which would have been used for that purpose to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first consumers engaging 500 lights, namely 300 in the business section and 200 in the resident sections.

A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Mulford, real estate and insurance agent, 35 and 37 North avenue, opposite the post office, and for two weeks from this date the company will receive application and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 8.30 a. m., and 4.30 and 5.30 p. m.

"My-Dear-Fellow" Lalou.—Hotel Netherwood Attached.

Theodore Bailey of Brooklyn, says that the story of Woodruff leaving the Netherwood stables is incorrect, that he himself rents the stables of Mr. Netherwood, a trotter stables, the hotel is known as the stables, manure, hose and grounds, until next April, and has not given up the keys and ground. Lou not the stable, to Woodruff.

Mr. Bailey says Constable Moffett visited the hotel to levy on Woodruff's lease, to satisfy claims of Andrew Albright of Newark and Theodore Bailey, constable is said to have been thus received:

"Why, my dear fellow, I am sorry that you have taken the trouble of coming over here for nothing, but I assigned the lease over a month ago to my friend Mrs. Churchill. Won't you have a cigar?"

The constable said that, nevertheless, he would levy on the property and proceed to sell by law—even if he took a cigar to soothe his nerves.

Another story is told by a Front street merchant who we are informed met Woodruff on Front street a few days ago and demanded the payment of a bill of some $800, and is reported to have received this reply:

"Why, my dear fellow, that account is as good an investment as if it was in a gold mine. Just wait a little longer, old boy, and you will get the principal and interest sure, also a splendid investment. Just think of it."

The merchant's vision must have greatly fascinated that he would be thankful for the principal and never mind the interest, but the only fact connected with the transaction at this time insult him, as he departed with all the airs of a swaller.

The proprietors of the hotel are reported to receive their pay a week in advance, fearing that the slippery lord of the manor will take "French leave" of them, with his exquisite chivalrous pose, in coaxing the "my-dear-fellow" to pay the bill—"settlement" on them, and they don't think they can afford to be inculted that way.

Many people and officials are looking to secure the fee of the $200 for the license granted this "dear fellow," whom, we think, will still remain in Plainfield, however the "Princes of Tricksters I" Our merchants have been insulted. Are we to permit our city to be swindled by a "Prince of Tricksters" "my-dear-fellow" wouldn't be so naughty. Spurn the thought! But it should be seen to all the same that the city is not swindled by him.

Since the above was written the following has been received:

Mr. Woodruff on Tuesday levied on the interest of one of the mortgagees in Hotel Netherwood, in favor of Theodore Bailey, attorney for Bridget Meehan. This is understood to be an effort on the part of Woodruff to defeat the transfer of the property on Oct 1, 1886. Woodruff is accused of instigating Miss Meehan on to furnish the money to the widow of Cherfly at Montreal, Canada, are reported bidding for the property for an educational institution, and the interest of Woodruff is understood to be one of Woodruff's methods to use opposing interests as catspaws to hold on for himself.

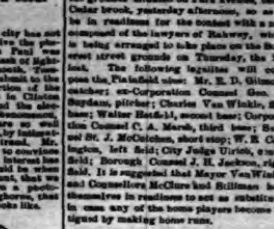
Electricians and Scientists Unable to Explain the Phenomenon Except It as Untrue.

Electrician Leo Daft of this city has not yet ceased in his endeavors to solve the phenomenon whereby Miss Lillian Paul was photographed on a tray by a flash of lightning, as we detailed in full last month. Mr. Daft has borrowed the tray to submit to the examination of the electrical section of the American Institute which met in Clinton Hall, New York, Saturday, and the electricians present were unable to explain the result. Miss Paul, family, who are so well known and highly respected here, by intimating that the picture was produced by Mr. Daft's representative was unable to convince them to the contrary. So much interest has been aroused in the matter that we have had the cut, published the original account, that we give below an illustration from a photograph of it made by Mr. Longacre, that our readers may know what it looks like.



THE LIGHTNING PHOTOGRAPH.

To greasy public curiosity in the phenomenon, which is still regarded the only case on record, Miss Paul has consented to have the tray to the Job Male Art Gallery, and in its at event it will probably be on exhibition the next week.

The phenomenon, it will be remembered, occurred at Mrs. Paul's residence on Fourth street, Monday, July 19, 1886, during which the lightning did other queer things in this vicinity besides the one referred to, having torn the plastering from the wall in an upper bedroom in the residence of Manning Wells of Crescent avenue, and rent the piazza about town destroying a number of them. The strangest of all was that it was a most remarkable storm, without knowing of its most remarkable feature—its photographing of Miss Paul, at whose home lightning played upon a lacquered tray which stood upon a little stand in a bay window. The figures surface was brilliantly polished, and had been hammered to resemble alligator hide. The lightning lit this tray in flashes of rather alarming brilliancy. Miss Lillian thought she would remove it to a darker part of the room. As she was about to do so an overwhelming sheet of light came that blinded and startled her. The tray gleamed as if it had been ablaze. She seized it in a hurry, threw a cover over it and put it under the table. Then she left the room.

Next morning a perfect picture of the young lady was found on the photographed upon the tray. It was produced by the brass surface of the tray beneath it having been dulled and darkened to a deep buff color. It was a profile picture, and where her eyes and the brass was left bright and shining, the surface being here untouched, as is indicated in the illustration.

Miss Paul had been sitting in a rocker reading, while waiting for a belated servant girl to prepare supper. Mr. Mansfield, a family visitor, had come some time before when the freak occurred, and not being a sawy kind of girl, the discovery was made. But still it is all very clear. We only know it is very remarkable.

But this is now the electricians above referred to test this matter, it was exhibited for Mr. Daft by his friend, George M. Mansfield. It was covered with glass and enclosed in a red velvet frame. After it had been passed around and examined by every body, the exhibitor explained by means of a diagram how he thought the picture of Miss Paul when, as he said, the picture was produced. Miss Paul stood in a bay window," he said, "and a little table in the middle of the room on which was the tray. The figure on the tray, he added, bore quite a resemblance to Miss Paul's profile, sufficiently so to be recognizable.

Mr. Mansfield had finished, somebody called attention to a jarring way to the "negative" outline of the figure being in the "positive" picture of the face. Lightning, he thought, would be less accurate.

Prof. Hunter Weyde, the well-known electrician, was there before the lightning flash, but hadn't been noticed.

Dr. Mason, a photographer, stepped up and said that the lightning must have produced the picture.

Mr. Mansfield then asked how the picture was produced. "Let somebody offer an explanation," he said.

"That's easy enough," said Prof. Vander Weyde, "it's a picture of paper cut in the shape of a profile lay on the tray long enough to light produce the picture by means of daylight."

Dr. Mason didn't want the society to accept the lightning flash as a theory before long he exhibited in a flower conservatory.

Mr. Mansfield said the picture was no more produced by lightning than by electricity, long its production, he said, were made in good faith by responsible persons.

Prof. Vander Weyde said that it was not possible to doubt Mr. Mansfield's story of the picture, Prof. Vander Weyde said; "Professor Daft has brought before the society a picture which is the best experience of any electrician present to believe the lightning produced it. I cannot accept such a picture under the conditions described."

C. O. Matthews tried to demonstrate with the aid of a diagram how the lightning could have produced the picture, and somebody else made another attempt to explain, but the society, as a whole, remained profoundly stock enthusiasm.

A gentleman said it was not necessary for the society to take any measure or explain the matter. "All it need do was to thank Mr. Mansfield for bringing it to the society," he said.

"There's no mystery about it," Prof. Vander Weyde added.

Mr. Mansfield was thanked, all the same, and the discussion concluded peacefully.

Thorn, the photographer of this city, has been called to produce like results. We have received a letter from the Newark Tray Company in which they say: "We have seen the tray and will explain the probable cause of the phenomenon, when the scientists have finished."

"The" Ball Match of the Season.

The various lawyers of this city and North Plainfield had a practice game of ball on the grounds situated on Park avenue, below Cedar brook, yesterday afternoon, so as to be in readiness for the contest with a nice company of the lawyers of Rahway, which is being arranged to take place on the Somerset street grounds on Thursday, the 23d inst. The following legalites will compose the Plainfield nine: Mr. E. D. Gilmore, catcher; ex-Corporation Counsel Gen. P. Sayden, pitcher; Charles Van Winkle, 2d base; Walter Barrett, short stop; Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, third base; Counsel Sr. J. McCutchen, short stop; W. B. Coddington, left field; City Judge Uriah, center field; Borough Counsel J. H. Jackson, right field. It is suggested that Mayor VanWinkle and Counsellors McGraw and Sullivan be put in readiness to act as substitutes in case any of the home players become fatigued by making home runs.

Held for Assault and Battery.

William Keaney, a well known character of East Front street, has been in the habit of spending Sunday by badly abusing his wife when drunk. He has already served two years in State Prison for beating her and was but recently liberated from the the county jail at Elizabeth where he served a term for disorderly conduct. Yesterday he again showed his ugly nature and a warrant for his arrest. Chief Dodd arrested him and he was arraigned before the City Judge, who held him in default of $100 to await the action of the Grand Jury. Keaney was taken to the Elizabeth jail yester day afternoon.

Entries for the Dog Show.

The following is a list of the entries in the more important classes at the Waverly dog show: Mastiffs, 2; St. Bernards, 54; Newfoundlands, 5; greyhounds, 10; foxhounds, 9; pointers, 52; English setters, 44; black-and-tan terriers, 15; Irish setters, 18; field spaniels, 6; cocker spaniels, 27; collies, 28; beagles, 27; pugs, 10; bull terriers, 17; fox terriers, 34; entries in the black-and-tan, Irish, Skye, Bedlington and other terrier classes.

Westfield.

William Hart has returned with his family this week, after a seven weeks' absence at Beulah, N. J.

Mrs. Sarah Williams, aged seventy years, died on Thursday at the residence of her son, Abram Williams, on Broad street.

Chief Traynor ordered the fire department out for a 6.30 last night. While trying the fire well on the corner of Broad street and Mountain avenue some one set fire to a heap of leaves in front of Jarmon Pinckney and gave them a chance to try the engine, but the success was poor.

The public school will open on Monday. Prof. J. A. Dumont has been re-elected principal, with Miss Linnie Snyder as vice-principal, and Miss M. A. Howe as principal of the primary department. Four new teachers, Miss Emma A. Gilman of Perth Amb. y, Miss Maggie M. Sandler of Princeton, Miss Jennie H. Everett of Branchville and Miss Carrie Moorehouse of Cranford, have been engaged at a salary of $400 each, and are graduates of the State Normal school.

THE MAINE CAMPAIGN

GROWING RED HOT AND ALL HANDS ARE AT WORK.

A LARGE VOTE IS EXPECTED.

The Democrats Issue a Personal Appeal to Make a Rush on the Home Stretch.

The Labor Advocate Opposes the Republican Stirring Their Forces—The Prohibitionists Active.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—The following circular has been issued by the Democratic state committee. It is dated at the headquarters at Waterville:

DEAR SIR: We have before us the entire canvass of the state, and we confidently assert to you that the reapportionation shows beyond a doubt that the state can be wrested from the grip of the Blaine, Manly and Boutwell gang, the control of that machine by the people will do its duty from now until the polls close on Monday next.

The Republican army of imported speakers, who know nothing of the wants of the people of Maine, and care less, have tried and will try to divert the attention of the voters with the issue of protective tariff, which will not take care of the state, but which will take care of the poor. Thus far their delusions and sophistries have failed to arrest the intentions of the people from doing their duty at the polls.

From the 510 cities and towns in the state comes to us the cheering evidence that the people are thoroughly aroused. To this fact such opportunity has presented itself to the voters of Maine since it became a state. Elect men to the senate and legislature who favor the repeal of the law, the payment of debt; the trustee process, and those who will vote for the passage of the ten hour law for the working people.

Beware of candidates placed in nomination by the Republican party, who loudly proclaim to be friends of the workingmen. They are mortgaged before they are nominated. Learn from the votes of the Democratic senate in 1885, when twenty-five of the thirty-one senators voted against and defeated the ten hour bill.

The Republicans also failed to repeal the law for imprisonment for debt and trustee process when the house and senate were overwhelmingly Republican. You cannot trust them now. Temperance men have been deceived by the silver-tongued orators. Workingmen can expect nothing but promises for their votes. The time has come for Democrats, workingmen, temperance men and honest voters to rebuke this great moral party whose morality consists in making promises before election and breaking them afterward. We send this appeal to 2,700 men like yourself, covering the state from Kittery in York, to Madawaska in Aroostook, and we wish to impress upon you the importance of your work. The change of one vote by each one receiving this letter will effect the total of 5,400. You can afford to make a personal sacrifice to bring about this result. We trust you will do so. Let nothing prevent you from sending. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. We have begun the work on Tuesday next with pleasure. It is for you to win the state. Do so by an overwhelming majority. Rally now for victory. Yours respectfully,

EDWARD S. BROWN,
Chairman of State Committee.

THE LABOR ADVOCATE

Keeps Forty-Three Names Constantly Before its Readers.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—For months The Labor Advocate, of this city, has been publishing weekly the names of the twenty-three representatives and twenty senators who voted against the ten hour bill at the last session of the legislature, and has advised all workingmen to spot these legislators and see that they never have another chance to defeat a much needed law. Every one of the forty-three, as it curiously happens, is a Republican.

Only three of the senators in the list have been renominated, namely: Messrs. Cole, Wescott and Libbey. The latter is obnoxious to the Prohibitionists also, and his defeat is not impossible, though the Knights are much less numerous in Portland than in Cumberland. It is beyond doubt true that other senators who would have been candidates for re-election to the senate are those who would have asked to be returned to their old places or promoted to the senate abandoned hope when they learned of the intention of the workingmen, and found that the vote would mean so onerous that they could not think of going to Augusta next winter.

The senators from Waldo and Somerset, Mr. Hall and Mr. Cleaves, are not candidates this head, and so do a number of representatives. This is a substantial victory for the workingmen as well as for the paper, which has been standing for months by the names of those whom it calls the men "who betrayed their trust, and either through ignorance, lack of independence or willful design voted against the wives, mothers, sisters and children of their constituents to please a few grasping mill owners."

THE REPUBLICANS ACTIVE.

Seeking to Rally Their Full Vote on Monday Next.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 11.—Reports from county and city committees all over the state indicate that a close canvass has been made of all the districts and towns in the state and victory for the party is confidently predicted.

Mr. Blaine has been at work with more than usual energy and his influence is counted upon to bring out the full party vote. There are a number of heavy weights on the stump from outside the state, and last night and to-day meetings have been held in many of the principal cities in the state. The protective tariff issue has been worked for all it is worth, and has been made a leading feature in the campaign.

The administration's treatment of the fisheries dispute has been used in the coast towns, where many men and considerable capital are employed in the fishing industry, and is counted upon to secure a strong vote at these places. All sources of information point to a Republican victory.

The Prohibitionists.

BATH, Me., Sept. 11.—Never in the history of the Prohibition party have such efforts been made to poll a large vote as in the present campaign in this state. The leading orators, including Mr. St. John and George W. Bain and others, have made personal appeals to the members of the party to stand by their candidates. It is claimed by the managers that the largest vote ever cast in the state will be polled on Monday next. It is said that Prohibition vote will be increased over that of any former election. The fight has been a fierce one, and the result is looked for with great expectations by all parties.

At His Father's Home.

DARMSTADT, Sept. 11.—Prince Alexander has arrived here. He was received by the secretary of the British legation in Germany and the burgomaster of Darmstadt and proceeded directly to Jugenheim, his father's residence.

SHREWD TOBACCO MEN

Beat the Government on the Matter of Stamps.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The controversy between the internal revenue bureau and certain tobacco manufacturers as to the right to put on the market two one-and-a-half ounce packages of smoking tobacco wrapped in paper and bound together with a three-cent stamp, at an internal revenue tax of one cent, has been decided in favor of the manufacturers. The object of the plan of making a five-cent package of smoking tobacco originated with a firm in New Orleans, who promptly patented it.

When the internal revenue officers ruled that such packages were in violation of law, and ordered their seizure, this firm obtained from a local court an injunction against the assessor restraining him from the discharge of section 3,234, revised statutes, which says: "No suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court." The commissioner of internal revenue, on learning of the injunction, immediately ordered the district attorney to remove the proceedings to the United States courts, but a difficulty in the way of carrying out these instructions was found in the fact that from June to November in each year, in Louisiana, the United States courts are seldom in session there.

Meanwhile the firm had their injunction and shrewdly calculated to flood the market with five cent packages put up two under one stamp, and, by their patent, they expected to prevent any other manufacturer doing the same thing. This created a considerable amount of excitement in the trade, but at last some of the other manufacturers made the discovery that there was nothing in the law to prevent their selling one and a half ounce packages of smoking tobacco for five cents without any stamp at all, provided they retailed it from a wooden box duly stamped and branded. This plan is now being generally adopted, and the revenue officers say, under the terms of the law, it seems to be fully authorized.

INFANTICIDE CONFESSED.

The Way a New Haven Mother Disposed of Her Child.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 11.—Ella Matthews, an unmarried woman, residing in Fair Haven, gave birth to a child about five days ago. Very shortly after the birth she killed the infant, but it is said that she did not intend to. She then placed the body in a small box and secreted it in the cellar of the house in which she lives. The fact soon became that the other actresses noticed it. Victoria, who heard the remarks passed upon his presence, said in a moment of confidence that he had buried it in the yard in front of the house in the dearest friend I have. You cannot imagine how good he has been. Had it not been for him I should have died."

Saturday, Sept. 29, Mrs. Schilling, McLellan and Mr. Morosini's lawyers held a meeting that lasted nearly all day. At this meeting it was settled that Victoria should leave her husband and return to the parental roof. After all was arranged Victoria and McLellan left the place of meeting in a cab and drove to the Morosini residence and entered the house. Victoria remaining in the cab. He soon returned carrying a small bag. From the hotel they drove to the depot of the Long Island railroad. That night Victoria bid McLellan good-by and returned to her home at No. 246 West Thirty-ninth street. McLellan went to Bath, Me.

Upon a plea of disability Victoria secured a leave of absence for ten days from the Casino. Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 1, she had been seen at the theatre by any of the company.

Victoria arrived at her father's residence alone. She was received quietly and has been within the walls of the Morosini residence ever since.

That a divorce from Schilling will be obtained is unquestioned. That the husband will receive $15,000 or any other sum is only known by the persons immediately concerned. Young McLellan has gone on an extended vacation to Europe, and will probably visit Paris and the old home he left when a boy and cast again. In talking to a friend before she reached home Victoria said: "Two weeks after I was married I regretted it. When we went to Europe I was so homesick I had to come back. My life has been miserable ever since."

It was on the afternoon of Sept. 9, 1885, that Victoria, knowing that Ernest Schilling, her father's discharged coachman, was to visit the premises next to hers for the purpose of removing a horse, had been discharged because a growing intimacy was discovered between Victoria and himself. He returned that afternoon to collect some money that one of the employes owed him. Looking from a window, Mrs. Morosini saw her daughter kiss the ex-coachman. When Victoria returned home she was severely upbraided for her conduct. "I never want to see you again," Mrs. Morosini told her daughter. Victoria took her at her word. Quickly she ran up stairs, caught up her jewels and $25, and dressed only in a light wrapper she ran down the road and met her lover. "How far we walked," she afterward said, in narrating her experience, "I do not know. It was ever so far. At last we arrived at a small station and took the train for New York. Arriving there we were married. Then for a week we were hid in a room at the home of Ernest's relatives. How I suffered God only knows. From that moment to this I wished I was home again.

"After coming from Europe I decided to go on the stage. First I sang in concert, after which I went into burlesque. Finally I was engaged at the Casino.

"But the life I was leading was killing me, so said a few days ago. "Although Ernest was very kind, his friends were not the kind of people to whom I had been accustomed. I became a prey to my conscience. For days and days at a time I would do nothing but weep. I must have been crazy the day I ran away. One day I saw my father on the street and I almost fainted. He did not see me and I returned home. A few days afterwards I saw him again and he saw me, but neither of us said a word. How I longed to rush into his arms."

Rioting National Banks.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The comptroller of the currency yesterday fined five national banks $100 each for violation of the law relating to his call for monthly reports. These banks, the comptroller says, will be fined $100 each for each and every day that they are delinquent in making reports. Five banks were calls. The banks fined have been in default on three preceding calls, and the comptroller has determined to make an example of them by enforcing the law. He feels that in not imposing the fine at this time, because it is of such importance that the national bank reports shall be made promptly in response to the next call, as the delinquent reports are the ones he will use in making up his annual report to congress.

A Dairy Barn Burned.

ENFIELD, Conn., Sept. 11.—The large stock barn at T. B. Grant's Long View dairy farm was burned yesterday. A number of thoroughbred Ayrshire cows and a very valuable bull perished in the flames. The property was insured.

Boucher's Accounts Correct.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Capt. Boucher is at Fort Townsend. His accounts are correct to a penny. The treasury officials say the rumor to the contrary is a canard.

IS VIC AT HOME?

THE LATEST PHASE OF A MUCH MOOTED CONUNDRUM.

New York People Cannot Rest Until They Know What Has Become of the Missing Singer, Booher's Daughter, Ex-Coachman's Ex-Wife.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—It was definitely ascertained yesterday that a reconciliation had taken place between G. F. Morosini and his daughter Victoria and that she is now in her father's house, whither she went upon leaving the house of Schilling. It is the city twelve days ago. A little less than two years of life with the man for whom she had forsaken home and luxury had apparently taught her a bitter lesson, and she sadly, and it required but little persuasion to induce her to return home.

The chief agent in bringing about the reconciliation was Gen. H. McLellan, and it was only exchanged several conferences between Victoria and her father's lawyers. The last took place the Sunday before her disappearance, and it is said by those who were present that she was finally forgiven and agreed to return to her home. At the same time all the arrangements for her doing so, as well as the manner in which it should be done, were settled.

McLellan is a friend of the Morosini family, and he was well known by Victoria before she married Schilling. He had always been more or less attentive to her, and by some it is said he was very much in love with her, but he had never declared it. He was the first to discover the unhappiness of the young wife, and that she was unhappy in two weeks after she married Schilling is an undoubted fact.

He met Victoria in this city frequently after she married Schilling, and it was then he was not long before she poured into his sympathetic ear the tale of her unhappiness. He was well aware that her father, who had forgotten his anger at her elopement, would be pleased that she should return to his home, and when he told her that a reconciliation could be brought about easily if she desired it Victoria willingly placed the matter in his hands. He then became constant in his attendance upon her. Night after night he sat in the front parlor of the house in which she lived, and became that the other actresses noticed it. Victoria, who heard the remarks passed upon his presence, said in a moment of confidence that he had buried it in the yard in front of the dearest friend I have. You cannot imagine how good he has been. Had it not been for him I should have died."

Rioting National Banks.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The comptroller of the currency yesterday fined five national banks $100 each for violation of the law relating to his call for monthly reports. These banks, the comptroller says, will be fined $100 each for each and every day that they are delinquent in making reports. Five banks were calls. The banks fined have been in default on three preceding calls, and the comptroller has determined to make an example of them by enforcing the law. He feels that in not imposing the fine at this time, because it is of such importance that the national bank reports shall be made promptly in response to the next call, as the delinquent reports are the ones he will use in making up his annual report to congress.

AN APPEAL TO CATHOLICS

For Funds to Aid the Charleston Sufferers.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 10, 1886.

Rev. and Dear Sir:—In this hour of her distress the stricken city of Charleston appeals to our pity and to our practical charity. We cannot better convey to you the sad story of her misfortune than by the reading of a telegram received from St. Rev. Bishop Northrop: "Everything wrecked, churches, convents, schools, residences totally destroyed. Ruin impossible to describe. Homes, priests, orphans camping out. We need all the assistance we can get. It is our bounden duty to come forward promptly to the succor of the victims of this terrible calamity, to assist those whose miseries are so great and whose wants are so pressing. A collection will, therefore, be taken up on the last Sunday of September, or the first in October, in all the churches of the archdiocese for the relief of the sufferers. Please read this letter on the Sunday following its reception and on the day appointed for the collection, and urge the members of your flock to give willingly and generously. We trust that each of our faithful children will be mindful of the Divine Master's words: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." If thou have little, take care even so to bestow willingly a little."

Please send the proceeds of the collection to the chancellor of the archdiocese. Very faithfully yours in Christ,

JAMES, CARDINAL GIBBONS,
Archbishop of Baltimore.

BACK FROM GREENLAND.

The Narrow Escape of a Fisherman From Icebergs.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 11.—The schooner Herbert M. Rogers, which sailed from here May 5 for Greenland, has returned. Capt. Vale states that he reached Lagtogale, Greenland, July 3. This place is in latitude 65 degrees. His passage was made hazardous by extensive fields and floebergs of ice. The weather was stormy. Owing to the coast being ice-bound halibut were scarce. The Rogers next sailed for Godthaab, but the ice prevented her getting in to her stop and said that a Danish man-of-war was patrolling the coast to prevent Americans from fishing or dealing with the natives.

It was claimed that the treaty between the United States and Denmark forbade American from such traffic. The Rogers went further south, to Holsteborg, and met with scarcity of halibut there. Capt. Vale was warned that his vessel would be seized if found there again. Halibut was scarce in that vicinity. The highest point reached by the Rogers was Cape Amsdin, in latitude 66. There was no halibut there, and, being in constant fear of seizure, Capt. Vale decided to come home. He left Aug. 17. On the way home he met many icebergs, and had some narrow escapes from collision with them, but on the whole had good weather. His report was marked "In ballast," but he had 1,000 pounds of halibut. The principal part of the cargo of the Rogers consists of 100,000 pounds of fetched halibut. Capt. Vale saw nothing of the schooner Seth Stockbridge, which sailed from here June 1 for Greenland, and has not been heard of since. It is feared that she has been lost in the ice.

A Child's Fatal Plaything.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 11.—The 1-year-old child of Mr. George W. Bailey, of Lancaster, S. C., met with a sad death a few days ago. Mrs. Bailey was in the room engaging to feed the cows, and put the child in a box near by. In a short time she was attracted by its screams, and rushing to it found it bitten by a snake in some pleasure, one of which was on the lip. It is supposed the child picked the snake up as it crawled to the box. The vacated home of Mr. Bailey, which was killed, and the child died in a few hours.

Up in a Balloon.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 11.—Miss Lulu Bates, of Cincinnati, made an ascension in a gas balloon from the fair grounds and came near losing her life. When five miles north and three miles above the earth she attempted to descend. The grappling hook caught, but the anchorage was broken by a strong wind, which carried her among some trees, where the basket was torn. The hooks gave way again and she shot up 300 feet, when the balloon suddenly burst and the basket fell. She had the presence of mind to throw herself firmly across the top of the basket and saved her life. She was badly jarred, however.

Accident to Bicyclists.

ITHACA, Sept. 11.—About twenty members of the League of American Wheelmen, who started from Buffalo on the 6th inst. for Harper's Ferry, passed through this city to-day en route here at 7 o'clock last night. In descending the steep hill leading to the village two of the party, Messrs. Warner and Dakin, took headers, the former escaping with a bruised face, but the latter was thrown under the chin. Dakin struck on the right side of his forehead, sustaining concussion of the brain and probably fracture of the skull. Dakin never lies in an unconscious and critical condition. The remainder of the party, except one or two, who will stay here to care for the injured, left for New York.

Six Persons Drowned.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 11.—A letter from Franklin Bun, Ga., says the Chattahoochee river accident near that place by which six persons lost their lives. A party consisting of the wife and child of Roy Turney, two sons of John Nelson, Miss Lizzie Hood and a man named Hood were fording Greene river in a wagon when the horses became frightened and ran down stream into deep water. The wagon turned over and all of the occupants could swim the entire party were drowned.

Pennsylvania Politics.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 11.—The Prohibition state committee has selected A. A. Stevens, of Blair county, as chairman in place of H. D. Paine, who had declined to serve. Stevens was the recovery candidate of his selection by less than a majority of the recent state convention.

Mr. Wolfe, Prohibition candidate for governor, spoke here last night.

The Count All In.

The returns for the legislature stand: Edmunds Republicans, 195; anti-Edmunds Republicans, 5; straight Republicans, 45; Prohibition Republicans, 2; straight Democrats, 39; Edmunds Democrats, 4.

Liability of Guarantee Companies.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—Judge Taschereau has decided that guarantee companies are not liable for the amount of their guarantee in cases of defalcation unless served with notice of such defalcation immediately upon its being discovered.

A Son of President Tyler.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Secretary Lamar has appointed John Tyler, son of the late President Tyler, as chief of the private land claims division of the general land office.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE GALATEA CRITICISED.

All Parties Hoping that To-Day's Wind Will Behave Better Than It Did Thursday—Boats Entered for the Newport Races.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The sloop Mayflower and the cutter Galatea were lying at anchor off the cutter Stevens Point Ferry Ridge, with sails hung up to dry and the water washed off their decks this morning. The Mayflower arrived previous day's log. The Mayflower arrived at the anchorage at 10 o'clock Thursday morning; the Galatea did not get there until 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The anchored outside of the Hook Thursday night at about 10 o'clock. The Mayflower, night at about 10 o'clock. The Mayflower, after the time limit of seven hours had expired Thursday afternoon took in all sail and started running under easy sail, under the skilful pilotage of "Joe" Ellsworth, arrived at the Scotland lightship at 8:30, and there secured a buoy, which, by the mutual consent of the Hook Thursday

THE RICHMOND CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON STATUE—THE ORIGIN OF THE CONFEDERATE SEAL

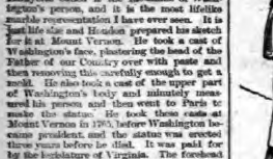
Told by Its Inventor—Gossip About John Randolph of Roanoke—and His Drunken Eccentricities—His Granite Tomb in Hollywood Cemetery—His Slave.

[Special Correspondence.]

RICHMOND, August.—The Capitol at Richmond is one of the oldest buildings in this country. It stands in the center of the city and is surrounded by a rolling park filled with fine old trees in which the gray squirrels chirp and the birds sing. These squirrels run about over the state house lawn. They crawl into the baskets of people who set them down for a moment while they chat with their neighbors; and I saw a lady feeding almost out of her hand one of these little creatures as I stooped down and held a bit of cracker in her hand which the squirrel nibbled at though it had been accustomed to the society of ladies all its life. The Capitol at Richmond was laid after a model selected by Thomas Jefferson, and it looks somewhat like the old Roman temple at Nimes, France, known as the Maison Carree, for corner stone was laid thirteen years after the Declaration of Independence was signed, and it now contains some of the oldest records in this country.

THE CAPITOL AT RICHMOND.

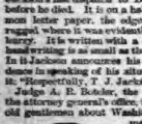
In its halls Jefferson, Madison and Monroe have spoken, and nearly every noted Virginian has sat in them as a member of the state legislature during the time it was the capitol building of the Confederate states. The Confederate congress sat in it and every atom of its old masonry is filled with history. Washington is to be found in the center and rear of a rotunda, in the center of which there is a statue of Washington by Houdon, and this statue is said to be the best ever made of him. Lafayette called it the face-mantle of Washington's person, and it is the most lifelike marble representation I have ever seen. It is just life size and Houdon prepared his sketch for it at Mount Vernon in 1785, before Washington became president, and the statue was erected three years before he died. It was paid for by the legislature of Virginia. The forehead of this Washington is not so high as those of Stuart's pictures. His receding rather than full, and the whole man does not seem to be the giant represented by other painters.



HOUDON'S STATUE OF WASHINGTON.

In this rotunda of the Richmond capitol there is an old stove made of iron which is said to be one of the oldest stoves in existence. It was made a present to the colony of Virginia in 1620 and was spoken of at that time as a warming machine. It is seven feet high and has as much ornamentation as a Queen Anne house. What is now the Virginia senate chamber is occupied during the war as the Confederate house of representatives. The Confederate senate was on the second floor, but its hall has now been cut up in rooms for the governor. On the first floor below this is the hall of the house of delegates, where Aaron Burr was tried before Chief Justice Marshall for treason and where the state government convened in 1861. Pictures of Chatham and Jefferson hang upon the walls and the delegates sit with a little old fashioned desk in front of each one of them. On the opposite side of the rotunda on the second floor is the state library which has 55,000 volumes and the walls of which are hung with curiosities. Here is Stonewall Jackson's last dispatch to Lee, written just before he died. It is on a half sheet of common letter paper, the edges of which are ragged, and the writing looks as if it was in a hurry. It is written with a pencil, and the hand writing is as small as that of a woman. In it Jackson announces his trust in Providence in spite of his wounds, and signed it: "Respectfully, T. J. Jackson."

Judge A. E. Botelor, the pardon clerk of the attorney general's office, is one of the most old gentlemen about Washington who have made a great deal of history. He was a representative from Virginia in the United States congress at the opening of the war, and during the rebellion he was a member of the Confederate congress. He is a man of fine education and great literary attainments. He was chairman of the house committee on finance of the Confederate congress which designed the Confederate flag, and he himself was the designer of the seal of the Confederate States of America. This seal consists of a picture of Washington on horseback, surrounded by a wreath made up of the agricultural products of the south.



CONFEDERATE SEAL.

I asked Judge Botelor to select this design. He replied: "At the time the Confederate seal was discussed there were many ideas proposed for it, and some of these were very ridiculous. Some of the more ignorant of the Confederate congress were opposed to having any Latin words upon the seal, and I remember one delegate who objected to the Latin as a dead language. Judah P. Benjamin had, at this time, proposed that a new plan be adopted in the naming of the money systems of the south, and that the unit or dollar be called by the name of 'Cavalier' instead of dollar. This took very well, and there was great talk for some time of the cavaliers, of cavaliers and quarters of cavaliers, which were to represent the money of the south. It was during this discussion that one night I was walking in company with Mr. Preston past the statue of Washington in the capitol grounds at Richmond. We were talking of the war and of politics, and when Preston made some remark about the statue it struck me at once that Washington was the ideal cavalier of America, and that his figure would make an appropriate design for the Confederate seal. I had an artist of Richmond draw a design from it, and this design was sent off to London to James M. Mason, who was the Confederate minister there. He had the seal made by Wyatt, the man who has for years made the great seals of England, and it was sent back to the Confederate government.

Judge Botelor tells me that the scrap book of designs which I spoke of about a year ago as existing in the war department, contains flag ideas for a Confederate flag, comprises only a small amount of the large number which were received. Said he: "We received very many designs at Montgomery, and when it was found that the first flag was not distinguishable from the Union flag in battle, and a second one was proposed, designs came in by the bushel daily, and we had altogether as many as would have filled a packing box big enough to hold a piano top. A great many of these designs came from England. Many of them were by ladies, and some were made of satin and silk of various colors. Some were very ridiculous, and out of all symmetry or propriety. Many had the idea of the cross upon them, and the words, 'Don't tread on me, it is certain death,' and others were made up of the moon, stars and all the signs of the zodiac put up in different shape and fashion."

John Randolph, of Roanoke, now repose in the Hollywood cemetery at Richmond. I visited his tomb the other day. It is in the new part of the cemetery, far away from those of Presidents Monroe and Tyler. It consists of an immense slab of granite, five feet wide and seven feet long. This slab is about a foot thick, and it rests upon a base flat upon the ground. A smooth granite wall round at the top and about eight inches high surrounds the lot, which is about nine inches, and on the slab is the inscription:

JOHN RANDOLPH, OF ROANOKE,
Born June 2, 1773,
Died June 24, 1833.

His remains were removed from Charlotte county, West Virginia, to this spot Dec. 13, 1879.

And this is all that is left of John Randolph. Descended from Powhattan through his several times great grandmother Pocahontas, he stalked in upon the stage of American history proud of his Indian descent. He was endowed with great natural ability, and he had opportunities for the best of educations. He went to half a dozen noted colleges, including Princeton, but he said he learned but little of education in any of them. He studied law with Edmund Randolph, who was Washington's attorney general, and he was a member of congress when he was 25. John Randolph was a curious looking fellow. He had high cheek bones, like his Indian ancestors, and like them he had no beard. He parted his hair in the middle and wore it like a boy from a man. When he was sworn in as a member of the house he looked so young that the authorities asked him whether he was old enough to be a congressman. He replied with dignity: "I refer you to my constituents." He was never in very good health, and during the last half of his life his customary response in answer to questions concerning his health was that he was "dying, dying, dying."

JOHN RANDOLPH IN ENGLAND.
(From an old cut.)

John Randolph is said to have been very tall and thin, with a short body and long legs and arms. His long, bony fingers run down into history from the way he used to point them at his enemies in congress. His forehead and his face were the parts of his body which he used most in gesticulation, and it is said that his finger seemed to have no bone in it when he thus used it. After it had accomplished what it had been called into action for it would fall over on the back of his hand as limp as a string. Randolph's eye was very bright and piercing, and I find that nearly all of the men who knew him about him speak of its wonderful brilliancy. He had delicate feet and he often patted these on the floor while he was speaking. He drew up his feet when walking, and did not throw them forward boldly. He walked like an Indian and he dressed like an English dude. He was fastidious about his clothes, and he wore the most fantastically fashionable apparel. He had a remarkably shrill voice, but it was soft and flute like and of great carrying power. No one ever spoke of Randolph's voice as loud, all about him hear and his voice went to the most remote corners of the large audiences which he addressed. He was a good singer and was fond of music. He drank a great deal at times and there are some authorities who believe that his insanity and eccentricity were largely the result of drinking.

He was never married, but in his letters, which I have read very carefully, he often refers to his love, and it is said that his sweetheart married another Randolph, the son of Edmund Randolph who was secretary of state under Washington. This girl's name was Maria Ward and it is said that Randolph was engaged to her for some years when the engagement was broken off. Randolph left the presence of his sweetheart very angrily, and that so much so that he would not stop to get on the halter strap which fastened his horse to the fence. He whipped out his knife and cut it off and then galloped away. This matter was not definitely settled, however, for Randolph was

JOTTINGS.

—New Brunswick is having a slight epidemic of typhoid fever.

—The fall term of the Middlesex county courts will open at New Brunswick to-morrow.

—The third race for the Roselle Rambler's half mile championship medal took place at Roselle on Saturday.

—The Union County convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held in Elizabeth on Wednesday. It is expected that there will be a large attendance.

—Among the prizes to be drawn for at the coming fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church, is a ticket entitling the winner to a cabin passage to Europe and return.

—The Sunday School Teachers' Bible Class, the Workers' Training Class and the Evening Educational Classes of the Y. M. C. A. will be started about the first of October.

—A horse belonging to Herman Weber, left standing on West Front street this morning became frightened and ran away, wrecking the vehicle to which it was attached.

—The County Clerk's office at Elizabeth will open one evening each week for the accommodation of any foreign born citizens who wish to take out their naturalization papers.

—A lot of choice dogs belonging to the Graphic Kennel Club were brought from the South yesterday and taken to Nethermood, where they will undergo a course of training.

—Messrs. O'Donnell and Muldowney of this city will conduct a restaurant directly under the grand stand at the Waverly Fair Grounds during this week, as per advertisement.

—A china pitcher filled with beer was dropped in front of a West Front street dwelling late on Saturday evening and the pitcher was broken into fragments and the contents scattered on the pavements.

—On Monday next there will be held a regular meeting of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the house of Mrs. William Taylor on Fifth street, when business of importance will be transacted.

—Messrs. Grant and Parker conducted the usual Sunday afternoon religious meeting in the open lot on Plainfield avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets, but the meeting adjourned until next Sunday on account of rain.

—The condition of Councilman Dumont's horse, which was bitten by a dog on West Seventh street recently is but slightly improved. The animal's leg is terribly swollen and the lacerations made by the dog's teeth are left exposed.

—The State Fair at Waverly opens to-day and will continue for five days. Charles Smith of East Front street has secured stand No. 7 in the rear of the grand stand, where he invites his friends and the public generally to call and see him.

—Quite a number of persons attended the colored camp meeting at the foot of Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon, but the rain storm made them scatter before the service was concluded. But few were in attendance at the evening meeting.

—Two tramps were seen lurking around the barn at the south corner of Madison avenue and Fourth street and occupied as a bed by Farmer Mooney on West Fourth street. The men were driven from the premises but returned and were seen to emerge from the barn on Saturday.

—The case of Newton J. Smalley vs. Borough Clerk Mattison brought to recover a debt of $3.84, came up for trial before Justice Austin in the borough on Saturday afternoon. No defense was offered by the defendant, who promptly paid over the full amount of the bill, together with $1.60 costs.

—At the meeting of the Elizabeth City Council on Friday night bills to the amount of $40,000 were passed, which include the claims of the police and other employes against the city for services rendered during a period of nine months. Of this amount over $30,000 was paid out at the City Hall on Saturday.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Opening Exercises—About Five Hundred Scholars in Attendance.

The North Plainfield public school opened for the year this morning. No special program of exercises had been arranged for the occasion, but the scholars assembled in their various class rooms at nine o'clock. James McGee was the only member of the Board of Education present. He first attended the services in the primary department, and after the opening prayer and the singing of a hymn by the school entitled, "Beautiful Doula," he, in behalf of the Board of Education, welcomed the scholars and teachers back to their duties, and predicted that this would be a successful year in the history of the school. He gave the scholars as a motto "Cleanliness."

Mr. McGee next visited the High School department, and after the morning prayer and Bible reading he also addressed the scholars, and closed by giving as their motto of the school "Perfection." Mr. Ross, the principal of the school, followed Mr. McGee in a short address, and in behalf of the teachers welcomed the scholars back to school and hoped that they would make the teachers' labors in making progress over a successful one. The exercises were closed by the singing of the hymn "A wake, My Soul."

The North Plainfield school has been very successful since the erection of the new school house a few years ago. About five hundred scholars are enrolled, and a number of new applicants were received this morning.

The school building is a pretty one, two stories high, with eight class rooms, four on each floor, and has twelve teachers.

The New Special Delivery.

The Postmaster-General has issued a circular to postmasters concerning the extra postage and the extension of the special system to all post offices in the United States and to all mailable matter. The system will go into effect October 1 every postmaster will be held responsible for the immediate delivery of every article of mailable matter which may be received addressed to his office, properly stamped with a special delivery stamp. Such immediate delivery must be made, except on Sunday, when the article is directed to a person residing or having a place of business within one mile of the post office, but the postmaster will be at liberty to make such delivery beyond such limits, and to receive the compensation therefor as in any other case. The hours within which immediate delivery shall be made will be at least from seven a. m. to seven p. m., and further until the arrival of the next mail, provided that such arrival be not later than nine p. m. At third and fourth-class offices the postmaster must prepay the special delivery fee in advance of such delivery, and will be allowed the full compensation of eighty per centum of the value of all special delivery stamps on matter properly delivered from his office and recorded, as provided in the circular.

Saturday's Races.

Several friendly trial contests of speed took place on the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon about five o'clock. The first race was between Edward Waring's "Ledger" won the first heat in 2:43 and Mr. Johnson's "Jumbo" the second heat in 2.38. The deciding heats in the race were postponed until next Saturday.

The second race was between "Lady Lemona" owned by William Noble of Metuchen and "Dan," owned by Harry Watson of Netherwood. Mr. Noble's horse won.

PERSONAL.

Frank Cooper of Fanwood has returned home after an extended trip through Europe.

Mr. H. S. Barnes, a former merchant here but now of New York city, is visiting friends at New Market.

Councilman Slater and family of North Plainfield are home again after a pleasure trip to Lapsley Park.

James C. Keegan of New York city is on a week's visit to his former home on Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

Mrs. J. B. Dumont and daughter of Seventh street returned Saturday, after several months' summering elsewhere.

Toonas McCue of the Plainfield police force, will be released from active duty this week and will recuperate at various summer resorts.

Miss Addie Emmons of Chester, Morris county, has returned home after a week's visit with the family of Mr. J. L. Mundy of Ninth street.

Mr. R. R. Fairchild, the East Front street furniture dealer, is erecting two frame dwellings in the rear of his residence on Sumuel avenue, North Plainfield.

Mrs. C. M. Ryan of West Front street, together with Miss Addie Gardner, have gone to Asbury Park to join Mrs. A. Nelson and daughter, Miss Sayre, who are sojourning at the Ashland House.

Samuel C. Roney and family of East Ninth street will leave next week for their future home in Tennessee, where Mr. Roney will take charge of a branch office of the New York firm with whom he is employed, which has been established at Knoxville.

Mrs. Mary A. Murray, wife of Councilman Samuel Murray of the Eighth ward, Elizabeth, died suddenly Friday night while her husband was attending Council meeting. She was fifty-five years of age, a sister of ex-Sheriff Forsyth and a member of one of the oldest families of the city.

On Saturday evening last a few friends were entertained at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Bellemere, West Fifth street, to witness the opening of a night blooming cereus. A most enjoyable evening was spent. Music, with a few "literary" pieces, were interwoven, and suited well the genial spirit of the hour.

William Albertl, the husband of the talented Miss Albertl, and who was so seriously injured in a railroad accident on the Lake Erie road over a year ago, has so far recovered from the effects of his injuries as to be able to leave Alfred Center, New York State, where he has been confined since the accident occurred, and, he is at present stopping at Somerville.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Subscribers to The Record of Christian Work are notified that their papers are at the secretary's desk in the reading room. The September number contains a full account of the Conference of Christian Workers held in Northfield, Mass., August 6-13, Mr. D. L. Moody presiding.

The rooms of the association are clean, neatly furnished, well lighted and ventilated, have all the leading daily, weekly and monthly papers and magazines, a library of 1200 volumes, games of checkers, chess, croquinole, etc., to which all are extended a warm welcome. Every Monday evening a young men in the Hall sing songs. There will be good live singing there to-night at eight o'clock.

Of the Reception Committee of the association, since Sept. 1st, one or more members have been on duty in the rooms every evening to entertain all visitors and see that everyone who comes in has a good time and a warm welcome.

About twenty young men join the workers' training class, which was so successful last year and will be started the first of October. The class meets Monday mornings at nine o'clock and close so that all will have ample time to attend church. The efficient teacher of last year, Mr. C. T. Kissam, will conduct the class.

Sixty Days in the County Jail.

James Kelly lodged a complaint against Adam Sellhorst, charging her with having assaulted him first with a stick and later with a knife, and also charging her with using indecent language. Police Officer Lynch arrested the woman on Short Second street on Saturday afternoon and locked her up. Later in the day she was arraigned before the City Judge and sentenced to the county jail for sixty days in default of the payment of a fine of $10 and costs. The latter she was taken to Elizabeth on Saturday afternoon to serve out the sentence of the court.

Reform Club Meeting.

A small audience assembled in Reform Hall last evening at the regular weekly day evening meeting of the Reform Club. Rev. J. B. Cleaver opened the meeting with Scripture reading and prayer, after which Mr. A. W. Marshall and Rev. J. R. Adams, both of Metuchen, each made a spirited address. Miss Alice Hyer rendered a selection on the organ and Freshoiter Vanderbeek conducted the singing. President Hall made the usual closing remarks. The storm interfered with the attendance.

—The Women's Relief Corps have among our meeting notices a notice to the G. A. R and their friends.

—Judge Dyer of Rahway was to get out his fancy pacer to-day called "Jersey Lightning," but it has not yet lit.

—Allen, the stationer, says that those having books to exchange should bring them early, as later they cannot be used.

—Morris S. Flynn of New York city, who had the misfortune a few weeks ago to lose his wife is visiting with his two children on Park avenue.

—Sheriff Stiles on Friday took Alexander McClain Quinn and Richard Gerder to the State prison, the former for a term of five years and the latter for seven.

—Dr. Thiers' "Steroiatine" for the teeth and gums is rapidly coming into popular favor here as its merits become known. See his advertisement elsewhere.

—Father O'Hanlon of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, has secured Bishop O'Farrell of Trenton who will shortly, lecture in the church on "The hope of the present hour."

—Miss Burrows, whose excellent private school is the pride of the people of North Plainfield, has a notice among our educational cards, to which special attention is desired.

—The News begins to-day to publish the laws passed at the last session of the Legislature, which every one should acquaint themselves with. They will be continued daily until finished.

—Ricard Day of North avenue, who is alleged to have lost a horse by fast driving on Friday night, says the matter, whereby he will be reduced for the full value of his horse, has been amicably adjusted.

—Every Sunday throughout the coming fall and winter, there will be singing at the half-past ten o'clock Mass in St. Mary's church. It was begun again yesterday after being suspended during the heated term.

—Three men named Ward, Morley and Kelley disturbed the peaceful slumbers of the residents in the vicinity of Second and New streets late on Saturday evening, and this morning the former two were fined ten dollars each, and the last named was discharged.

—The race which was to have taken place at the Waverly Fair grounds on Saturday between Mr. Sellick's mare owned by James McKee of Park avenue, and Joseph Collier's horse, "Frank M.," has been declared off, as Mr. McKee's horse is lame. A nail has been pulled from the animal's hoof.

—The attachment against Bridget Mahan's interest in Hotel Netherwood, amounts to $1,200 and is brought by James A. Dunn, Mr. S. V. Woodruff called on us to-day to convince us that he is "more sinned against than sinning" and promised a statement with a view of setting himself right. We have forborne in the past from commenting on his acts under a belief that they would right themselves in the end, but we cannot do so longer, however, it becomes apparent that he is simply a polished rascal trying to injure our town, as he does when he injures our merchants and mechanics, we will try as we understand it to perform our duty faithfully and with without fear or favor, and we trust for the best interests of our people.

—The excursion to be given to Philadelphia by Perseverance Lodge, September 30th, promises to be an unusually large one. The committee have made a selection as to time and place, which seems excellent. Fairmount Park, one of the "lungs" of Philadelphia, is the country, will then be in the zenith of its beauty. The probable weather will be such as to enable the excursionists to visit among other objects of interest in the City of Brotherly Love, the new Masonic Temple, Cathedral of SS. Peter and St. Paul, view of the Schuylkill, the Columbia bridge and public buildings. Perseverance Lodge is composed of some of our leading business men, the medical and legal fraternity, and will no doubt always give one of the most enjoyable excursions of the season.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Stinging Letter from Mrs. Paul, Recounting Gratuitious Insult from "Soplent" Solicitors of New York.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—In your Saturday's issue I notice in your report of the proceedings of the Electrical Society of New York that "the electricians, unable to explain the phenomenon, wrote it up entirely," thereby reflecting in the most unreserved manner on my veracity.

It has been my misfortune to become the subject of a notoriety, as unsought as it is undesirable, in view of the opportunity it has given for unjust aspersions from those whose obligations in the matter should have precluded such treatment of one who, in the interests of science only, and in response to the request of Mr. Dale of the Electrical Society, permitted the examination of what is a veritable fact, despite the failure of that very sapient body to account for it.

I must confess that your published report of the meeting was a surprise to me, coming, as it did, from a body in which a number of the society, which I have reasons for publication, with which I now appear not to have been written in good faith.

As you are well aware the extraordinary fact in the case was not made patent to me, except at your urgent solicitation and greatly against my desire, as I preferred to regard it as a purely personal and family affair, and certainly never aspired to the endorsement of the before-mentioned society, valuable as no doubt it is to the scientific world, by the patrons of a "Bowery museum."

I observe with becoming gratitude that there were certain gentlemen present who doubted the propriety of offering a gratuitous insult in return for a courtesy as the only method of representing their inability to deal with the subject.

Although I have been my experience on this occasion, that to attempt to render a service to the public and the cause of science is to subject one's self to the imputation of fraud, the tray will be loaned to the Job Male Art Gallery as promised and be on view there for a few days more.

Before closing permit me to draw attention to the fact that similar phenomena though not so peculiar in nature, is evidence of which the following letter may be of interest. In the World of yesterday also I notice a kindred occurrence.

Very truly yours,

FANNIE W. PAUL.

LETTER FROM ELECTRICAL SOCIETY OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

New York, Sept. 9, 1886.

MY DEAR MISS PAUL:—Allow me, in the name of the undersigned members of the American Institute, to thank you for the loan of the plaque which has aroused so much interest in scientific circles.

The society fully appreciate the value which you would naturally attach to so unique a specimen of nature's work, and deems itself fortunate in having had the opportunity of viewing it from an intelligent standpoint, due to actual investigation.

Accept once more the thanks of the society for your kindness and favor to us.

Yours truly,

JOS. WHEELER, Sec.

SUPPOSED TO BE ANOTHER CASE.

W. L. MILLER, M. D.

Surgeon,

PORTLAND, Oregon, Aug. 25, 1886.

C. D. PAUL, Esq.,

Plainfield, N. J.

DEAR SIR:—My attention having been called to an account in the New York Tribune of August 18, 1886, of your daughter's face being photographed on a piece of slate, I became very much interested in the matter, and as I would like for you to furnish me with the results of this experiment, as I have had a similar case under consideration for some time. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am

I am yours most respectfully,

W. L. MILLER.

Frederick Warde at Music Hall.

Mr. Warde, who has been principally known in New York as the excellent leading man of the lamented John McCullough, will appear at Music Hall to-morrow night in his great success, "Virginius." The Daily San Francisco Chronicle says:

"On Thursday night Mr. Warde played 'Virginius.' It was a treats of air from the commonplace to it drywhich it is close and an wholesome atmosphere of the modern drama. It was refreshing. The tragedy of 'Virginius' is not a great work, but it gives scope for a great actor, and Warde carried it far above Sheridan Knowles—carried it into the realms of Shakespeare. John L. Sullivan has always been claimed to be the finest 'Virginius' on the stage. We have not seen him for several years, but it is unquestionable that, with all his reputation and experience, there are some scenes in which Warde is distinctly superior, if he is not in all." See adv.

—City Collector Warner of New Brunswick has paid over to the county collector the sum of $50,602, the city's quota of taxes for the year 1886.

STATE NOTES.

Steps are being taken in Bridgeton toward the formation of a military company with the intention of uniforming and equipping admission into the National Guard.

The corner-stone of St. Michael's Orphan Asylum, Jersey City, will be laid on Sunday next at the corner of Grand and St. Peter's streets, new church, Jersey City, is to be laid Sunday week. Bishop Wigger will officiate on both occasions.

Dr. Hunt, the president of the State Board of Health, is investigating a number of cases of typhoid fever among the cadets in Burlington county. Several cases were discovered among the herds in the vicinity of Mount Holly and Bordentown.

The cause why the rural third market of Philadelphia is overstocked and prices low, is that by the act of the last Legislature the sale of milk from cows fed upon swill is practically prohibited in the city of New York. The market is therefore confined to Philadelphia.

Yesterday ten boys, ranging in age from fifteen to eighteen years, were arrested at New Brunswick by officer Campbell upon a charge of stealing chickens. They gave their names as Robert and Ellis Stewart of Suburban street; George Lowe, Conrad Bleiler, Charles Brough, Wm. Conrad, Charles Roney, Edward Dunham and Val Galpot of New street, and Fred Dolsby of Oliver street. The boys were each locked up, appear before the Recorder this morning for a hearing.

A War Correspondent Dead.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The relatives of William Young, of Scituate, have just learned of his death at Mobile. Young was The Boston Herald correspondent at the first battle of Fredericksburg, where he was wounded. He was afterwards employed by The New York Herald, and was at Gettysburg where he was taken prisoner. He married in Virginia, but he succeeded in getting back to the Union lines, walking nearly fifty miles through a dense woods. He afterward was The New York Herald correspondent on the Red river expedition.

Brooklyn's Democratic Paper.

Talks Among Yachtsmen About the Late Races.

PLUCKY LIEUTENANT HENN

Does Not Acknowledge That His Boat is Not the Best.

But Says That No More Englishmen are Likely to Come 3,000 Miles to Participate in a Floating Match—Some Hints That the Cabin is What Saved the Cup.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—On board the Galatea Lieut. Henn was very plainly suffering a good deal from the congestion of his lungs, which has afflicted him for several days. When asked about the future movements of the Galatea he said that he had not yet considered her for the Newport race, and that he would sail for that place on Tuesday or Wednesday. He said that he had not received any answer to his challenge to sail around to Bermudas and back, and if no answer was received by nightfall he should withdraw the challenge and substitute another. As to Gen. Paine's challenge to go to Providence, wait there for a gale of wind, and then sail to Marblehead, he said that that matter was still under consideration. He did not wish to say what sort of a race he contemplated proposing in place of the Bermuda race. Of the cup races he said:

LIEUT. HENN.

"Of course there are the chances of calm and light wind, which must always be expected in yachting, but it is absurd to call the brisk time we have had racing. No more British yachts will come over here to contend for the cup. It isn't worth while to come 3,000 miles to enter in a drifting match."

There was one part of Saturday's race, however, which he did not think was a drifting match. That was the long reach in from the buoy to the shore. He said the Galatea had made up about six minutes of the time she lost in the lazy run down to the buoy, or had gained about eight minutes. Then the wind fell flat.

"That was mortifying, of course, under the circumstances. Where one has a whole season, or twenty or thirty races ahead of him, the loss of one race by an unfortunate shift of wind or an accident is nothing."

He was quite confident that the Galatea had outsailed the Mayflower on the wind during the half hour that they were making something like a rate of 12 knots an hour. He admitted that the Galatea was outsailed in the fog on Thursday, but said that was because of the error in judging the weather when they reefed their bowsprit and started under the shortened sail. On the subject of the two models, his opinion was an emphatic in favor of the cutter as ever. Even allowing that the Mayflower had on the whole beaten the cutter, it must be a good model which, being a half keeper under water, and still spreading 2,000 feet less of canvas could do so well.

"Besides," he said, "were you ever tween decks on the Mayflower. Then you can compare the room there with what we have here."

He was lying on a sofa at the time in a saloon, the beams of which were so high that the reporter could not reach them. It was about 14x16 feet large. There were other rooms equally commodious for size and air, which Mrs. Henn showed with justifiable pride. "You can't call this a racing machine," added Lieut. Henn quite truthfully, "if by a racing machine you mean a comfortless craft, built solely to be driven quickly through the water."

The sailing of the Galatea on Thursday, when, as the yachtsmen said, she was hove-to all day, was mentioned to Lieut. Henn.

"They don't know anything about it," said he, "and I was pleased by the quality of her sails. That is always the way with English sailors when they get wet. The yacht has been sailed to the best advantage in each race. Mr. Webb handled her at my special request. He is considered in England to be the best man at the tiller we have got. He has won more than 200 races, and that is more than any man living."

Capt. Joe Ellsworth, when talked with on the subject, seemed to coincide with the Bostonian's assertion that the Galatea fairly outsailed the Mayflower in the heavy work of the board in from the turn. He said:

"It was a good thing we got the start of what the Galatea did. But it's over now, and 'nough said.

The majority of the yachtsmen, however, said, when they came to go over the details of the race that the Galatea had not actually made gains until the wind dropped, which it began to do in about twenty minutes, certainly within an hour after the start. Then the Galatea gained thereafter because she had a club topsail, which the Mayflower had not, and on the whole had the better of the wind. It is quite certain that the Marblehead of the cutter men on the press boat did not notice that the Galatea had gained any until about 3:30 o'clock, when the 5th topsails were sent aloft, and at least twenty minutes after the wind began to fall and to veer about, one shift bringing the Priscilla, which was further out to sea, for about ten minutes in a line crowding the Galatea if he was wanting, though she had been previously half an reach behind the leader.

To Capt. Sumner belongs the credit of saving the day. While the Mayflower was holding far in to the land off Long Branch he was the only one on board who thought he was right. The Galatea's position was such that she was considerably further south or to leeward, plainly had a better wind and was gaining, while the Mayflower was running out of wind. Capt. Sumner insisted on standing in, and but he could see a wind off shore further inside, and his judgment prevailed after he got Capt. Newcombe of the Fortuna to look at the wrinkled water further in the breakers, and the yellow streak of Jersey dust that were rolling out to sea above them.

When the race was all over, and the Mayflower was at anchor, a Boston man rowed out to her, and claiming on deck, was met by Mr. Burgess. He was quiet, modest and retiring man that Mr. Burgess can be found among Boston yachtsmen.

"How do you feel?" said the visitor.

"Feel?" said Burgess, "I feel like this," and he turned a handspring as nimbly as an acrobat.

"Lord bless me, I never knew you could do anything like that," said the visitor, thunderstruck with astonishment. "Well, I can," said Burgess, kicking first one foot and then the other to the main boom over his head, "and if you say so I'll do it again."

The arrogance of the few Boston men who remained on board the Mayflower yesterday was simply insufferable. They swelled about like spinnakers before the wind, held their heads up like club topsails, and flapped their tongues like the leaches of the Galatea's mainsail. Boston might not be the metropolis, they said, but it was the seat of learning in matters marine, and the birthplace of modern naval architecture, and that was quite enough to satisfy their ambition.

The British cutter-schooner Miranda went out for a turn around the lightship, where, as one of the seamen said, "she'll get a stylish bit of sea on. He said his shipmates, without exception, after seeing the work of the Mayflower, believed that "the Indian" is overhauled, and make no mistake." They are all thorough British sailors, too, and have seen the best boats in the English channel. But the sailors of the Galatea frankly believe that their boat can outsail the Yankee to windward if there is wind enough.

GROWLS FROM THE GALATEA.

Members of the Crew Say the Yacht Was Not Treated Right.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Galatea and the Mayflower lay at their anchorage off Bayridge yesterday when a reporter went alongside the Galatea. The cutter's crew was much disappointed at the result of the race. They say the yacht never had a chance to show what she could do, being badly sailed. Lieut. Henn is slowly recovering from his illness. The Galatea sails for Newport on Tuesday.

Gen. Charles J. Paine, owner of the Mayflower, Commodore Morgan, Commodore Dr. Bryant and Designer Burgess, left for Boston last night on the 5:30 boat.

Before leaving Gen. Paine said he was very glad the contest was over, although he had been by no means as satisfactory test of each boat's ability as he could have wished. He thought the Galatea gained on his yacht a little in the windward work on Thursday.

It was not known until yesterday what Lieut. Henn meant after Tuesday's race when he said: "We have killed two men already." It appears that William A. Smith, a fireman on the tug, and the steward of the yacht were knocked down by a block from the spinnaker boom. Miles was insensible for some time. Lieut. Henn yesterday sent a letter marked "Immediate" and bearing the Galatea's racing colors on the envelope to Gen. Paine at his residence on Congress street, Boston. It is thought this may be an acceptance of the general's challenge to sail in a stiff breeze from Marblehead to Provincetown.

The Mayflower left for Newport to-day to prepare for the race there, in which the Stranger, Clara, Bedouin, Thetis, Mystank and Miranda are entered.

SUNDAY IN CHARLESTON.

A Wind and Rain Storm Coats the Heated City.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 13.—The situation is generally unchanged. One slight shock occurred at 11 a. m. yesterday, but it was not observed by all. There have been no changes by the holding of open-air services in all the public parks conducted by ministers of the various congregations, particularly impressive were preached by Rev. W. T. Thompson, of the First Presbyterian church, on the battery; Bishop Howe, of the Episcopal church, and Bishop Northrop, at the Cathedral chapel. The relief committee will continue the distribution of rations until stopped by the central committee. Over 20,000 have been issued since the 31st ult. The opinion of the chairman of the relief committee there is not a single case of destitution unministered to in the city. Contributions continue to flow in. Great preparation for construction has been made all along the line, and public feeling is much relieved. The almost unbearable heat was broken by a heavy wind and rain storm, bringing gravel from the streets dangerous for the few pedestrians seeking shelter. No casualties are reported so far. By 9 o'clock p. m. the sky had cleared and the moon shone brightly.

SENSATIONAL DEATH SCENE.

A Drug Clerk Takes Morphine Instead of Quinine.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 13.—John Berk, a young drug clerk, has just died under very sensational circumstances. He had been drunk all night and feeling ill after he went to bed he asked his mother to get him a grain of quinine. He took morphine, however, instead of quinine, by mistake, and although physicians worked with him all day he was declared dead in the evening.

After the body was carried home it was surrounded by his mother and neighbors, when the dead man suddenly sat up. There were violent twitchings of the muscles of the face, and the arms perceptibly moved. Instantly the mother threw herself upon her son's body in wild despair, and by her passionate pleading to bring him back to life by endearments. A physician was hurriedly summoned and a strong electric current was applied, but young Berk died without regaining life. The movements were merely muscular. His devoted mother, however, sat up with the body all night, watching frantically for any sign of life.

A Little Tornado.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—An undesired gale tore across the country from the northeast all day yesterday. The wind began in a mild way early in the forenoon. It increased steadily in force as the day wore on, and at six o'clock it ended in a hurricane which unroofed buildings in Manhattanville and capsized yachts in the river and bay. The wind was from the northeast all day, and at about five o'clock a great bank of purple clouds rose above the northern horizon, accompanied by thunder and lightning. An hour later the wind fell to a calm, and then a rain began to fall. The big bank of clouds had spread over the northern half of the sky. Presently a flash equal of rain swept across the city. Rain fell in torrents for about fifteen minutes, and then the downpour fell away to a gentle drizzle and the wind to a light breeze.

James G. Blaine Married.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—It has just leaked out that James G. Blaine, youngest son of ex-Senator James, was married in the factory of Mr. Henry Neviss, Catholic church, in this city, last Monday afternoon, to Miss Marie Nevins, daughter of Col. Richard Nevins, of Catasauqua, O. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Thomas J. Dewey, pastor of the church, the contracting parties having settled him that there were no impediments to the union. There was no one else present.

Playing for Charity.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The performance of Wallack's theater last night realized over $1,000 for the Charleston relief fund.

THIS "ALTERS" THE CASE

JAEHNE'S ASSOCIATE IN CRIME GIVES THE THING AWAY.

A Witness Who Did Not Appear at the Boodler's Trial—He Fled to Canada at His Employer's Orders and Expenses. Startling Disclosures.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Even if the court of appeals reverses the judgment of the lower court and orders the release from Sing Sing of ex-Alderman and now Convict Henry W. Jaehne, as was reported from Albany, the Broadway boodler's freedom will be merely a brief fiction, for the moment he receives his release papers he will be rearrested, charged with being a receiver of stolen goods.

At the time that light was first let in upon the Broadway steal it was a matter of common gossip that Jaehne's partner-at-law was Stephen A. Walker, and that he was hand in glove with the most notorious thieves of the metropolis. Jaehne's right bower in the manipulation of the boodle was a young man named George W. Alter. He had been in Jaehne's employ for a dozen years, and the relations of the two men were of the most confidential character.

When Jaehne was on the rack before the senate inquisition committee a man named Scott testified that Alter one day pointed to one of the bills in the pocket of a roll and said that it contained $100,000, to be distributed among the aldermen. When Alter was examined he swore Scott's statement was a lie.

It was proposed at that time to indict Alter for perjury, but as a question of the validity of all the committee's proceedings hold in the United States building was shortly raised the matter was dropped. It was then, however, that a subsequent session of the committee held in the supreme court rooms the same testimony was given, and on May 10 Alter was indicted for perjury. He was arraigned, given the "tip," and the next day he went over the Canadian border and did not appear against Jaehne on his trial for bribery.

There was again he returned to his home. Last Thursday he was arrested by detectives and taken to police headquarters. The next morning he was arraigned before Recorder Smyth and pleaded guilty.

From that time on until yesterday Alter's whereabouts was a mystery. Every inquiry was made by his family to discover a clew to his whereabouts, but nothing but the bare fact of having been last seen with the detective could be discovered, and Von Gerichten refused also to say where he was. At police headquarters entire ignorance of Alter was affected, and his good mother was in despair.

Yesterday afternoon Inspector Byrnes cleared up the mystery. He said he had kept Alter from communication with the outside world, because he wanted to verify a confession by him that Jaehne was a receiver of stolen goods and Alter his accomplice. The inspector hinted that Alter had also made strong charges against a number of other aldermen, but declined to make public their names.

Alter's confession was in brief that Jaehne came to him and told him that he (Alter) was to be arrested for perjury and told him to make for Canada without delay, giving Alter $380 at the time, and promising to send him money as he needed it and to provide for his brother.

Jaehne failed to keep his word, however, and when Alter's money ran out he returned to New York.

He says that Jaehne did an extensive business with thieves and always had a large stock of stolen goods on hand. When he got frightened at the portentious aspect of things he made a "swag" and presided out of his store to Alter. Alter gave his notes for the amount, but could not meet them and the store was subsequently sold by Jaehne's brother.

Jaehne was arrested on March 19 and bailed the next day in $15,000. Jaehne came at once to Alter and told him that he was about to skip his bail and go to Canada and he wished to give Alter general instructions. He made an appointment for the next day at Broadway and Spring street. At this meeting Jaehne's manner told him he had changed his mind about going away, as things had been fixed all right.

One of his bondsmen heard of Jaehne's intentions and surrendered him. Jaehne was subsequently again released on bail, and shortly after Jaehne told Alter at his Jackson's house that he had a lot of stolen stuff in the house, and, being afraid the police were after him on that score, he wanted to get it away. He was afraid to take the things from the safe at night, as it was connected with a burglar alarm company, the National he thought, and he told Alter to go to the company's office and get the wires disconnected.

Alter did so, and the stolen things were taken away. Alter says he took a bag full of silver watches and other goods to the Christopher street ferry and threw them overboard from a ferryboat. While they were working at them as they were twice disturbed by a policeman at the door, and Jaehne finally exclaimed:

"Oh, I'm watched; I can't do anything to-night." The job was completed another night, however.

One day, Alter says, he noticed that Jaehne was carrying a new and costly watch of a peculiar description. The old watch and its timepiece disappeared, and when asked about it Jaehne said:

"Oh, the super was getting too hot. I'm afraid to wear it here in my vest." To which he was stolen, Alter says, from a passenger on an outgoing German steamer.

Alter said Jaehne conducted all his important conferences with himself. Two years ago, Alter says, Jaehne went to Europe with two notorious thieves, "Andy" Curtin and "Alick" Stewart, as his supposed aides-de-camp, as their business at the continent.

Inspector Byrnes says he believes Alter's story, and has verified a good part of it. He says he knows that Alter has told the truth, and any day of the well-known persons said to be implicated by Alter's disclosures.

William Harvey, who keeps a saloon, and who was bailed out by Jaehne on one of his bondsmen, said yesterday that he was not at all "anxious" or "worried," as had been published, for his relations with Jaehne had been of a purely business character, and he knew nothing about his business affairs.

Mrs. Alter said last night that George went to police headquarters three days after his arrival home and asked if he was wanted. Inspector Byrnes, she said, told him he was not in demand, and her son's subsequent arrest was a great surprise to her. She thought it was an outrage that a man could be spirited away to headquarters and locked up and not be allowed to communicate with his family. Inspector Byrnes denies that Alter called at headquarters voluntarily.

Alter seems to be very popular in the Eighth ward, where he is well known, and many callers have called to console the neighborhood at his revelations.

It was the generally expressed belief among politicians last night that Alter's arrest means more than the mere perjuring in the discharge from Sing Sing. It was thought to mean as well that the inspector was not on the trail of the other boodle aldermen and exposed their names. Alter's testimony would greatly strengthen the case against them.

ENVOY SEDGWICK'S ACCUSERS.

A Dallas Colored Tells His Version of an Old Affair.

DALLAS, Sept. 13.—Col. A. C. Porter, of Dallas, who has spent upward of 6 months in the City of Mexico, has returned home. He left the capital Sept. 5, at which time the Sedgwick scandal was the sensation of the hour. When asked regarding the affair, he said: "The public reports are all true, and more than half of Sedgwick's conduct has never been made public. He got ingratiated into social circles and attended a ball given by the Jockey club and wound up at a bawdy house. On hearing of it Col. George West, formerly of Houston, Texas, now of Memphis City, having learned that members of the Jockey club had cut Sedgwick's hat and coat into ribbons, went to the inn of Sedgwick, who was still intoxicated, told him to go to h—l; that he was no baby; that he was able to take care of himself, and that if the attack made at the club with members of the Jockey club, and conducted himself so shamefully that every American in the city hung his head in shame. Col. West has since had stated that he will take the word of Sedgwick as to the truth of the reports. If the secretary wishes proof of his guilt he can get any amount of it from the American residents of the city of Mexico."

ENVOY SEDGWICK.

AN ENGINEER CRUSHED.

A Switch Had Been Tampered With Near New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 13.—An excursion train left Holyoke, on the New Haven and Hartford railroad at seven eight o'clock yesterday morning for this city. When near the station at Ingleside, about two miles from Westfield, Engineer George Baldwin noticed that the switch at the head of a siding in front of him indicated that the tracks were not in proper position for his train to pass safely. He immediately whistled for brakes, put on the air brake, and reversed the engine. Baldwin then jumped from the cab and landed on a pile of pea coal on one side of the track.

The coal yielded under his weight and threw him backwards underneath the wheels of the tender, killing him instantly and mutilating the body in a horrible manner. The train was stopped by the combined efforts of the air brakes and reversal and sustained comparatively little damage. Two freight cars on the siding were smashed. An examination of the switch showed that it had been tampered with maliciously. It was so crushed and bent out of shape as to be utterly useless. The switch is the property of the road. Baldwin resided in Milford and was unmarried. His vacation was to commence to-day.

Not Thoroughly Reformed.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—Claude B. Lassell, Jr., arrested in Chicago, is wanted in Boston for forgery. The son of Rev. Claude Lassell of New Jersey state prison in 1885, he came to Boston, claimed to be a reformed criminal, secured the confidence of the Boston Young Christian association officials, got them to start a scheme of a reformed convict's home with him as manager, and finally got two checks for $1,000 each. One of these he forged with the name of Jennie W. Lassell, daughter of his benefactor, and then eloped with that young woman to Providence, married her, deserted her at Pawtucket, left for and went on to New York, Norfolk, Va. and Chicago, operating in each place in a similar way.

Threw His Arm Off.

DERMOTT, Sept. 13.—A singular accident occurred at Hillsdale, Mich. Two elms picked from the boys of that town were playing ball when a boy named John Yeagley, who was pitching, threw the ball over the bat. It struck, he could muster and broke his arm between the shoulder and elbow. The noise when the bone broke was heard by every one present. Dr. W. H. Sawyer set the bone and said it was broken by the tension of the muscles and cords on the upper part of the arm while the extension muscles were relaxed.

Canadian Telegraph Facilities.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—The Canadian Pacific Railway company's telegraph system, which is now completed throughout Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and to be run in connection with the Postal Telegraph company's wires to New York and through the United States, was opened to-day to the public. Arrangements have been consummated with the Commercial Cable company for European service.

Planning Consolidation.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 13.—Representatives of six of the Masonic Mutual Relief associations in the state have been in consultation here for the purpose of perfecting the consolidation of all the organizations. The matter was discussed at length. A committee of one from each association was elected to prepare a plan to be presented at another meeting Oct. 9.

The Grand Army Commanders.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13. — Ex-Governor Fairchild, of Wisconsin, commander-in-chief Grand Army Republic, and Col. E. B. Gray, his adjutant general, visited the Yorkd club, organized in a small on the North river, near Shady Side, yesterday afternoon. A pleasure party of fifteen persons on board were thrown into the river. The pilot boat Patrol, which fortunately happened to be near, went to the rescue and saved all hands.

The Austrian Mission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The Capital says the Austrian mission which it has been generally believed would be left vacant will be filled by the appointment of Col. Theo. Peixotto, proprietor of The Galveston News. Col. Bob has been in the Adirondacks for several weeks catching fish and shooting deer with the president.

Frederick Douglass Banqueted.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—Frederick Douglass was banqueted by the Wendell Phillips club. Oliver Johnson, Francis Jackson Garrison, Judge Ruffin and other veterans of the anti-slavery cause, were present and spoke. Mr. Douglass spoke interestingly of the progress of his race since the emancipation.

Yellow Fever on a Bark.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The bark Linda Carter has arrived from Matanzas. She reports that while at that port yellow fever broke out on board and the following persons died: Samuel Reed, first officer; David Livingston, second officer; Fred and Fred. Chapman, cousins; all of Maine.

VOTING IN MAINE.

THE DAY GIVEN UP TO THE STATE ELECTIONS.

Prospects of a Light Vote—The Republicans Counting Upon a Victory—The Democrats Getting in their Work Quietly—An Unknown Quantity.

AUGUSTA, Sept. 13.—The political campaign which has been exciting this state for three weeks past has closed, and to-day election for governor, members of the legislature, county officers, and four congressmen, takes place. Mr. Blaine fired the opening gun of the campaign, and ignited the skyrocket which marked its close. He has done more talking in Maine than he has done in any previous campaign for a great many years, making at least a dozen speeches in all and speaking in nearly every county.

When Mr. Blaine returned to Augusta he showed no signs that his campaigning among the rugged hills of his adopted state in the languid, oppressive heat of this dog day weather had told on him. He seemed to feel all the better for it. Mr. Blaine loves a political fight so well that when he takes a hand he seems to actually grow fat on it. His appearance in the canvass has been his striking feature. The Republicans have averaged some thirty rallies a day during the campaign, and these have been addressed by some of the leading political orators of the party throughout the state. Gen. Logan and Senators Sherman and Evarts accepted invitations to speak, but failed to put in an appearance.

The Democrats have furnished the people with but little music from the stump, their managers depending more upon work than wind. Calvin Frost, of New York, has been the only principal speaker. The Prohibitionists have had a large number of speechmakers in the field, their biggest guns being St. John and Gen. Dow, whose shibboleth has been, "Kill the Republican party." There have also been one or two speakers on the stump in the interest of the labor reformers.

The campaign has been to run on national issues principally, as forecasted by Mr. Blaine. The only state issues of consequence involved are those concerning legislation in the interest of labor, and singularly enough the opposing parties all seem to show a remarkable unanimity of sentiment in favoring the demands of the working people.

The outlook seems to indicate that the total vote will be the lightest thrown for ten years. The total vote for governor in 1884 was 142,107. Of this vote Frederick Robie, Republican, had 70,810; John R. Redman, Democrat, had 56,803; Hosea B. Eaton, Greenbacker, had 3,617; William T. Eustis, Prohibition, had 1,151, and the rest were scattering votes. The total vote for governor in 1882 was 138,478, Frederick Robie, Republican, receiving 72,461; Harris M. Plaisted, Union, 65,921; Nolen Chase, Greenback, 1,204; William T. Eustis, Prohibition, 891; Warren B. Vinton, Independent Republican, 288, and scattering, 102.

It will be seen that the Republican plurality two years ago was nearly 20,000, while four years ago it was 8,500. Impartial observers do not think that the total vote this year will exceed 130,000, and it would not be surprising if it did not reach those figures.

A conservative estimate puts the Bodwell vote at 65,000 and the Edwards vote at 50,000. This would give the election to the Republican candidate by 15,000 plurality on a reduced vote. The Prohibition vote is the unknown quantity and excites the most speculation, for the reason that the Democrats say that if it should come up to the figures that the St. John-Dow men claim it will make such a hole in the Republican party as will throw the governorship into the Democrats' hands. This is on the supposition that the Democrats will poll the strength of the party. The highest estimate made of the Prohibition vote is 12,000. There seems no evidence that the Prohibitionists will cast so big a vote or that the increase they will have over their vote of two years ago will be drawn exclusively from the Republicans. They have made a hot fight, but the chances are that they will not poll over 3,500 votes, and these will be drawn quite as much from the Democratic as from the Republican party. The prospects are that the Republicans will elect Mr. Bodwell by their average plurality on a decreased vote.

The polls were opened this morning promptly on time, and while there has been no unusual rush the day has so far been characterized by a silent persistent effort by the friends of the different candidates to secure a full vote. The weather is cool, and there is no reason why a fair test of the strength of the various parties of the state may not be accurately measured. The friends of Mr. Blaine are using every argument to induce a full Republican vote on the basis of his prospective chances in 1888. It is being strongly urged in a quiet way that the showing in to-day's contest will go far toward determining the future political chances of the Plumed Knight as he looks to the race for the next presidential campaign. It is urged that a defeat at this time in his own state, after his having made such a vigorous campaign, would handicap him very seriously in May, has departed. The election to-day has, therefore, a significance wider than the mere question of who shall be governor of this state or who shall be the representatives in the legislature or in congress.

At this hour any estimate would be mere guess work. Chairman Manley, however, claims to have information upon which he claims the state by an increased majority.

They Want a New Treaty.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 13.—The Colonist, speaking of the Newfoundland and Canadian fisheries situation, says: It is generally understood now that the act to regulate the exportation of bait will receive her majesty's assent and become the law of the colony. The leading statesmen in England, Canada and the United States now clearly recognize the necessity of settling the fishery question of North America by an international fishery commission similar to that which settled the question of the fur seal fisheries a few years ago. We understand her majesty's government has been informed that the president of the United States will ask for such a commission at the early opening of congress, and that the leading Democratic and Republican statesmen will assent to his wishes.

More Fishermen Picked Up.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 13.—Four more of the ill-fated Labrador fishermen, lost from the American schooner Meteor, have been picked up and taken to St. Pierre Miquelon. Their names are James Barron, James Kelly, James Barrington and Michael Cahill. They were fallen in with by a French schooner sixty miles off Cape Race after drifting helplessly about for over three days. When picked up they were in a terribly exhausted condition, but are now almost fully recovered.

Fire in Shoeburn.

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 13.—The shoe factory of Myron F. Thomas in Campello, was damaged by fire yesterday to the extent of $50,000. The loss on stock will be nearly total and the insurances of $17,000 will not cover it. The machinery which was badly damaged by water was insured for $19,000; building was insured for $11,000. Cause of fire unknown.

LABRADOR FISHERIES.

Many Thousands of People on the Verge of Starvation.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 13.—Alfred B. Morine, member of the Newfoundland legislature for Bona Vista, now here, says the Labrador fisheries are an entire failure. At their last daily official haul a few schooners. The 15,000 inhabitants of the Labrador coast exist entirely by fishing. Thirty thousand people go from Newfoundland to Labrador for fish every year. This year they have not caught enough, even with their subscriptions and supplies. At least 20,000 more people are dependent upon the success of the season mentioned 30,000, so that a total of 65,000 persons who are to-day destitute and will be entirely dependent upon the government for subsistence during the fall and winter. These people are scattered over 3,000 miles of coast, rendering the exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to get to them with relief steamers during the winter, and unless such relief is taken to relieve them starvation is inevitable.

Besides the above there are 100,000 more people immediately depending upon the Newfoundland fishery—that is, about 70,000 on the former and 90,000 on the latter. The total failure of the above fishery this year renders 70,000 people destitute, only 20,000 of these depending upon the result of the season for the loss of a year's labor. The people have barely enough for present necessities and no means of earning a dollar. The only relief to this picture is the fact that the potato crop, the only crop raised on the island, is turning out well and will yield about a peck per head of population. Morrine says this means highly colored in view of the recent fabrication of starvation stories among the Labrador Esquimaux, but it is the plain English of actual facts and inevitable consequences.

A FRENCH COLONY

Secures a Large Tract of Canadian Land For Settlement.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—Negotiations have just been completed here with the government of this province and the Montreal Colonization society, at the head of which is Archbishop Fabre, by two delegates, Dr. Johnson La Palme, of Lawrence, and Camille Roussin, merchant, of Lowell, Mass., duly appointed by 105 heads of French-Canadian families in those towns and the neighboring country, who wish to return and settle on land, as many others have already done, in their native province. A contract has been entered into by the delegates by which 50,000 acres of land in La Lievre and La Rouse valleys in the Ottawa districts have been secured for the settlement of the people whose interests it is to come when the clearing of the land and building of houses are completed, a special fund having been subscribed for these purposes. They will come in an organized body and take possession, prepared with agricultural implements to till the land. Many have already returned, through the exertions of Father La Belle, who has been a pioneer in colonizing the district in question, which is of unlimited extent, and those who come have been very successful, being more progressive than the settlers leaving their own province. The present movement is expected to be the beginning of an extensive repatriation of the French element.

A Shark's Mistake.

"Don't you do anything?" with a shark," said a Barnegat fisherman as he crowded tobacco into his pipe for another smoke. "Sharks is an animal as knows more'n you think for. A couple of years ago I took a party out after weak fish in the yacht Mary. She belongs to Capt. Small, or did afore he died. We were anchored up in Bay No. 8, and the fish were biting like mad, when all at once the school left us. I knowed that meant a shark, and I looked around for him. Party soon he came alongside, and I up with a pole and gave him an awful lick in the back. You may run 1 afore a shark's body very well, but his feelings are as tender as a child's. This fellow ran off a bit and then cocked his eye at me and took a good long survey. Then he went quietly under the stern to read the yacht's name, and when he went off he gave his tail a flirt which meant that he would call around and make it pleasant for me some other time.

"Well, in the course of three or four days Capt. Small got home and went out in the Mary for sheepshead. He went up to No. 3 and anchored, and then went aft in his usual position—his right leg hanging over the pool quarter and his foot just touching the water. He hadn't been there ten minutes before along came a shark and cut that leg off below the knee as slick as a chopper could have done it. The captain had shrewdly realized his loss afore the fish came to him with the leg, so he shoved a hist and a twist, and the bloody meat was flung back into the boat. For why? Because the shark had discovered that we had left the gaff on board. He was after me, and he had got Small. He had nothin' agin Small, and he cheerfully brought back the leg when he discovered his mistake. The captain he died of the bite, but not before I had explained things, and the last thing he said was that he forgive the shark."—Detroit Free Press.

Burdettes.

A Newark girl has eloped with a wild Indian. This remorseless, pitiless hatred with which the eastern people pursue the poor Indian is something incomprehensible to the people of the west. Out there they say, and occasionally do, shoot an Indian, but they don't believe in torturing him.

NO JOB FOR A SNAKE.

A big copperhead snake went wriggling into a house in Waynesburg, Pa., chasing the women and children shrieking out into the street, and held the fort till the man came home. There is nothing remarkable about that. We have known a little mouse not three inches long to chase a whole sewing society out into a snowdrift.

A LAWLESS LIFE.

Sometimes when I think what a lawless life mine has been I wonder that the respectable outlaws with whom I am most intimately associated in social, religious and political circles have not elected me chief of the band. I think nothing of defying those in authority; I "sass" the president, scoff at congress, bully the legislature and transgress the laws of the land daily. I drive across the bridge "faster than a walk," and openly sneer at the 25 fine with which the signboard threatens me. I have walked "on the grass" in Fairmount park; in Central park I have "picked a" flower or shrub." I have "stood on the front platform" for many miles, I have "talked to the man at the wheel," I have "got on and off the cars while in motion," I have "struck the shaft this shaft," I have refused to "keep moving" on Brooklyn bridge; I have neglected to clean the mud off my boots from my side walk; I have dumped ashes into the alley at early dawn, I do not muzzle my dog, and last year he was not registered; I do not always "turn to the right" when I am driving, I do not always procure tickets before entering the cars, I have not worked out my road tax with the pick and shovel, I don't always "pay as I go," I have been arrested on a charge of "profane swearing," I have been "fined" for "disorderly conduct," I have been "sued" for "damages," I have been "arrested" for "assault and battery," I have been "indicted" for "conspiracy," I have been "tried" for "libel," I have been "convicted" for "contempt of court," I have been "sentenced" to "imprisonment," I have been "pardoned" by the governor, I have been "discharged" by the "court of appeals," I have been "released" on a "writ of habeas corpus," I have been "re-arrested" on a "bench warrant," I have been "bailed" by a "justice of the peace," I have been "tried" by a "jury," I have been "convicted" by a "jury

—The fall term of the Somerville public school opened with a membership of 625 pupils.

—A large assemblage witnessed the baptismal exercises of the two colored converts in the river at Elizabeth on Sunday.

—It is said that James G. Blaine, John A. Logan and Senator Fry of Maine will speak in New Jersey during the fall campaign.

—County Clerk Vosseller's office at Elizabeth will be open for naturalization to-night between the hours of seven and nine o'clock.

—The regular September meeting of the Board of Survey of Dunellen will be held in the City Court room at eight o'clock this evening.

—A grand re-union of the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held at Easton, on Friday. Special excursion tickets will be sold on all railroads.

—"The great event of the season" say all good friends of St. Mary's, is to be our fair advertised elsewhere. A ticket for a first-class passage to Europe and return, good for one year, is to be one of the notable attractions."

—The efforts of the Crescent avenue people to have their edifice lighted by electricity in time for the grand organ recital which is being arranged to take place in the church next Monday evening, are likely to prove unsuccessful.

—The Sunday afternoon gospel temperance meetings at Bound Brook, given under the auspices of the Bound Brook Reform Club, which were discontinued at the beginning of the hot weather, have been resumed and will be held regularly hereafter.

—The semi-annual convention of the Somerset county W. C. T. U. is being held to-day in the Temperance rooms at Bound Brook. The sessions are held at 11.30 a. m. and 1.30 p. m. This evening a mass meeting will be held beginning at half-past seven o'clock.

—Another one of the alleged participants in the West Second street difficulty, which aroused the inhabitants thereabouts late on Saturday evening, appeared before the City Judge this morning and furnished fifty dollars bail to appear for trial at ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

—About sixteen of the members of the Dunham Goodwill Choristers went to Ricefield, Somerset county, on Sunday evening, and took part in the fiftieth anniversary of the Ricefield Sunday School. The choristers sang several selections, and at the close of the session a collation was tendered them. They returned home about eleven o'clock Sunday evening.

—Biting the nails is a custom founded on the superstition that a child whose nails were cut before it was a year old would be a thief. It would be interesting to find out if the nail, hence they were bitten off. A singular and stupid custom surely. Continue to cut the nails whenever they are too long. They will, of course, grow, and they will naturally become harder. It is proper that they should be so.

—A correspondent of the Somerville Unionist Gazette writes that the first swallows sent from Philadelphia to New York was sent by telegraph to Somerville, the line being completed only that far, and then carried by the Hope Express, via old Elizabeth and Somerville railroad, in a carpet-bag for the proprietor's amusement (a small head of nothing larger) and delivered in New York. This was only forty years ago."

—If the feet are tender or painful after standing or walking great relief may be obtained by bathing them in warm salt and water. A large handful of salt to a gallon of water as warm as can be born is the proper proportion. The feet should be immersed and the water thrown over them with the hand, and also over the legs as far as the knees. When the water becomes too cool, dry the feet and legs, rubbing with a rough towel upward. Soreness of the feet has been relieved by persevering in this method at least a week.

HOTEL NETHERWOOD.

A Change Finally Accomplished—The New Management to Come Into Possession October First.

As announced yesterday by special telegraph from New York the Hotel Netherwood has finally become the property of Frank R. Miller, formerly of the Grand Hotel of New York and recently connected with the Hotel Kaaterskill at the Catskill mountains.

The hotel has been for several years the property of John H. Deane, the benevolent Baptist real estate millionaire, and when met by misfortune was turned over to his partner, Ward B. Chamberlain, as assignee. Last Saturday Sheriff Hiller took possession of the hotel on a small claim, but this was set aside early yesterday satisfactorily, and about noon the parties interested met at the office of assignee Chamberlain on Broadway in New York and the papers having been passed and the money paid over, Mr. Miller, who was present, took the deed of this well known hotel, receiving the compliments and good wishes of those present at his good fortune. The deeds were received at the County Clerk's office about five o'clock last evening, for record.

For a year past several parties have entered into negotiations for this property, but until it was proposed to make it a large Catholic asylum no definite steps were made to secure its purchase.

Within a few weeks, however, a number of prominent citizens in Plainfield, among them several of Netherwood, formed a syndicate and furnished the means in part to secure Mr. Miller in the possession of this valuable property. Among the gentlemen were Charles Hyde, Warren Ackerman, John F. Plumbley, W. H. Darling, George W. Rockfellow, Job Male, Elias R. Potts, Henry P. Talmadge, Augustus D. Shepard, Henry R. Bowen, W. Palmer Smith, James L. Ansbacher, E. C. Mitford, H. Van Dorine, Edward P. Hamilton & Co., real estate brokers of New York, G. P. Mitchell, G. H. Graham, and others.

Mr. Woodruff's lease expires on the 30th inst., and Mr. Miller enters into possession October 1st. He designs to keep open the house the entire year, winter and summer, and will at once place the building in order for the fall and winter season. The house will not be closed while improvements are being made, Mr. Miller has many warm and personal friends throughout the country, some of whom propose making the "Netherwood" their home hereafter. The proprietor proposes to run the hotel, and not only make it a success to all concerned but a place all our citizens will love to visit.

A Narrow Escape.

As the 5.04 p. m. train from New York pulled out from the depot last evening two boys apparently about ten years of age jumped on the platform of one of the forward cars and rods to the Park avenue bridge where they alighted, one of them nearly losing his balance and falling back for a time and finally toppled over out of harm's way. Passengers at the depot who saw the boy jump from the train, expected to see him instantly killed, but he picked himself up and ran down the railroad bank and into the street where he was arrested by Special Police Officer Geo. Smith, who followed him. The other boy got away. The officer took the latter's boy captive before Justice Nash, when he said that his name was Johnnie McCan and that his home was on the Third street. That was his companion's name was Jimmy Donovan of the same street. Justice Nash severely reprimanded the boy and after telling him that if ever he was caught jumping on or off the cars again, he would be sent to jail. The boy narrowly escaped with his life, and the lesson will probably be of some benefit to him.

—The new card of Lawyers Suydam & Stillman appears among our professionals.

—The Collector's office will be open until ten o'clock this evening to accommodate those who wish to pay their fire taxes due to-day.

—Frederick Warde, the eminent tragedian, is to-night at Music Hall, in "Virginius." This will be the first performance of tragedy ever offered in Plainfield.

—A quarterly meeting of the Union County Teachers' Association will be held in Elizabeth on Saturday next, when Rev. J. L. Hurlbut of this city will deliver an address.

—The constable's sale of the horse, wagon and harness belonging to Chas. Gruesbeck, jr., of Somerset street, which was advertised to have been sold this morning to satisfy the claims of Henry Voshl and Henry Koller, has been adjourned.

—The highly injurious caustic effect of lime accidentally introduced into the eye, as frequently occurs to those engaged in building, may be instantly relieved by the use of cold sugar water, owing to the formation of a compound of the lime and sugar, which is without any action upon the eye

—No arrests have been made on account of the wholesale poisoning at Potterville, in Somerset county, during last June, but by which over two hundred persons were more or less effected by eating poisoned ice cream at a church festival, but the detectives are still working on what are thought to be good clues, with a hope to ultimately unravel the mystery.

—The Prohibition League held their usual Monday evening meeting in Reform Hall last evening. There was but a small attendance. A choir of many voices, led by Dr. Uiter, the accomplished organist, Miss Alice Smith, handling the instrument, rendered prohibition songs in an excellent manner. Prohibition resolutions were made by Rev. J. B. Cleaver and other prominent members of the League.

—Among the important cases to be investigated by the Middlesex County Grand Jury to-day upon its assembling at New Brunswick is that of George Laing of South Amboy, who shot George Lahne at that place on July 17th last. Laing had been told that his wife was unfaithful and that Lahne was in the habit of visiting her in his absence. The two men met on the street, when Laing drew a revolver and shot his alleged paramour in the back, lodging the bullet in the spine which has since confined him to the house.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Amplified Lecture Delivered in Reform Hall—By T. S. Lambert, M.D., A. M., LL.D., of New York City—Subject: "The Truth About Alcohol in Relation to Chemistry, Comets and Physiological Effects, Individual and Social."

PART IX.

Answers to Questions.—This paper can hardly be called a Part, yet it may be so distinguished for reference sake. Since my first lecture here I have received a number of questions from four persons, two by way of Mr. Gibbs' restaurant and two to care of Plainfield Times, and I have also received by the way in the last direction for early reading to-day as a rule.

I am glad of such a number of questions as it shows that the people are real and awaken to the interest of the long exposition I have noticed that by far the greater number of questions put to me are the outcome of the study of a thoughtful intelligent, which is another point that makes it pleasant to receive and to answer questions upon any subject.

One Question Is—"Is there any method by which an extra quantity of carbonic acid can be introduced into the soil to help the corn and yield to it the carbon essential to its growth?"

This is not directly in line with our present subject, yet the answer that can be given, and will more the answer that will be ready in the near future, are too important to human welfare that a moment may be here used.

The inquirer says that he has a farm a short distance from the city, that he "carries on through others who work under his direction, and he wonders how he can get an advantage that he can from the air.

It is rather late in the season, but the future will be the now, in a short time. He will find his advantage in beginning at the present time, though late. Some years that time per day the way in which the wind blows over his fields, and the "winds are so variable," that he will be unable to say where they will blow over all his fields from the same direction at the same time.

The best method to carry the wind which direction the wind blows the most of the time, let him lay his rows of corn so that those which will blow most readily through and among the corn stalks. The rows should not point directly to the quarter whence the wind will come, but a little off from that, so that the winds may not blow straight through between the rows; but, so that as they pass through they will be compelled to bear against the corn stalks and leaves. There is a course of experiment now going on that will probably show how in an easy and not expensive manner any proportion of carbon dioxide can be brought to the corn leaves and cause a great increase in the ears, and in the stalks and leaves. The results of these experiments will probably be brought before the next Euclaga Congress at its meeting six months hence. By the way this farmer by my experiments will do better than to send to I. B. Brown, B.-q., secretary of said congress, 57 Beekman street, N. Y., and ask him to send him a report of last year.

Another question is, "If we re it is printed 'it is milk and drink,' I did not intend to say anything about milk, but since I am saying, while milk alone is both meat and drink. A very sensible reader. Of course I do not agree with him at all times exactly, or I preferable I will agree with him.

Another ask—"What is the precise difference between the two words that your reader shall make between alcohol and as alcoholic. That is, is there any proportion of alcohol essential to make an alcoholic?"

By alcohol I mean the ordinary commercial 95 per cent. alcohol, though, perhaps, it is often 90 per cent. or less than 90.

The chemically pure is 98 per cent. alcohol; while the distillers having the commercial article in view, would be glad to get 96 per cent. But it is very difficult to make very high percentages, and still more difficult to keep them long. Absolute alcohol should be entirely free from water, but such alcohol was probably never seen, and it is entirely satisfactory to have the absolute stand the test at 99, while 90½ is said to be 100 per cent. proof. That is properly called an alcoholic, therefore that contains more than eight per cent. of water, although many persons think eight per cent. proof per cent. of water and other substances shall be mixed with alcohol before it is proper to call it an alcoholic. While most alcoholics have a great deal more water than that.

Notice particularly that, in any alcoholic the alcohol is only mixed with other ingredients, it is not combined with them. So that its natural effects will be produced, however by the flavor may be covered by the other ingredients

Of course a large amount of alcohol drank at once will produce a more powerful effect, at least speedily, than a smaller quantity would produce when the same circumstances. The greatest proportion of anything in an ordinary alcoholic is water, but the most dangerous "poison" in alcohol is that which should be added the effect that any other ingredient is capable of producing.

It is in wine, as in one of sugar and lemon juice mixed in an ordinary lemonade; the taste of the two together is very much modified, yet all the acid and all the sugar are in the drink, unconbined, and will be effective, and affected in the stomach and bowels, precisely as if the two were taken separately would be.

Water, for example, combines with many substances, each of which will exhibit entirely new properties, none being of those of the substances combined. As when a molecule of water combines with starch, glucose is produced. Both the water and the starch are in the glucose, but they are not combined, and only the properties of glucose are observable, the water and starch being dissolved by the saliva in the mouth while the liver removes the water from the starch, retaining the starch as a stock of food.

So in the case of alcohol and wine. Whatever quantity of water there is in any drink, does alcohol combine with any substance. It is always alcohol in its potency, and in its responsibility, let all parts exist in all places, until it is decomposed. Cover its taste as we may, it is there in animals, ready at all times to inflict its natural alcoholic effects upon internal structures of man whenever it touches them.

Another Questioner inquires very naturally if it will be admissable to give a little insight into the structure of the "yeast cells," and if so, what is the shortest name to call it by.

Certainly, this will be in order in the next paper. I shall discuss one of the most peculiar facts of the human world—the blood relationship of the cells. The blood cells refuse to intermingle with each other; and though the blood cells are much smaller in size than the yeast cells, they are much more numerous, and I shall be much astonished if every reader does not find something new to him in the talk about the life blood of these minute existences in his own blood. As he will be able to read it, and no one can read it for him, I shall not be responsible for anything in regard to alcohol—"None of that in mine, I thank you."

—About sixty persons were present at the young men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. hall last evening. Mr. R. L. Bonney led the meeting and a male choir furnished excellent music.

Called Her Bad Names.

Gertrude Hamilton (colored) appeared before Justice Nash and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Lena Randolph, also colored, charging her in the complaint with having used "foul and abusive language" by calling her the complainant "a black nigger wench" and obstructing the progress of deponent while passing through East Third street near Richmond street on Saturday, the 11th instant. The warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Smith yesterday who apprehended the accused in a house on East Front street where she is employed, and arraigned her before the Justice, who imposed a fine of two dollars, including costs, which amount she paid.

Meeting of the T. A. B. Society.

The members of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society held their regular fortnightly meeting in St. Mary's Hall at eight o'clock last evening. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting and the transaction of the routine business, the secretary and treasurer presented their annual statement which showed the society to be in a flourishing condition. Five applicants were admitted to membership. At the conclusion of the meeting pamphlets containing a detailed account of the proceedings of the State Convention held in Newark recently, were distributed among the members.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democratic Executive Committee of Union county has called a meeting for this (Tuesday) evening, when Friday, September 24th, was designated as the date for holding the Democratic Gubernational convention, and Wednesday, September 29th inst., as the time for the Congressional convention. It is said that Mr. Caleb B. Smith's name will be but one primary held on September 24th, at which delegates will be elected to both conventions.

Frederick Warde.

Frederick Warde, the eminent tragedian, will present "Virginius" at Music Hall tonight. This great Roman tragedy will be placed upon the stage with all the new scenery, costumes and properties used by Mr. Warde at the Grand Opera House, New York, last week. Mr. Warde is admitted by all to be the greatest "Virginius" of the present day, and his company the strongest on the stage.

Personal.

Mrs. James B. Clarkson of Arlington avenue has gone on a three weeks' visit to friends at Newton, N. J.

Mrs. C. H. Gill of West Fourth street had a night blooming cereus in full bloom to-day. The bud opened this morning and remained open until afternoon.

Fire Commissioner Brower returned from Her Himer county last evening to remain in town a few days to attend to matters relating to the Fire Department.

Mrs. Rayl of Marion, Ohio, formerly Miss McMurtrie of this city, is on a visit at the home of her parents in North Plainfield. She remains East until October 1st.

Miss Lillian A. Dorman, of Central avenue, has arrived home after a pleasant sojourn in upper New York State.

Mrs. S. I. Mitchell and two daughters, the Misses Daisy and Kittie of Fourth street, West, are home again after an absence of several weeks at Southold, Long Island.

Messrs. John L. Applegate of Monmouth, John F. Babcock of Middlesex, and Amos Clark, jr., of Union, have been selected as the Republican Executive Committee for the Third Congressional District.

Noah T. Pike of Savannah, Ga., who has been sojourning here, has lately purchased from Messrs. Sorrell & Pound a Rudge light roadster bicycle. He is very much pleased with the running and beauty of this prince of light wheels, the workmanship of which is as near perfection as art and skill can make it. The enterprising firm are also agents for the celebrated Victor line of wheels, among which is the justly celebrated American machine, the "Victor," the king of staunch and easy-running bicycles, several of which wheels said firm have sold this season.

The body of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was nearly filled at eleven o'clock this morning with relatives and friends of the late Collie Johnston, a son of President John Taylor Johnston, who died at his home on East Front street on Saturday morning after a lingering illness from consumption, in the thirty-fourth year of his age. The services were conducted to pay their last respects to his memory. The funeral cortege arrived at the church about eleven o'clock and the body, which was encased in a black cloth casket, oxidize metal mountings, and tufted inside with cream-colored satin, was borne up the right-hand center aisle and deposited at the foot of the altar. Mr. H. C. Lindsey meanwhile rendered an organ voluntary, the relatives and immediate friends of the family occupying the front seats on the right. On the pulpit rested a wreath of roses and a cross of ivy leaves. A pillar of white occupied a position on the platform, and was surrounded by numerous potted plants and flowers. Rev. Dr. Hamilton opened the service with Scripture reading and prayer, and the choir composed of Mrs. J. J. Bliss, Miss Hinchman, Messrs. A. J. Gavett and Elmer Bunyon sang an appropriate hymn, which was followed by a Scripture reading by the Rev. Dr. J. J. Bliss, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church. Rev. Mr. Richards paid a fitting tribute to the deceased, followed by Rev. Dr. Hamilton, pastor of the Presbyterian church in New York city, of which President Johnston was a member, who offered a fervent prayer, and the choir sang another hymn. At the conclusion of the services the body was conveyed to the depot and placed in a special car and taken to Greenwood on the 12.35 p. m. train for burial in the family lot. The pall bearers were Messrs. H. F. Seidle, general Eastern passenger agent; Anthony Hinchman, general Western passenger agent; Jersey Central division; P. H. Wyckoff, general Eastern freight agent; Anthony Hinchman, general Western freight agent; Jersey Central division; Samuel Knox, secretary Central railroad; Anthony Hinchman, jr., and John Kean of Elizabeth. Col. E. H. Hoge, who was the first corporate locomotive over the Central road, J. Taylor Johnston, Samuel Sheppard and others.

Shot at a Bird, Killed a Man.

Port Jervis, Mich., Sept. 14.—James Dorr, a young married man, was arrested here for shooting Albert Ribald, in the town of Cason, on Saturday afternoon. Dorr was out shooting birds and took aim at one which was on a fence. On the other side of the fence was Ribald, who received the charge in the breast. Twenty-eight shot holes were made in his clothing, and one entered his heart, the charge making a most frightful wound. The wounded man died almost instantly. Dorr claims that he did not see Ribald, who was but twenty feet away. His story is not believed, and he will be examined on the charge of murder.

Permitted to Go to Work.

Wilkinson, Del., Sept. 14.—The morocco strike is practically off. The workers of several factories met and voted unanimously to go to the Knights to go back to work. The strike will, it is said, be declared off this week. The change has been brought about by mutual concessions. The bosses will not discriminate against any man for his affiliations or acts, and the men consent to go back to work as individuals, and not as Knights. Many will be unable to get work on account of new men having secured their places.

Weather Indications.

THE MAINE ELECTION.

A Comparatively Light Vote With a Republican Victory.

TOM REED IS RE-ELECTED.

Blaine's Friend, Chairman Manley, Elected to the Legislature.

Bodwell Elected Governor by About 14,000 Plurality—A Solid Delegation in Congress Elected by the Republicans, With a Large Working Majority in the Legislature.

Augusta, Sept. 14.—Election day in Maine is the most quiet day of the liveliest of autumn days, but regardless of the suspicious weather or the vote of the state shows a large reduction over that of two years ago. The returns indicate the election of Bodwell, Republican, for governor, by a reduced majority from that given to Robie two years ago. The returns from 150 towns show a reduction in the Local Republican vote of 4,987, and in the Democratic vote of 1,785. The reduction in the Republican plurality, therefore, foots up 3,202. If this ratio continues through the state the Republican plurality will be reduced about 6,000 from 1884. It is evident that Bodwell has received from 12,000 to 14,000 plurality.

The fight has not been an enthusiastic or exciting one. The Democrats have had few meetings, while the Republicans have stumped every part of the state with their ablest speakers, headed by Mr. Blaine, who has spoken in nearly every county. Very few Democratic speakers have been on the stump, and none of any prominence except the Hon. E. F. Pillsbury of Boston, who made two speeches. St. John's canvass was a warm one, and in some instances interesting, especially his replies to Mr. Blaine.

GOVERNOR-ELECT BODWELL.

The only congress district in Maine where any contest was made, or where any prospect existed for a Democratic victory, was in Tom Reed's district, consisting of Cumberland and Androscoggin. The Democratic party there placed in nomination the Hon. Wm. H. Clifford, the Maine member of the National Democratic committee. Two years ago Reed had a plurality over Nathan Cleaves of 995, though Robie carried the district by 1,912. This year the returns indicate that the ballots are scattered, and Reed's plurality will exceed Bodwell's.

Joseph H. Manley, of Augusta, chairman of the Republican state committee, has been elected to the legislature from this city. In Bath, J. W. Wakefield, the Sagadahoc member of the same committee, was also elected to both body. Portland returns Prof. W. Dow, who is likewise an influential light in this committee, as a member of the house. This triumvirate have long been the chief managers under Blaine. In Rockland, Charles E. Littlefield, a member of the committee for Knox county, was a candidate for the legislature, and was defeated by a labor candidate endorsed by the Democrats. Mr. Littlefield was a member of the last house, and was a prominent candidate for the speakership next year. Nine-tenths of the legislature are Republican, giving that party control on joint ballot, and insuring the re-election of Eugene Hale to the United States senate.

In Bangor the vote for governor, of which Bodwell has 1,782, Edwards 1,448 and Clark 97; Bodwell's plurality, 314. For congress, Boutelle (Rep.) has 1,808 and Lynch (Dem.) 1,477; Boutelle's plurality, 331. The Republican representative and the entire county ticket are elected, save possibly the sheriff.

Sagadahoc county gives Bodwell about 1,200 plurality. For senator, Benjamin F. Hinckley (Rep.), and the four Republican representatives are elected by about 1,100 plurality.

Androscoggin county complete gives Bodwell (Rep.) 4,126; Edwards (Dem.) 3,674; Clark (Prohibition) 1,067. The Republican candidates for senator and for county officers are all elected. The Republicans have also elected all of the eleven representatives to the legislature.

Returns from a large number of towns in the Second district show that Dingley (Rep.) has been re-elected to congress by over 7,000 plurality over Garcelin (Dem.) and 3,000 majority over all. Dingley runs ahead of his ticket. A large number of Democrats voted for Smith, the Labor and Prohibition party candidate.

One hundred and eighty towns give Bodwell (Rep.) 39,097; Edwards, 32,014; Clark, 1,947, against Robie in 1884, 44,641; Redman, 32,936; Prohibition, 741; Greenback, 1,701, and scattering, 6. Republican plurality, 7,083, against 10,208, a loss of 3,125.

The congressional vote in: First district, 1,500 plurality for Reed, and the indications are that the other districts will give much larger Republican majorities.

Franklin county elects the Republican ticket, including the senator and four representatives. The county has probably given a good Democratic representative. The Republican majority is about 600.

Thirty towns in Washington county give Bodwell (Rep.) 1,545; Edwards 1,345; and Clark 205. Bodwell will carry the county by about 1,000 majority.

Lincoln county gives Bodwell about 450 plurality. Melville (Rep.) is re-elected senator, and all the Republican nominees for county officers were elected. Five Republican representatives and one Democratic representative are elected.

The Republicans elect the entire county ticket in Piscataquis county by over 900 majority. The Republican members and representatives are all elected.

Portland, Sept. 14.—Returns indicate that the Republican ticket will receive less than the plurality of four years ago, and about one-third of the plurality of the presidential election of 1884. A falling off from the presidential majority was expected, but the Republicans did not anticipate how much the plurality of Gov. Robie in 1884, which was about 8,000 votes ahead of it, would be cut down from the early part of the state election, and the analysis is full of surprises. Compared with 1884, all cities except Augusta show Democratic gains, while there are gains for the Republican candidate for governor. Augusta gives the largest Republican majority on record—1,239 for Bodwell to 510 for Edwards. Biddeford took a sharp turn the other way—724 for Bodwell to 1,018 for Edwards.

The Prohibitory vote will probably exceed 5,000, against 381 in 1882 and 1,157 in 1884. But the Prohibitory vote, it appears, did not by any means come exclusively from the Republican party. This is evident from the fact that the total vote will nearly reach that of 1882, while the Republican plurality does not nearly fall behind that of Robie in that year. Many Greenbackers voted the Prohibitory ticket and so did some Democrats. In 1882 Rolan Chase, Greenback, polled 1,800 votes, and most of them seem to have gone to the Prohibitionists.

Figures received indicate that the Republicans have a special majority of the sixteen counties. This leaves three-fourths of the senate to that party and a large majority of the house.

There has been no demonstration over the result. Indeed, the first returns from the cities and large towns early in the evening alarmed the Republican leaders, for the governor, by a majority less if they had continued in the same proportion through the state the result would be greatly in doubt. The gains in the back towns saved the day.

MAYOR SMITH FOUND GUILTY.

The Committee Recommend that He be Impeached.

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—The committee of investigation into the charges against Mayor Smith have reported to the common council that he is guilty of misdemeanor and maladministration of office. The findings are:

First—That the mayor received and retained license fees which it was not made his duty by any law to receive, and which should have been turned over to the city treasury.

Second—That he has interfered with the law requiring the regulation of pawnbrokers, thus enabling them to carry on business without license.

Third—By failing to exercise proper supervision over the affairs of his office, whereby moneys belonging to the city were collected during the years 1884 and 1885 and retained in the office of a clerk, named Fell, of such clerk, who made no return to the city treasurer or to the city controller of moneys so received, and so remained until forced to do so from fear of discovery.

Fourth—In that he was negligent in the discharge of his duties as a sworn public officer, whereby it was possible for John L. Linton, the mayor's private secretary, to alter checks drawn to the order of the city treasurer, that the mayor might deposit them in his private bank account, and that it was possible for the said John L. Linton to receive and retain public moneys and appropriate the same to his own use, which moneys should have been paid into the city treasury, and in that the said John L. Linton was not required to keep any books of account nor to make returns of the moneys which he had been delegated by the mayor to collect.

Fifth—By reason of his negligence in the supervision of the police department special officers were appointed to the neglect of duty had to be admitted and whose services were so seldom rendered that they could not account before the committee for the work for which they had received pay from the city.

The committee recommends the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, by the common council of the city of Philadelphia, that the Hon. William B. Smith, mayor of Philadelphia, be and is hereby impeached for misdemeanor and maladministration in office.

Mr. Clarkin, of the committee, made a minority report finding agreeing with the majority. It recommends that the mayor be allowed to listen to with intense interest, and was followed by considerable excitement. The council then postponed further consideration of the matter to Monday next, at which time it will give the members time to study the report and the evidence.

The mayor's private secretary, Maj. Linton, has resigned on account of the mayor's dissatisfaction with his course in regard to the matters which have been made the basis of charges against the mayor.

A PARSON'S PERIL.

He has the Spirit of Madame De Barr After Him.

Ocean Bay, Mass., Sept. 14.—The Rev. Mr. Skinner, of Cambridge, a recent convert from Roman Catholicism, created a sensation at the session of the Onset Bay Spiritual lyceum by denouncing by implication Madame De Barr, the spirit picture-taking medium, as a fraud. Mrs. A. E. Pennet, of Malden, who represented this, and one woman, Mrs. A. E. Pennet, of Malden, rose and replied bitterly to the clergyman's attack. Mrs. Pennet, although at the grove, was not present, and she has repeatedly threatened to horsewhip any man who dares to say she is anything but a reputable woman. The Rev. Mr. Skinner now expresses much anxiety for his future, as he is a small man with one maimed limb, and the madam is a stout, powerful woman in full possession of her powers.

A Youthful Prize Fight.

New York, Sept. 14.—Eddy Joyce, aged 18, and Billy Knight, aged 17, fought for desperate rounds with small gloves, Sunday morning, in Vanderveer's woods, Canarsie. Joyce came to scratch at 4:30 to fight. The boys were about evenly matched, and fought like bulldogs. In the tenth round they both fell exhausted, but continued to strike at each other in a weak way, disregarding the referee's efforts to part them. Finally the crowd dragged them apart, and the battle was declared a draw. Both boys were terribly pounded.

Killed by Grizzly Bears.

Cincinnati, Sept. 14.—Wyatt, John Holhoeffer, a keeper at the Zoological garden, was cleaning out the grizzly bears' den he was set upon by one of the bears, and before help could be rendered him was literally torn to pieces. Holhoeffer was somewhat intoxicated at the time, and it is supposed that he entered the cage for the purpose of washing the floor. The bear's keeper had left the key in the door, and Holhoeffer, in his drunken condition, forgot to lock the door after him. The bear's keeper was discharged yesterday for negligence.

IRISH EVICTION FACTS.

A CIRCULAR FOR THE INFORMATION OF AMERICAN READERS.

Reviewing the Irish Tenantry Question From the Landlord's Standpoint—The Immense Sums of Money Contributed to the League and What is Done With It.

London, Sept. 14.—The Irish Loyal and Patriotic union has issued a pamphlet for the use of the press and members of the house of commons, and which they are circulating widely throughout the kingdom, showing the action of the Irish tenants from the landlord's point of view. The following portion of the pamphlet is furnished by the union for circulation in America:

"The action of the Irish tenant farmer within the past sixteen years has undergone marked amelioration, owing to the enactment of various remedial statutes. There has certainly been no time in the history of Ireland, considered, there is nothing exceptionally bad in the condition of agriculture in Ireland. The Irish tenant farmers have greater advantages than the farmers of any other country elsewhere, and, with improved methods, there is reason to look to the future with confidence. Some two years ago the power of eviction has been taken of the right to sell interests in holdings.

Laying aside all rhetorical bosh, it is necessary to state concisely the actual facts concerning evictions. By the land act of 1881 a tenant cannot possibly be evicted unless he fails to pay his rent or refuses to comply with certain conditions which are not forming imaginary grievances. Ejectment for non-payment of rent cannot be brought for less than a year's rent actually due, and, moreover, the tenant has the privilege to redeem at any time within six months after the execution, or may within the same period sell his tenancy, after the execution of the ejectment, to any body any one wishes to purchase and who has the privilege of redeeming. Besides this, the tenant has many other advantages, and the landlord has many disadvantages and costly to the landlord, and are only practiced in extreme cases. Should a year's rent fall due in September, October or November, the landlord cannot issue the writ until the January sessions, and six months more must elapse before he can obtain possession of the land. The landlord is then liable in the shape of costs for the whole of the half year's rent, and three months more must elapse before he can fully recover the tenancy.

In 1881 the Irish holdings numbered 595,954, and the number of evictions during the first six months of 1886 was only 2,007, a large majority of these being for more than a year's rent, whereby it was possible for John L. Linton, the mayor's private secretary, to alter checks drawn to the order of the city treasurer, that the mayor might deposit them in his private bank account, and that it was possible for the said John L. Linton to receive and retain public moneys and appropriate the same to his own use, which moneys should have been paid into the city treasury, and in that the said John L. Linton was not required to keep any books of account nor to make returns of the moneys which he had been delegated by the mayor to collect.

Fifth—By reason of his negligence in the supervision of the police department special officers were appointed to the neglect of duty had to be admitted and whose services were so seldom rendered that they could not account before the committee for the work for which they had received pay from the city.

The committee recommends the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, by the common council of the city of Philadelphia, that the Hon. William B. Smith, mayor of Philadelphia, be and is hereby impeached for misdemeanor and maladministration in office.

Mr. Clarkin, of the committee, made a minority report finding agreeing with the majority. It recommends that the mayor be allowed to listen to with intense interest, and was followed by considerable excitement. The council then postponed further consideration of the matter to Monday next, at which time it will give the members time to study the report and the evidence.

The mayor's private secretary, Maj. Linton, has resigned on account of the mayor's dissatisfaction with his course in regard to the matters which have been made the basis of charges against the mayor.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT THE CAPITAL OF THE NATION.

The State Department and Canadian Quarantine—Defects in the Plans for a New Cruiser—Public Printer Benedict's Bond Approved.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—While no definite official decision has yet been reached, it is probable that a bond call for at least $10,000,000 will be issued this week.

Acting Secretary Fairchild has called upon the state department for an official statement of the operations of the Canadian quarantine regulations on cattle from the United States, in connection with the proposition to establish quarantine protection in this country against Canadian stock supposed to be infected.

The reports of discoveries of defects and liabilities in the plans of one of the new cruisers are said by the navy department to have slight foundation. In preparing plans for a vessel for shallow water cruising, it was proposed to protect her bottom with wood to prevent serious consequences from striking a rock. Secretary Whitney approved this plan, but subsequently decided that the wooden protection was not in literal compliance with the law providing that it should be a steel vessel, and at the last moment a change of plan was ordered.

The treasury department has of late received numerous demands for five-cent "nickels" and one-cent pieces. The number of these coins in circulation fails far short of the denominative small sums of currency. To meet these demands the secretary of the treasury has issued a circular announcing that five-cent nickels and one-cent pieces will be forwarded from the Philadelphia mint in sums of $20, or multiples thereof, free of transportation charges, to any points reached by the Adams Express Company.

The bond of Thomas H. Benedict, government printer, is approved by the acting secretary of the interior, and the commission issued. The following are the sureties: W. C. Derby, J. N. Cox, Martin Frollinwyk, Abrahma Costello, Clark Eaton, Michael Mullen, John T. Dewitt, John W. Rode, George G. Kesler, F. B. Deneale, Leslie J. Perry, John A. J. Creswell, C. M. Preston, J. N. Werner, H. G. Crouch, W. Scott Gillespie, Charles Brodbeck, Andrew Humphrey, John C. Hovelskoff and R. H. D. Hornbrook. The bond was certified to by Martin I. Townsend, United States district attorney. When the affidavit as to the signatures was attached it was formally approved. Mr. Benedict took charge of the government printing office to-day.

R. W. Wear, late superintendent of the Yellowstone National park, has submitted his report for the last fiscal year. The appropriations for the year amounted to $40,000 and disbursements to $39,000. His reports game more plentiful than ever before; that elk, antelope, deer and mountain sheep are in large herds.

Travel during the past season has exceeded that of any previous year. The Yellowstone Park association has leased sites at Hot Springs, Norris Geyser Basin, Fire Hole, and Upper Geyser Basin for the erection of hotels. He recommends the establishment of a court in the park, with exclusive jurisdiction over misdemeanors and power to examine cases of delays to be tried in the courts of nearest jurisdiction, as Wyoming territorial laws, under which the park was protected, have been repealed. As the last congress refused to appropriate for salaries of park officers and provided for its being turned over to the military on Aug. 20, Capt. Harris, of troop M, First cavalry, took charge of the park.

Lake Vessels Windbound.

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., Sept. 14.—The report of the loss of the steamer Gracie Barker is not confirmed. She is a small passenger steamer running between Charlevoix and Petoskey. She is owned and commanded by Walter F. Greyslor, of Benton Harbor. There is probably no foundation to the report. The storm was very severe, but no accidents to vessels are reported here. The schooners Thomas Hume, Annie Dall, Pinnsix and Cape Horn came in for shelter and are as yet windbound.

Father Fahy in Jail.

DUBLIN, Sept. 14.—Father Fahy, pastor of the Catholic church at Woodford, county Galway, was arraigned before the magistrate at Woodford, charged with threatening the owner of property at that place, whose tenants had been evicted. He was ordered to furnish bail for his good behavior for six months, or to be imprisoned for a like period. Father Fahy refused to give bail and declared his preference for imprisonment.

Labor Demonstration.

ATHOL, Mass., Sept. 14.—The most extensive labor demonstration which ever occurred in northern Worcester county came off here last-night. Delegations of Knights were present from all parts of the vicinity. Special trains were run. Addresses were made by Senator Howard, of Fall River, and others.

Baggagemasters Get More Pay.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 14.—All the baggagemasters on the eastern division of the Consolidated road have received an increase in salary from $48 to $50 per month. The increase took effect Sept. 1 without a demand from the employes.

Connecticut Y. M. C. A.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 14.—It is announced that the annual convention of the Young Men's Christian association of Connecticut will be held this year at Stamford, Sept. 30, and Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

ENVOY SEDGWICK'S CERTIFICATES,

He Says He Has Abundant Proof of His Innocence.

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 14.—Mr. A. G. Sedgwick, the United States envoy, was busily engaged Saturday and Sunday with Consul Brigham on the Cutting investigation. In reply to the question as to how much truth there was in the scandalous stories that had been telegraphed about him from Mexico, he said: "I have in all my stay in Mexico kept in controvert the malicious falsehood, and feel that I cannot go into this matter and attend to the business for which I came down here, and so I have concluded to confine myself to the investigation and get through with it just as fast as I can. I do not know how the slander and artful story ever originated, except that I learned that some person in the City of Mexico telegraphed to a Chicago paper asking what they would pay for a Sedgwick scandal; and that the paper replied instead a price, and that this utterly groundless story is the result. Of course it has hurt me, but I have taken all the necessary steps to counteract any effects on the public mind. Mr. Sedgwick said that he had made considerable progress; had compiled and gathered a great many documents bearing on the case, but would say nothing as to the aspect. He will remain here perhaps a week, and may be compelled to go back to Chihuahua or even to the City of Mexico before his return to Washington.

THOSE SEIZED SEALERS.

Secretary Bayard Denies the Reported Canadian Demand.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Secretary Bayard authorizes a denial of the reports of a demand having been made by the Canadian or British governments or the receipt at the department of any other communication in reference to the seizure of the British sealers by the revenue cutter Corwin. He discredits the reported utterances of the Canadian commissioner of fisheries as published. If the treasury department has the full measure to have been improper, or if that decision is reached by any other competent tribunal, an international question of damages may arise which the diplomatic representatives of the United States and Great Britain would amicably adjust. If the question of the legality of these seizures arises it will be a new diplomatic question and will, of course, receive prompt attention at the department, but this question has not yet been raised. The matter is as yet officially before the treasury department only; but at the state department the rights and obligations of the United States in Canadian waters is the subject of study in view of the possibility of international discussion of the question.

His Lady Love is True.

WARREN, O., Sept. 14.—After four days' tedious work, and after exhausting the venire of over 800 in the noted Webster murder trial, a jury has not been secured. The defense is now standing by the verdict of Coroner Mrs. Sophia Hall, Webster's affianced, arrived from Geneva, and created quite a sensation as she hurried to embrace and kiss her court. She says she has come to stay during the trial. The only immediate relative of the prisoner here is his father, who sits by his boy's side with a countenance filled with sadness. Interest grows more and more intense. The sheriff was obliged to close the court room doors to keep back the rush. Over 250 witnesses have been summoned. The trial will probably last three weeks or longer.

The bathing costumes at Narragansett Pier are exciting some criticism, but if they are anything like those worn at other resorts this season, they are mighty small things to quarrel about.—New Haven News.

A Remarkable Man.

"You say that you were in the Union army during the war?" "Yes, sir; I was at Gettysburg." "At Gettysburg? Well, I suppose you have written a graphic article about the mistakes of the battle?" You can get $100 a week in a museum."—Texas Siftings.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do.

Mr. W. Frost street, Plainfield, N. J., June 29, '86.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers,

Dear Sir:—You ask my opinion of your Stomatine. With a knowledge of your formula I will say with pleasure, that the ingredients used in its manufacture are the best for the purpose intended, and I believe it will prove a valuable remedy, and that you have a right to be proud of your success. I believe and know it to be a good remedy, and that you are right in your claim for the use that you prescribe it. Yours truly, Wm. H. Vosseller.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers,

Dear Sir:—I have used your Stomatine in my family and daughter in the city and New York, I am free to say that I find it better than any I have ever used, and I have used it I know. If and I have used it freely in my case, and I have found more relief from it than from any other I have used. If that expression is allowed with your testimonials you are at liberty to use it. Yours truly,

THE SWIMMING BATH.

HOW WOMEN LEARN TO SWIM IN SALT WATER.

One of New York's Summer Attractions. Natatorial Recreation at the Battery. Some Reflections on the Cause of Old Age—Gray-Haired Swimmers.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—New York city is not wholly without attractions in the summer. Among them are the swimming baths. If these were only to accommodate men, they would be lacking in interest, for men can swim in any sort of a pond, sheltered or unsheltered—even in the "dirty pool of politics." But swimming is a comparatively new art for women, and, as yet, needs various helps and comforts to make it alluring.

The swimming bath which I patronize is down on the Battery, just below Castle Garden. The way thither is not beguiling, although the fresh air from the sea meets one, and Battery park is fine in its summer foliage. The numerous emigrant is the unpleasant feature of the trip. He is there in all his native filth, smoking pipes with odors strong enough to take the breath from a hackman. His children are there, vilely dirty and scantily clothed. His wife is there, very dirty, also, and somewhat hungry-looking. The park's benches are always full of these new candidates for fortune in the land of the free. They are not inspiring objects to look upon, and a sensitive person feels their atmosphere of dejection and misery.

A little bridge leads across to the bath, a long, boat-like house in the water, which is nearly divided into a swimming bath for men and one for women. Hot salt water baths are also a feature of this very useful institution. This boat-like house on the waters arrives at the Battery on the 1st of June, and, securing its summer's privileges there by paying a rousing rent to the authorities, it opens its doors to the public at 25 cents a bath, ten cents extra for a bathing suit, and a hot bath for 40 cents.

During the month of June it isn't very well patronized, but through July and August everybody bathes, and bathes often. The baths are open from 6 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night, electric light helping on the darkness work after dark. The women's bath is conducted by women, office work and all. The bath is about thirty feet wide and forty long. On three sides is built a platform reached by steps going up out of the water. Thereon the boldest of the fair climb and then drop recklessly into the water again, coming down with a great splash, exciting the admiration of the less daring and coming up twenty feet away with red faces and blowing like porpoises, "quite like men," as a little girl said.

WITHIN THE SWIMMING BATH.

The picture just given represents a nymph making a lean from the platform in the center, another flying head first from the steps, and a third taking a running jump from another step, while in the water may be seen a whole school of bathers. Observe the costume universally worn. It is sensible and beautiful, and destitute of that horrible appendage, a skirt, which hampers the movements and adds to the ugliness of women who bathe in the ocean. Here the costume is a snug, sleeveless garment cut to fit the body, and covering it only from the neck to the knees. Nor is it any more indecorous than a skirted costume, for it covers the form enough to preserve the decencies and even the delicacies, and allows perfect freedom of movement. Imagine a woman learning to swim in skirts.

After several visits to this bath I made up my mind that clothes contribute largely not only to the appearance of age, but to the feeling of age. Gray-haired and withered women looked like young girls in these bathing costumes, and imported themselves with a grace and a merry characteristic of youth. They forgot their years when the garments that represented them were laid aside. What a pity they could not be permitted to wear such clothes! How they would help them to forget it all the time! How persistent our costumes and customs enforce age upon women. A woman in her forties stepped gayly out of her dressing room in a blue flannel bath suit that made a child of her at once. "Why, I don't feel a bit more than 19 years old," she said, in the fullness of her joy, when the ogiow at the precious few moments of freedom from conventional clothes that was just then ahead of her. She didn't look more than 19, at least. She had the figure of an extremely girlish figure, with dainty, white, childlike arms, and a face that had something of the expression, as well as the roundness, of childhood in it still. By and by, when the bath was over, and she was arrayed in her long skirt, bustle and bonnet, and the dignity of her costume, she looked her 40 odd years to a day. Yes, I am sure that dress is the worst enemy women have to fight. It is the most active agent in making them old. We are suffering from too much civilization.

Many good swimmers are among the bathers. They paddle about quite at their ease, chatting and encouraging the timid. Any one chats with her nearest neighbor if she feels like it, and the neighbor replies unhesitatingly. Here, too, the absence of the conventional garments has wrought a good result. It has removed the constraint which causes women when they are thrown together in an informal way, in the cars or on the bath they act quite like men, and indulge in no footlinges in the way of drawing lines. Everybody is the equal of everybody else while in the water. After they are arrayed in their street clothes they become prim and rigid again, looking well to the "lines" as drawn by the fleet Caste.

The next picture represents the swimming teacher with a pupil in tow. Ordinarily the rope is held in front of the swimmer, and is the main agent, in the early stages of the art, of keeping her head out of the water. Only an advanced pupil has the rope fastened at her back. Then she is truly at sea, for if she becomes panic stricken she has nothing to clutch at but the unsubstantial atmosphere and the unoccupied water. The teacher, herself a naturalized adept, calls out: "Put out more to the sides with your feet; paddle slowly with your arms; feet down; down; keep your arms under water," and other monitory instructions. The pupil struggles, claws at the water, gasps, but persists, and is frequently graduated with honors.

One young girl who proposes to hold me that she taught herself this season by hanging about the steps, without a teacher. Finally she gained confidence, launched out, and found that she could swim as well as any one.

One day, while splashing around in the bath, I saw an elderly German woman, arrayed for the water, sitting disconsolately on the steps, but apparently fearing to get wet. I pitied her, and thought of going up and offering to lead her down. She was merely meditating, it seems, for presently she took a resolute plunge into the pool and swam like a trout. When she paddled around near me I congratulated her on her skill.

"Oh, I shwim dese vourteen years," she said. "I vent to de shwimming school on Sixty-seventh street, and everybody shwam so well I was shamed not to shwim; so I just begun and shwam like de rest."

THE SWIMMING TEACHER.

One woman swam for half an hour with a baby boy of three years clinging to her neck all the time. Another woman showed me a handsome ring on her hand one day, and said: "I lost this ring when in the water last Saturday, and to-day I went over all the corners where I had lost it, hunted for it with my feet, found it, and picked it up with my toes. Wasn't that wonderful? It is my wedding ring."

Some very lovely girls are seen in this bath sometimes. I have noticed, too, that it takes an exceptionally handsome girl to look well in the water. The hair gets wet and stringy, and faces, fair as water lilies at other times, get red and rather oily looking. But all these drawbacks are atoned for by the fresh beauty of the bather after the bath is over. Her eyes are bright as jewels, and her color fresh and lovely, and for a few hours, at least, she feels as if she had been made over.

When Oct. 1 arrives our swimming bath is hitched to a tug and pulled over to a boat hospital in Brooklyn, there to remain until the flowers bloom again in the spring.

ELLIS CLARMEL.

INKLINGS OF NEW YORK.

Maniacs Who Value Themselves on Their Idleness.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The assertion is continually made that we have no leisure class in this country. But we certainly have in this city, though the class may not be as large as in the leading capitals of the old world. Its members are constantly and rapidly growing, and part of the growth is not a healthful sign in a democracy, the true prosperity of which rests on labor, and where every worthy citizen ought to do some kind of work. There are thousands here who delight to speak of themselves as gentlemen of leisure, the idea of gentlemen being associated in their minds with sufficient money to preserve them from the need of any sort of occupation. It is this financial idea which prevents them from understanding the true character of the order to which they imagine they belong.

At some of the clubs, notably at the Union, the Knickerbocker, the Calumet and the St. Nicholas, you will always find during the season any number of idle individuals of refined minds who value themselves on their idleness. They are, for the most part, the inheritors of wealth, which they never could have earned, or the sons of rich men who have given them an allowance. It is repulsive to hear them talk. They positively think it is "vulgah"—this word is always on their lips—to earn money by any kind of work. Although they consider it quite the thing to win money by betting at cards or billiards, or on horse or yacht races. Their conversation, if one may call it such, is of an empty and frivolous character. It is all about games and sports, eating and drinking, London and Paris, Newport and Monaco, with an endless round of cocktails, interspersed with drawls, dilputed oaths and puffs of cigarettes. Their morals are manifestly as loose as their manners are stiff. They regard the cut and style of their clothes, the ability to distinguish between Chateau Lafitte and Chateau Margaux, the mode of entering a drawing room, the proper way to dine, as the most important things in the world. Their life is a monotonous round of self-indulgence and dissipation. They usually spend little more than two or three months out of the year by any kind of work. In winter, to the mountains, the seashore or Europe in summer; they are always coming or going, telling what they have done or will do. How can they subsist on such thin diet? How can they preserve even a semblance of sanity by following the treadmill round of fashion?

Many of these men are no longer young-headed and empty-hearted as these. A good many business men now retire after they have made a fortune and reached 50 or 60. They may continue to do nothing. All cannibalism find employment in looking after capital, but they study pictures, read a number of books, travel much, and enjoy various intellectual pleasures. This is shown by the fact that almost half of the 1,100 members of the stock exchange are temporarily or permanently abroad. A goodly number of professional men shake their seal now-a-days when they have acquired a handsome independence. Indeed, the withdrawal of men in various grades of life into a private or amateur way is at present quite common, and is beneficial to them as well as to the community. This class is totally different from the brainless dandies mentioned previously. Many of the clubs have a marked difference between mere idling and resting after years of hard labor. In twenty years more our leisure class will probably be three-fold what it is to-day. Americans work too hard and too long; those who live here have found it out and are trying to correct the habit. Everybody is the equal of everybody else while in the water. After they are arrayed in their street clothes they become prim and rigid again, looking well to the "lines" as drawn by the fleet Caste.

The next picture represents the swimming teacher with a pupil in tow. Ordinarily the rope is held in front of the swimmer, and is

A SHORT SERMON.

Bishop Gardner Gives Some Wholesome Advice to One Entering Matrimony.

Bruddor Amfled Cantilever, it am reported dat you am about to take unto yerself a wife. Dat de report am true your recent actions sum prove. You has bin seen packin' second-hand stoves, squintin' at fo' dollar bedroom sweets, an' rustlin' aroun' arter bicka-broc. Marriage am nuffin' you need no manshiny larnin' for, an' I stood on de dis club to warm up de house for you an' leave behind some hard-bottomed cheers an' a few articles of furnare.

Bruddor Cantilever, marriage am a lottery or a dead sure thing—jist as you make it. If you git stuck on sight—fall in luv wid a gal jist 'cause she's sweet on you, an' yer chin ar' warblin' music, an' marry her off-hand at about twelve weeks' notis, you needn't be astonished if dar am a dynamite explosion in yer midst. You has hitched a Small fest an' a good temper doan' allus go together. Silim waists an' kitchen economy may not work in de same harness. De gal at de piano, playin' de day wid one drums de planner may flatly refuse, as a wife, to run dem same fingers ober de washbo'd. Firstly, dan' git married 'cause you know what you are takin'. Secondly, study de gal. Let de fest go an' watch her temper. Let de bangs go an' watch her economy. Notice how she acts when de baby dimples her chin, but ax yerself if she'll make de bed wid de fost lower dan de head. You has got to do all de studyin'. Not one gal out of a thousand ober sixteen am a fool in luv. If his Grecian nose or curly h'ar or droopin' mustache strikes her fancy, she'll nebber stop to study his natur' nor to worry ober his habits. She is marryin' de nose, or head, or mustache. A month arter marriage, when he hauls her aroun' by de hair and slaps her dimpled jaw, she's perfectly astonished to think she made sich a mistake.

Secondly, Bruddor Cantilever, arter de knot has bin tied make up yer mind dat de fuchen won't be all plain sailin'. You are gwine to fersion all de troubles an' trubbles dat I've got to call up all yer manhood. You will h'ar de saucer scrapin' de bottom of de flour barl; dan you haven't got a cent in yer pocket. De woodpile will run out in Januwy, an' de sugar an' bacon will seem to be carried off by de rats. If yer wife am ober so goodnatured she will run over to see her friends an' tell 'em dat you am a mean cuss, an' dar may be times when she'll riz up an' claw fur you. In de y'ars gone by my ole woman has rushed upon me wid de rollin' pin, an' I has retorted in a way to make her cars ache, but all de time I was sorry she was savin' an' good hearted, an' she knowed I'd empty my pockets of de last shillin' to buy her a new set of false teeth. She was suited to each odder an occasshunal row in de fam'ly will prove a stickin' plaster to hold ye de clutter together. If you isn't suited—if you discober dat you has married a patch of Canada thistles an' can't sot still, an' it de older party diskivers dat she has taken a tumble off de monument of Romance an' brought up wid a thud in de mud hole of Reality, you jist absquatulate apart. Brudder Cantilever, my feelins an' de feelins of dis club am wid ye, an' our good wishes, together wid at least $2 worth of dinners, kin be counted on whenever de fatal occashun arroves.

A Good Case.

A well dressed stranger walked into the office of a Dakota lawyer and real estate agent and said:

"Suppose a man made misrepresentations to me about a piece of land he sold me, what could I do about?"

"Have him arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses."

"If he said it was good land and it won't raise white beans?"

"He could be heavily fined."

"And that there wasn't a stone on it and I find you could build a stone Methodist church off of every acre?"

"Imprisonment, sir, he would be lucky to get off with five years."

"That's what I thought. Now, if he said there were good buildings, and there proves to be only the lattice-work off of a bale of hay?"

"Why, my dear sir, nothing short of fine and imprisonment, and plenty of it, too. It would be a clear case."

"Much obliged; I had about the same ideas myself."

"Well, hold on; don't you want me to take your case?"

"Oh, no, I guess not. You see it was a piece of land you wrote to me about, and finally sold me. I've been out looking over it, and have returned this other man across the street to double my money. I just thought I'd step over and get your views on the subject, too. Well, good morning. I'll see you at the trial."—Estelline (D. T.) Bell.

Donkeys Were Always Fond of Thistles.

The latest fashionable freak in floriculture is the cultivation of the Scotch thistle. A correspondent says that it is a most handsome plant when properly cultivated. The picturesque plant which is greatly admired.

The other day a New York dude at Newport took a Boston dude to see this parterre of empty and frivolous heads. It is all about games and sports, eating and drinking, London and Paris, Newport and Monaco, with an endless round of cocktails, interspersed with drawls, dilputed oaths and puffs of cigarettes. JOTTINGS.

—The public school of Bound Brook opened the fall term with a membership of 150 scholars.

—In another column will be found an appeal from the Mayor, soliciting contributions to aid the Charleston sufferers.

—Schwed Brothers, Front street clothiers, have received a large line of elegant fall neckwear. The styles are prettier than ever.

—The members of the A. O. H., No. 4, held their regular September meeting in their rooms on North avenue at eight o'clock last evening.

—The Prohibitionists in the vicinity of Warren ville met in the Warren ville school house on Saturday evening for the purpose of organizing a Prohibition club.

—A son of James Pollack, a farmer of Washington Valley, while driving to Newark yesterday with a load of peaches, had the misfortune to have his wagon wrecked, whereby he lost about thirty baskets of peaches.

—The lighting-photographed picture of Miss Lilian Paul, is for the next three days, beginning to-morrow, to be on exhibition at the Job Male Art Gallery, at the request of the management that the public may have an opportunity to view it.

—A loaded coal car was being backed on the tr cesal near Church street yesterday afternoon, when the brake chain broke and the car run off the track and toppled over into Church street. Coal went down immediately but the price remained the same. No one was injured.

—A new horse belonging to Mr. W. M. Demarest of Crescent avenue ran away on Peace street yesterday afternoon, and was subsequently caught near the post office with the shafts and two front wheels of a peaston dangling at his heels. The phaeton was considerably damaged.

—Robert Flynn appeared before the City Judge this morning to answer to a charge of having violated the Second and Eighth Section of the Peace and Moral Act, by participation in a row on East Second street on Saturday evening, on account of which two of the participants have already been fined ten dollars each. Flynn was also committed to having witnessed the affair and the defendant pleaded guilty. Judge Ulrich severely reprimanded him and imposed a fine of ten dollars and costs.

—Two West Third street women, not unknown in the police courts, played a prominent part in a disgraceful street encounter on that thoroughfare about 10.45 o'clock this afternoon, during which some violent "slanging" was indulged in. The exasperated females were finally parted and went to their respective homes muttering threats of vengeance against each other. It appears that a fund of long standing has existed between these parties, and this was the first opportunity they had of settling it. Neither of the would-be pugilists was arrested.

—A Somerset street business man is said to have retired last night with a considerable amount of money which he placed under the pillow of his wife, keeping and with which he intended to pay some bills this morning. The story is told to the effect that during the night he was stricken with the nightmare and imagined that some one was after his money. He required extra space in bed, and to get it kicked his wife out on the floor. In his dream he is alleged to have dressed himself and crossed the street to inform a neighbor of his troubles, but arousing from his lethargic state returned to bed. This morning he found his wife on the floor but the depot is spread the day out of town and until the neighbors have laughed to their heart's contents.

Virginius and His Daughter.

In the year 449 to 447 before Christ, Rome was ruled by ten magistrates with absolute power and known as the Decemvirs, one of whom was Appius Claudius, a tyrant, noted for his cruelty toward Plebeians. He was of Sabine origin and of the patrician family of Claudii.

Virginius, a noble Roman citizen, had a beautiful daughter, Virginia, eighteen years old. His wife had died during the daughter's infancy, and Icilius, a daughter was very fond of each other, but he consents to have Icilius, a young Roman, her accepted lover, as his son-in-law. Icilius, though born in Dentatus, an old Roman general.

The Sabines have invaded Roman territory, and Virginius, being a military man, goes forth to defend their country, leaving Virginia in the care of her foster mother and uncle, Numitorius, who is a brother of Virginius.

Appius, who happened to see Virginia while she was bidding her fostermother a loving farewell, is struck by her beauty, falls in love with her, and resolves to possess her at all hazards.

In his home her history, and turns the circumstances of her mother's early death to serve his purpose. His confident Marcus Claudius, a client of his, to seize her as his slave, and bring her before him. Then Appius declares will order her to Marcus on the latter's oath that she is the daughter of one of his female slaves who had run away. Numitorius and Virginius are her child. Virginia is seized and dragged through the streets of Rome by Marcus Claudius, while Appius looks on. Most of her foster mother, her uncle and the plebeians, who follow her to the assembly, to demand her release. Their demands are met by intimidate Appius, especially when her betrothed Icilius, being away after corn and her foster mother had failed to change Appius for his purpose to make her out a slave, arrives and indignantly protests in behalf of his wife. Appius waves her hold by Marcus until the next day, when he promises to examine the case and decide accordingly.

The violent opposition to this by Icilius leads him the to offer to take care of her himself, but Virginius refuses. Decemvir go finally reluctantly consents to allow her friends to take her on the honor of Icilius to produce her the next day. Virginius, who has been dispatched to Virginius finds him before the dead body of Dentatus, who had been slain in battle. Virginius deeply moved is telling of the virtues of Dentatus, following him to his grave. The messenger had been instructed to secretly say to Virginius that he wanted in Rome on important business, fearing that in his anger at the outrage it told of it he might return to his troops and in his efforts to slay the villains give them a chance to jump to a cause to imprison him. But Virginius gets the story from the messenger, and then, furious at the Decemvirs, returns to Rome, to his betrothed daughter, hurries to Rome, where he arrives the same night, and the next day he is in the forum to prefer before the tribune. In the trial he finds himself helpless in the hands of villains, who protect Appius from the charges brought by the father of Virginia. Virginius seeing a knife in a butcher's stand near by, seizes it and stabs his daughter to the heart, before any other hope appears. As she falls dead at his feet he rushes back to the army and tells his story to the troops. They march back to Rome with which he killed her.

Appius concludes that Virginius will be taken by the army and punished as a murderer, but instead the soldiers become indignant at the outrage, overthrow the Decemvirs and cause them to go prison, where Virginius, who has lost his reason over the loss of his daughter, finding Appius, and before he strangles him. While clutching his dead victim's throat he is found by the foster mother, his brother Icilius, who rescues him from the dead body, but cannot make him recognize them. At last Icilius shows Virginius the ornaments he had given his daughter, and he dies fondly hugging it to his breast, uttering the most tender words of fatherly affection.

In such a story Fredrick Wards last night displayed at Stillman Music Hall his superior talent as an actor. The beautiful Miss Eugenie Blair ably personated his daughter Virginia.

At St. Joseph's parsonage in North Plainfield, at half-past eight o'clock last evening, Richard Day and Miss Alice O'Toole, both of this city, were united in wedlock by the Rev. T. J. O'Hanlon. The bride, a lovely brunette, was attired in a becoming dress of garnet silk trimmed with white lace and carried in her hand a bouquet of magnificent flowers. The groom was attired in the usual conventional suit of black. Mrs. Frank Day, in navy blue satin, and Miss Maggie Coleman of Motherwood, dressed in blue silk and white lace, acted in the capacity of bridesmaids, and Frank Day, a brother of the groom, and Daniel W. McDonough rendered assistance as best men. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents. After the marriage ceremony a reception was tendered the newly married couple at the residence of the bride's parents on East Second street, at which refreshments were served and dancing indulged in. Mr. and Mrs. Day left on an early train this morning to spend their honeymoon at Toms River, in South Jersey.

FIRE BOARD MEETING.

The regular September meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department was held in the city court room on West Front street last evening, beginning at eight o'clock. In the absence, from the city of Clerk Stover, City Clerk Rinaard Mervin was chosen as temporary clerk. The roll was called and the following members answered present: President Jones and Messrs. Brower, Rowland, Livingston, McClure—11.

The reading of the minutes of the last meeting was dispensed with upon motion of Mr. Livingston.

A communication in the shape of a contract from the New Jersey Car Spring and Rubber Company was read, stating that said company would agree to furnish 500 feet of Diamond Brand hose at 60 cents per linear foot, with a guarantee against wear, and warranted to stand 400 pounds pressure to the square inch. The matter was referred to Mr. McClure with instructions to draw up a perfect contract and present the same for approval.

The clerk read a communication from Ephyr Hook & Ladder Company stating that Thomas Kirby had been appointed driver for the company. The communication was received and the action of the company confirmed.

A communication from No. 3 Company, stated that at a regular meeting of the company R. C. Chambers had been expelled from the company on account of continued insubordination. The Secretary was instructed to notify Mr. Chambers of the company's action.

The same company nominated Peter Lieber for fireman, but the matter was laid over for thirty days under the rules.

The Union Gazelle Engine Company was read a communication nominating John Heath for membership. Laid over for thirty days.

Frank Stelle was elected to membership one dollar for membership certificate purchased for William Grogan of No. 2 company.

The bill of the New Jersey Car Spring and Rubber Company, $400, referred back to Mr. McClure for approval.

The bill of Engine Co., No. 3, $9.

A bill for ten dollars was presented by Charles Hoffman, and signed by Engine Co. No. 2 engine house was referred back to the Committee on Supplies for investigation.

Mr. Schwarts had been delegated the necessary authority from the Board, and Mr. McClure thought it unwise to pass any bills which would in the firemen might contract.

The President said that George Dixon and John Rickert had been appointed foreman of No. 1 Engine Company, had appeared before him and answered the necessary questions and had been duly sworn in by Judge Cole.

Mr. McClure said that No. 1 engine had been retired from active duty and placed on call, and that it was not desirable to have the engine with the condemned wheels from No. 2 engine. He also reported that the axles needed straightening, and that the election by Mr. Livingston, Commissioner of Streets and Public Improvements, of a new set of wheels from the Amoskeag Company. The Committee on Supplies was also directed by resolution to have the valves tightened and boiler repaired. The matter of fixing the fire well in front of Crescent Avenue church was referred to the President with power to have the same repaired.

Mr. McClure made a motion which was carried that the property owners along Cedar Brook be conferred with as to the advisability of constructing an eighteen inch sewer, which water may be backed up for use in case of fire.

The President was authorized to negotiate with Hugh Wrightson for the sale of some old hose.

The Chief said that No. 2 company was in need of a piece of canvas to cover the engine when not in use, but no action was taken in the matter.

The Board then adjourned.

Republican State Convention.

The following call has been issued by the Republican State Committee:

The Republican voters of the State of New Jersey are requested to send delegates to a State convention to be held at the Taylor Opera House, in the city of Trenton, on Tuesday, Oct. 12, 1886, at 12 o'clock noon, to nominate a candidate for Governor, to be supported at the ensuing November election.

The basis of representation under this call will be one delegate for each two hundred Republican votes cast at the last election for Governor in this State, and one delegate for each fraction thereof amounting one hundred and fifty. That each county or ward shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

Townships or wards created since the last election for Governor shall be entitled to due representation, but the number of delegates from the county will not be thereby increased. In such cases the County Committee will make the apportionment to existing townships and wards.

By order of the Republican State Executive Committee.

GARRET A. HOBART, Chairman.
JOHN T. FOSTER, Secretary.

Taxes of North Plainfield for 1886.

Assessor Brokaw says that the taxes of North Plainfield for 1886 will be as follows:

ON EACH $100.

For County	.27
" State	.25
" Township	.50
" Poor	.09
" Interest and Sinking Fund	.10—1.11
" Special School	.30
" Township School	.20
" Roads in Borough	.75
Total	1.56
To which must be added for State	.07
Total	$1.63

Last year the rate for collecting purposes was $1.30. The reduction this year is largely due to the increase in property, there having been added to the assessment list this year $1,000,000. The rate last year was 21 cents on the $100.

—Albert Perry of West Second street had the misfortune to lose another horse yesterday, one having died a few days ago.

WESTFIELD.

Mrs. L. H. Wilcox will remove to Cumberland street, near Union avenue.

Miss Fannie Loveridge opened her private school on Monday at Arcanum hall.

Sparkman & Sargar received the contract to build the new house for George Embree on Kimball avenue.

William H. Edgar, the expressman, has sold out his business to Mr. La Rose, a recent arrival from New York.

Miss Hattie Clark of St. Albans, Vermont, and Mrs. Alberina Crawford of Yonkers, Dakota, are visiting their relatives, Mrs. F. Hoscocks of Broad street.

At the last meeting of the B. & E. Co., No. 1, the matter of engine was at last decided and the preference given to a hand engine, and the committee was authorized to purchase one at once.

Sunday night seemed to have been a favored one for night blooming cereus. On that evening one was out with fifteen flowers at Mrs. J. M. C. Marsh's, Mrs. Gulick's, also with fifteen, and Mrs. Clarkson Sunday's with 8, the latter being in its flowering season.

The call for young Republicans to meet last week was not responded to as well as the leaders have a right to expect. A corporal's guard being present. A preliminary organization was formed, nevertheless, with F. R. Pearsall as chairman, Mr. Gulick's, also with fifteen, and Mrs. Clarkson Sunday's with 8, the latter being in its flowering season.

The Ballerophones have for a long time been rendering to the public concert music by their capable, Arthur Pierson, of riding from Plainfield post-office to Westfield post-office in July, August, September and perhaps no one seemed to be able to do it. Yesterday Consul F. A. Kinch and F. S. Miller made another attempt and succeeded. Mr. Miller made the run in 22 minutes and Fred Kinch in 23, leaving Arthur Pierson's record. This put quite a fever in some of their cogs, but Pierson will soon try it over again and see if he cannot even beat this last one.

DUNELLEN.

Miss Ella Boice, post mistress at Dunellen, is visiting friends in Newark.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a pink tea party Thursday evening in the basement of the church.

Two dwelling houses on Front street were sold here yesterday to one Mr. Codington of Passaic. They were purchased one by Frazon Vanderbilt and the other by Mr. Conover, D. Titsworth for $2500. They were considered bargains.

Marshal Benson arrested P. Moran at his home here yesterday afternoon for being drunk and disorderly. He was arraigned before Justice Cole and sentenced to the Middlesex County Jail at New Brunswick for ten days.

Yesterday Paul Kostasi and Pat McMahon went to New Brunswick on some court business. Pat, while there, took on board too much "bug juice," and on his return here he immediately became abusive towards Paul, and the latter procured a writ and arrested McMahon and took him before Judge Coles, who committed him to New Brunswick jail for ten days.

Patents to Jerseymen.

The following list of patents were issued to residents of this State for the week ending Sept. 11, 1886:

Too Much for "Gep."

The news from Maine is too much for "Gep," so he breaks out thus and begs us to publish it to make him happy:

Maine saved the State of Maine
By using Kemp's Balsam for Colds,
And all the cranks in Maine,
Glockering 'round in crowds;

His name will live in story,
And shine high up in the sky,
The leading Yankee star—
So sorry! Bye bye!

His tradnors shall sink into oblivion and flicker like a penny dip in the wilderness.

"GEP," Old 49-er."

STATE NOTES.

Albert Downing, age fourteen, of Union Hill, fell out of a boat while fishing in the Hackensack river yesterday and was drowned.

Ex-School Director James R. Clarke of Jersey City has been arrested on a charge of abandoning his wife. Clarke is a prominent Republican politician and a member of several Judges and Solicitors. It says that his wife is jealous of him without cause.

It was announced yesterday that George Ehret, the New York brewer, had purchased the Hudson City Savings Institution at Hudson City, and intended to transform it into a pleasure park. The entire estate embraces 100 acres on the Hudson river, the high bluff on the east overlooking the water, and is densely wooded. It embraces the spot where formerly stood the old Hudson mansion, destroyed by fire. It is said that Mr. Ehret intends to build whatever in front of the property for the accommodation of excursion parties.

An Appeal for Charleston.

Mayor's Office,
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 15, 1886.

To the People of Plainfield:

Charleston needs our help and needs it now. The shiddy is ours. To her call, then, the call of a sister city stricken with disaster sudden and appalling, of property, of prosperity, of health, of life, a calamity, unparalleled in American history, that has left fourteen thousand people homeless and destitute, and has destroyed, at the present estimate, one hundred millions of dollars worth of the wealth of the civilized world come messages of sympathy for the afflicted city; let us extend our sympathy in the form of aid to help her burden in her affliction.

Contributions of this date be received at this office to be forwarded on Monday next. It is respectfully urged upon the churches of the city that collections be taken for the respective congregations on Sunday next to join in creating the Plainfield fund for the relief of suffering Charleston.

GEO. W. ROCKEFELLOW.

DASHED TO DEATH.

An Excursion Train Meets With a Horrible Collision.

MANY MANGLED BODIES

Crushed Beyond Recognition—A Veritable Death Trap.

Careless Engineering Leads to the Shocking Casualty—Running Without Definite Knowledge of What is On the Track—One Engineer Missing—Scenes at the Wreck—The Dead and Injured.

BUFFALO, Sept. 13.—The following special to the United Press gives additional particulars of the terrible wreck on the Erie and Pitts road yesterday. The accident happened at Silver Creek, a small station just east of Dunkirk. Here the engineer received orders to run ahead, regardless of the No. 2 freight. No. 2 had been stated, would side track for him below the station. He accordingly pulled his train of eleven cars, loaded to the guards' capacity, and had just reached the curve on the sharp curve two miles below the station when he saw smoke floating over the hilltop around which the curve went. The locomotive sounded warning whistles, but it was too late.

The local freight, running thirty miles an hour to make the Silver Creek side track, collided with the excursion train at the point of the worst accidents, ever known on the shore of Lake Erie since the Ashtabula disaster. As soon as the engineer came into collision the baggage car and passenger car of the excursion train from its tracks and drove it backward into the smoker filled with passengers. Starting in the middle of the train it literally telescoped it, and all moved down the seats and crushed their doomed occupants or ground them into unrecognizable masses upon the floor. Out of the wreckage of the smoker of the car but two escaped with slight injuries.

The scene of the accident was in a deep cut, just where the curve commences. The shock accompanied by the snapping in the rear cars, and the sound of escaping steam aroused the neighborhood. In ten minutes 500 men headed the excursionists were on the ground. The Lake Shore and Nickel Plate railroads, upon receipt of the news of the accident, sent special trains from Buffalo and Erie filled with physicians and medical appliances. At the wreck the SIGHT WAS HORRIBLE.

The smoker had been buried by the tender and was from the cracks in the corners and seams in the floor poured blood in streams, making large pools upon the ground. One boy about 18 years of age was caught between the following car and the window casing, his body half projecting out into the air through the window. His legs were crushed into a jelly between the cars and he called piteously for some one to put him out of his misery. From all parts of the car came the moans of the dying and seriously injured. A dozen men, with axes, trimmed fir trees, which they had cut in the woods as levers, worked faithfully for two hours before even the first imprisoned man was gotten out. Then another, and then was gained, but the progress toward the interior for the purpose of getting out the dead and wounded was slow, as the entire wood work had to be chopped away. The dead were crushed beyond recognition, some of the bodies being crushed into a space of a few inches—brains and blood covered everything. It was

LITERALLY A DEATH TRAP.

As the work of carrying out the dead and wounded progressed many painful sights were seen. In one place, at the center of the car, David Sharp, of Erie, was riding with his 10-year-old son. When the collision occurred it seemed as if they were paralyzed and unable to get out. They were caught and crushed together in a heap.

Charles Hoffman, prominently connected with the Sheara's Manufacturing company of Erie, had a most marvelous escape. He was picked out of the debris of the smoker and the baggage car, thrown along the top of the seats, his clothing being torn from his body, and he was eventually forcibly thrown out of the car window, having received but slight bruises.

William Reiffel and Henry G. Fink, two prominent Erie young men, were the only ones who escaped from the car uncatched. When the work of removing the dead and injured had been completed, the corpses were taken to the freight house and laid upon the floor for identification, and the injured were taken to the hospital car.

LIST OF THE DEAD.

The dead are as follows: W. W. Loomis, a prominent ship builder, of Erie; David Sharp, Willie Sharp, his son, Charles Hench, Erie; Mrs. Mary Hauptmeier, George Heiller, John W. Seifert, all of Erie; Percy United States Marshal W. P. Reynolds, of Dunkirk; Willie Haslit, of Erie; Henry Gabhardt, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Henry Gabhardt, his son; Stephen Culbertson, hardware merchant, of Waterford; J. W. Cedar, clothing merchant, of Erie; Adam Parkhurst, of Mayville; Mrs. Rosalie Rostaller, of Erie, and three others unknown.

THE FATALLY INJURED ARE:

J. P. Harrington, superintendent Erie Forge company; Loud Lamory, Erie, legs and arms crushed; E. W. Martin, Erie, legs and arms crushed and horribly bruised; Charles Brown, Erie, head and arms injuries; Henry Haight, Sherrittsville, nine miles; Miss Rosalie Rostaller, Erie, same injuries; Phil Linton, Erie, same injuries; William Kennedy, Erie, same injuries; Samuel Trego, Erie, sage, skull crushed and arms and legs broken; Charles Dillon, Erie, same injuries; Philo Linton, Erie, legs crushed.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A. W. Osborn, Titusville, crushed; A. Campbell, Erie, arms broken; John Sherlin, Erie, arm broken; Charles McSparren, Erie, head injured. Other injuries: Miss Rosalie Rostaller, Erie, same injuries; Phil Linton, Erie, same injuries; William Kennedy, Erie, same injuries; Samuel Trego, Erie, sage, skull crushed and arms and legs broken; Charles Dillon, Erie, same injuries; Philo Linton, Erie, legs crushed.

SLIGHTLY INJURED.

A. W. Osborn, Titusville, crushed; A. Campbell, Erie, arms broken; John Sherlin, Erie, arm broken; Charles McSparren, Erie, head injured. Other injuries: Miss Rosalie Rostaller, Erie, same injuries; Phil Linton, Erie, same injuries; William Kennedy, Erie, same injuries; Samuel Trego, Erie, sage, skull crushed and arms and legs broken; Charles Dillon, Erie, same injuries; Philo Linton, Erie, legs crushed.

The injured were at once taken to Erie in the hospital car, and are being treated at St. Vincent hospital, in that city. Over two-thirds of all the dead will die.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The responsibility of the accident is hard to place. Engineer Brewer has disappeared. His fireman claims that he received orders to Silver Creek regardless of the local freight, while the engineer of the freight exhibits orders entitling him to the right of way as far as the side track west of the station. The agent at Silver Creek says he knows nothing of orders entitling the passenger train to run by Silver Creek.

The accident is one of the direst misfortunes that has ever visited Erie, and the town is clothed in mourning.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

Scenes of Horror Which Baffle Description—The Ill-Fated Smoker.

The scenes in the wrecking car can hardly be described. The first warning that was given was the slight jar caused by the heavy pressure of the air brake. Some of the passengers braced themselves in their seats, seemingly apprehensive of danger. Then came the terrible shock, followed by the smashing of windows and the roof of the car, and all was a mass of bleeding and struggling humanity. Men were locked in each other's arms, covered with blood, while underneath them and on all sides lay the poor unfortunates who were instantly killed, crushed out of all human resemblance. The sight was a horrible one, and it is with the shortest nerves to induce one to take a second look.

The wounded crawled out of the debris, and were assisted to the neighboring houses. People brought bedding, etc., on which to lay the dead and dying, and all that could then be done was to wait until help, which had been immediately sent for, arrived. Mrs. J. H. Sigel, of Erie, Pa., passenger on the ill-fated excursion train, was on her way to Buffalo. She spread bows and was in the smoker. In an interview she said: "I was in the first coach, next to the smoking car. The passenger train was a large one, and carried a large number of excursionists, as well as regular passengers. The first we knew of the collision was a

TERRIFIC CRASH, LIKE AN EXPLOSION.

Nobody was hurt except those in the smoking car. The sight was so horrible that I could not look at it. Not a single car was thrown from the track, but the smoker was literally telescoped. It was a miracle that our car was not crushed also. It was a narrow escape.

One young man in the smoker saved himself by dropping down on the floor and escaped with a few bruises.

I did not learn the cause of the accident, but we were going very slow, while the freight was coming on a high rate of speed. We were just one coach length off the trestle when the collision occurred.

Most of the excursionists remained at Silver Creek, preferring to return home. The regular passengers for Buffalo and other points came on another train.

NEW HAMPSHIRE REPUBLICANS

Nominate a Candidate for Governor on the First Ballot.

CONCORD, Sept. 15.—The Republican state convention assembled here yesterday and elected Mason W. Tappan chairman.

The committee on credentials reported that 627 delegates were entitled to seats and there were present 593. Upon which report it resolved that the convention proceed to vote immediately for a candidate for governor. Oliver A. Gibbs, Dover; E. C. Page, Antrim; James A. Wood, Acworth, and Daniel F. Healy, Manchester, were appointed tellers and the convention proceeded to vote.

The ballot was taken by counties and resulted as follows:

Whole number of ballots, 591; necessary for a choice, 296. Martin A. Haynes, 1; David H. Goodell, of Antrim, 165. Charles H. Sawyer, of Dover, 423.

Col. Sawyer was declared the nominee. The result was greeted with applause. The nomination was then made unanimous by a rising vote.

Col. Sawyer, on being presented to the convention, was enthusiastically received. His thanked the delegates for exhibiting by their votes their confidence in him, and promised, if their choice should be ratified at the polls in November, to discharge the responsible duties of the governorship faithfully and intelligently.

Charles Henry Sawyer, the candidate for governor, was born at Watertown, N. Y., March 30, 1840. At the age of 10 years his parents removed to Dover, N. H., and he received his education in the schools there. At 16 he was placed as an apprentice in the Reporter-Gazette office.

In 1866 he was made superintendent, and in 1873, when the company became incorporated, he was appointed its agent and one of the directors. Since that time he has been president. Mr. Sawyer has served in both branches of the Dover city government and in the legislature. In 1881 he was appointed by Governor Ball a member of his military staff. Col. Sawyer is a director of the Strafford National bank and the Portsmouth and Dover railroad, and a trustee of the Strafford Savings bank. He is a prominent Mason.

At the Second congressional district Republican convention, Hon. J. H. Galliher, of Concord, was renominated by acclamation.

Cruelties Incident Murder and Robbery.

GENEVA, Ills., Sept. 15.—The home of Mrs. Buckmire, an aged German woman, was discovered to be on fire, and all attempts to extinguish it were fruitless. Mrs. Buckmire's body was found lying in her chicken house, a few yards away, with a cloth tied tightly around her throat, indicating that she had been murdered before the fire. It is believed that she was murdered for the purpose of robbery, and that the perpetrator set fire to the house to destroy all traces of his crime. Mrs. Buckmire was known to have saved considerable money, which she kept about the house.

Manata's Jury Could Not Agree.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—The jury trying J. B. Manata for the murder of Wm. Hunt, from the Archbishop Purcell estate, after being out twenty-four hours, emphatically announced to Judge Osborne, by a communication signed by all but one, that they could not agree. The jurors, when called into the court room and severally questioned, declared that all efforts to agree were without any prospect of agreeing, and the court finally discharged them from further consideration of the case.

A Railroad Sale Closed.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—Albert Keteer has made his bid for the purchase of $1,270,000 to S. B. Harrison, M. Work and others, representing the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad deal. The last of the stock, amounting to over 60,000 shares, was transferred to the purchasers. This is one of the largest, if not the largest, stock deals that has ever been manipulated in this city. The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton has a capital stock of $2,000,000 stock, and was largely held in this city.

Fleeing From Imaginary Officers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Albert Hansen, aged 19, of Brooklyn, was seized by a policeman just as he had mounted the railing of the Brooklyn bridge. He struggled and let go his hold into the river. At the station house Hansen's manner and talk showed him to be insane. He declared that he was trying to escape from officers who were waiting to arrest him for theft. He was committed for examination.

Killed by a Fractious Horse.

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 15.—Leonard H. Bisbee was engaging to secure a horse in a pasture when the animal became fractious and turned upon him, knocking him down and kicking him on the head, side and body. Mr. Bisbee was rendered insensible and lay in the field all night, where he was discovered and removed to his home. He cannot recover.

Fishermen in Peril.

ROCKPORT, Mass., Sept. 15.—The wind is blowing a gale from the southeast, and much anxiety is felt for the safety of the fishermen out in it. Some which arrived safely report others driving off shore. By good management they may be able to reach Portsmouth or Isle of Shoals.

GEORGE JAY GOULD

TAKES UNTO HIMSELF A BEAUTIFUL ACTRESS BRIDE.

The Son of the Wall Street King Married Quietly to Miss Edith Kingdon—An Air of Secrecy Maintained—Wedded at Papa Jay's Country House.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The happiest man in all Christendom last evening was undoubtedly George J. Gould, the scion of Wall street fame. The happiest woman was his beautiful and accomplished bride.

Everybody who wants to know what everybody else in the world is doing knows how

Miss Edith Kingdon, a Brooklyn beauty of willowy form and perfect carriage, after an education finished at the Edgeworth Seminary, as the sailing expressed a remarkable genius for the stage. Miss Kingdon of Brooklyn's boon companion amateur dramatic associations, and a successful visit to rural New Jersey as a star in a light company gave her a taste for it, but four years ago in "Jalma," on the Boston theatre stage, was discovered three years ago by Augustin Daly, and became a star of already high magnitude.

They also know how Millionaire Jay Gould's favorite son and heir saw in the fair young actress the ideal woman that it was his fortune to meet, and how an introduction finally secured one through a mutual friend, Robert Hilliard, the actor broker; how the Irvington greenhouses contributed to the fragrance of the Kingdon home; how her widowed mother's pretty flat, and, fairest into unique designs, greeted the young actress as she came forward to the floodlights in response to outbursts of popular approval.

They knew, too, how young Mr. Gould was an 11 o'clock a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m. caller at the Fifty-eighth street home, how he served days by the many months, adding variety by calling evenings with a carriage and taking Miss Kingdon to and bringing her back from the theatre, now and then dropping Dr. Dodemonio's for a lunch, and how Miss Kingdon went to Europe with the Daly company, where the English people honored her as they had never done an American lady playing a second part.

They know, too, as well how the outgoing steamers each way carried bags full of sweetscented and saccharine-flavored billet doux, and at last one of them carried westward George himself, charged with more love and reverence than all the mail bags.

They also likewise conversant with the walks on the Strand and drives on the row, and the fact that the carriage always stood when not otherwise employed in front of Miss Kingdon's family hotel, 28, James street, Piccadilly, where Miss Kingdon and her mother resided. They know that Mrs. Kingdon went to Paris, bought laces and loads of dresses at Worth's and George came over to Interview with Papa Jay made everything ready for the quiet little wedding that occurred at Irvington yesterday afternoon.

The first visitor at the Kingdon flats yesterday was a tall young gentleman in a black Prince Albert suit, silk hat and patent leather shoes. He came in a carriage at 11 o'clock, and in, carrying a large bouquet, walked all the way to get a cigar. The German druggist of whom he purchased it said, "Good morning, Mr. Gould. I haven't seen you here for some time. I suppose you stay so more of you now that Miss Kingdon has returned."

The young man blushed, gave the druggist in his confusion a quarter for a fifteen cent cigar, and walked across the way. In half an hour he came out of the flat accompanied by two ladies, one of whom was robust and instronly; the other was tall and willowy. Both were black.

The ladies were Miss and Mrs. Miss Kingdon. A pretty little maid in a white apron and white cap came to the door of the carriage bading a skye terrier.

"Take good care of Trez. We'll be back this morning. If we are not, we'll telegraph. Bye-by."

The prim-looking coachman cracked his whip, and the carriage drove through West Fifty-eighth street to Fifth avenue, and down the avenue to the down town house, at Forty-second street. There it stopped about ten minutes, while its occupants got out and went inside.

"What a delightful house," the elder of the ladies said, as she got into the carriage, which went whirling away down to West Twenty-third street, where it turned and drove back uptown. There it stopped and waiting, that quickly rowed them to the Atalanta, Jay Gould's famous yacht.

"All right" young Mr. Gould sang out to the coachman.

The author came up and in a few moments the tree craft was slipping through the water of the North river, bound for Irvington, on the Hudson. It was 2 o'clock when the bell down in the engine room told the engineer to shut off steam.

The Gould family carriage with the head coachman and two footmen in full dress was at the wharf to meet the little bridal party brought off the Atalanta's party. This was a mark of honor seldom bestowed upon guests of the Gould household. It did not last long. Jay himself was home earlier than he had been in years at all the servants about the place on curiously ragged edge.

The carriage drove up to the door of the mansion, and Miss Kingdon threw her arms about four for Gray to twenty-six for Lora. This withdrawal removes the grand bone of the contention which has divided Delaware Democrats into two hostile camps.

MARRIED IN HASTE.

A MASSACHUSETTS SPINSTER MARRIED, ROBBED AND DESERTED.

They Met in the Mountains and Separated by the Banks of the Hudson—Mrs. Green Has Lost Money and Good Clothes, but More Experience.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—A well-known lady in Cambridge society for many years was Miss Lucy Torrey. She lived comfortably near Harvard square, Cambridge, on small but liberal allowance from her father. She is 54 years old. About Aug. 1 Miss Torrey went to the White mountains for a month's vacation, staying at Littleton, N. H. At the end of two weeks a party, good looking and well-dressed man, accompanied by a white-haired woman, whom he called his sister, registered at the hotel. It was about this time Miss Torrey had the acquaintance of the white-haired sister. Then it was learned that the brother was Dr. Andrew Jackson Grant, of Andover, Me., born at Bridgton, England, and 54 years of age. The doctor was introduced, and, after a few careful inquiries, he began a vigorous courtship.

His story was that he was immensely rich, owning valuable gold mines and other property in Australia. He found it impossible to even spend his income. He had studied medicine, but practiced little. The sister had married a wealthy Australian, who had died leaving his widow millions of money, but alone in the world. For three years this brother and sister had been traveling all over the world. They had just come from the south, and were going next to California, and from there back to Australia. Dr. Grant was a well-educated man. He wore his hair quite long, and brushed back. His gray mustache was gracefully trimmed, and he wore a diamond in his shirt front.

The doctor proposed marriage and Miss Torrey accepted him. The doctor wanted the marriage to occur at once. Miss Torrey did not approve of so great haste. She suggested that they walk a year. About Sept. 1 Miss Torrey left for Cambridge. Dr. Grant and his sister were cordially invited to go with her, and make their home in her rooms' quarters. The doctor accepted the invitation. Miss Torrey and the doctor called together several times at the bank where the former had her money on deposit. By the various excuses, the doctor succeeded in getting her to draw out fully $6,000. It is said the doctor also got hold of part of it. The doctor begged continually to have their marriage occur as soon as possible. Then the sister said she was not feeling well and that the rigors of the New England winter which was approaching. She must go to California for her health. Two or three days of persistent pleading won the day, and in just a week's time from returning from the mountains Miss Torrey and Dr. Andrew Jackson Grant were united in marriage at Miss Torrey's home by the Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody, dean of Harvard college. That was just a week ago.

Directly after the knot was tied the couple started for Saratoga, the sister accompanying them. In packing the trunks the doctor insisted upon having his wife pack all her best silk and other dresses, her sealskin sacque and valuable clothing, in his trunk. The doctor also wanted the money, as he was to pay the bills. He was to draw upon his brother upon reaching New York, but was short just then. Last Wednesday the party were in Saratoga. The next day they went to Albany. On the afternoon of Thursday the doctor's sister said that she was going out of the city to see some friends, and wanted to borrow Mrs. Grant's best bonnet. It was loaned her, and off she went. An hour or so later a messenger came hurriedly to the hotel and brought the information to Dr. Grant that his sister had suddenly been taken dangerously ill and wanted him to come to her side at once. The doctor hastily packed up his trunks, which also contained all his wife's best apparel, and, kissing her goodby, he went off with clothing, trunks and money, promising to meet her in Boston as soon as possible. Nothing has since been seen of the doctor or his "sister."

A Big Scheme on Foot.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 15.—The New British Empire company has been formed with a fixed capital of $10,000,000, of which $1,000,000 is said to have been subscribed, the object being to accomplish an imperial federation of all English speaking races with its capital to be in Palestine, which country is to be purchased. One object of the federation is the abolition of the veto. Henry Wentworth Monk, M. P., of this city, is said to be the head of the organization.

A Freight Train Wrecked.

WEST QUINCY, Mo., Sept. 15.—A south bound freight train on the St. Louis, Keokuk and Northern railroad struck an open switch near here last night and was ditched. Engineer McCarty was instantly killed, Fireman Keefe was badly scalded and died in two hours, and a brakeman named Pigott was injured so that he is not likely to recover. The engine and eight cars were completely wrecked.

Stovemakers Fail to Agree.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—After a long conference between the representatives of the Knights of Labor and the stove manufacturers, the latter refused to grant the 10 per cent. increase in wages, as recently asked by their employes. The representatives of the Knights offered to compromise on 5 per cent., but this was also refused. The situation remains unchanged.

BICYCLE RECORDS BROKEN.

A Fine Field Day Among the Champion Wheelmen.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 15.—Four thousand people attended the opening of the fifth annual tournament of the Springfield Bicycle club yesterday. The weather was not all that could be desired, but the track was in very fine condition.

The first heat for the world's one mile championship was won easily by William A. Rhodes, of Lynn, in 2 m. 38 s.

The one mile amateur novice race was won by William Harding in 2 m. 37 4-5 s.

The ten mile pro-amateur race for the American Cyclist cup championship was won by Hendee, of St. Louis, in 29 m. 29 4-5 s, Stone second, Rhodes third.

AN OLD TIMER.

In the five mile professional handicap race there were three starters, Fred Wood, of England, being the only scratch man. He drew out at the end of one and a half miles, and James before covering two miles. He then dropped out, and the remainder of the racers ran well bunched to the last quarter, when Nielson and Woodside had a desperate brush. Nielson finished first, Woodside second and Crocker third.

The second heat of the one mile world's championship was won by Burnham, of Newton, in 2m. 37 4-5s.

The 25m. 3m. class in the five mile amateur race was won by Hart, of New Britain. Time, 2m. 2s.

The five mile pro-amateur race was won by Burnham by half a wheel from Ives. Time, 2m. 16 1-5s.

The three mile professional open race was won by Nielson in 8m. 1s., with Crocker and Woodside a tie for second place.

The third heat of the one mile race for the world's championship, between Story, of St. Louis, and Adams, of Springfield, was won by Story in 2m. 17 1-5s.

The one mile tandem tricycle race was won by Crist and Brown, of Washington, in 2m. 43 3-5s., Rich and Foster, of New York, second. Time, quarter, 41 1-2s; half, 1m. 21 2-5s; (both American amateur records) three-quarters, 1 1-5s; mile, 2m. 43 3-5s. (both world's record.) The records broken are the quarter mile American, 43 4-5s.; the half mile, 1m. 26s.; the English and world's record of 2m. 54s. for three-quarters of a mile, made here last year by English and Crispe.

The last race was the fourth heat for the world's championship for a mile and was won by Nielsen in 2m. 19 4-5s. The men were fined $10 each for slow riding.

An Influx of Foreign Workmen.

PITTSBURG, Sept 15.—Pittsburg is threatened with an influx of foreign workmen. The depression felt in various parts of Great Britain, especially in the iron and steel producing districts, is having the effect of driving the skilled labor to America fields. Exaggerated reports of a great boom in iron in and around Pittsburg have reached the North Staffordshire workmen, and they are only waiting to hear the report of a committee appointed to examine into the condition of affairs here before a number of them, assisted by their more prosperous friends, will embark for this city. A vigorous opposition to the movement is expected from the labor organizations of this country.

How Far Objects Are Visible.

A discussion is going on in Europe concerning the distance at which large objects on the earth's surface may be visible. Emil Metzger mentions that he once saw, with some difficulty, Kelaserpicht, in Sumatra, when distant 710 English miles; and he also made out Gog Mengil, in Java, when 186 miles away. From the Pic Muraux, near Dieuentz, E. Hill has seen Mont Blanc, the intervening space measuring about 110 miles. J. Starkie Gardiner states that Mont Blanc is visible from the Pic Langard, though distant about 3 degrees. In Greenland, Mr. Whymper beheld a mountain from which he was separated by 150 miles; and from Marseilles, Zach saw Mt. Canigou at a distance of 158 miles. The whole range of the Swiss Alps has been looked upon by J. Hippisley while 200 miles away, while Sir W. Jones has affirmed that the Himalayas have appeared to view from the distance of 224 miles.—Boston Budget.

Cure for Rattlesnake Bites.

Rattlesnake Jim, of Wagner, O., says that the only reliable cure for the bite of a rattlesnake is turpentine. He says that a bottle of turpentine held over the bitten spot, the unconscious victim will draw out the poison which can be seen as it enters the turpentine in a sort of blue flame. Although he has never been bitten, he has tried this cure on his dogs, always with success.—Chicago Tribune.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

W. F. Pearson, Plainfield, N. J., June 29, '86.
Dr. Chas. E. Thiers,
Dear Sir:—The sad my opinion of your Stomatine. With a wide experience of 20 years I can say that the chemical compounds, as a whole, are the best I have ever seen. Your Stomatine has the best I can safely and confidently recommend it to the public. Yours truly,
WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers,
My dear sir—It affords me great pleasure to state that Stomatine is one of the most wonderful remedies I have ever used. On the 4th of March, 1884, I was taken with a severe attack of rheumatism, which confined me to my bed for three weeks. I was treated by two physicians, but received no benefit. I then commenced using Stomatine, and in three days I was able to be up and around. I used it freely for my own benefit. I feel confident that Stomatine is the best remedy for rheumatism that I have ever used, and I have used it freely in my own family

Who Talks Evolution With One Hand and Steals With the Other.

Socrates never uttered a wiser or more pertinent maxim than this: "There is more than one way to remove the cuticle of the ox."

I was riding on the evening train, the other day, my active brain keeping time to the clinkety-clack of its wheels over the rail joints, the steady rumble of the train and the wail of the locomotive whistle, when a slender young man who had got aboard at the station two miles back came in and took a seat by me. He was again, went back and forth between the one with his story and me until he saw a deserted conductor's slip sticking in the window sill. He came back, sat down by me, stuck the slip in his hat, and in two minutes was scared stiff. The young doctor came in, glanced over the people and took a fare here and there, but got over the crowd without selling the slumbering young man with the pink slip in his hat. If he had gone back the young man awoke with a wild start, took a drink from a cooler, and sat down with me again. I drew him into conversation, and found that he had been over the country a good deal, but never in the capacity of a sweat producer. He said that his father died from overwork, and made him promise, ere he died, that he would not die in that manner.

He seemed me that he had kept the promise he made to his dying father, and had thus far escaped death from overwork.

He had traveled in many capacities and had lectured also. He had delivered a series of lectures on Darwinism, evolution, the struggle for existence, and the survival of the fittest. But he had lost faith in it all, and quit at last.

"You cannot believe in the survival of the fittest," said he, "for if we did we would soon see the earth populated by tailors, and the good fathers would survive the poor tailor, being fittest to survive. In the struggle for existence the strong butter would overtake and destroy the weak, and thus we would have at last only the strong, but such is not the case. Look at the coffee we get at the railroad eating houses. No, there are many reasons why I am not a believer in any of these theories." he said forcibly, as he upset his celluloid cuffs and buttoned them to the lining of his coat sleeves. "I have rummaged around through the great free libraries of our land. I have read everything that I could get hold of. I have studied the tracks of the gigantic straddle bugs of pre-historic times.

"I have rummaged around."

I have sought the fossils of dead and crystalized lizards of the steamy wet days when trilobites had to wear rubber overcoats and gigantic reptiles with cork soles to walk around in the warm mud and write their autographs in the ooze. I have pierced under the great circus tent of the universe and studied the menageries of every clime, but I believe there is a big gulf between the baboon and the man. It is as wide to-day as ever it was, no doubt it is wider than ever it was years ago as it is to-day. That is why I hope that my parents did not clatter and squeak at each other in hygeen centuries. If they hung in the same cellar with the bats all years all the year round and were noting but sunlight I am glad I didn't have to witness it. If they cavorted through the forests of those primeval days and went in swinging in violation of the city ordinances, and remained out late nights and roosted in the trees, I am glad that I did not witness it, and that

"Nothing would pain an affectionate and loving child like this. Nothing would so crush the pride of a fond son as the spectacle of his aged father and mother hanging by the tail and swinging through the forests, turning handsprings in the grass, hanging from the drooping boughs of the cocoanut trees and loading through the bright and blooming days of life, like a consolidated aggregation of zoological wonders.

"If I am not what you might term a lawyer at wood or a drawer of water, or dozens, yet I am opposed to indolence. I do not care for it. I have had every inducement to become indolent if I would, but I would not. I am a believer in a certain degree of progress in each man's lifetime, and for that reason I am striving to acquire knowledge.

"Yes, we ought to strive to do something, no matter how unimportant it may be. I have lectured on phrenology, traveled with a large educated bear for two years, at the close of which time he left me with my left arm. I have sold glue to the vulgar herd, soap to the masses, and to the young dark and rubber balloons that collapsed in the gardens. I have even labored in every light and shadow. I have tasted of life gingerly or gulped it down greedily until I see how little it is. Oh, so hollow, so flat, so transparent, so false."

As he wrung my hand and went away at the Union depot, there was a little crystal tear trembling in the left hand corner of each of his mouth drooped and his chin quivered. He went away with my deepest sympathy and a Waterbury watch which was presented to me by a grateful passenger when I resigned my position as postmaster at Laramie City and allowed that corner of the great national cache to fall into other hands. I did not value the watch, but how will I explain its absence to my wife.—Bill Nye in Sunday Mercury.

Solved at Last.

He stood for a long time looking into the display window of a gents' furnishing store, and by and by he gave himself a sort of kick and exclaimed:

"Humph! Just like me!"

"What is it?" asked a boy who came up.

"I'm a fool."

"For why?"

"For because I've lain wonderin' for two years how a fellow got into one of those four-in-hand scarfs, and I've just diskivered that he don't have to turn around in it to bring the bosum to the front! Bub, you may kick me a nickel's worth!"—Detroit Free Press.

Collins and the Captain.

Presence of mind, even in small matters, is a grand thing to possess. On one of the harbor boats the passengers had crowded all on one side to see a boat race that was just passed. It was almost impossible to move them, they were so numerous, so the captain sang out, "Collins, you must get the crowd on the other side." "Ay, ay, sir," and immediately on that side was heard the cry, "Man overboard!" The crowd rushed over to see the boat regained, and the captain, with a laugh, said, "Well done, Collins!"—Boston Letter.

SUBMARINE FARMING.

A Company to Cultivate the Fallow Fields Beneath the Ocean.

O THIS day the Atlantic coast states are becoming so densely populated that there is hardly enough farm land to go around, and as a view of this, it has occurred to capitalists that the alluvial area may be largely and beneficially increased by making use of the immense tracts of land now lying waste beneath the ocean.

The Submarine Farming company having obtained a grant of 1,000,000 acres of these sea lands, now proposes starting a model farm beneath the ocean, three miles off Coney Island, and thereby ascertain, by actual experiment, if the new and advanced theory is feasible.

The operations of the submarine farm will be carried on by a skilled corps of farmers, safely inclosed in the new apparel diving bells, and the live stock necessary to the work will be similarly covered, thus insuring to man and beast, during their labors, a constant current of breathing new air.

It is believed that seaweeds, under proper culture, may become, in course of time, a valuable food product; and huge paddies of rice and other water-loving plants will be cultivated, a shaker being attached to each grain at the time it is planted. Our other cereals may be induced to grow on the saline meadows. To be sure, they are now considered at land growths; but we put this pertinent question: Has any actual experiment proved that they will not also thrive on ocean fields?

A FARM SCENE.

The great point in our favor is that there can never be any drought on our fields. Another point is that pioneer settlers will not have to spend half their lives in clearing off trees; and the only sawing the submarine plow will ever encounter will be, possibly, some old money chest of Capt. Kidd. The debris from Coney Island will be a free fertilizer.

To write up the company we have engaged an ex-Florida land novelist, and we are now training him in the use of the diving bell, preparatory to the commencement of his labors.—Life.

Look Out for Him.

The season is now at hand when the pioneer 98 years of age gets up early in the morning, tightens his belt by two notches, and wallops into the harvest field to show the boys how it used to be done in olden times. After gazing for a few minutes with contempt at the reaper and binder, he picks up its old fashioned cradle and sails in to cut seven acres before sundown. Seven acres is his lightest day's work. Take him the county over he'll range about nine, and won't sweat a hair until afternoon. It will be all that three binders can do to keep up with him, and now and then he'll stop to turn a beck handspring and let any some young fellow on the broad of his back.

When the old pioneer has finished his nine acres he comes up whooping, leads the crowd to supper, and then challenges the best man to a boxing match or foot race.

He appears regularly every harvest, and this will be no exception. He is never less than 90, and seldom over 98, and the statement always follows that he has shaken hands with every president since Washington, and was a playmate of the Indian chief, Tecumseh.—Detroit Free Press.

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

CHAPTER XX.

AN ACT to amend an act entitled "An act to secure to creditors an equal and just division of the estates of debtors who may convey the same for the benefit of creditors."

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section five of said act be amended so as to read as follows:

5. And be it enacted, That at the expiration of three months from the time of making said assignment, the said assignee or assignees shall file with the clerk of the county in which said debtor or debtors reside at the time of making such assignment a true list, under oath or affirmation, of all the creditors of said debtor or debtors, with all such claim to be such, with a true statement of their respective residences, as far forth as ascertained or can upon a work, for six weeks next preceding the end of said term, in one of the newspapers printed in said county, and by posting up advertisements in five of the most public places in the township or ward wherein such creditors, or a majority of them, reside, notifying them to file all claims against said estate, and all persons indebted to said estate to pay the same to said assignee or assignees, or before barred from coming in for a dividend of the assets in the hands of said assignee provided; and in case of failure to file such list or give such notice, the said term of six months may extend and fix the time for filing such list.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 15, 1886.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide compensation to constables for extra services rendered in criminal cases," approved the first of this state," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any complaint of any assault committed or alleged to have been committed upon the body of any person, or any battery committed upon the body of any person, or any assault and battery committed upon the body of any person, or any breach of the peace committed in the presence of any constable of any township, city or borough in this state, it shall be the duty of the said constable immediately to arrest the person or persons committing such assault or battery, or such breach of the peace, and take him or them before some justice of the peace of the county in which such assault or battery, or such breach of the peace, was committed, to be dealt with according to law; and the said constable shall be entitled to receive from the county in which such assault or battery, or such breach of the peace, was committed, the same fees for such services as are now allowed by law for similar services rendered in criminal cases in the courts of this state, to be paid in the same manner as constables' fees are now paid for services upon the said courts.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 15, 1886.

CHAPTER XXII.

AN ACT to amend an act entitled "An act constituting district courts in certain cities of the first class," approved the one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the twenty-seventh section of the act of which this is amendatory, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That all suits brought or to be brought in the courts of pleas and judges of any district court in this state, which by the present practice, would be either actions of debt, covenant, assumpsit, or upon an account, or for money had and received, or upon a writing obligatory or other writing under seal, or upon a bond, bill or note for the payment of money only, or upon a recognizance, or upon a judgment, shall be in the name and style of actions upon contract, and all other suits shall comprise all actions that by the present practice would be called actions of trespass, or trespass on the case.

3. And be it enacted, That all suits or proceedings brought in the courts of pleas and judges of any district court in this state, which by present practice would be called actions of ejectment, or for the recovery of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, or for the partition of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall be in the name and style of actions real.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 15, 1886.

CHAPTER XXIII.

AN ACT to authorize the cities of this state to issue bonds for certain purposes.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any of the cities of this state may issue bonds for the payment of any indebtedness now existing or hereafter to be created, and for the purchase of lands and the erection of buildings for the use of the fire department of any city of this state, and no provision now exists by statute for the issuing of such bonds, such bonds as may hereafter be authorized by the common council of any city of this state, shall be issued in such denominations, and bear such rate of interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, and shall be payable at such time or times, and payable at such place as the common council or other governing body of such city may direct, and shall be signed by the mayor and countersigned by the city clerk, and sealed with the seal of the city, and the principal and interest of such bonds shall be paid out of the general fund of such city, or by the issue of other bonds for the purpose of paying such bonds at the maturity thereof, or by the levy and collection of a tax upon the taxable property of such city sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds when due, and the common council or other governing body of such city shall annually levy a tax sufficient to pay the interest on all bonds issued under the provisions of this act, and may issue bonds for the purpose of paying such bonds at the maturity thereof, and may levy and collect a tax for the payment of the principal and interest of such bonds when due, and the common council or other governing body of such city may issue bonds for the purpose of paying the interest on any bonds issued under the provisions of this act, and may levy and collect a tax for the payment of such interest when due, and the common council or other governing body of such city may issue bonds for the purpose of paying any bonds issued under the provisions of this act

JOTTINGS.

—Dixon's oysters are among the choicest brands.

—Forty arc lights will be required to light up North Plainfield by electricity.

—A number of persons from here went to Manch Chunk on an excursion, yesterday.

—The exterior of Mr. J. Burnett's house on West Fifth street is being made attractive by a new coat of paint.

—The neighbors in the vicinity of Front and Grove streets are nightly tortured by an amateur accordian player.

—Several mysterious pistol shots were fired last evening in the neighborhood of Cedar Brook on Arlington avenue.

—The September term of the Somerset county courts will convene at Somerville on next Friday week. Several North Plainfield cases will then be disposed of.

—The Third District (including the counties of Union, Middlesex and Monmouth) Democratic convention will be held at New Brunswick on the 30th instant.

—An urchin suffering from the application of the birch said: "Forty rods are said to be a furlong, but I know better. Let anybody get such a licking as I have had, and he'll find out that one rod makes an acher."

—Since the Hotel Netherwood matter has been satisfactorily settled several parties have visited Netherwood with a view of buying land and building. The neighbors on the "hill" are predicting a boom there in real estate.

—Mt. Olive Baptist church on Liberty street is to be remodeled and improved. A gallery will be located across the entire front of the audience room, and the pulpit is to be enlarged. The building will also be repainted.

—The rooms over the City National Bank on East Front street recently vacated by the Dime Savings Institution and Messrs. J. C. Pope & Co., will soon be transformed into comfortable quarters for the new Republican club organized in this city a few months since.

—Over 13,000 baskets of peaches were shipped from the South Branch railroad station @ Flemington last week, the largest shipment of the week being on Saturday night when it reached 15,071 baskets. Up to this time the number of baskets shipped from the South Branch station has surpassed the entire shipment of any previous like peach growing season. A great many baskets are yet to pick and send off.

—Lena Randolph subpoenaed Lizzie Dunster (both colored) to testify in her behalf when she was before Justice Nash on Monday to answer a charge preferred by Gertrude Hamilton for calling her bad names. The testimony Lizzie said that the Randolph woman and herself had gone to Gertrude's house with the intention of fighting, and upon the strength of this statement she was afterward arrested and fined ten dollars.

—Borough Marshal Becker served a dispossess warrant on Jacob Snyder of Washington Valley on Tuesday, in the case brought by Mr. D. S. Cole of this place for the nonpayment of three months' rent for use of a farm. The officer went to the place in company with Mr. Cole and found Mr. Snyder cooking his dinner. The fire in the stove was extinguished, and all the household effects of Mr. Snyder were deposited in the road way in front of the house.

—It was generally supposed that yesterday was the day upon which the Electric Light Company was to turn on electricity for lighting the streets, but it is now thought that it will require several days to complete the arrangements. It was said the wires in the worked diligently within the past few days. The location of the lamps will be at the points recently published in THE NEWS. There will be twelve lamps on Front street, four on Second, two on Fourth, six on Fifth, one on Sixth, seven on Seventh, four on Eighth, five on Ninth, with additional lamps at Crescent avenue and First Place; at E. L. Pinch's and Arlington Place on Park avenue. Lamps will also be located on Putnam avenue at Fifth street and Kensington avenue and at Kensington avenue and Broad way. Two lights remain to be located by the Council.

Says His Wife Eloped.

August Dieter, a carpenter by trade, has for some time past been living with his wife, who is said to be prepossessing and several years his junior, at Mrs. Hauck's, on the north-west of this city. He came to town yesterday afternoon for the purpose of taking out a writ of attachment against some goods at the depot here which belonged to his wife, whom, he said, had eloped with a young man a few days ago, taking with her some of his household effects and clothing. He went before Justice Nash and told his grievance, and Constable Moffett who went to the depot to investigate the matter, found a trunk and a valise at the baggage-room belonging to the owner. Mr. Dieter said he thought the goods were about to be removed from the city, when in reality they had been sent here from Elizabeth. The articles were in charge of the railroad officials and Mr. Dieter, the rofore, could not remover them. This morning he sought legal advice and was told that the best thing for him to do was to disown his cruel wife and file a bill for divorce. He left town before noon signifying his intention to do so.

Collision on Fence Street.

A man named Schierenbeck from Fanwood was seated in a phaeton driving along Fence street at about eight o'clock last evening when he claims to have been run into by the driver of the Park House stage. The stage escaped serious injury, but the shafts and front wheels on the phaeton were badly wrecked. Mr. Schierenbeck went before Justice Nash to swear out a warrant for the arrest of the stage driver, but he finally withdrew his complaint and decided to talk the matter over with the owner of the stage.

Mr. J. N. Jenkins of East Fifth street is engaged in repairing the German Lutheran church at Hazleton, Pa., to make room for a new church about to be erected there.

Miss Fannie Halt, her sister and brother Seymour, jr., children of Seymour Halt of West Seventh street, have gone to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where they will undergo a course of instruction.

Andrew J. Tappan, son of ex-Freeholder Luther J. Tappan of this county has received an appointment as Deputy Postmaster of Metuchen in place of Miss Jennie Freeman, who has resigned the position.

Mr. J. L. Anthony, who has recently purchased the residence of Mr. J. F. Plummer on Madison avenue, is one of the finest kennels in the country. Three of his dogs took the first prize at the Crystal Palace in London last spring.

Corydon R. Tyler and Mrs. Joseph Stockbridge, both of this city, are members of the "Hay Fever Association," which meets annually at White mountains, the former as vice-president of the association, and the latter a member of the Advisory Board.

The wife of Theodore VanNest of West Fifth street gave birth to a bouncing male infant on Tuesday night. The population was likewise increased by a son of William Ayers who also made his debut at the residence of his parents on West Fifth street during the same night.

Joshua Martine, a native of Bridgewater township in Somerset county, but now a resident of North Plainfield township, is said to be in the field for political honors, and will present himself before the next Democratic County Convention for the office of Sheriff. Mr. Martine is an ex-Freeholder of Somerset county, and has held several positions of trust.

Henry Eyre Browne.

Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture was first produced in this country as an Organ Transcription by Henry Eyre Browne, at Plymouth church, Brooklyn, on January 25th, 1886.

Mr. Browne having ordered a copy of the full Orchestral Score from Dresden, Germany, in 1885, had the gratifying honor of being the first Organist to play this grand and very descriptive work from his own organ, and consequently on the occasion referred to. The appearance of the Phantom Ship and the Dutchman, the Sailors' Song and Prayer, the Storm at Sea and the final triumph of Vaddersdecken, are most vividly portrayed in this most wonderful tone-poem. No tickets will be sold for the concert, however, admission to had only by invitation ticket.

A Fit Subject for the Reform School.

A young son of a man named Stevens was seen to emerge from the barn in the rear of Mr. T. J. Carey's store on Front street on Tuesday afternoon, accompanied by a Dutch collie and a set of traces belonging to Mr. Carey, which he is said to have stolen from the barn. The harness was worth several dollars, and was disposed of to a Somerset street dealer for 25 cents, but subsequently returned to the owner, and Mr. Carey has thus far failed to lodge a complaint against the boy. On a former occasion the lad is alleged to have stolen a pair of roller skates from the store, but on account of his extreme youthfulness Mr. Carey refused to prosecute him. Some time since the boy applied at a store under the pretence of buying a sled. The proprietor says he asked for permission to take the sled home to show his mother, promising to return it to the store again, but the sled and the boy are as yet forthcoming. The boy is apparently about twelve years of age and he is said to bear an unsavory reputation. He has a youthful exploits may yet land him behind the bars, as he is now thought to be a fit subject for the Reform School.

Wreck on the P. & R.

An accident occurred on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad at White Home station between nine and ten o'clock on Tuesday night. The freight train which passes through here at about eight o'clock run into a peach train, whereby one engine and five of the peach cars were wrecked. Two of the hands on the peach train were slightly injured. Through west bound trains were held at the depot here for orders, the track being completely blocked by the wreck. The wrecking train was dispatched to the scene of the accident and the track was cleared for travel yesterday morning. The accident of Tuesday was the second which has taken place at that station within a few weeks, the first being caused by two sections of an oil train running together.

—Warrants have been issued against five tax delinquents in the borough, and are in the hands of Justice Austin.

—Mrs. A. Degraw of Park avenue, together with her daughter, Mrs. B. A. Force and children of West Fourth street, have arrived home after a two weeks' sojourn at Asbury Park.

—The first meeting of the City Republican Executive Committee will be held in the room recently vacated by the Dime Savings Institution on East Front street at eight o'clock this evening.

—A reception tendered by the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, to the officers and commanders of Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R., will take place in the Post room on East Front street this evening, to which the public are invited to be present.

—Complaint is made of the merchants along Park avenue and Front street, who obstruct the sidewalks and impede travel by placing their wares in front of their places of business. It is the duty of the street commissioner, we believe, to prevent such obstructions.

—Chief Dodd on Tuesday night arrested a well-known character called "Sailor Jack," for being drunk and causing a disturbance on West Third street. He was locked up for the night and yesterday Judge Ulrich granted him a thirty days's leave of absence at Elizabeth. The county jail will pay the board.

—Alonzo D. Wandegrift, not a relative to the father of our country, resides on "Riverside avenue," in the rear of Franck's mill. At noon yesterday her solitary companion "Pido Scott," valued at five dollars, died, from eating doctored meat. Annie tries to explain that "a big fat woman was poisoned by alley," and that she believes the dog was poisoned.

—Residents in the south and west sections of the city are complaining of gas in their water, which they say is due to the gas works situated at the corner of Fourth and Washington streets. It is said that the gas is visible in well water, which in places is utterly unfit to drink. The water in wells below Central avenue does not appear to be polluted with gas, but in many places to the north and east of Central avenue the taste of gas is the water is plainly detected. Water from a well on West Fourth street has been sent to an expert for analysis.

New Philadelphia and Reading Locomotives.

The ten locomotives ordered for the Reading Railroad, under the Receivers' car trust recently authorized by the Circuit Court, have been delivered and are now in use on the road. They were built at the Baldwin Works. Five of them are to be used in the passenger service and five for hauling freight trains. In addition, five passenger locomotives have been built at the company's shops at Reading to replace old equipment. They are all coal burners.

The new passenger locomotives are more powerful than any ever owned by the company. They are built with eight driving wheels ten feet in diameter. It is said they can run a mile in forty-two seconds with a heavy train. It is believed, should an emergency require it, they could make a mile in forty seconds or perhaps a little less. There is no probability that such speed will be required. The engines will be used on the main line of the Philadelphia & Atlantic City Road, which at one time was very deficient in good motive power. But six or eight cars to the maximum an engine could haul and make schedule time, but the new locomotives can haul eighteen cars with ease. The other engines are engaged on the main line, the Lebanon Valley and other divisions.

To-Night.

At 7.45 o'clock this evening the fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church will open in St. Mary's Hall. A farce, entitled "Married by the New Justice" will be presented by the Dramatic Association. Music, singing etc. will be features of the fair. The committee in charge are spared no expense to make the fair a success. On each evening the fair continues some special attraction will be offered for the amusement of those in attendance. The price of admission is 10 cents.

Bitten by a Dog.

The children of Mr. J. R. Trusell of Central avenue were playing about the place this morning, when one of them was bitten on the hand by a large black dog belonging to the family. The wound, although not serious, was dressed and word was dispatched to town for an officer to shoot the dog. Accordingly Tax Collector Egbert started on the chase and shot the animal howling into eternity by a shot from his revolver. The dog showed no symptoms of the rabies, but Mr Trusell thought it wise to be on the safe side, and therefore had the animal killed.

Conundrum.

My first is in town, but not in city;
My second is in pity, but not in mercy;
My third in narrow, but not in broad;
My fourth in prison, but not in ward;
My fifth in hat, but not in shirt;
My sixth in journey, but not in trip;
My seventh is within, but not in ship;
My whole, a fashionable resort in New England. DAILY READER.

—Four men seated in an open wagon were driving along Park avenue at a rapid rate yesterday afternoon, when the pole on their wagon was run directly through the side wall of the Park House stage, which was being turned around near North avenue. In the stage were seated two ladies and a little girl, and one of them narrowly escaped being struck by the pole.

STATE NOTES.

The re-union of the Veteran Association of the First New Jersey Cavalry will be held at Trenton on October 5th.

The Jersey City Board of Finance and Taxation has fixed the tax rate for the ensuing fiscal year at $2.94 on $100.

Peter Hodge of Fluderne on Thursday last landed a bass from the Millstone river that weighed eight pounds. He used a small minnow for bait.

Dr. E. M. Hunt of the State Health Board says arrangements are being made by which the general government will assist the State financially in suppressing pleuro-pneumonia among live stock in New Jersey.

A coroner's jury in the case of John Sweeney, who was killed on the Monday morning, rendered a verdict of death from injuries accidentally received, and exonerating the West Jersey railroad from all blame.

The annual financial statement of the city of Hoboken shows a bonded debt of $1,150,-300, and a floating debt of $1,195,783. The value of the taxable real estate is $14,938,2?60 and of the personalty $1,845,193. The tax rate is $22 50 per $1,000.

The government is about removing the bar in the Delaware, below Trenton, and north of Smith's island. The engineers are now making soundings, and will have the portions to be removed. At low tide the bar is about four hundred yards long, and one hundred wide at high tide. The will be of great advantage to navigation.

John McMahon and his Bridget, who have only been married three days, had a quarrel on Tuesday night at their home in 42d New York street Jersey City, and when it was all over Mr. McMahon was found dead in a pool of Paris green. The husband insisted the glass containing the poison out of her hand, but declared she had been mixing up "dirt."

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brakemen of this State have incorporated an insurance police whereby each member of the order shall be insured. The maximum assurance shall not exceed $2000, and the minimum shall receive $500. In the case of death the same amount is to be paid to the beneficiary relatives. The by-laws further says that the Brotherhood "was on the best of terms with the railroad companies, and that no strike would be made, any of their connections was contemplated."

The Paterson Board of Health in October, 1885, ordered a well on the premises of E. Ryle, which was thought to be contaminated or polluted. Hasenpflug a few months later refused the handle of the pump over the well and added a padlock to the door of the house. For this offense he was fined $50. Health Inspector Bowers reported to the Board on Tuesday night that the cases of typhoid fever, of which two proved fatal, had been traced to the water of this well.

The Governors of each of the Colonial States which participated in Philadelphia to-morrow to arrange for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States, which occurs on the same date of the following year. The celebration will be held in Philadelphia, and by the New Jersey Legislature in June. It is probable that the governors of all the States of the Union will be present, and among the features of the celebration it is proposed to have a military parade with a representative from each State.

Meeting Notices.

An Appeal for Charleston.

Mayor's Office,
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 15, 1886.

To the People of Plainfield:

Charleston needs our help and needs it now. The ability is with us. The call is made. The call of a sister city stricken with disaster should not, must not, be met with the cold suspicion of doubt, or the calculating unwillingness of selfishness. Let the noble example of the American history, that has left loathsome prostrated, society demoralized and homes destroyed, let us hasten to the assistance of our brother in her affliction.

Contributions will from this date be received at this office to be forwarded on Monday next. It is respectfully urged upon the churches of the city that opportunity be given their respective congregations for the exercise of charity in creating the Plainfield Relief Fund for the suffering Charlestonians. GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW.

THE POLITICAL POT

BEGINNING TO BOIL IN MANY SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY.

The Anti-Saloonists at Chicago Begin Their Deliberations—What They Want. Wisconsin Democrats Nominate a Full State Ticket.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Delegates to the national conference of anti-saloon Republicans, which began here to-day, have arrived from twelve states—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Vermont, Kansas and Missouri. Delegates are also present from Ohio, Michigan, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Mississippi.

A caucus of the leading spirits in the movement decided upon ex-Senator Windom, of Minnesota, for chairman of the convention. Four years ago, in the United States senate, he was instrumental in defeating the bill for the extension of the internal revenue. Albert Griffin, chairman of the national organizing committee, said: "Senators Blair, Dawes, Morrill, Hoar, Frye, Sherman, Platt, Chace and Hawley have told me that I could say they approve of the movement. A great many members of congress are with us. I am aware that a large majority of the Republican party favor the movement. We desire to secure from the party an open declaration against the saloons.

"The party is not asked to indorse prohibition or any specific measure. We want the party to adopt a definite line of policy, having for its object the destruction or serious crippling of the saloon power. We will endeavor to secure the insertion of a plank of that nature in every Republican platform, county, state and national. Among the Republicans in congress who are with us, in addition to the senators named, I can name Whitelaw Reid, of The New York Tribune; Maj. Bundy, of The Mail and Express, Judge Noah Davis and Chauncey M. Depew."

THE GOULD MARRIAGE.

Busy at His Desk as Though Nothing Had Happened.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—George Gould and his bride are not going on a wedding trip. The young man went down town to his business office yesterday as usual, as if he had not been married the day before in one of the prettiest women of the city. His father was with him, and Jay Gould seemed to be as happy as his son. They found hundreds of telegrams from all parts of the country congratulating the young man on his wedding. After reading a few of them father and son left the office at noon and drove to Mrs. Kingsland's house, where the young couple was waiting. Then the three, father, son and Mrs. Gould, Jr., drove to the foot of West Twenty-third street, where they went on board the Atalanta and steamed up the Hudson to Irvington.

The young couple will spend three weeks at Lyndhurst, Jay Gould's country home, after which George will buy a house in the city and attend to business as usual.

There is no doubt that Jay Gould is very much pleased to see George married. He has always been fond of society and his mother-in-law and his nerve attempted to figure in society. George, on the contrary, has been somewhat of a man about town, and his father was very anxious for him to settle down. The young man's choice is in every way satisfactory to the family. Mr. Gould's friends say he fairly besieged when he entered his office yesterday. He had not been there for long the young lady gave him when she landed on the wharf at Irvington the day before.

GEORGE JAY GOULD.

BURIED UNDER A LOCOMOTIVE.

An Engineer and Fireman Killed and Others Injured.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 16.—A wreck occurred in the suburbs of this city last night at 6 o'clock. The train on the Georgia division of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia road was in charge of Engineer Hall, while running fast on a curve struck a cow. The engine was thrown from the track and turned down the bank, the tender, baggage car following. The passenger cars remained on the track and no passengers were injured.

In turning the engine was upset, and John Hall, engineer, was caught beneath it. Cal Farris, fireman, was caught between the broken timbers and his hips and abdomen were crushed. He was taken from the wreck and carried to the city, where he died in a few minutes. The engineer was buried beneath the wreck and could not be extricated for several hours. Both men left families in Atlanta.

The President's Deer Hunt.

SARANAC INN, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The conditions being favorable for a deer hunt yesterday, a party was formed, under the leadership of Charles F. Cutler, of Utica, and Col. Belo, of The Galveston News. The dogs were put out about 8 o'clock. A buck was started, and after circling around the hills for some time it turned down by Long Pond and was killed by Mr. A. L. Coolidge, of Boston, who was stationed there. It is probable that the president's party will go over to the Tupper lake region on Friday. Both Col. Belo and President Cleveland emphatically deny the rumor that the former has been selected for the Austrian mission. Col. Belo states that he is perfectly satisfied to attend to the publication of his two newspapers in Texas, and that he is not a candidate for any office within the president's gift.

The White House in Order.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The executive mansion will be in complete readiness for the president and Mrs. Cleveland when they return to Washington next week, and will be. Mr. W. Loss, of Rochester, offered another, demanding that representatives in congress be required to pledge themselves to the support of American labor against competition from convicts and from paupers, whether foreign or domestic; James A. Thompson, of New York, offered a resolution in favor of the passage of a law forbidding cheap labor on public works, and also the passage of a ten hour law.

A request was also submitted for the indorsement of Henry George as a candidate for mayor of New York city. A score of resolutions were read and referred. John W. Cannon, of Troy, was chosen permanent chairman; Michael J. Nolan, of Albany, permanent secretary, and Thomas Maloney, of Schenectady.

George Blair, of New York, made a spirited speech, in which every one instrumental in the impeachment of the New York boycotters was severely handled.

COLORED MEN AND THE PRESIDENT.

Resolutions Reconsidered—Remarks of George T. Downing.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—There was a hot and acrimonious debate in the colored men's convention over a motion to reconsider resolutions adopted Tuesday, which were construed by the press to be adverse to President Cleveland. The motion was carried.

George T. Downing, of Providence, concluded that it was not to ignore political issues is to do injustice to the rights of the negro and to intelligence. He asked the convention to read the inaugural address of President Cleveland, and he spoke of his line of action with regard to the negro had been in accord with his pledge. He said: "If Mr. Cleveland has done so act to the injury of the colored people, who has the right to call him? He is entitled to great respect, as his acts toward the colored people have shown great moral courage, and why shouldn't we commend him for it. Why, my good luck we have a president who is in favor of the colored man, and why not stand by him?"

The Nineteenth Pennsylvania District Convention.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—The Democrats of the Nineteenth congressional district, in convention yesterday at Bridgeport, nominated ex-Congressman Levi Maish, of York, for congress without opposition.

Mr. Blaine in Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Hon. James G. Blaine and wife are at the Parker house. Senator Allison, of Iowa, accompanies them.

MAYOR SMITH'S CAREER

THE INS AND OUTS, UPS AND DOWNS, IN POLITICAL LIFE.

The Mayor Dressed Upon Political Life—Like a Toy Rocket—Rapidly Promoted to High Honors—He Is Now Charged with Malfeasance in Office.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—A special dispatch to the New York World in relation to the mayor's present troubles over charges pending against him, says:

Mayor William B. Smith is busy with the affairs of the bank over which the city recently has become in the impeachment trial which was favorably reported upon Monday and is likely to be ordered by the committee to be printed. He has been elected much lately with the few influential people who remain loyal to him still, and every effort is making to secure the intervention of the Republican leaders.

Before he was elected mayor he was regarded as one of the cleanest men then prominent in municipal affairs. To-day he is believed by many guilty of corrupt management in office and of the wilful use of public money for his private purposes. His career has been like that of a sky rocket. He dawned upon political life in a blaze of enthusiasm. He is likely to leave it in disgrace.

The mayor first appeared before the public when he was elected to the common council in select council, in 1882. At the end of that term he was regarded as a positive reformer, and the best-mannered Samuel Dobson, a wealthy Democrat, was defeated.

Three men, one of them Gen. Stewart, the present chief of police, bolted the convention. The same day he was introduced to Col. McClure, editor of The Times, by Gen. Stewart, brought him out as an independent candidate and warmly indorsed him. The committee of one hundred and one branch of the councils indorsed Smith, and he was run and elected. Joshua L. Baily, now one of the mayor's most bitter enemies, in a speech declared that the victory was one of the great civic events in the history of Philadelphia, and that was the sentiment generally expressed. Smith was elected president of select council by the discomfiture of the bosses, and in 1884, after the death of King (Dem.) expired, he was unanimously nominated for mayor by the Republicans.

As it was believed that he had been captured by the party leaders, and as he had written a letter repudiating the principles of civil service reform, the committee of one hundred arranged a conference between Col. McClure's then opposed him, but he was elected by 12,000 majority, and his victory resulted in the eventual death of the reform movement. The mayor's course from the first has been such as to greatly weaken the public confidence which was at first reposed in him. He had pledged himself to give the city a reform administration, but it soon became a series of scandals, culminating in the charges of illegal use of the city's money, with subsequent disgraceful disclosures, and the recommendation by the investigating committee that he be impeached. The feeling is that not only has the intervention of James McManes and other political leaders cost him the mayor.

The mayor has for months been throwing his influence in the primaries so as to strengthen his position for a renomination. In other words, he set up as a boss himself. Now he has turned in for the Judgeship candidates who are supported by McManes, and a day or two ago he had a number of his lawyers to Judge Briggs and told him frankly that he would support him, a thing that was utterly unexpected. It is believed that this is the first step in a programme to have the members of councils who are under the control of the managers instructed to let up on the mayor. The vote will be taken upon the impeachment resolution in the common branch on Monday, and if it passes, the select branch will sit as a jury and try the case.

Battle Between French and Spaniards.

MADRID, Sept. 16.—Later dispatches concerning the conflicts between the French and Spanish on the island of Africa give the following particulars:

The natives inhabiting the territory along the banks of the river Muni hoisted the Spanish flag and a Spanish gunboat was sent from the Ebiney islands to protect it. The authorities of the French colony at Gaboon, hearing of this, also sent a gunboat to the mouth, claiming that the Spanish flag had been hoisted on French territory. Upon the arrival of the French gunboat at Muni her commander demanded the lowering of the Spanish flag and announced his intention of hoisting the French colors in its place. The Spanish commander declared that he would fight rather than haul down his colors, and the French captain, after making a formal protest against the seizure of French territory, withdrew.

Higgins not a Detective.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The published report about Appointment Clerk Higgins, of the treasury department, that he is to be made chief of the secret service in place of Chief Brooks, seems to be without foundation. Assistant Secretary Fairchild denies it and Mr. Higgins says it is not him. Mr. Fairchild said when asked about the matter that he had not yet decided who would fill such silly things. Mr. Brooks, chief of the secret service, resigned some time ago by request, but his resignation has not yet been accepted.

A Rival Trades Convention.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 16.—The delegates whose credentials had been rejected by the State Trades assembly, along with a few who are not affiliated with any of the trades convention, held a meeting last night at the Empire house. John J. Junio, of Syracuse, was chosen chairman; W. B. Barnes, of Brooklyn, treasurer, and Thomas Maloney, of Albany, secretary. They claim that the State Trades assembly discriminated unjustly against the Knights of Labor. A convention of the state labor organization was called to be held at Albany Oct. 2.

Welsh Presbyterians.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16.—The triennial convention of the Welsh Presbyterian church of America began here in the Welsh church of one hundred and fifty delegates, mostly from the east, are present. Others in attendance were Revs. Hugh Jones, Liverpool; Evan Jones and Hugh Owens, Utica, N. Y., and High Sheriff David Hughes, Angelsea. The convention will be t until Monday.

Burglars Make a Big Haul.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 16.—Last night burglars entered the residence of Thomas Lowery, one of the wealthiest citizens here, and made a big haul. The safe has been kept quiet. From all that can be learned the burglars took all the valuables consisting of diamonds and silverware, and all considering the amount taken, it is said, will reach $30,000. The detectives and the police are working up the case.

A Senator Nominated for Congress.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 16.—The Democratic congressional convention of the fourth district met in Columbia and renominated Hon. W. C. Whitthorne by acclamation. Mr. Whitthorne is the present United States senator.

JAY GOULD DEFIANT.

His Lieutenant Ignores the Subway Commissioners.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Jay Gould's lieutenant were busy yesterday erecting the cables along the Third Avenue railroad. Despite the threats made by the subway commissioners about invoking police interference if the Western Union company should refuse to desist. The police authorities, however, intend to advise the latter to take any action to ask Corporation Counsel Lacombe for an opinion on the subject.

Mr. Gould was out of town. Meanwhile the Western Union people seem determined to take advantage of the situation, and declare they will go right ahead. Although there is no official expression from the corporation counsel as yet, it appears highly probable that he will side with the commissioners.

His secretary, Mr. Sefton, says at least that he has heard Mr. Lacombe state privately that the hanging of the wires overhead was a clear violation of the law.

The Western Union company, it is stated, is prepared for any move that may be made on the part of either the police department or the subway commissioners.

Superintendent Green denied that the Western Union was evading the law, claiming the company had made a contract with the elevated roads over seven years ago about erecting the poles, and that the contract had been forwarded yesterday afternoon a reply to Mr. Flower's communication.

In this letter Dr. Green says that he has a right to the use of the road for placing the wires, and that in doing so the spirit of the law is complied with. He contends that the law was intended to remove telegraph poles, and that the cable under the elevated road is as much out of the way as if it was buried underground.

A DRAMATIC COURT SCENE.

Weeping Auxiliary Over a Son, Brother and Husband.

WARREN, O., Sept. 16.—The jury in the Webster murder trial has been secured, and the trial began in dead earnest. Prosecuting Attorney Caldwell occupied one hour and forty minutes in stating the case for the state. There are three counts in the indictment. In substance: First—Defendant did wilfully and premeditatedly kill Perry Harrington. Second—Committed the murder while in the act of committing burglary. Third—Committed the murder while attempting to rob.

The prosecutor closed his remarks with, "We expect the evidence in this case will overwhelmingly connect the defendant with the tragedy."

Freeman Smith, in an eloquent speech, then stated the case for the defense. During Smith's speech, a weeping auxiliary on Webster's unblemished character, the prisoner, the whole Webster family, including father, mother and two sisters and Mrs. Hall, the husband, wept audibly, presenting a dramatic scene. Among other things the defense proposes to prove an alibi.

W. S. Prescott, the builder of Harrington's residence, was then called to the witness stand by the state, and by use of a chart clearly described the house and the location of the room in which the tragedy occurred. Mrs. Harrington testifies she knows Webster is the guilty party.

Officers of the Dairy Association.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—At the Dairy convention the following officers were elected: Joseph H. Dye, president; H. Moreland and William S. Taylor, of New York, secretaries; vice-presidents, J. J. Ross, Delaware; D. Harpster, Ohio; Samuel Emlen, Maryland; ex-Governor Fifer, New Jersey; I. Spangler, Iowa; J. R. Mosier, Kansas; A. S. Cadwallader, Pennsylvania; Hon. A. P. Rowe, Virginia, and Archibald Tweedee, New York.

President Cleveland, who was invited to attend the convention, sent a letter of regret.

There were about forty delegates present, representing the eastern states, Canada, Iowa and Kansas.

Letters of regret were read from the governors of Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Florida, Indiana, Colorado, Illinois; from Senators Sawyer, of Wisconsin; Harrison, of Indiana; Mahone, of Virginia, and Miller, of New York, and from a large number of congressmen.

The Jockey Club Trial.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 16.—The jury in the case of the Coney Island Jockey club, whose officers were on trial for violating the state law against betting, racing, gaming and pool selling, and were discharged by the court. It is said that they stood eleven for conviction to one for acquittal. The case was regarded as a very important one, as it was the first to introduce a novel system of betting by "commission," which, it is claimed, successfully evades the law against pool selling and book making. Anthony Comstock has taken an active part in the prosecution.

Boston's Contribution.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The treasurer of the Charleston fund has received from Mayor Courtenay, of Charleston, the following telegram: "Boston's contribution to Charleston received. I have no words to express the thanks of Charleston for this effort of your generous citizens to sustain and lift up their stricken fellow citizens here. It will be a precious memory for all time." The fund has now reached $30,000.

Victims of the Nickle Plate Disaster.

ERIE, Sept. 16.—The injured who were brought here from the Silver Creek railroad collision are doing well. Those in the hospital St. Vincent hospital. Surgeon Steward reports that Markle and Schindler are doing well, Harrington is greatly improved, and Dr. Gilbert, who is in a critical condition, Louis Lindsley, who had both legs broken, is very low, however, and will probably die at an early date.

Senator Sherman's Programme.

MANSFIELD, O., Sept. 16.—Senator Sherman says that the Republican state committee will open the campaign in Ohio this fall he would speak at Louisville and probably one or two other places in Kentucky. He had also accepted an invitation to deliver about three speeches in Michigan. For the Ohio Republicans he expected to make three speeches a week until the close of the campaign.

Coney Island Objects.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Chief of Police McLaughlin, of Coney Island, has notified all concerned that fire-parting match between Sullivan and Heenld will not be allowed to take place at Paul Bauer's on Friday, as advertised. The match is therefore believed to be off again.

A Bonding Compromise.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Persons claiming bonds information state that a compromise has been effected between the Governor and Drexel syndicate interests in the bonding property and that everything will be settled in a few days.

The Maine Vote.

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 16.—Reports from 415 towns give Bodwell, (Rep.) 66,598; Blethen, (Dem.) 48,351, and Clark, (Fre.) 4,822. The remaining towns in 1884 gave Bodwell, (Rep.) 3,510; Plaisted, (Dem.) 3,508, and scattering, 243.

OLD VETERANS MEET.

THE ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE IN THEIR ANNUAL MEETING.

Gen. Sherman Presides, With Many Prominent Officers of the War Present—Resolutions of Thanks to the Officers, and the Opening Address.

ROCK ISLAND, Ills., Sept. 16.—The city is filled with old veterans, from generals down to high privates, and the sound of fife and drum are heard on the streets. Besides the army of the Tennessee, which is holding its eighteenth annual meeting here, the County Veteran's association has just closed a three days' encampment on Vandervill island, a few miles from the city. The business blocks are decked in holiday attire. From 10,000 to 15,000 strangers are in the city.

Gen. Sherman's address in calling the meeting to order was brief, but warm and touching. He said: Once more the Society of the Army of the Tennessee is gathered in reasonably numbers for business, and to experience the pleasure we all feel in each other's presence as we remember the past. We have met in the beautiful city of Rock Island on the banks of the mighty Mississippi, about which many of those who served with us had their homes and about which a good number of our members live to-day. The locality was the scene of war, but not such a war as we had. It was an Indian war, and over there on the island which lies between the cities of Davenport and Rock Island, whose guests we are, was Fort Armstrong, where the troops gathered, some of them marching hundreds of miles to reach it. Then came another war, and the secession of this grand river was involved in it. The result was that now, the Mississippi, as Lincoln beautifully expressed it, flows unvexed to the sea.

A number of committees were appointed for the ensuing year.

Gen. Chetlain, of the committee appointed last year to prepare resolutions of thanks to the officers of the association, presented resolutions tendering to Gen. Sherman, the president; Col. L. M. Dayton, secretary; to Gen. Andrew Hickenlooper, assistant secretary, and Gen. M. F. Force, treasurer, the sincere thanks of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee with expressions of its high appreciation and recognition of the faithfulness of their unselfish and patriotic devotion to the interests of the society, and also congratulations to each of said officers upon the present condition of the society, mainly due to the careful and conscientious discharge of their onerous duties. Gen. Chetlain said that these resolutions would be unanimously engrossed and presented to the officers named, and as both the president and secretary were named in the resolutions Gen. Logan would take the chair and put the motion for adoption.

As Gen. Logan assumed the chair he was cheered vigorously. The resolutions were adopted unanimously. Gen. Belknap, of the committee appointed to secure the removal in Washington of the statue of Gen. Rawlins, the society's first president, to a more signify place than its first site, reported that the duty had been performed through the offices of Gen. Bragg in the house of representatives, Gen. Logan in the senate and the secretary of war. The matter was packed to its utmost capacity at the evening meeting, when an interesting programme was carried out. Gen. Sherman presided. Prayer was offered by Rt. Rev. Bishop Perry and Fallows. The address of welcome in behalf of the city was delivered by Alderman Lundy, and Governor Oglesby delivered the address for the state. The response for the society was made by Gen. Sherman, and Gen. Chetlain delivered the annual address.

News in the Orient.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—The steamer Gaelic arrived last evening, bringing Yokohama dates to Sept. 2, and Hong Kong dates to Aug. 24. Eighteen thousand dollars has been recovered from Dacrut by the authorities of Macao. Dacrut is believed to be an accomplice of Bertram, who obtained $50,000 from the Chartered bank at Hong Kong, by means of a forged draft. Nothing has been learned of Bertram. The Tsungli Yamen, or foreign board, have adopted the suggestion of the viceroy that the propagation of Christianity should be condemned if carried on openly, but suppressed if pursued secretly. In the case of the American ship Clarissa B. Carver versus the British steamer Glamorganshire, which arose out of a collision between the vessels a year ago, the British naval court at Yokohama has awarded the American vessel damages to the amount of $67,000.

Rev. Edward Cowley Gets Damages.

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 16.—Rev. Edward Cowley has been awarded $5,000 in a libel suit against Joseph Smith. The clergyman was attached as one of the institutions in New York harbor as chaplain, and defendant accused him of starving Louis Victor, a boy, almost to death. Defendant claimed that the charge was true, and he undertook to prove it. The plaintiff put in evidence to show that the bodily emaciation which Louis Victor suffered was caused, not by want of sufficient food, but by sickness, a disease which deprives its victim of the power to assimilate his food.

The Meeting of Governors.

RICHMOND, Sept. 16.—Governor Fits Hugh Lee and staff left this city this morning for Philadelphia for the purpose of being present at the convention of the governors of the original states of the Union. The convention will decide in regard to celebrating the centennial anniversary in 1887 of the adoption of the constitution of the United States.

FRANCESCA'S ROMANTIC STORY.

She Claims Bad Treatment at a Dominican Convent.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16.—Francesca Mead, a pretty brunette of 18 summers, came here from Chicago a few days ago and is now working in a factory. She has a remarkable story to tell. She lived with her parents in Freysingen, Bavaria, where she formed the acquaintance of Rev. Karl Horn, a Catholic priest, according to her story, he painted to her and her sister the life in America, and especially that of a teacher in ladies' seminaries, in such glowing terms, that both girls came here. They were received at the Dominican convent at Racine in July, 1884.

She alleged that they were forced to stay and become novices against their will, their money, about $300, was taken from them, and their hair was cut in spite of their protest. They were kept in close confinement, but her sister Barbara escaped to Chicago, and went from there to Fort Wayne, where she found employment in a hospital. Upon learning this Francesca and her parents addressed themselves to the sister superior of the convent and forwarded still more money for Francesca, but it was kept away from her. The parents of Barbara went to Chicago to search for her sister, but was unable to find her. She thinks now her sister is here, and after finding her intended to bring suit against the sister superior of the convent at Racine for detention and for the recovery of her money.

PARSON DOWNS CHOKED OFF.

The Baptist Association Did Not Care to Hear His Explanations.

READING, Mass., Sept. 16.—The thirty-eighth anniversary of the Boston North Baptist association was held here yesterday, the local church being packed. The committee appointed to investigate the Dowdsville Square church, of Boston, reported that the association was voluntary and it had a right to sever the connection with it at any delinquent church for whatever cause, any church which might openly allow its members to indulge in polygamy.

The committee asked that the association dissolve its connection with the Dowdsville Square church. Rev. W. W. Downs objected to the report, but it was formally accepted. Mr. Downs was allowed to speak and addressed the association for half an hour, reviewing the scandal with which his name has been associated, and protesting his innocence. When Mr. Dennis undertook to describe the affair in Mr. Tabor's room, when the officers burst in the door, he was cautioned to discuss the subject in a proper manner. He continued to talk until the association voted to cut off discussion. Downs especially requested that his church be allowed to withdraw, and it was unanimously granted.

Maine's State Fair.

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 16.—Twenty thousand people attended the state fair yesterday, the largest attendance ever known on the second day. The city marshal stopped all pool selling and gambling. The governor's council and Hon. Hannibal Hamlin were present. Governor Robie, Secretary Boothby and ex-Gov. Col. Clark S. Edwards, the defeated Democratic candidate, dined with Treasurer Osgood to-day.

Johnnie Made His Escape.

CATONSVILLE, Sept. 16.—Johnnie Donovan, a little boy 12 years old, made an effort to escape from St. Mary's Industrial school last evening. He fell from the wall and was instantly killed.

Not a Land of Heathen.

The popular notion of the north that Mexico is a land of heathen and "greasers" is the wildest of errors. True, the poor and ignorant are vastly in the majority as to numbers, but they are vigorously ruled by the controlling upper class, which has few superiors on the face of the earth for culture, refinement, good breeding and that proper pride which can trace its ancestry back through centuries of wealth and power. As a rule, the "civilizing influence" of the average railroader has not yet been made apparent.

The ladies of Mexico are invariably gentlemen whose deportment, here as elsewhere, is a credit to the country that claims them; but there is also a multitude of lower employes, whose conduct is a disgrace to any nation. PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do.

W. F. Trost, Plainfield, N. J., June 25, '86.

Dr. Chas. Thiers,

Dear Sir—I am not subject to gum diseases to any considerable extent, but I have used your Stomatine with a remedy for sore throat, and find it very satisfactory. On the 4th of October, 1885, you gave me the first bottle. Since then I have used it frequently and told about five gross of it, wholesale and retail.

In my intercourse with the consumer public I can vouch for it as giving up-to-date satisfaction, commending it to those who have not individually tried it. Yours for what it is deserving of, and I feel it is deserving of much praise.

I myself have gratefully commended your valuable preparation to a number and desire it to be used as a gargle, giving directions as to the vocal organs.

Very Respectfully Yours,
E. M. BOWLES, Druggist.

Plainfield, N. J., August 24, '86.

Dr. Chas. B. Thiers,

Dear Sir—I most cheerfully bear out many in the statements made of Stomatine. I have not only used it personally, have sold it to my friends, but my customers and they all speak in the highest terms of it. Yours truly,
E. M. BOWLES.

GERONIMO CAPTURED.

PORTRAITS OF THE RENEGADE CHIEF AND THE GALLANT GEN. MILES.

The End of the Trouble With the Chiricahua Apaches—History of the Trouble. Geronimo En Route to Florida—Will He be Hanged?

Geronimo and band, the terror of Arizona, New Mexico and Sonora, is once more captured, and it is to be hoped he will now be placed where he can no longer harass others or where he himself will not fall a victim to revenge at the hands of friends of the many he has murdered during these many years.

Geronimo is the head chief of the Chiricahua Apaches and first came into notice in 1876, when a tavern keeper named Rogers was killed by some drunken Apaches. It was then decided by the Indian agent to transfer the Chiricahuas to the San Carlos reservation. Geronimo, at that time a sub-chief, protested, saying he did not think it just to send them all away for a murder one of the number had committed, and whom they had already put to death. But Cleveland's protests availed nothing, and his people were ordered to move. Geronimo asked for leave to gather his family which was scattered in the mountains.

GERONIMO.

He never returned to them. He was afterward captured in New Mexico and brought to the San Carlos reservation with the rest of his tribe. Soon after this he escaped again and was not until 1878. In 1881 he made his third escape, and eluded the soldiers until 1884, when Gen. Crook brought him back again.

On May 17, 1883, Geronimo led in the outbreak which has given Mexico and the United States no end of hardships since. The chief difficulty in capturing him came from the rough nature of the country, where the Apaches were perfectly at home. In fact, it is likely they would prefer a life of lawlessness, with the privilege of roaming free over those mountains, to a life of luxury in captivity.

MARCHING GERONIMO INTO CAMP.

Then Geronimo has been skipping across the Mexican border in such a way as to harrass the troops. The Mexicans will not allow the United States to establish a permanent camp on their side of the line, and so the Mexicans exercised themselves but little toward his capture he fell back on Mexico as a place of refuge. Geronimo has never considered the Mexican soldiers to be worthy of serious notice, and boasts that he never wasted any ammunition on Mexicans—he killed them with ease.

On the 11th of last January, it will be remembered that Capt. Emmet Crawford, while pursuing Geronimo, was shot down by a party of Mexican soldiers who had mistaken his command for a body of hostile Indians, at least so it was said at the time.

Since then reports and denials of Geronimo's capture have followed one another thick and fast, until it became like the Irishman's fun. This time it is hoped he is captured "for keeps," and to Gen. Miles is the honor due.

Gen. Miles will always be noted as a most successful Indian fighter. He it was who captured Chief Joseph and Nez Perces in their flight through Montana after they had successfully fought and evaded other generals. He also captured the hostile Cheyennes, who are now living in peace, as farmers, on the Rosebud, in Montana. All this was accomplished after much fierce fighting. To him must be given the credit of having brought to a close the Sioux outbreak and the final submission of his thousands of savage followers.

GEN. MILES.

Gen. Miles is a Bostonian by birth, and in his 48th year. He began his career as a merchant, but in 1861 he entered the army as captain of the Twenty-second Massachusetts infantry. He has not laid down his arms since. He married a niece of Gen. and Senator Sherman.

In answer to a request from Secretary Endicott, Gen. Miles formulated the following reasons why the Apaches should be removed from Arizona. The reply is worthy of the man and of the occasion. Here is a portion of it:

You ask me why I desire the removal of the Apaches from the territory? I will tell you in as few words as possible. It is the means of all hereafter whose prospects and progress have been blasted and retarded by the Scottish cruelties of these Apaches. I say it in the name and on behalf of the widows and fatherless children whose lives have been wrecked and whose future has been darkened by the cruelties of these fiendish bands. I ask it in the name of the thousands of lives that have been offered up as a sacrifice to the reserva-tion agents. I ask it in the name of the civilization, which can never advance in this territory so long as the Apaches are allowed periodically to terrorize the country.

"Let Her Roll, Gallagher."

The favorite slang expression on the Chicago board of trade now is, "Let her roll, Gallagher." This comes from New Orleans. When Blakely Hall went down there a few years ago to write up the exposition, which didn't expose, he found that the favorite remark of the bobtail car driver of the Crescent City was Gallagher. He observed that when the conductor of these cars rang the bell for the street for a lady passenger the gentlemen in the car would usually rise, take off their hats and use the nervousness evoked with something like chivalric grace. Then one or more would sing out, "Let her roll, Gallagher." The rusty brake would twirl, the jaded mule would prance and the creaking car would roll on through dust to daring.—New York World.

"FRIEND AND FELLOW MAN:"

You are hereby notified that the Lime-Kiln club, which has been on a vacation for the past two months, will reconvene business and social on Saturday evening at the regular hour. Every member who can walk is expected to be on hand at least five minutes before the triangle sounds. No dogs allowed in the hall, as usual. Owners of umbrellas will bring them at their own peril. The password at the second door will be "Azure skies." Anyone having books belonging to the library will please return them at the meeting.

By order of
BARNOWS BRAND, Secretary.

When the meeting opened 213 members answered to roll call, and Elder Toots delightedly remarked to Samuel Shin that it did him good to see the general abandon which seemed to have taken root in every breast. When the triangle sounded Brother Gardner arose and said:

"My frens, two months ago, at de almost hankerchief-waving hurry of de members of de club, I decided to adjourn de meetin's frew de space of July an' August. I had grave doubts as to de propriety of sich a step, but yielded to de pressure. De result has fer what I anticipated. Dis hentry has almost' bin plunged into war, de fishery question am still an object of nathunal dispute, an' storms an' disasters hev been reported all over de United States. Bizness has bin grievously neglected. People who depended on dis club hev had their confidence shocken. We meet at once gib back to regular proceedins, an' proceed to grapple wid an' obercome de live topics of de hour.

"When de club was organized we had our annual 'luckshun an' club picnic on de fust Saturday in August. We changed it to de second Saturday to oblige de Concord skule of philosophy. Dis change has given rise to de remark among mah people of Michigan an' Canada, an' I has now determined to make a third change. Owing to de fack dat de turnip, carrot an' watermillion am not at dere best in dis climbate until September, an' dat mustard an' pickles, which play sich important parts in our banquets, do not begin to develop deir flavor until late in October, de anniversary of Perry's victory, it has been deemed best to not de time fur de picnic at one week from today. I has been in correspondence wid many of our honorary members, an' am assured of a large attendance. Canada will be represented by over 100 delegates, and every state in de Union will send de delegates. De place in de natural spot will be on Fighting Island, eight miles below de city. We shall have de usual games, wid de usual prizes, an' I trust dat every local member will do his level best to inoculate a reprehensible time.

COMMITTEES.

The following committees were then appointed:

Reception of delegates—Giveadam Jones, Pickles Smith and Trustee Fullback, with authority not to hire more than five mules and wagons.

On the banquet—Sir Isaac Walpole, Whalebone Hawker, Elder Caniff and Col. Cahoots, with instructions to canvass the city for provisions.

On games—Shindig Watkins, Elder Toots, Harshhorn Davis and Old Man Scott.

On election—Rev. Penstock and Uncle Boggs.

INCIDENTAL.

The delegates will begin arriving about Thursday, and as fast as they come in they will be escorted to Meadow Hall, where, filled with a lunch of iced tea, and then distributed among the cabins of local members. Any citizen having a barn not in use will do him a favor by notifying under their hands, property to, giving in full name and address. Only such hay will be used as is found in the fields, and a report in writing, under their hands, properly sworn to, given in by each member. Only such hay were authorized and empowered to do. Any farmer already considered and the part will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Any member invited for the purpose of paying the expenses of such persons as may be sent for by the committee and paid over to the said board or committee, and it is once any such person, or persons, be found going to any other township in this state, shall not immediately notify the township board in such house or house so contracted for as aforesaid, such township board shall immediately cause the name of such person or persons so offending to be put out of the book where the names of the poor are ordered to be registered by virtue of this act, and shall not be entitled to ask for or receive relief from the overseer or overseers of any such township.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 26, 1886.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for drainage, where the same is necessary to the public health, in certain counties," approved one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of commissioners who may have been appointed under the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, shall, within thirty days from the passage of this act, make a report in writing, under their hands, properly sworn to, setting forth the names of the persons who were authorized and empowered to do the work thereof already completed and the part still to be done, and the estimated cost thereof, and the amount levied for the purpose of paying the expenses of such work, and the amount already collected and paid over to the said board or commissioners, and the amount due from the lands; the amount paid out by them for labor or other services, for each day's work done, and the amount of each payment; the amount paid for commissioners' services, and the number of days' work done or rendering the service, and the amount of each payment; the quantity and kind of material or supplies purchased, and the amount of each price, and the details of all other expenditures not herein particularly mentioned, and the report shall be filed within said thirty days, with the clerk of the township in which the work is done, and in case the same be more than one township, borough or incorporated town, then with the clerk of each township, borough or incorporated town, and the said board or commissioners shall cause a notice to be published in a newspaper printed, published or circulated in each township, borough or incorporated town or town, as the case may be, in which the work is done, and in case there shall at all times be given to the board or commissioners, or any of them, at least double the amount of his or their bill, with interest thereon, for the performance of the same according to contract.

2. And be it enacted, That section thirteen (13) of the said act to which this is a supplement be amended to read as follows:

13. And be it enacted, That whenever any ditch or ditches, drain or drains, or other channel or channels for the purpose of drainage shall have been constructed under this act and the supplement thereto, and the same shall be in the opinion of the board of the township in which the expenses of the same shall be assessed, or the majority of the board, if there be more than one, that the same is no longer necessary for the purpose of providing for the public health in the locality in which the same is situated, then the said board may, by order, declare that the said work, ditch or drain, or other channel or channels, shall be vacated, and the same shall be vacated accordingly, and the said board shall cause a notice of the said order to be published in a newspaper printed, published or circulated in the said township, borough or incorporated town or town, as the case may be, for the space of three weeks in a newspaper printed, published or circulated in the said township, borough or incorporated town or town, as the case may be, and in case there shall be no such newspaper printed, published or circulated in the said township, borough or incorporated town or town, then by posting up a notice of the said order in three public places in the said township, borough or incorporated town or town, and the said board shall cause a copy of the said order to be filed in the office of the clerk of the

JOTTINGS.

—St. Mary's fair to-night.

—A colored festival was held in Demo-cratic Hall, on West Front street last even-ing.

—In order to meet the demands on our columns an eight page paper will be issued to-morrow.

—A "chestnut" bell has been placed in the ticket office at the depot to be used in case of emergency.

—Policeman Lynch arrested an itinerant watch peddler at the depot yesterday after-noon. He took out his license and was re-leased.

—It is understood that the M. E. Church will be lighted by electricity, provided such a method is shown to work satisfactorily in other cases.

—The Newsboy's Relief Corps will tender a reception to the officers and members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in the Post room to-night.

—It is estimated that 15,000 persons at-tended the State Fair at Waverly yesterday. Gov. Leon Abbett and other prominent State officials were among the number.

—An adjourned meeting of the City Coun-cil will be held on Tuesday evening next, when the subject of sewerage and water works will be handle without gloves.

—H. E. Hilton of No. 118 West Seventy-first street, New York, yesterday purchased the farm of G. F. Johnson, at Piscataway, for $9,519.81. It was sold by the Sheriff.

—The evenings of Oct 14, 15 and 16 have been selected for a series of entertainments of unusual interest at the York avenue church, including Mrs. Woodbridge and General Fisk will speak.

Thursday—Convention business. At four p. m. a children's service will be held. In the evening a reception will be given to the "Y's," with several addresses.

The concluding session will be held on Friday morning, when all unfinished business will be disposed of.

Married in Jail.

About a week ago Frank Hoffman was committed to the Union County Jail by Jus-tice Ball of Union on a charge of bastardy preferred by Caroline Hotz of the same place. While in jail Hoffman became penitent and sent word to the Justice that he would will-lingly marry the girl he had wronged. In response Justice Ball drove over to Elizabeth and married the young couple in the jail. Deputy Warden Philip Breen gave away the bride. All the prisoners in the jail were per-mitted to witness the ceremony and each congratulated the newly-made man and wife. Some of the jail officials also witnessed the unusual proceedings.

Shuttle Thieves Sentenced.

In the Union county Court of Special Ses-sions at Elizabeth on Wednesday, Frank Gi-rardini, Henry Rosenbaum, Engeltsch Schindle and William Beck, the four young men who pleaded guilty to systematically robbing the Singer Manufacturing Company of shuttles were sentenced by Judge McCor-mick to two years each in State Prison. Rosenbaum, however, was kept in Newark when sentence was pronounced.

—A west bound freight train on the Penn-sylvania Railroad was wrecked at Rahway early yesterday morning by which an engine and three freight cars were demolished. The engine ran off a misplaced switch running some distance over the cross-ties. The en-gineer and fireman on the engine had a miraculous escape from instant death. Two wrecking trains were sent for and it re-quired several hours to remove the obstruc-tion.

—Respecting the statement from rust down in Fourth street, as published in yesterday's paper, that their wells were being contam-inated by gas from the gas works, the super-intendent of the works, yesterday visited Miss Duffy, one of the places complained of, and, after examining the water of the well, says that it is not caused by gas from the gas works, but smells more like compost gas, and adds that there is no ventilation to the well, and that there was fine floating in the water. He advised that the water be ex-amined by the Board of Health.

They Gave Fictitious Names.

Two men who were evidently dead drunk seated themselves on the stone pavement in front of the ticket office at the depot last evening to wait for the 11.45 p. m. train from New York. Both of them fell asleep, and when the train arrived it was impossi-ble to arouse them, they having stretched themselves out for the night. About that time Policeman Grant came along and with difficulty escorted one of them to the station house, and returning found the other partly undressed apparently getting ready to retire. He, too, was taken to the lock up where they gave their names as "George Smith" and "Frank Day." This morning the men were able to sit up and "Smith" acknowledged that his right name was Albert Cushing of Bound Brook, and some letters found on "Day's" person disclosed his identity to be Thomas Caffery of the same place. The men said they had given fictitious names on account of the disgrace they had brought upon them-selves. Judge Ulrich fined them each three dollars, and in default of the payment of the fine he sentenced them to the county jail for ten days each.

Republican Executive Committee.

Last evening was the time set for the first regular meeting of the city Republican Ex-ecutive Committee. At eight o'clock there were present in the room over the City Na-tional Bank on East Front street, Messrs. Clock and Hall, which latter generously decorated with flowers, ferns and evergreens. A large display of glassware is exhibited along with many other useful articles. At one end of the table is a miniature grocery store. The table is presided over by Mrs. J. L. Ander-son, Mrs. Madelon Bottger, Miss Kate Flana-gan, Miss Nora Casey, Miss Kittie Carney, Miss Allie Quinn, Miss Alice Keeley, Miss Anna Buckley and Miss Celia Kelley.

Directly opposite is the table of the Rosary Society at which many substantial articles such as bedroom suits, lounges, etc., are to be disposed of. Miss Verner, Mrs. William Moore, Miss Monoke, Mrs. Julia Purcell, Miss Mamie Tracey and Miss Keefe are in charge.

The refreshment table and flower booth are in charge of Mr. and Mrs. James Mullen and is situated in the rear of the hall, di-rectly under the gallery, at which the thirst can be quenched and the appetite appeased.

Shortly after nine o'clock a farce, entitled "Married by the New Justice," was presented by the Dramatic Association, but on account of the lateness of the hour it could not be satis-factorily heard throughout the hall, although it was well received.

During the progress of the fair, which will continue to the remainder of this week and all of next week, a ticket entitling the winner to a passage for Europe and return will be dis-posed of. This evening a farce in one act, entitled "Master of the Situation," will be rendered by the Dramatic Association.

W. C. T. U. Convention.

Preparations are already being made by the various committees in charge for the State Convention of the W. C. T. U. which convenes at Reform Hall on Tuesday, Octo-ber 5th, and will continue for three days thereafter. It is expected that about 400 delegates will be present, many of whom will remain throughout the entire session. The following is the program for each day's work:

Tuesday—Executive committee meets at 10 a. m. In the evening a public meeting will be held in the Methodist Episcopal church with an address of welcome and a response, and the president's address.

Wednesday—Convention business. At four p. m., there will be a Kitchen Garden entertainment in Music Hall. In the even-ing Mrs. Woodbridge and General Fisk will speak.

Thursday—Convention business. At four p. m. a children's service will be held. In the evening a reception will be given to the "Y's," with several addresses.

The concluding session will be held on Friday morning, when all unfinished business will be disposed of.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Mr. T. H. Henshaw, the well-known story writer, with his family, are home again from their summer outing.

Mr. Libby of Bound Brook got his license last week, and took possession of the Ide Bond property on Friday.

George Marsh and family have moved into their new quarters, which was formerly erected for them on Front street, again.

The road overseer has been inspecting the different highways in the Fanwood section and the village by spreading gravel over the rear-face.

John Flynn was driving his horse from the depot into town a few days ago, when the animal stumbled and fell, causing several fatal flesh wounds. The horse is unfit for use.

The work on the new iron bridge between Union and Somerset counties has been somewhat delayed. The iron work has arrived and work will now proceed as rapidly as possible.

At the public school here, opened on the 8th inst., with appropriate exercises, the at-tendance for the past week has been very in-creased. Principal Calkins and Miss Squires of Springfield are the only newly-appointed ones. The latter has secured board in Plainfield.

A crowd of men and boys are in the habit of congregating in front of John Cook's place on Sunday evenings to ridicule the innocent women on their way to church. The names of the offenders are all known, and if the nuisance is not abated their names will be made public through the courts.

Mrs. Thos. Paff met with a painful acci-dent last week, by which she has since been confined to her bed. She was in the kitchen, and while passing through the kitchen of her home stumbled and fell, spraining her ankle and receiving severe bruises about the body. Dr. Westcott was summoned, and she is now slowly recovering under his care.

Union County W. C. T. U. Convention.

[Reported by a Delegate.]

The fourth convention of the Union Co. W. C. T. U. was held on Wednesday at Eliz-abethport. The meeting was opened at 10 a. m., Miss Julia Becker, of the Rahway Union, in the chair.

The hymn were announced by Mrs. D. Tomlinson of Plainfield and Scripture was read and prayer offered by Mrs. Mary Dunnan of Newark.

The subject thought of the day was Faith in answered prayer, many touching instances of which were given during the conference which followed the opening exercises, and was conducted by our President, Mrs. Tom-linson.

Mrs. Downs, the President of the State W. C. T. U., was expected, but failing to come, the time allotted to her was filled by individual testimonies from members of the different unions, until the noon hour of prayer, always remembered by the W. C. T. U's all over the world.

At one o'clock a bountiful collation was served in the room above, and at two o'clock we again assembled in the audience room, where we were led in prayer by Mrs. Clark of Green City, after which the time was given to hearing reports from the unions rep-resented by the ten delegates present and the superintendents of the several de-partments of work, followed by replies by Mrs. Downs. Remarks, in the con-tents of the question box—a most excellent method of obtaining desired information. Mrs. Boswell's reports of the Sunday meet-ings recently rendered us to make every point plainly understood, and the feeling of many was expressed as that they had never real-learned more about the work and the methods for accomplishing it than at any previous meeting of the kind.

The consecrating and uplifting which is experienced at these conventions by so many earnest workers, who have shared the Mas-ter's call to "Go work to-day in my vine-yard," must surely tell in the days to come, when the "Why and wherefore like" may, yea, will, be said of many, but not of them.

Another New Enterprise for Plainfield.

Augustus VanDuvender of North Plain-field, has purchased from Walter Scott, a lot on North avenue, near Berckman street, on which he will erect a cars-8 manufac-tory at once which he expects to have run-ning by October 1st. The firm of VanDu-vester & Horn employ fifty girls at their factory in Philadelphia and expect to em-ploy as many here as soon as they can be obtained and instructed in running the looms.

Reform Club Meeting.

A fair-sized audience was present in Re-form Hall last evening at the Thursday evening meeting of the Reform Club. Pre-sident French conducted the service and ad-dresses were made by Rev. J. R. Clowes, George Angleman, Judge Nathan Harper, Ethan Lanphear and Mr. J. W. Rioss of Boston. Miss Alice Smith occupied her ac-customed seat at the organ and Mrs. King led in singing.

STATE NOTES.

An unknown man, supposed to be a tramp, was killed on the Newark meadows Monday night by a Pennsylvania Railroad train.

Hattie Brown, aged 18 years, was yester-day run over by a team of horses and mule, was driving at Farmingdale, and instantly killed.

H. A. Wainwright, the Prohibition nomi-nee for member of Assembly from the Sec-ond District of Monmouth county, has with-drawn.

The Orange lawn tennis tournament, which was to have been continued yester-day, was unavoidably postponed on account of rain.

The Fifth New Brunswick Co-operative Associ-ation of Grocers yesterday made their twen-tieth quarterly statement. The total re-ceipts during the quarter were $26,256.57; liabilities $9,258.81; net profit, $997.76.

The Prohibitionists of the Second Legis-lative District met at Beverly yesterday to nominate candidates for the Assembly. After canvassing awhile the Convention was called to order, and John R. Knight a Bridgeboro glass manufacturer, declined nomination. The Convention then ad-journed.

Some months ago, Louisa John, of Frank-lin, found employment in the house of E. H. Voorhees, a street-sprinkling contractor, on Mount Pleasant avenue, Newark. Tuesday Voorhees went to the house and the inmates of the girl had returned home. He said that Louisa had gone out for a walk Sunday morning and had not come back. She has not returned to her parents and no trace of her has been found.

Miscellaneous Notices.

An Appeal for Charleston.

Mayor's Office,
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 15, 1886.

To the People of Plainfield:

Charleston needs our help and needs it now. The ability is ours. To her call, then, the call of a sister city stricken with grief, and smoulder-ing yet perhaps, destructive of property, of wealth, of life, a calamity, unparalleled in American history, that has just been announced, treated, society demoralized and homes de-stroyed, let us heartily respond.

From all quarters of the civilized world come messages of sympathy for the afflicted city, let us attest our sincerity by assisting to lighten her burdens in her affliction.

Contributions of food and clothing may be received at this office to be forwarded on Monday next. Let every man, woman and child who loves the city that opportunity be given their re-spective contributions. Let Sunday next be set apart in evoking the Plainfield Relief Fund for suf-fering Charleston. By order of

MAYOR ROCKFELLOW.

The Taylor Family in Politics.

Not only have two Taylors of Tennessee been nominated respectively by the great parties in Tennessee for governor and their father been proposed as a candidate by the Prohibitionists, but a third brother is now mentioned as a possible candidate of the Labor party. It is to be hoped in common justice that old Mrs. Taylor will be interviewed by the Wasson Suffrage party.—Albany Times.

The people of Tennessee are to be congratulated on their prospect of escaping in some measure the character of a one-horse state which so often disgrace heated campaigns. The gubernatorial standard bearers of the two parties being brothers, the Republican candidate for governor will call his opponent a slab-sided son of a sawlog without reflecting at the same time on his own origin, while the Democratic candidate for governor will for the same reason, from hurling the charge against his antagonist that his grandfather once swung his from her nest.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is said that the father of the Taylor boys of Tennessee got them into their present awkward position of running against each other for governorships by the simple method by making them speak against each other when children. He kept them up till 11 o'clock at night on occasions, and often had to whip each one to keep them from before the debate was closed.—Dallas News.

Two Ways of Courting.

"So you are paying attention to the handsome Miss Dashaway, George? You're lucky. I was making attempts in that direction myself, but my suit was a failure."

"Ah! indeed; how did you proceed with your wooing?"

"I told her I loved her."

"Yes."

"And asked her if she would have me."

"Yes."

"Then we closed. What did you do?"

"Nothing. I simply treated her to ice cream and strawberries. Never spoke a word of love."

"And you are well with her now?"

"Yes, you bet."—Boston Courier.

Quarreled Like Cat and Dog.

A well-known artist was seen the other evening grinding his teeth and wrinkling a brow generally smooth and placid. On inquiring he had an attack of neuralgia he replied, but said he was suffering because Mrs. A—— his wife's stylish brown, was conversing with Mr. B., who was dressed in a violent pepper-and-salt and the two quarreled like cat and dog.—Ct. ag Belle.

AGAINST SALOONS.

THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE ANTI-SALOON REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

They Favor High License Until They Do Away With the Need of Any License. State Legislation Recommended—Officers Elected.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—At the anti-saloon convention United States Senator Blair was elected temporary chairman and ex-Senator Windom, of Minnesota, was elected permanent chairman.

The forenoon was taken up by the usual preliminary work of appointing committees.

The afternoon session was called to order at 2 o'clock, but it was nearly three hours later before the committee on resolutions was ready to report.

In the interval addresses were delivered by several delegates, and the following national central executive committee was selected: Maine, Hon. W. T. Pike; New Hampshire, United States Senator Blair; Vermont, Hon. George A. Brown; Massachusetts, Col. E. H. Haskell; Rhode Island, Hon. Henry B. Metcalf; New York, Gen. Thomas W. Conway; New Jersey, Rev. D. H. W. Carroll; Pennsylvania, Hon. W. Brown; Iowa, Hon. Hiram Price; Minnesota, Gen. A. B. Meeker; Kansas, Governor St. John; Will Cumback; Wisconsin, R. F. Wheeler; Kansas, Albert Griffin; Illinois, Hon. W. A. James; Georgia, Hon. Alfred T. Akers.

The ad interim speakers were Hon. Hiram Price, Gen. Conway, Rev. Dr. G. H. Ball, of Buffalo; Col. Dunne, of Maine, and Hon. Senator Morse, of Massachusetts. The latter evoked great cheering by denouncing the action of the Prohibitionists in the last national campaign, as well as by his declaration that the defeat of Blaine was a crime against liberty. Gen. Nettleton, of Minnesota, read a letter from Bishop Ireland declaring that the only hope for relief from the liquor traffic was in the Republican party. All of the speakers called for radical action, and denounced any lodge, or lukewarm policy. The call on Gen. Neal Dow for the Delegate Pratt, of New York, in the absence of Senator Blair, who had left for the east, presented the report of the committee on resolutions. It was in part as follows:

The anti-saloon Republicans, by their representatives, in national conference assembled, do declare as follows:

First—That the liquor traffic as it exists today in the United States is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy, a school of crime, and, with its open saloons, a means of seducing to corruptly control elections, is a menace to the public welfare, and deserves the condemnation of all good men.

Second—That we declare war against the saloon and hold it to be the supreme duty of the government to adopt such measures as shall restrict its evils, lessen its baneful influence, and in the earliest possible moment extinguish it altogether.

Third—We believe the national government should, consistently with its powers, control the sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia and in all the territories of the United States.

Fourth—We believe the best practical method of dealing with the liquor traffic in the several states is to let the people decide whether it shall be prohibited by the submission of constitutional amendments, and, until such amendments are adopted, by the passage of local option laws.

Fifth—That high license in the saloon business creates a special burden of taxation upon the people to support courts, jails and almshouses, therefore a large annual tax should be exacted upon the saloons, so long as they continue to exist, and that they should be made responsible for all public and private injury resulting from the traffic.

Sixth—That the Republican party, wherever and whenever it power, should faithfully enforce whatever ordinances, statutes or constitutional amendments which may be enacted for the restriction or suppression of the liquor traffic.

Seventh—That we approve the action of congress and of those states that have done so, in provoking for teaching the physiological effects of intoxicants in our public schools, and that we earnestly recommend to every state legislature the enactment of such laws as shall provide for the thorough teaching of such effects to our children.

Eighth—We demand that the Republican party, to which we belong and whose welfare we cherish, shall take a firm and decided stand as the friend of the homes and the enemy of the saloon in its future policy and legislative measures. We pledge ourselves to do our utmost to cause the party to take such a stand, and we call upon all temperance men and all friends of good order, of whatever party or name, to join with us in securing these objects and in support of the Republican party so far as it shall adopt them.

The resolutions were received with great applause, but upon being taken up seriatim the prohibition element made a determined effort to kill the plank which favored license for high saloon taxes. Warm speeches were made on either side, but finally the section as originally framed was adopted by an overwhelming majority.

Gen. Conway, of Brooklyn, made an equally earnest effort to so amend section 4 as to pledge the Republican party to support constitutional prohibitory amendments, but that was also voted down, and the platform, as presented, was adopted with six dissentient votes.

It was now within an hour of the time when the theatre was required for the night scientific performance, and after the fourth ballot the convention broke up in confusion, and considerable confusion, adjourned sine die.

Opinions among the delegates as to the results accomplished differ widely. The repugnant prohibition element contends that the adoption of the tax plank has, by recognizing the saloon as a legitimate business, practically vitiated the whole work which the convention was called to accomplish, while the conservative section takes the ground that the convention has placed the machinery of the Republican party in a form which it will be forced to assist, and that it has taken ground which will be likely to draw the third party back into the Republican ranks.

PENNSYLVANIA GREENBACKERS

Nominate a State Ticket and Pass Resolutions.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—More than 100 delegates to the state Greenback-Labor convention were in their seats when that body was called to order yesterday. On motion of Mr. Owles, of Erie, the convention proceeded to elect a permanent organization, and with the usual election of temporary officers. Hon. Charles M. Brumm, of Schuylkill, was chosen as permanent chairman. Congressman Brumm, upon taking the chair, thanked the convention for the honor conferred upon him, and in his speech said he believed the day will yet come when the Greenback-Labor party will be called upon to administer the affairs of state and national government.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read and adopted. The platform reaffirms the doctrines of the Greenback-Labor party. They demand that after 1887 all silver shall be prohibited from bolting lands. They declare against the pauper labor imported from the old world; the practical adoption of the eight hour law, and declare against child labor; against the degrading effects of monopolization; favoring the improvement of rivers and the advancement of mechanical and agricultural pursuits.

Nominations were next in order, and the following candidates were selected: For governor, J. F. Houston, of Lancaster; lieutenant governor, Hon. John Parker, of Mahoney City; auditor general, D. B. Hartz, of Harrisburg; secretary of state, Hon. Jacob Heagland, of Mercer county; congress at large, D. V. Thompson, of Venango; chairman of the state committee, T. B. Hynders, of Center county.

Gossip from the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The following appointments have been made in the Pension office under civil service rules: Special examiners, at $1,400 a year, Thos. C. Kelly, of Colorado; Henry C. Williams, of Illinois; S. Wilson, of Arkansas; Geo. E. Woolsey, of Illinois; Florence McCarthy, of Illinois; Chancellor J. Bonner, of Iowa; Abraham Sharp, of Illinois.

The state department has received an official translation of the new tariff of the United States of Colombia, which goes into effect Oct. 1. The rates of duties vary from 10 to 120 per cent per kilogram, and the free list is restricted to the natural productions of countries which by reciprocity treaties are made.

Postmaster-General Vilas will return to the city next Saturday evening. Second Assistant Postmaster-General Knott and Third Assistant Hazen are expected back in time to be at the department on Monday next. Mr. Thomas E. Nash, chief clerk of the post office department, and Mr. Nathan C. Smith, of the first assistant's office, have returned from their vacation trips.

Non-Partisan Temperance.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 17.—The non-partisan temperance convention opened here yesterday and despite the unfavorable weather the attendance was very large. Hon. Neal Dow, of Maine, Hon. John P. Hale, Thomas E. Nash, chief clerk of the post office department, and Mr. Nathan C. Smith, of the first assistant's office, have returned from their vacation trips.

Congressional Candidates.

DAYTON, O., Sept. 17.—The Democrats of the Third congressional district held a convention here to-day. H. L. Morey, of Miami county, was nominated on the first ballot.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—L. F. Parker was nominated for congress by the Eleventh district convention of Rolla, Mo.

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 17.—W. E. Robertson was nominated for congress by the Democrats of the Fifth district over A. B. Dixon, the present incumbent.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 17.—The Republicans of the Seventh district renominated O. B. Thomas, of Prairie du Chien, for congress.

Foster Sprott's Wonderful Herb.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Succi, the Italian faster at Milan, will not divulge the secret of his African herb liquor, as he intends to take out a patent for it, and expects to realize a few million francs profit from its sale. He estimates that it will become a staple drink among the poor. He says it will be sold cheap, so that a large family may subsist for a week on a franc's worth of the liquor. Succi is visited daily by fashionable princes, senators, deputies and hosts of foreign doctors. His strength is unimpaired.

A Brakeman's Mishap.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 17.—James Hickey, of this city, a brakeman on the New Haven and Northampton railroad, was instantly killed in the company's yards at 7 o'clock this morning. In attempting to jump from a moving to a stationary car on another track Hickey made a misstep and fell between the cars, and fell under the wheels of the moving car. He was frightfully mangled, his head being cut off and crushed into a shapeless mass. He was unmarried.

He Admits the Shortage.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—Superintendent Baker, of the Western Union Telegraph company, received a letter from E. H. Brown, the defaulting manager, dated Windsor, Ont. Brown admits the shortage, but does not explain how or why he took the money nor state its amount. Mr. Baker thinks the manager's bail for $10,000 will cover the amount of the misappropriation.

Looking After the Heathen.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Thirteen missionaries have left Boston this week. Among them were seven young ladies, four of whom, Miss Lizzie I. Webb, Miss Grace Greenough, Miss Mary Patrick and Miss Julia Pinnell, go to take positions in the seminaries at Marsovan, Adabazar, Adana and Martin, in Turkey, and Aintourkeyer, in India. The others go to Central Turkey, Japan and India.

Pushed Out of His Window.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 17.—Larry Nugent, a worker in the shop of Wallace Shop, in Wallingford, was pushed out of the attic window of his boarding house last night, and fell to the ground, a distance of thirty feet. He had been drinking and received internal injuries from which he will die. It is supposed he was scuffling with some of his fellow boarders and so got his bad fall.

The Sullivan-Herald Fight Off.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—The proposed glove fight between Sullivan and Heard, which was to have taken place in this city on Saturday night, has been declared off. Failure to secure a suitable hall and disagreement over the amount of money to be given Sullivan are assigned as reasons for the postponement.

Alarmed at the Jesuits.

ROME, Sept. 17.—There is a general feeling of anxiety among the people over the fact that the private secret meeting of Jesuits has received the consent of the government of the pope, and many petitions have been forwarded to the government urging the enforcement of the laws against Jesuits.

WESTERN WIND STORM

PAYS A FLYING VISIT IN INDIANA AND ILLINOIS

And Leaves Destruction in Its Wake. Houses Unroofed, Trees Blown Down and Crops Badly Damaged by the Gale—No Lives Reported Lost.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 17.—A tornado struck this city, coming from the southwest. For fifteen minutes the wind blew a hurricane, filling the air with missiles.

The storm was confined to the central portion of the city. Numerous large buildings were unroofed and the rain which followed did great damage. A carpet estimates placed the loss at $45,000. The roof of the Masonic hall was blown off and the water ruined the scenery and fixtures, which belong to Barnes of King, Burke & Co.'s circus was blown down and the large audience left in the storm. Many of the actors were in the dressing rooms when the roof was made a brisk movement up the street for the nearest hotel. Several thousand people were at the fair grounds. An eating house was blown down and the building took fire, severely burning a woman and a boy.

No fatalities occurred. A special from Newport, Vermilion county, reports six or eight buildings destroyed, but no lives lost. The damage reported along the Wabash valley is great and will aggregate over $60,000. The storm struck Newport, Vermilion county, this state, but did no damage beyond unroofing a number of houses and uprooting shade trees.

CHARLESTON, Ill., Sept. 17.—A rain and wind storm, which for severity has never been known here before, swept over the lake and city. After a steady downpour for several hours, at 11 o'clock the wind came at the rate of 70 miles per hour, and continued at 10 o'clock attained the velocity of a tornado. Large trees, sheds, outhouses, lumber piles, etc., were leveled. The wind capsized a small yacht which was out from the shore on the lake, and its occupants, Christopher Kimball and Fred Adlits, had a narrow escape from drowning.

The wind shifted to the bottom of their boat for three hours they were rescued by a tug which went out to search for them. The storm played havoc with the telegraph and telephone lines, cutting off nearly all communication.

SHELBYVILLE, Ills., Sept. 17.—A terrific wind storm passed over this city. Half of the tin roof on Thomas M. Thornton's residence was blown off, part of it being carried 300 feet. L. B. Stephenson's barn was demolished and the roof of Hon. Thomas Marshall's law office was blown off. Three or four buggies were blown off the bridge approach, just east of the city, some of the occupants receiving serious injuries. Throughout the town shade trees were blown down and outbuildings overturned. Reports are coming in of great injury to hay and wheat stocks from the country.

A WESTERN BLOW

Causes the Wreck of Churches and Other Property.

TOLONO, Ills., Sept. 17.—A terrific cyclone swept over this place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The storm came in sight from the southwest and approached so rapidly that before any one expected it the storm burst in all its fury, creating destruction and consternation in its wake. The steeple on the Catholic church had been undergoing repairs, and the men working 100 feet above the ground had only time to descend when the scaffold was caught up by the wind and crushed into kindling wood, the fragments being scattered about for more than 100 rods. The steeple was carried away by the force of the livery stable and part of the roof. Some of the timbers from this building were carried an entire block and buried through the side of the Methodist church, a distance of 300 feet.

At Savoy, a small station five miles north of here, the new M. E. church, which was just being completed, was totally demolished, and a large barn was completely wrecked. The extent of the loss has not been ascertained on account of the continued rain, but the damage must be very great all through the country.

The President Plays Croquet.

SARANAC INN, Sept. 17.—It rained hard all day to-day, as it has every day for a week except Wednesday. The president remained indoors all day, whiling away the time in cribbage and in looking over some correspondence. Col. Lamont and wife have arrived, after a ride of seventeen miles from Paul Smith's, over a road spoiled by fallen rains. The presidential party, re-enforced by Col. and Mrs. Lamont, started to-day for a two-days' fishing trip on Tupper lake. It is probable that the party will start for home next Tuesday, in a special car, over the Vermont Central, from Paul Smith's station to Rouse's Point, thence via the Delaware and Hudson to Albany.

Getting the Galatea Ready.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—As soon as dusk set in last evening a line of electric lights were strung along the sectional dock where the cutter Galatea lies. Last night a gang of workmen worked overtime on the hull of the yacht, cleaning and re-loading her below the water-line. She was floated early this morning, and will be towed to the navy yard to-day to-day, and will be ready to sail for a month.

ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE

Elect Officers—The Next Meeting Will be at Detroit.

ROCK ISLAND, Ills., Sept. 17.—The nineteenth annual reunion of the Army of the Tennessee is at an end. It was decided that the next meeting should be held at Detroit on the second Wednesday in September, 1887. Gen. M. M. Parce, of Cincinnati, was selected as the orator for next year and Col. August A. Jackson as alternate. The committee on selection of officers reported the following, and Capt. Tuthill took the chair during the unanimous adoption of the report:

President, Gen. W. T. Sperman; vice-presidents, Col. J. F. Hoyer, St. Louis; Gen. W. D. Leach, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Capt. C. R. Lounsbury, Galesburg, Ills.; Maj. Charles R. Smith, Cleveland; Maj. A. V. Bobo, Leadville, Colo.

Surgeons—S. C. Plummer, Rock Island; Capt. J. C. Degress, Austin, Tex.; Capt. C. C. Chadwick, Detroit; Lieut. J. W. Hill, Dresden, Kan.; Col. Edward M. Wolfe, Nashville, Ind.; Capt. Edward Spear, Minneapolis; Maj. George B. Hoagin, Des Moines.

Recording secretary—Col. L. M. Dayton.

Corresponding secretary—Gen. A. Richmond.

Treasurer—Gen. H. M. Force.

Upon the motion of Gen. Dodge, a committee of five was appointed to consider the advisability of establishing a publication at the headquarters of the army of the Tennessee, and to also consider some central place for holding the annual meeting each year.

Objecting to Reporters.

HALIFAX, Sept. 17.—In the David J. Adams estate case Mr. Meagher, counsel for the United States, objected to reporters being allowed to attend the hearing. Judge McClellan said that he was not certain whether or not he could rule the reporters out, yet attendance in courts of law was regarded as a matter of right. After some pleadings, and asked Mr. Meagher whether he could show authority for such action, by this court. Mr. Meagher replied he had brought such authority was examined by the parties taking evidence, and insisted that reporters should be excluded. The court room was then dropped and the reporters remained. Prior to the adjournment of court Mr. Meagher called attention to a remark in a play from the press attaches, and stated that if any of the evidence was printed here that he would proceed against the papers publishing it for contempt of court.

Sensational Disturbances.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 17.—The atmospheric and meteorological conditions for the past two days have not deceived those who have been close observers of the sensational disturbances here for the past fortnight. The shock at 2:15 a. m. Wednesday was followed by one at 9:30 p. m. the same day, and one at 11:25 p. m. Both were distinctly felt, but were so slight as to panic occurred. At 1:30 p. m. yesterday there was a third shock, which was distinctly felt here, and which was decidedly more severe at the Ten Mile hill. In the city it was not noticed save by the rumbling of carts, street cars and other vehicles through the streets, but on the more quiet and removed neighborhoods it was quite perceptible.

Daylight Burglars.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—A lady was driving by the mansion of B. B. Converse, in College street, Dorchester, and noticed strange men about the house. Officers were notified, and five of them surrounded the house. An officer then went inside and passed out to his brother officers through a window. John Allison, Henry Allison, Edward Murphy and John Mahoney, who had been laboriously rifling the mansion in broad daylight, the occupants being at Nantasket. The interior was a perfect wreck, and $1,000 worth of goods had collected to be taken away. The burglars were held in $1,500 bail.

A Railroad Tied Up.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 17.—Sixty yardmen, brakemen and conductors of the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad struck for an advance of ten cents per day in their wages and a third man for crews. Superintendent O'Brien telegraphed from Cleveland that the advance would be granted, but said nothing about the third man. The men refused to resume work. The strike has caused a serious freight blockade, ten long trains are now on the tracks waiting to be switched.

An Australian Exhibition.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The secretary of state has received a series of printed documents relating to the Australian Jubilee International exhibition, which is to be opened June 20, 1887, the date of the completion of the fiftieth year of Queen Victoria's reign in the colony of South Australia. The exhibition will be open for six months. Steps have been taken for the erection of suitable buildings and for the construction of a railway seven miles long to reach here.

The Worm's Broken Shaft.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—A broken shaft for the steamship Worm has arrived from Germany. The vessel will not be ready to sail for a month.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

CARDS TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications for lights for private residences and apartment lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, in each section of the residence portion of the city, the necessary mains will be put down, so that as early as possible electric lighting will be commenced. All persons desiring the introduction of applications for lights, stating exact location.

The supply to the business section of the city will be given very speedily after the fulfillment of the necessary work in the street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in connection of the contracts for the erection of the station and the machinery, but the building line after having commenced building operations, as also on account of the loss by fire of the machinery which was nearly completed.

The company has decided in lieu of expending money upon a canvass for light contracts to appropriate the amount which would have been required for that purpose to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 200 lights, to the number of 100 in business houses and 100 in the residence sections.

A laboratory office has been rented from Mr. Mulford, on the corner of Plainfield avenue, 32 and 37 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will be in attendance between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

RACE TRACK SECRETS.

HOW THE DURYEA SYSTEM IMPROVED THE BREED OF HORSES.

The Brighton Beach Racing Association Hauled Up for Selling Certificates of Membership—A Machine Explained to an Innocent Jury.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 17.—A great many people were under the impression that the Brighton Beach Racing association's trial for permission to run on its track in June last would not be commenced yesterday because of the failure of the jury to agree in the case of the Coney Island Jockey club.

But this idea was dispelled before the day had grown very old, as District Attorney Ridgway moved the case for trial as soon as Judge Moore went upon the bench of the court of equity. As there was no lawyer for the association present at the time he expressed his intention of moving for the forfeiture of the bond of $1,000 unless there was a prompt response.

Lawyer Jere Wernberg got wind of this intention and hurried into court, flushed and angry. The sports also crowded into the court benches, and the work of selecting a jury was opened. It was completed a few minutes before noon.

The district attorney opened the case by reading the indictment under which the association was arraigned. The violation of law occurred on June 14.

Lawyer Wernberg moved to quash the indictment on the ground that it did not state that the association was guilty of a crime. This was denied.

The first witness called was Michael J. McGinnis, who testified that he knew the Brighton Beach grounds were used for racing. He remembered the machine shown in court one he had seized about two months ago.

Mr. Ridgway said that he was going to prove the way in which the machine was used, and also the method of its users.

You go up and buy a ticket. Then they move a crank and it is registered. When the race is over you get the sure total less 5 per cent, which it is deducted.

Gen. Robert Avery testified that he remembered the first day of the Duryea system. There was a large shed there. He saw persons purchase certificates of membership. He saw men going up to the window and handing in money, for which they received a paper or card. He did not know what they were for. After the race the men would return to the window, but he could not tell if they received money or other tickets. In the intervals between the races they would go to the window.

Witness said that this visit of his to the race track was prior to the time when he went before the grand jury. He knew Mr. Battersby, who was said to be under and super intendent of the race track, and had a conversation with him. Witness went to the track to witness the alleged gambling, and not to gamble himself.

He had talked with Comstock and Boecher about what he had seen a number of times. He had seen a great many persons buy the certificates of membership. He picked up and read a number of these tickets that had been thrown away after the races.

William H. Duryea, the maker of the system for improving the breed of horses, testified that the Brighton people used his system between May 29 and July 21. For this they paid him a royalty. He had not been to the track in a month, and therefore did not know if the system was still in use.

The prosecution called Charles A. Haff, chairman of the executive committee of the Racing association, who testified that the Duryea system was now used for registering certificates. A man pays $5 for a certificate and the clerk indicates the number on the register.

"A man wants the horse whose breed he is anxious to improve, I suppose," said the district attorney.

"Exactly so," smilingly replied the witness, who then went on to state that after the races the holders of winning tickets surrendered them and received their share of the receipts after 5 per cent. had been deducted. Those holding tickets on losing horses continued to be members until the close of the racing season, when the surplus of the funds of the association were divided."

"How many persons hold the losing tickets?" asked the district attorney.

"I suppose about twenty thousand," replied witness.

"And when the season is over they come in for a share of the surplus, do they?" asked Judge Moore.

"After the expenses have been deducted, whatever money remains will be divided," answered the witness blandly.

"And a man can become a member six times or more in a single race, can he?" asked the district attorney.

"Yes, sir," said the witness.

"Why don't you use some of the money to improve the breed of a good horse which is sometimes fails to win a race?" asked the district attorney.

"I don't know," was the answer, which brought grins to the faces of many of the jurors.

Mr. Haff explained that a certain amount of the receipts is kept back for division at the end of the season. It was a reserve fund. A man's membership continued good until he surrendered his certificate.

A Fight to a Finish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A fight to a finish with small gloves took place yesterday afternoon in Lee's Art Gallery, a parade ground, between Jimmy Carroll, of Brooklyn, 126 pounds, and Dick Collier, of London, England, 160 pounds, Marquis of Queensberry rules. The contest was kept very quiet, only thirty persons being present. Carroll forced the fighting in the first four rounds, and seemed to have the best of the contest, but in the next he rounds Collier got a few severe blows. In round fifteen Carroll knocked Collier down with a right-hander. The next few rounds were pretty even. In the twenty-first round Collier was groggy on his feet, and, being unable to come to time, the fight was given to Carroll. Both men were badly punished. Time, 1 hour 31 minutes.

Rival Republican Candidates.

WESTCHESTER, Pa., Sept. 17.—In a letter addressed to his constituents, Congressman James B. Everhart has announced himself as the regular Republican candidate for congress in the Sixth congressional district of Chester county.

Chester county convenes. Mr. Everhart claims that the convention which nominally nominated Smedley Darlington as his (Everhart's) successor was illegally organized by the addition of two delegates who were not entitled to seats in the convention and by whose votes Darlington secured the nomination by a majority of 1 vote over Everhart. The contest between Darlington and Everhart promises to be a bitter one.

The Largest Pension.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 17.—The largest pension ever paid in the United States was paid at the United States pension office here yesterday by Pension Agent Bonil to Marcus D. Richardson, an aged soldier living at Mayo, Ky. The cause for granting the pension is total blindness, brought on by injury to the eyes received in the war in 1863. The pension dated back to that year amounted to $11,000.

AN ARCHBISHOP'S DEBTS.

Will the Pope Order Them to Be Paid or Is Fire Theory?

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—For some months past the entitlement among the creditors of Archbishop Purcell has been at fever heat, and several indignation meetings have been held to condemn what was considered the indifference of Archbishop Elder to the petitions of the 2,500 poor people who lost all they possessed. Additional interest in the affair was aroused by the statement of a well-known Catholic priest, who declares that the pope has ordered the debt to be paid within five years. The priest revealed the fact in addition that his name would not be published. He says that no public announcement of the matter will be made for some time, but it is true.

Rome has ordered the archbishop to pay the debt within the next five years. That was the edict which went forth from the recent council, and that was a part of Archbishop Elder's business when he visited the Holy City early in the year. The pope himself is taking an interest in the matter and he has said that the debt must be paid without further delay. Several conferences with the bishop in this diocese have been held in the past three months, and the subject of the debt was considered, but no satisfactory basis of settlement was agreed upon. The meetings of the creditors at various times have created much discussion among the Catholic population, and the impression in general that measures are on foot to settle at least a part of the indebtedness.

The Silver Creek Disaster.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 17.—Great indignation prevails here against the Nickel Plate Railway company. The widow wrote his wife telling her of his sad mistake, and told her he was on his way out of the states and would never run another engine again. He says that the fact that Sigsbee's name was used was responsible for the accident. All the Catholic churches in Erie were open and requiem masses were said, while the Catholic societies marched in a body to the houses of the dead and sympathizing friends.

Destruction by Train Wreckers.

SOUTH LYON, Mich., Sept. 17.—A freight train was thrown from the track about half a mile from here by a rail having been removed from the track. Engineer Eli Newman was killed, and brakeman Campbell so dangerously and seriously injured that his recovery is doubtful. The engine and fifteen cars were completely wrecked. There is no clew to the train wreckers. The people are greatly excited and a lynching will undoubtedly follow the capture of the wreckers.

Warned by a White Dove.

MANSFIELD, O., Sept. 17.—A freight train on the Baltimore and Ohio at Independence struck a horse and wagon, which broke the bridge in two, the locomotive falling into the creek below, killing the engineer and injuring the fireman. Before the accident a white dove is said to have perched on the engineer's cabin window. He drove it away several times, after which the crash came.

Another Respite for Sproule.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—The prisoner Sproule, sentenced to be hanged on Saturday, has received another reprieve until Oct. 1, pending further legal proceedings. The United States consul here has not received from the government at Washington any intimation as to what action that government will take in the matter.

The Sachem Will Not Race.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—The schooner yacht Sachem will not enter for Saturday's race at Newport. Tuesday night, in getting her on the ways, her lead keel was twisted so that it will be impossible to get her ready in time.

Dr. Chas. Thiers:

Dear Sir—You ask my opinion of your Stomatine, and I take pleasure in saying that I will say with pleasure that the chemical combination is perfect, and the ingredients are not only standard articles, but are the best that can be procured, and I believe and know it to be a good remedy, and that it will do all that you claim for it, and more than that, I have used it for my own purpose for years as a personal matter, and always found it to be the best. I am free to say that years in the best preparation, but the one you recommend is I know of, and I have used it a long time, and I know it to be the best from what I know of it that anyone afflicted with sore mouth, throat or stomach trouble need not be relieved and cured by its use. Respectfully,

WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers:

My dear sir—It affords me great pleasure to write this testimonial in behalf of your preparation, "Stomatine," and say that after using it myself, and several of my family, for three months, disease and sorrow gone. On the 4th of October, 1885, you gave me a bottle of your Stomatine, and from that time I have used it and I am free to say I am entirely well. Very respectfully,

E. L. SHAW, Druggist.

Plainfield, N. J., August 19, '86.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers:

Dear Sir—I most cheerfully bear testimony to the unrivaled excellence of Stomatine. I have not only used it personally but have recommended it to many customers and they all speak in the highest praise of it. Yours Respectfully,

WOMAN AND HOME.

YOUNG LADIES WRAPPED UP IN THEMSELVES AND THE WORLD.

Training Children at the Table—Waiter Girls—Beautifying the Skin—Food and Temperament—Inspecting at Leisure. Various Household Hints.

The newspaper will strew its shafts of humor at no object with such keen pleasure and delight as when he directs them at the modern young woman, and especially the young lady. And it must be acknowledged that he does so not without cause in many instances. While there are thousands of young women who vegetate and live and die, and indeed by young womanhood, whose purposes in life extend beyond the frivolities of dress and outward adornment, there are on the other hand, a large percentage that look upon life "as a joke that's just begun," to borrow an expression from a popular opera.

These young women live under the delusion that social distinction, beauty of person and richness of apparel make the woman. They are slaves to custom and fashion, and revel in external adornment. They accept the glitter for the gold, the heraldry and trappings of the world for the priceless secure of woman's worth which exists within the mind. Their highest ambition is not in the mansion of a true womanhood, but that their position in society may be of a conspicuous order, and display they feel is their privilege to make. Hours are spent over the latest fashion plates, while days are given over to the making and perfecting of new apparel. They forget that a true woman is not dependent upon outward embellishments; that dress is regarded by many as only the ivy that encircles the oak, and is never relished for the thing it adorns.

It is not the sons of fashion that wear the scepter of influence or authority over men. It is in the hand of the true, noble, sensible and virtuous woman that authority is placed, and where she dwells there may refinement, culture, intelligence and moral power be found. The influence of such a young woman upon society is of the most salutary kind.

But what is that of the reigning society belle? Men may admire her for the moment, when, in brilliantly lighted parlors, her beauty and charms dazzle the eye; but what are the after conclusions? "Silly creature, wrapped up in herself and the world," was the comment of an apparent admirer upon a young belle after an eventful social occasion in New York only a few weeks since. Fashion and folly never gained an ounce of respect worth the possession, and never will. Young women, alas! too often mistake adulation for respect, only to find at the end that it was but hollow mockery, and, like a pyrotechnic display, prepared for the occasion.

A true young woman's ambitions stretch beyond the ballroom and the milliner's establishment. Her every day striving to make her life grand is womanly virtue, and by her example inspires others to secure the same priceless crown of womanhood. This is the woman that exists, respected by the better portion of the world, not temporarily, but permanently. In her, friends recognize a rich store of practical good sense, and a beautiful harmony about her character that at once inspires discere respect, which soon warms into love.—Brooklyn Magazine.

Training Children at the Table.

Children's faults in the matter of diet are only occasionally worthy of serious consideration. Most of them will be outgrown peculiarities which render certain kinds of food obnoxious to them, but with very rare exceptions, strenuous efforts should be made by the parent to break up such aversions. Much discomfort would be spared the children and those with whom they associate in later life could those responsible for it see to the very outset. One child dislikes roast beef, another refuses to eat bread. Still a third will not touch fruit or any kind of animal food except poultry. Any one of these is to be early adopted for that passion for "showing off," inherent in the childish nature, and which is not always lacking in children of a larger growth. The world is father of the man, and the boy who is "fussy" about his eating at home is not to be opinionated and selfish in maturity.

Akin to this piece of eccentricity are tricks of table manners. These are more frequently seen in men than in women, either because the latter are more easily led and thus more easily influenced to correct and quiet demeanor, or because boys are thrown more into rough company of doubtful breeding than are their sisters. Whatever the cause, the fact remains doubly important that careful training of children while under the home roof. The boy who makes a melange of all the food on his plate, using the knife first as the implement with which to mash the ingredients into an indistinguishable mass, and then as the shovel with which he piles his fork an inch high before conveying it to a widely-opened mouth, is not to be sent to a genteel addition to a dinner-party when he attains years of discretion, or, indeed, to give much pleasure by his presence at any repast. Habits formed in early youth stick through life with the tenacity of burrs.

A mistaken kindness frequently withholds parents from correcting little but disagreeable awkwardness on the part of their children. Many mothers have an intense dread of "nagging," and justly. One must take into account the disposition of the child, and the burden that may sometimes be accounted for by heredity, but is in other cases unexplainable. Often it seems as if the more endeavor to break a habit of a fault only rooted it more deeply, until the mentor is fairly discouraged and yields the point sooner than cause further hard feeling by perpetual scolding. Such a course is probably better than to regret sooner or later to both mother and child. To say nothing of the wretched principle involved by the guardian influence in such a course, the encouragement of this sort, a piece of childish naughtiness or ill-breeding assumes much more formidable proportions when he who practices it is 20 instead of 10.—Caroline Turbine Hentz.

Food and Temperament.

The good housekeeper shows her wisdom by the well-being of the inmates of her home, physically first, then mentally and morally—the home over the hearthstone being the purest and happy without effort. She studies the temperament of each member of the family, and furnishes the table with food to suit each. The sanguine and full-blooded require one kind, the nervous and wiry another. Good taste rules the serving of the viands, but the object of the art is attended to in the selection and nourish traits, not to pamper and enervate. Otherwise energy, capacity and integrity are weakened, and the power to do good and be good is gone. It is related of a gentleman who had an appointment to breakfast with the late A. T. Stewart that the butler placed before them both an elaborate bill of fare. The visitor selected a list of rare dishes, and was quite abashed when Mr. Stewart said: "Bring my usual breakfast, oatmeal and boiled eggs." He then explained to his friend that he found simple food a necessity to him; otherwise he could not think clearly. That nourishment brain supplied to nobler ends would have been supplied, but the principle remains the same.—Good Housekeeping.

Waiter Girls and Their Earnings.

"To make a good waiter," said the proprietor of a restaurant in which the waiters are all women, "a girl must be clean, patient, pleasant, good looking, and not too high toned. She must dress neatly and be quick and bright. We employ about a dozen girls here. They earn $4 a week, and work about eight hours a day. If a waiter is civil to the customers she picks up a good deal in fees. I have frequently seen a girl here shake twenty ten-cent pieces out of her pocket at the end of a day.

Some of the girls who have been here a long time have their regular customers, who are dissatisfied if any one else waits upon them. Some of the girls are now away on their vacation now, and yesterday two old gentlemen, who have been dining here for a year, were compelled to let a strange girl wait upon them. They found fault with everything, and when they went out they inquired when their girl would be back, saying they would dine somewhere else in the meantime. The girl who waited upon them is a very good waiter, and has several customers who will let no one else wait upon them. She is a perfect little dragon when waiting upon two gentlemen for two years. They never order anything, but simply tell Lizzie the condition of their appetites and leave the rest to her. When Lizzie went away on her vacation the gentlemen, whom she calls her fiuns, gave her $5."

"Do the girls ever insulted or treated rudely?"

"Not very often, and when they are they are protected if they complain to me. A man who is unfit for a girl to wait upon or unable to afford living will steal spoons, and he is not wanted here. A few of my girls are married, which is nothing against them, whatever it may be against the husband who allow them to earn their own living. That little yellow-haired Irish woman behind the counter has two children and a husband big enough to eat a team of horses. I don't know what's the matter with him, but something is certainly wrong somewhere, or she would be more looking after the young ones."—New York Sun.

She'll Repent at Leisure.

One who steadily reads the daily newspapers will readily recall the many instances happening lately where young girls married strange men, only to be robbed, beaten and deserted. These records the lesson that girls need to be taught that a partner for life should at least show as fair credentials as would be required for a business partnership between men, that can be severed when either fails to act honorably toward the other.

A stranger who takes a sudden fancy to a young woman will respect her all the more if she requires ample proof of his respectability before accepting his offer of marriage. It may be all very nice to show blind confidence in the truth and goodness of human nature, but the necessary inquiries, and taking his word for his standing in the community at his former abiding place. She may think it very romantic, while he is likely to imagine that it is her anxiety to secure a husband that actuates her, and laughs in his sleeve at her credulity. If it will require nothing else to displace boric acid. Dr. A. D. McGregor writes to The British Medical Journal that he has prescribed and used the following powder for years and can recommend it: Boric acid, finely powdered, 40 grains; chlorate of potash, 20 grains; powdered guaiacum, 20 grains; pepsinated chalk, 20 grains; powdered carbonate of magnesia to make a powder; otter of roses, half a drop. The boric acid in solution gets between the teeth and the edges of the gums and there it discharges its antiseptic influence on the decayed and gluiam constribute their quota to the benefit of the gums and the mucous membranes generally; the chalk is the insoluble powder to detach the particles of tartar; the magnesia, and also the magnesia the more soluble soft powder which cannot harm the softest enamel.—Chicago News.

The Subject of Personal Purity.

Girls find their way into homes of ill-fame precisely as boys become libertines—mainly for the want of sound, thorough, persistent home training in the matter of personal purity. It is a dislike of study and occupation, a love of finery, love of admiration, working in concert with natural but wholly untrained, unenlightened passion that brings the greatest number of girls to shame.

A man deceives a woman to her loss of honor it is, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, because that girl's mother has deceived her in the first place, has withheld from her the knowledge, the training the sound discipline which were needed to make her proof against temptation. Let us cease to study the subject as a question of sex vs. man, or the contrary, and regard it as one to be grappled with in the home by both parents, indeed, but especially by the mother, because to her God has given the greater responsibility; and let boys and girls be alike taught the great laws of nature and revelation concerning the relations of the sexes.—C. A. Curtis in Inter-Ocean.

Ideal Women.

The women of fiction form, perhaps, the most delightful ideal possession of the civilized races of the world. Invention, based upon intuition, has produced true and lovely images of the fairest and sweetest creatures that make the earth divine. To few men is it given to know and meet in actual life women who are the counterparts of these. The charm of the women of the poets, and it is pre-eminently the happy task of the poet to embody for us, in suggestions of sublime revelations, being and character to the highest conceptions that man can form of beauty, of tenderness, of purity and of noblesse. In the single line of the poet's imagination are fixed to permanence the images of the fairest and dearest of God's feminine creatures.—Gentleman's Magazine.

To Beautify the Skin.

In Von Ziemssen's work on diseases of the skin, Dr. Hebra, of Vienna, makes the following observations on the subject of beautifying the skin: First—A healthy skin is not necessarily beautiful. Even if all requisite conditions of diet, residence, atmospheric and climatic conditions, etc., are carried out, the complexion is often extremely bad. The general condition of health has no influence upon the beauty of the complexion, though it has upon the health of the skin. Second—Cleanliness is a sine qua non of the beauty of the complexion, though it does not play a great part in the health of the skin. Third—Water is serviceable to the skin in only moderate amounts and at moderate temperatures. Very cold or warm baths, when used in excess, diminish the elasticity of the skin and its power of resistance to external irritants. Fourth—Distilled and so-called soft water are more suitable for washing and less irritating than hard water. Fifth—The hard soda soaps are usually preferable to the soft potash soaps for toilet purposes. The quality of the soap depends upon the quality of their constituents and the thoroughness of their admixture. Good soaps must not contain free alkali or any foreign irritating substance. The addition of moderate quantities of perfumes does not materially change the quality. Sixth—Simple, finely ground powders, such as starch, magnesia, etc., are entirely innocuous, and often act as a useful protection against external irritants. Seventh—Frequent application of alcohol (as in bay rum, Florida water, cologne spirits, etc.) abstracts the water of the skin, makes it dry, and brittle, and impairs its nutrition. This is also true of glycerine. All toilet washes containing alcohol to any considerable extent should be avoided. Eighth—Soaps, if used in still greater extent of other additions to washes, such as corrosive sublimate, mineral acids, certain metallic salts, etc. Ninth—Frequent acts merely as a bleaching powder. This is also true of benzoic resin, sulphur flowers, and substances containing tannic acid. Tenth—Oils, or oleaginous emulsions in the fats should be employed to a greater extent than is now done for toilet purposes. Eleventh—This is particularly true with regard to the scalp and the hair. The destruction of the scalp should be increased by the rational application of fat (for example, in the form of oil bottles by means of the application of the sponge and brush), and by rubbing the scalp and the greater use of simple pomades. These should be applied to the roots of the hair rather than the shafts. Twelfth—Refreshment should be avoided, or sparingly used, which abstract water from the skin and the roots of the hair.—Chicago News.

Gum Tragacanth Paste.

Keep a fruit jar that has a cover full of dissolved gum tragacanth. Have a brush with a ring in the cut-off handle, so that it may be hung up when not in use. Torn scraps of paper got loose on the walls a moment's work will put them on again as good as new. When the house is papered always save the scraps or get an extra roll. It is best the work of a moment to put on a fragment of paper that has been torn off, and it improves the appearance of the house wonderfully. If the plastering is broken, or a place dug out by some careless expressman or mover of furniture, before the paper is put on wet a spoonful of plaster of Paris and fill the place. Let it dry and then go on with the paper. It will look decidedly better and will pay for the trouble it takes.—Philadelphia Call.

The Baby's Bath.

Baby's bath from his birth should be of daily occurrence; the water tepid, castile or some other pure soap being used. The very careful about the purity of the latter, as baby's skin is so tender and easily irritated. A very good way with babies born in the fall or winter is to bathe them thoroughly one day, the next only the face, hands, feet, which rub with the little body with olive oil. Too much cannot be said of proper rubbing at such times; it improves the circulation at a time when the flesh more solid. At three months the hands can be finally removed; not any sooner if you want your child to have a strong, steady nerve. Earlier than this time he should not be allowed to sit erect without support, no matter how much he may want to do so.—Good Housekeeping.

To Make Pot Au Feu.

To make this famous dish, so dear to the heart of every true Frenchman, put in the pot six pounds of lean meat, two quarts of water, a little salt, with pepper and thyme, set near the fire, and skim, when nearly boiling add a spoonful and a half of salt, half a pound of liver, two carrots, four turnips, eight young and two old leeks, one head of celery, two onions with a clove each, and a piece of parsnip; skim again, and let simmer four or five hours; then add a little cold water occasionally; take off part of the fat, put slices of bread into the tureen, lay half the vegetables over and half the broth, and serve the meat with the remainder of the vegetables around.—New York Market Journal.

A Woman's Way.

A train of thought in a woman's mind never has to be backed up and shunted to get it going in a new direction. It jumps from a trunk line to a side switch, lands squarely on all the tracks, and goes whistling off down a country road without the slightest premonition.

They call this a charming naivete of independence.

Men call it want of the logical faculty.

However, if it is womanly, let us give it welcome.—Nym Crinkle in New York World.

Gooseberries in France.

The ingenious French play all manner of tricks with the gooseberry. They stalk them, they pulp them, they strain off the seeds, they preserve them, they make a fine jelly of them, which is peculiarly useful in fevers; they make a liqueur and a most excellent ices. They mix their compote of strawberries or raspberries with gooseberry pulp, and the fresh dragees, syrups, marmalades and crystallized confitures.—Cor. New York Post.

Put Back the Chairs.

When the room in which the family sits during the evening is left for the night, the chairs should be placed against the walls. Sometimes a person goes back in the dark to get some article, the exact location of which he remembers, and if chairs were left in the middle of the room he might come to grief. Some of the accidents that occur in darkness might be avoided if the hands and feet were used more slowly.—"Gabriel" in Good Housekeeping.

Inventor of a Hat Band.

Helen A. Blanchard, the daughter of an unsuccessful Portland merchant, failed as a boarding house keeper in Boston, then barely kept soul and body together by running a sewing machine in a Philadelphia clothing house, and then invented an over-seam stitch, and a patent sweat band for men's hats, and finally, from proceeds from these inventions has bought back the old Maine homestead, where the family lived in the prosperous days of the past.—New York Sun.

Chicken for Dinner.

If you wish to have a chicken for dinner, and it is rather small for your family, you can have it and a nice dinner as well by two or three nice slices of salt pork, and, just before dishing it, toast a few crackers and lay around the dish. Cut it in to be served in, or in place of crackers you can use bread or biscuit.—Tribune and Farmer.

Women Printers in Switzerland.

Repeated attempts have at different times been made in Switzerland to introduce women compositors in printing offices, but without success. The profession, upon the beauty of the complexion, though it has upon the health of the skin. Second—Cleanliness is a sine qua non of the beauty of the complexion, though it does not play a great part in the health of the skin. Third—Water is serviceable to the skin in only moderate amounts and at moderate temperatures. Very cold or warm baths, when used in excess, diminish the elasticity of the skin and its power of resistance to external irritants. Seventh—Frequent application of alcohol (as in bay rum, Florida water, cologne spirits, etc.) abstracts the water of the skin, makes it dry, and brittle, and impairs its nutrition. This is also true of glycerine. All toilet washes containing alcohol to any considerable extent should be avoided. Eighth—Soaps, if used in still greater extent of other additions to washes, such as corrosive sublimate, mineral acids, certain metallic salts, etc. Ninth—Frequent acts merely as a bleaching powder. This is also true of benzoic resin, sulphur flowers, and substances containing tannic acid. Tenth—Oils, or oleaginous emulsions in the fats should be employed to a greater extent than is now done for toilet purposes. Eleventh—This is particularly true with regard to the scalp and the hair. The destruction of the scalp should be increased by the rational application of fat (for example, in the form of oil bottles by means of the application of the sponge and brush), and by rubbing the scalp and the greater use of simple pomades. These should be applied to the roots of the hair rather than the shafts. Twelfth—Refreshment should be avoided, or sparingly used, which abstract water from the skin and the roots of the hair.—Chicago News.

Gum Tragacanth Paste.

Keep a fruit jar that has a cover full of dissolved gum tragacanth. Have a brush with a ring in the cut-off handle, so that it may be hung up when not in use. Torn scraps of paper got loose on the walls a moment's work will put them on again as good as new. When the house is papered always save the scraps or get an extra roll. It is best the work of a moment to put on a fragment of paper that has been torn off, and it improves the appearance of the house wonderfully. If the plastering is broken, or a place dug out by some careless expressman or mover of furniture, before the paper is put on wet a spoonful of plaster of Paris and fill the place. Let it dry and then go on with the paper. It will look decidedly better and will pay for the trouble it takes.—Philadelphia Call.

JOTTINGS.

—Edsall says his is the place for bargains next week. Encourage home trade.

—The Women's Christian Temperance Union of New Brunswick supply the firemen with coffee at each fire.

—The congregation of the Crescent Avenue Church held their first monthly reception in the church building last evening.

—The thirty first annual meeting of the Hunterdon County Agricultural Society will be held at Flemington next week.

—The members of Hibernia Engine Co. of Elizabeth have formed themselves into a light guard and will have a target excursion early in October.

—During the past year the Congregational church of Round Brook has received an accession of forty-two new members, thirty-four of whom were admitted upon examination.

—Commencing to-morrow, the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association will be open every Sunday from three to six p. m.; and week days from nine to twelve and two to ten p. m.

—White & Son extend an invitation to the ladies to visit their mammoth store and inspect their new line of fall and winter dry goods. They say they are showing some decided novelties in dress goods.

—The State Fair at Waverly closed yesterday with a large crowd in attendance. The attendance from this city were not as many as last year when 275 purchased tickets at the depot here against 238 this year.

—The New Jersey State Firemen's Relief Association will meet in annual session at Phillipsburg on Tuesday next. It is expected that about two hundred delegates will be present and a grand reception will be tendered them.

—Margaret Greson, the white woman who was so brutally beaten and kicked by a colored waiter at the Nottenwood Hotel a few weeks ago, and who was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment, has so far recovered as to be able to leave the Hospital and return to New York.

—Constable Dunscomb in the borough this morning auctioned off the horse, wagon and harness of Chas. Graeber, jr., to satisfy the claims of Herman Koller and Henry Voehl. The total receipts of the sale amounted to $61 and Herman Koller was the purchaser.

—It is Mrs. Amanda G. Maxson, the mother, not Mrs. Amanda T., the widow, of the late ex-Mayor Maxson, who had a paralytic stroke, as reported yesterday. The widow is among the mother at the home of Dr. Wells on Fourth street, and the similarity of names caused one to be mistaken for the other.

—The funeral of Maria Van Cleef, who died on Wednesday night from pneumonia, took place from the house of her daughter on West Front street, at one o'clock this afternoon, the Rev. Dr. A. S. Lewis officiating. The services were simple and impressive and at the close the remains were driven to Millstone in Somerset county for interment.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

The Sewerage and Water Supply Question.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—Plainfield, with an estimated population of about 12,000 inhabitants, is now without any system of sewerage or pubiic water supply, although both subjects have been frequently discussed by the citizens during the past few years.

As the combined question of sewerage and water supply for Plainfield is to be the greatest issue before the Common Council, I take the liberty to offer a few suggestions pertinent thereto.

It may be assumed that, sooner or later, and not far in the future either, Plainfield must be provided with a public water supply, obtained from artesian wells, or from some impounding reservoir, and also with a system of sewerage for domestic purposes, and for manufacturing purposes. This assumption admits of discussion only as to the particular time when such improvements will be carried out. The two principal factors in determining their influence in lessening the death rate and the sickness usually accompanying the prevalence of such epidemics as typhoid fever, and especially in a community of homes, and their recognition as promoters of the value of real estate, the time when Plainfield may become ripe for such improvements, and in what manner it can best be carried out, are questions of vital importance to all property owners.

In a town so favorably situated as Plainfield, drawing water for all purposes of consumption and for fire protection, from wells only and depending on immovable receptacles and vaults for the disposal of the refuse matter of a large population, the question is absolutely surrounded by those important considerations of a proper plan for carrying out these much desired improvements. For the reason that a considerable proportion of the people of Plainfield live in houses built on large plots of land, with sufficient room to allow of the contamination of their water supply, there may prevail an opinion that neither sewerage nor water supply is needed for the town. This is an extremely sudden and dangerous opinion to hold. Cesspools, as receptacles for sewage, are in every way objectionable. The soil becomes polluted with sewage, and the air is filled with the noxious gases arising from the sewage, soaked earth, and from the putrefying matter in vaults and cesspools. In many of the older cities and villages no convenient water is taken to get rid of these accumulations of filth, but generation after generation continues the same filthy and dangerous sanitary practices, until the earth upon which many of our cities stand becomes literally saturated with sewage. If the small city of Plainfield bleat in Plainfield were opened up to view, would the sanitary condition of the town be pronounced perfectly satisfactory? How many privy vaults, cesspools and wells of drinking water would be found, and how close together?

The water supply of Plainfield is a problem worthy of solution. The water will have to be taken from wells absolutely secured by restrictions against contamination, and pumped direct to the consumers, or to a storage reservoir, and thence distributed. The circumstances are all favorable. The water is free from alkali and the population is made up largely of people either quite wealthy or in easy financial condition. The writer believes that it would pay ten per cent of the water department would supply provide for the future extensions. There is no occasion to "ditch" with franchise hunters.

The disposal of the sewage is a more difficult problem. The account of the uniformly level surface of the county to be reckoned and the difficulty of obtaining an outlet by a high enough level, to allow the flow of the sewage by some one of the processes now in practice will have to be adopted. The points to be considered in developing a system of sewers are: the size of the town; situation with reference to disposal of sewage; contemplated increase of population; its water supply; character of soil; sanitary habits of its citizens; and its financial ability. An expert engineer is the man required that would decide the question of how to dispose of the sewage; that point settled the local engineer is competent for a township that to carry out the plans adopted; there are no mysteries in the matter and no engineering difficulty is required. Good materials and good honest superintendence are the main essentials.

Before the town adopts the "separate" plan, which provides for house refuse only, and uses only so much of the rainfall on roofs as may happen to flush the pipes, the rest of the water being disposed of on the ground surface, the question of the possible danger not to be far from $1 per lineal foot, thirty cents ought to do it.) The expense of ground surface drainage and the final disposal of the sewage at the outlet is to be further estimated. The annual expense of maintenance and repairing is estimated in a writer on the subject, at twenty-five cents per head of population. In Berlin, Germany, it has been reduced to sixteen cents per head.

The manner of assessment to provide for sewer improvements will depend on circumstances.

It should be positively decided that the two improvements—water works and sewerage—should be made simultaneously, and that both improvements be made by the town and be under undivided municipal government.

A well devised plan will provide for extending only such portions of the improvements as may be required by the growth of the city as therefore are deemed advisable. There is no occasion for large financial embarrassment.

Very respectfully,
GEORGE H. FROST.

The Corps closed by singing "America," after which refreshments were served. The company broke up about midnight, each expressing themselves as well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

He Made Serious Threats.

Emily Stewart, who lives in Bilger alley, appeared before Justice Nash on Thursday and swore out a warrant for the arrest of an Italian named Palmero, who with his wife keeps a peanut stand at the corner of Front street and Park avenue, charging him in her affidavit with "taking an iron bar to strike her and threatening to split her head open at present with an axe." The warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Smith, who apprehended the accused at his home in Bilger alley at noon to-day. He was remanded for a hearing this afternoon.

Justices' Court Notes.

An action to recover a debt brought by David K. Vail against Jacob Sooter will come up for trial before Justice Austin in the borough, on the 24th inst.

A similar action brought by Vail vs. Goldis will come up before the same Justice, at the same time and place.

STATE NOTES.

The Fifth Congressional District Republican Convention met in Patterson on September 30th, five days before the State Convention. William Walter Phelps, who represents the district, will probably be renominated by acclamation.

The bottling mare Judy Alkin, the property of Alexander Alkin of Trenton, has been purchased by George Hopkins, in Haddonfield, on Tuesday night, for one hundred and fifty dollars. She is to be used in harness and has a record of 2:28 on a half-mile track. The country has been fruitlessly scoured for the animal.

The West Jersey Baptist Association, which has just been in session at Greenwich Creek, elected Rev. J. J. Pierson of Woodbury moderator. Three new churches were admitted, Salem, Cedarville and Fairton, and the one for Palmyra and Riverton, were admitted, making a total of fifty-six churches and 10 ministers. During the year there were 681 baptisms.

Miscellaneous Notices.

An Appeal for Charleston.

Mayor's Office,
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 15, 1886.

To the People of Plainfield:

Charleston needs our help and needs it now. The ability is ours. To her call, then, the call of a sister in distress, let us respond. The suddenness of the present destruction of property of the city of Charleston, one of the richest in all of American history, that has left business prostrated, rendering thousands of men and homes destitute, let us heartily respond.

From all quarters of the civilized world come the sympathetic words of condolence, and from us utter our sincerity by assisting to lighten her burden in her affliction.

Contributions will from this date be received at the office of the Mayor, and at the Second National Bank, where all proper arrangements will be made for the transmission of the same. It is especially urged upon the churches of the city that opportunity be given their respective congregations for contributions to be made in evening the Plainfield Relief Fund for suffering Charleston. GEO. W. ROCKEFELLOW, Mayor.

READING'S COMPROMISE

PRESIDENT GOWEN RESIGNS—AUSTIN CORBIN TO SUCCEED HIM.

The Terms in Detail Which Indicate the Future Policy of the Management of the Affairs of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Correspondence settling the difference between the Reading railroad syndicate and its opponents has just been made public. Reading advanced four points in the market in consequence. The agreement was reached by compromise. Mr. Gowen resigned on the understanding that all holders of junior Reading securities should be protected from foreclosure.

This was agreed upon by the Morgan party. Mr. Corbin, or some one representing his policies, will succeed Mr. Gowen as president. The correspondence in full is as follows:

Franklin B. Gowen, Esq., President:

DEAR SIR: Referring to the negotiations for the settlement of the Reading troubles, we find that we can arrange the matter upon the following basis:

First—The present syndicate to be enlarged by $4,000,000 additional subscriptions, to be placed by Messrs. Sully & Lauterbach, the names and amounts of each subscription to be approved by Mr. Gowen, Mr. Corbin or Mr. Jesse Seligman, the latter of whom is to take the place of Mr. Austin Corbin as representative of the new subscribers in the management of the property. It is to think fit, provided that the syndicate to be increased proportionately to the increase of subscriptions.

Second—The reconstruction trustees to be increased by the addition of Messrs. Alfred Sully, R. K. Dow, John Wanamaker and Charles L. Borie, and to make such changes in the plan of reorganization as the majority may think fit, provided that the following changes shall be made:

1. The plan to provide for reorganization without foreclosure, by dealing with every obligation and security of the company.

2. Mortgage to be given to secure the bonds to be issued in lieu of preferred stock in the present plan, and subsequent mortgages to be given to secure the bonds issued for present junior mortgage bonds. The bonds issued in exchange for securities in the present plan to have the right to vote, if such right can be legally given without affecting the charter of the company.

3. The executive committee of the reconstruction trustees to be increased to six by the addition of Mr. Alfred Sully.

4. After changes in the plan have been made, as above, ten days to be given to security holders to accept its provisions, and no foreclosure shall take place provided security holders sufficient in amount to ratify the new plan within the time except the provisions of the plan within the prescribed time. If no such acceptance is secured then reorganization to be then carried out, if desired, and only for the benefit of those who have accepted, and the plan under foreclosure may be prepared by the reconstruction trustees in an alternative plan, and issued at the same time as the other for the information of the security holders.

5. The voting trust to be for five years, and to consist of five persons, of whom four shall be M. J. Pierrepont Morgan, Mr. J. Lowber Welsh, Mr. Henry Lewis and Mr. John Wanamaker, or, in case of vacancy, the fifth, who shall be satisfactory both to the syndicate and to the reconstruction trustees.

Third—Any changes in the plan other than those herein mentioned, if any, should be subject to the approval of the syndicate.

Fourth—A united effort to be made by the company, the reconstruction trustees and the syndicate to secure the passage of the amendment of Mr. Austin Corbin as an additional receiver, and if Mr. Corbin will take the position and legally qualify himself to fill it, it is understood that the presidency of the company shall be offered to him.

It is, of course, understood that the words "syndicate" and "reorganization trustees" as used above, shall when practicable, mean action to be taken by either shall apply to the enlarged syndicate and enlarged board of reorganization trustees.

ALFRED SULLY.
EDWARD LAUTERBACH.

Messrs. Alfred Sully and Edward Lauterbach.

GENTLEMEN: I have your favor of the 17th inst., and am willing to adjust all differences on the basis therein proposed. I think the junior security holders and shareholders of the company should be greatly indebted to you, and are to be congratulated upon the success of your negotiations, which secures to them the protection of their property from the danger of foreclosure, but preserve their proper status in the corporation.

I had no other object in taking the presidency last January than to secure those results, and only consented to hold the position until reorganization was accomplished. I cannot consistently with my duty to the new syndicate of the new plan of reorganization the work is practically done, and, therefore, in order to carry out my pledge, and as an evidence of my sincerity in the matter, I hereby tender my resignation as president of the company, to be presented and take effect upon the acceptance by the reorganization trustees and the syndicate of the plan of reorganization as contained in your letter. I need scarcely add that I shall gladly aid the reorganization trustees in every way in carrying into effect the plan and placing the property of the company on a sound financial basis. I trust most earnestly that Mr. Corbin may be induced to become president of the Reading company, as a part from his acknowledged ability my personal relations with him are such as will make it a pleasure to me to give him a very loyal support. Very respectfully yours,

FRANKLIN B. GOWEN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17, 1886.

Messrs. Alfred Sully and Edward Lauterbach.

GENTLEMEN: I have read your correspondence of this date with Mr. Gowen. I personally approve and accept the terms for the adjustment of Reading railroad affairs set forth therein, and will do my utmost to carry the same into effect. Yours very truly,

AUSTIN CORBIN.

The foregoing correspondence was approved by Messrs. Drexel, Bullitt and Welsh, of the syndicate in Philadelphia. The correspondence will be submitted before the reconstruction trustees for their sanction. A meeting of the trustees will be held at Philadelphia, at 10 o'clock to-day, for this purpose.

Chairman Manley Rejoices.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 18.—The following has been telegraphed by Chairman Manley: Official returns from every city, town and plantation in the state give Bodwell (Rep.) for governor, 14,660 majority over Edward Conery (Dem.) and Solomon Lincoln (Pro.) 17,000. The Republicans elect 149 members of the legislature and the Democrats 33. Special effort was made by the Democrats to capture the legislature and defeat Hale, but he will be reelected by acclamation, and elected by the largest vote ever thrown in Maine for a United States senator. On victory, taking it all in all, is the greatest Republican triumph ever known in Maine.

ANOTHER CENTENNIAL

IS WHAT THE GOVERNORS OF THE ORIGINAL THIRTEEN WANT.

Preliminary Meeting in Philadelphia to Set the Matter on Foot—What the Governors Did and What They Want Congress and the Country To Do.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—Ten of the thirteen governors who were expected in this city to take part in the celebration of the anniversary of the signing of the constitution of the United States have arrived. Accompanying the governors were the following distinguished persons: Gen. Geo. P. Wisner, of Rhode Island; ex-Governor Hobart B. Bigelow, of Connecticut; Lieutenant-Governor Edward Jones and Secretary C. F. Lincoln, of New York; Hons. H. Jewett and Thomas J. Alcott, of New Jersey; Governor Robert E. Pattison and Secretary of State Hengst, of Pennsylvania; Governor Buckley, of Delaware; Governor Henry Lloyd, of Maryland; Governor Fitz Hugh Lee, of Virginia; Governor J. C. Sheppard, of South Carolina; Governor Henry H. McDaniel, of Georgia, and others. The visitors were met in Paris C at the Continental hotel at 10:30 o'clock and after a brief address of welcome by Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania, the party was conducted to Independence hall.

Here the distinguished visitors were received by the party proceeded to Carpenter's hall where the first meeting was held. The governors ranged themselves around the large table near the center of the hall. Richard M. Bache, Jr., the commanding officer of the Carpenter's company of the city and county of Philadelphia, welcomed the visitors, and briefly reviewed the history of the time now being celebrated. Hampton L. Carson, of Philadelphia, then delivered the oration of the day.

At the conclusion of Mr. Carson's address the business of the meeting was taken up. On motion of Governor Pattison the organization was made permanent. The governor suggested also that a committee consisting of the governors of the thirteen states and representative citizens from those states be appointed to prepare a place for the celebration. On motion of Governor Stockley, of Delaware, a committee of thirteen was appointed to draft a plan. The governors of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Rhode Island, Maryland and Georgia constitute the committee.

The following preamble was adopted:

Whereas, The adoption of the constitution of the United States of America is the most important event in the history of the American people, and the establishment of that sublimest political achievement of mankind; and

Whereas, The centennial anniversary of this memorable epoch is now close at hand; and

Whereas, The legislature of New Jersey has, by resolution passed on the 1st day of June, A. D. 1886, invited the governors and representatives of the thirteen original states to assemble in Philadelphia and consider the propriety of preparing for a national celebration; and

Whereas, The governors and representatives of said states have met in Philadelphia on the 17th day of September, A. D. 1886; therefore be it

Resolved, By the governors and representatives of the colonial states, in meeting assembled, that each state and territory of the Union and the Federal government be invited to unite in preparations for a proper celebration of the 100th anniversary of the 17th day of December, A. D. 1887, and the president be invited to formally communicate to congress, at their next meeting, the action of this meeting, and request that the first century of constitutional government, and to urge upon that body the propriety of taking measures to render the celebration worthy of the occasion by the appropriation by the congress of every state and territory in the Union be formally communicated with, and to press upon the attention of their people the importance of their participation therein. That this body communicate through its chairman and secretary with the president of the United States and with the governors of the states and territories and request them to appoint delegates to meet in Philadelphia on Thursday, Dec. 2, 1886, said delegates to organize as a permanent organization, with power to devise such plans for the celebration as will, in their judgment; secure a celebration worthy of so great an event.

Resolved, That the city of Philadelphia be requested to appoint a committee of citizens to co-operate with said permanent organization.

Resolved, That we extend our profound sympathy to the sufferers in South Carolina and our assurances of warm friendship and regard.

Resolved, That the thanks of this body be extended to the Carpenters' company for the courtesies extended by them to this body for the use of their hall upon this occasion.

Ex-Governor Wetmore, of Rhode Island, left for his home after the meeting at Carpenter's hall.

Orders Disobeyed.

BUFFALO, Sept. 18.—The jury impaneled by Coroner Bloed to investigate the cases of the men killed by the explosion of the Ira Shepard, on the Erie canal, on Thursday, which place he wished to try. His counsel was Ferdinand Hilbertant, and he had traveled all the way from Bohmia, Bohemia, alone. He was a big, strong and lusty fellow, and had some bread, which he had brought from his home. He seemed to be satisfied with that. He was given something to eat while stopping here.

Heavy Failure in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18.—Baum & Co., one of the oldest and largest firms in this city, have failed. The firm consists of Julius Baum, Henry Bullitt and Charles Baum, of New York. The failure was wholly unexpected, and has caused much surprise among business men. The liabilities are estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000. It is generally believed that the assets are quite equal to the liabilities, and that the firm will be able to pay dollar for dollar.

Hard on Tammany.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—There were more than seventy-five in the department of public works yesterday. Seventy-three men were appointed by the late commissioner, R. S. Sayres, and are nearly all Tammany men. Commissioner Gilroy succeeded in getting off their places with county Democrats.

Old Memories for the Ninth.

PATERSON, Md., Sept. 18.—The veterans of the Ninth New York regiment held their reunion on the battlefield of Antietam, at Sharpsburg, Md., yesterday. They were joined on their arrival by the citizens of Hagerstown and welcome was made and replied to. The veterans then passed resolutions to the effect that in appreciation of the generous welcome they received twenty-five years ago,

THE MONUMENT.

At a few minutes past 1 o'clock the monument was presented to the town by Col. George F. Bissell, who spoke in behalf of the building commission.

Gen. Hawley then delivered his address of acceptance.

At the conclusion of Gen. Hawley's address a dedication song by Rev. Dr. R. F. Powell was sung. The literary exercises then followed, after which there was a parade under Col. Jacob L. Greene as chief marshal, which was participated in by thousands of veterans, visiting military corps, the Governor's Foot guard and other organizations.

The memorial is executed in Connecticut brown stone from the bed of the old stone bridge with which it is connected. The general surface is rock faced, in keeping with the simplicity of the design, but relieved by bold-carved Gothic tracings; and the friezes, which is of light-colored terra cotta, matches the color of the Ohio stone.

The arch opening is thirty feet wide, and springs from two massive round towers, and on either side. These towers are each sixty-seven feet in circumference, and rise to a height of over 100 feet, terminating in conical roofs, which increase the general height of the memorial, and add very much to the artistic effect by the variety they give to the sky line. About forty feet from the ground, above the archway, a broad frieze of rich sculpture runs entirely around the monument. Its length is 164 feet and height seven feet, and is divided into ten subjects, each side facing the south represents a condensed "Story of the War," and on the opposite side "The Return of the Army." Angels, playing musical instruments, are found in the round tower roofs and face the south, as though welcoming the returning army, which is represented on the frieze below.

VALUABLE TROTTERS RUINED

By a Spectator Crossing the Track 16 Front of the Goers.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 18.—There was a horse trot at Phoenix this part of the town to-day. Here are bred the famous Hambletonians known as the Lysanders, choice specimens of which are in the Vanderbilt and other crack stables. The principal event was the Lysander Girl, called Lysander Girl, owned by the breeders, the Pendergast brothers, was entered against a field of five other young horses, Lysander Girl was considered favorite. In the third heat a spectator crossed the track at an unlucky moment, and coming in collision with Milkmaid, started the mare off with the sulky. Her mate stumbled, reared and, falling in the track of Lysander Girl, made a heap of horseflesh in the sand. William Brogan, the driver of Lysander Girl, was thrown from his sulky and was fatally injured by the fall. The horses were both cut up very badly. Lysander Girl is valued at $10,000, and it is feared that she is ruined as a race horse. Milkmaid, too, may never be able to go again for time. Both horses were candidates for the grand circuit next year.

Pistols on a Race Track.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 18.—At the race course some excitement was caused by O. O. West, western agent of the Dwyer brothers, at Brooklyn, and Jim Brannin, a prominent Bootblack and other racers. West had used obscene language to Brannin's son about allowing Bootblack to be exercised in his stable. Brannin, it is said, struck West, and when the elder Brannin came along and remonstrated the two began quarreling. Both drew a revolver and fired, but the shot missed. Brannin then struck a blow at West. The latter pressed the pistol into Brannin's stomach, but the hammer caught in his vest and failed to explode. Just at the way, the ball grazing the flesh. They were then separated, and have since expressed regret over the affair.

Traveling Under Difficulties.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18.—A little 11-year-old lady accompanied by her mother left the Lake Shore train at 2:30 to-day and went west. He had a tag fastened in his button-hole, on which was the address in Chicago, to which place he wished to go. His name was Ferdinand Hilbertant, and he had traveled all the way from Bohmia, Bohemia, alone. He was big, strong and lusty fellow, and had some bread, which he had brought from his home. He seemed to be satisfied with that. He was given something to eat while stopping here.

THE CHINESE RETALIATE.

Americans Roughly Handled by the Natives of China.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Minister Denby, at this time, has reported to the secretary of state two cases of recent outrage perpetrated by the Chinese upon Americans. The Rev. A. A. Fulton and wife and Miss Mary Fulton, M. D., all of the Presbyterian mission in China, established a mission hospital and station at Kwai Ping, about 400 miles southwest from Canton. When they arrived at their destination on the 15th inst. up buildings placards appeared on the walls declaring that the "foreign devils" must go in three days and their buildings destroyed. The Kwai Ping authorities did not quell the disturbance. A crowd gathered near the hospital, and Mr. Fulton set out to secure the protection of the military. He was driven on his way and not permitted to return, and no soldiers were sent to protect the mission. On May 6 the mob piled straw and faggots against the building and applied fire. Miss Fulton, the missionary's daughter, upon which the inmates fled, and the house was looted and burned. The ladies sought refuge on board boats, but the mob threatened to destroy any boats that should receive them, and after some delay they reached the point where Mr. Fulton had been compelled to remain. Two days later they were put on board and taken to Canton. The value of the property destroyed is about $5,500, and Consul Seymour is pressing a demand for the payment of this amount of damages.

The second case is of still more recent date. On Sunday, June 6, in the absence of all the ordinarily connected with the American Episcopal Mission hospital at Chung King, and while only one lady was present, a mob collected, broke down the gates, threw stones at the lady, one of which cut open her head finger its entire length, and in no other wise injured about the head and arms. Complaint was made to the officials, but the matter was not investigated.

"This is a serious case," writes Mr. Denby, "and may be a test one. It grew, as all our evils in China do, out of troubles in the United States."

Still later (July 19) the mob attacked the mission property at Chung King and destroyed it. Mr. Denby filed a protest.

SENT SOUTH TO DIE.

Sad Picture of the Banished Indians En Route to Florida.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18.—Grotesque, yet sad scenes were witnessed at the Union depot here when a special train of Pullman cars filled with Chiricahua Indians, arrived. The party numbered 325, and were guarded by soldiers under command of Col. James P. Wade, South and Lieut. Bullard with all of Geronimo's tribe, and are being punished for their chief's sins. They have been at Wilcox reservation, which is a part of San Carlos reservation, although they are, as a body, have not been on the warpath for over two years, some of their braves joined Geronimo, but the whole tribe was suspected of assisting him secretly.

After the surrender of the chief the government decided to remove the whole tribe to Florida, where they would be kept until they are cured in by civilization, they will die out in a few years. As they filed out of the cars under a close guard a strange sight was presented. Many of the bucks had the long curls of squaws who had to carry baggage, and the assumed indifference of the bucks, formed a motley picture hard to portray. The bucks held gaudily colored fans, principally snakes, skins and water vessels. Changes of clothing appeared to be superfluities and were left behind, while a large per cent. of the dirt of the prairies were brought along. The squaw dance is not with the band, but will be taken with his braves to Florida by way of Texas.

Thinks He Has a Bonanza.

MALDEN, Mass., Sept. 18.—There is great excitement attending the finding of silver and lead ore on the farm owned by Warren Lincoln. Nearly every train from Boston brings a number of men who have heard of the "find" and come to see for themselves. Early in the week Lincoln's sons have visited the mine for the purpose of looking over the premises and examining the ore, with a view of purchasing the property. This morning, while the men were at work, a vein of ore resembling gold was discovered, and Mr. Lincoln carried a sample of it to Boston to be assayed. The property has been fenced in. Mr. Lincoln has had several offers for the property but refuses to sell as he thinks he has a bonanza.

Whisky Makers Jubilant.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—The members of the Western Export Association (whisky pool) at a meeting adjusted all their difficulties, and every member of the association signed the agreement. The Nebraska Distilling company has been readmitted. The price of spirits from to-morrow will be $1.12 for new goods, an advance of two cents a gallon. An immediate movement has been made for a fund in case of an attack, which cannot be sold at full price. The supply on hand never was so small, and the officers of the association are jubilant. Every distillery in the country is now under control of the pool.

Keep Off My Cellar Door.

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—William Dunkelspiel, of New York, agent of the Equitable Life Assurance society, was arrested this morning on the municipal court on the complaint of one of the local agents of the same company for an alleged violation of the insurance laws of Massachusetts, in the failure of the latter to require bond to the state treasurer, nor having procured a certificate from the insurance commissioner. The accused gave bonds. He claimed to be unaware that he was violating any law.

Compromise in an Elopement Case.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 18.—The legal proceedings growing out of the elopement of the heiress, Mrs. Fannie B. Hill and Rev. Thomas J. Greenburg, have been compromised. By the terms Mrs. Hill pays all the costs in the proceedings, amounting to between $4,000 or $5,000; allows Greenburg $1,000 taken from her in Florida, $5,000 in cash and the house and lot in Greenburg, worth $6,000, subject to $3,000 prior lien of $6,300 held by Mr. Wood, father of Mrs. Hill.

Billiard in Imitation of the Boston.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 18.—Ever since Dr. Godfrey, of the United States hospital service, reported that the disease at Biloxi was yellow fever, that little town has been bitterly aggrieved at Dr. Holt, health officer of the Louisiana state board, who founded the yellow fever theory and quarantined the town. It was reported to Dr. Holt that Biloxi was preparing to have Dr. Holt indicted.

El Coyote Reported Killed.

LAREDO, Texas, Sept. 18.—Word was received here that El Coyote, the rebel chief, with his two lieutenants, Pena and Vela, and six men, was killed in a scrimmage with Mexican troops under the command of Col. Vales, not far from Santo Domingo ranch, near Lampasas, Mexico.

Suit Against a City.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 18.—The Portland (Me.) Savings bank has begun suit in the United States court here against the city for $200,000. The suit grows out of the re pudiated bonds of 1862.

THE NEWPORT CUPS.

YACHTSMEN EXPECT A FINE DAY'S SPORT—THE ENTRIES.

Some Fast Vessels in the Different Classes Will Take Part in the Contest. Hot Rivalry Between the Boston First Class Sloops—A Good Wind Promised.

NEWPORT, Sept. 18.—The race at Newport to-day for the cups given by the citizens of Newport is the sole topic of conversation among the yachting men and their friends. There are a large number of entries, and each of the four classes is well represented. More especially in the schooner race will the contest be an exciting one. There are four distinct types of fishermen enlisted, and each type has its particular champion. The Mermaids, the crack English schooner, is of the Gloucester type of vessel, while the Puritan, a Boston boat, is built on the lines of the big sloops, the Montauk is the old style of center board schooner, and the Gitana is the ordinary type of Corinthian. In the sloop class, perhaps the Mayflower, Puritan and the Galatea are entered, and the rivalry between the two Boston boats is very great. Both owners are confident of a gale, and each swears sure of victory in case they get one.

They appear to have the Galatea entirely out of the question, and they say to disappear with the first puff of wind that makes its appearance. In the second-class sloops, the contenders Bedouin and Stranger and the sloop Thetis are entered, and both owners are very confident of victory. Gracie, Norseman, Tidal and Cinderella are the entries.

The course will be a triangular one of forty-five miles, and begins at or near Brenton's reef lightship, off Point Judith, with the wind. The steam yacht Electra has been selected as the judge's boat. The Galatea arrived at Newport early this morning. Last night the usual Friday night hop was duly arranged, and the outlook is favorable for a good race.

The harbor is filled with craft of every description, variety and never in the history of Newport, is it safe to say, has there been so many people here for the one purpose of seeing the contest.

Boston people predominate, and they are about evenly divided in their preferences between the two Boston sloops. Betting, however, is in favor of the Mayflower.

The judges and regatta committee are on the steamer Pilgrim to witness the races.

It is not expected that the finish will be accomplished before a late hour this afternoon.

The weather is cloudy and the indications now point to a good south wind.

SECRETARY MANNING'S FUTURE.

A Report That He Will Go as Minister to Austria.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The Star publishes the following bearing upon Secretary Manning's future:

It is reported that Secretary Manning will go as minister to Austria instead of returning to the treasury department. He has not fully recovered from his recent illness, and it is feared that to again undertake the duties of the treasury department would be more than he could bear. It is thought that a long sojourn in Austria would be very beneficial to his health, particularly as he would spend most of his time at Halle or Frankenbad, where the waters are celebrated. He is consequently visited by the crowned heads of Europe with benefit.

Mr. Manning's physician, it is said, thinks he would improve in health quicker there than anywhere else, and the president has decided to make the appointment. A hint as to the appointment is said to have been made to Austria, and it was received by the latter favor. Mr. Manning is sure to be received with high distinction both socially and officially, and the Austrian government will be glad to have him. The appointment, it is said, would be taken to make up by attentions to him for the rejection of Mr. Kiefey.

A Tramp's Fatal Ride.

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 18.—Three young tramps tried to steal a ride on the midnight freight train from Norwalk over the Danbury and Norwalk railroad. The brakemen repeatedly warned them off, but they climbed upon the cars again as soon as the train left a station. When Bethel was reached only two of the trainmen could be found on the cars. Early yesterday Track Inspector Crotty discovered the body of a man lying beside the rails near Redding station. The body was terribly mangled, pieces of it being strewn along for 100 feet, and was removed by gathering the fragments into a blanket. The remains were identified as those of Edward Martin, of Georgetown, a young man 18 years of age. It is supposed that he became drowsy and rolled off the car on which he was stealing a ride.

Fits John Forter's Son.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 18.—A tall young man, who gave the name of Frank Bailey, of Boston, was found by Detective Reilly in company with two roughs, who were apparently taking him in tow for the purpose of getting away with his money. The young man was considerably under the influence of liquor and the detective placed him under arrest. At the police headquarters he made the statement that he was the son of Gen. Fitz John Porter, and that he was here on a racket and was very sorry that he got so drunk. He was sent to New York.

MORE BOSTON BADNESS.

A Confidential Clerk Gone to Parts Unknown.

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—George H. Prescott, aged 45, confidential clerk for Wm. A. Mellen, agent for the Chicago and Northwestern railroad in this city, has skipped for parts unknown. The cause of his flight is that he owes several thousand dollars. He has been in the employ of the above company for five years, and they had such implicit confidence in him that they allowed him to keep out a general balance of accounts. Already a number of his friends noticed that he was rowing considerable money, but for what cause they were unable to learn. They knew he was not a good liver nor was he a drinking man, nor was he known as a fast liver. He was so well known at the various railroad offices here that he had no trouble in getting checks cashed, and such checks he had all his business so certainly that his employers never suspected what he was doing.

Treasurer Prescott, in order to secure money, has represented that he was obliged to pay a bill of his employers, and he always entered the money under that he would return the money within an hour, which, however, he always failed to do. Yesterday morning he came to the railroad office at the usual hour, and, after doing a little writing, he left, saying that he was going up Washington street. He has not been seen since by his employers. It seems that instead of doing so he went to his home in Somerville and told his wife that he was going to New York for his employers. Since then he has not been seen nor have his family or employers received any tidings of him. The amount he has borrowed ranges from $50 to $200, and his friends think that he has succeeded in getting gold which as well as $250. After his flight it was learned that he had dabbled considerable in stocks and met with many disastrous fluctuations.

WEDDED AT A COUNTY FAIR.

New York's Governor Signed the Wedding Certificate.

LYONS, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The town presented a holiday appearance yesterday. From every store and dwelling in the village flags were waving and streamers flying. From old cannon Revolutionary relics, the legends "Gilbert and Hendricks," were inspanned into the service. Early in the morning the farmers and townspeople from several adjacent counties began to pour into the village. Governor Hill arrived he was drawn to the fair grounds in an open carriage, to which four spirited horses were attached. The escort of the governor was composed of a detachment from Mayor Parsons, of Rochester. Governor Hill was then introduced, and was greeted with

HOW TO KEEP WIVES AT HOME.

Wye Answers a Correspondent on a Serious Subject.

SWEET HOME, Grand Island, Neb., asks: What shall I do to amuse and instruct my family of wife and four children evenings?

Answer.—The older children, no doubt, would be best pleased with some durable toy. A two-inch auger is a good plaything for a small boy. With this he can bore a hole into the bath tub or the piano, while you are engaged in entertaining the balance of your family. Still you must be your own judge. He may do better with a large dull hornet's nest. This instrument is soft and pliable, and will not sear your features in case the boy should send you with it. In this respect it has a great advantage over the broad-ax as an indoor amusement.

The little girls might amuse themselves by putting corn, crab apples, or other small fruit up their noses, though they may have outgrown this. A good plan by which to amuse children is to apply paper overshoes to the feet of the family cat. This affords great amusement to the family and does not injure the cat. The cat, under these circumstances, will step high, like a blind horse, and when you laugh with great glee she will look at you in a reproachful way and move around into the corner like a late husband in his sock feet. It is very entertaining, and yet it is not very wrong.

How to entertain your wife, however, is quite another question, and yet it is a vital question. I believe that we do not devote time enough or thought enough to this question.

Many a wife has gone down into a narrow and disagreeable drunkard's grave because her husband did not bend her at home evenings by making it pleasant for her.

A wife goes down town where she meets gay companions in gorgeous club rooms and under the gaslight she soon forgets her home; but let the husband throw around her joyous home influences instead of reproaching her when she comes home late; let him make the home cheerful; let him prepare pleasant little surprises for her, instead of trying to trip her up as she comes through the hall with her hat on wrong side before; let him bring her slippers, and tobacco, and a mouthful of tarlatan, when she gets home weary and worn, instead of wailing over his hard lot.

Let him bring her slippers.

Husbands may thus do much for their wives to make life pleasant. It is a vital question with many of us. How shall we keep our wives at home? Shall we play poker with them and keep their favorite drinks at the house, so that they will not yearn to go down town evenings, or shall we weep over them with low, smothered sobs?

I sometimes think that it is not downright depravity on the part of a wife, so much as it is thoughtlessness, that leads her to forget her husband, and leave him alone through the long evenings. So let me say to you, Sweet Home, that whatever you do, you should make your home so attractive even-ings that your wife will not feel that it is a bore to remain at your side.

Sing to her if you can, read to her, bring her the evening paper, and let her soft head gently as you did when she used to come to see you. Do not rudely tell her that you will smooth her hair if she will take it off and hand it to you. Be gentlemanly, sir, and thoughtful. We must make our homes attractive if we would hope to keep our wives near us.

I once knew a husband who was cross and fretful when his wife came home from down town, and gave her "a picked up dinner," and in one short week she was sleeping in the church yard.

Where the Minority Won.

The smartest man I ever saw "in charge" of a primary was an old Dutchman (I am not a candidate for running Dutchmen for office, consequently I use the phrase "old Dutchman) "over the Rhine" in Cincinnati. The voice of the meeting was rather against the chairman, and he saw it, but he didn't see why he should let the meeting itself from hearing. I noticed that he managed to defeat all motions offered by the majority and carry all resolutions offered by the minority. Of course you know a primary "over the Rhine," in the city of McLeansville, is rather more German than it is now in the city. Well, every vote was a "ja" and a "nein" vote, and the chairman always contrived to make the majority squeak out the thin "nein," while the minority roared the good, round, mouth-filling "yaw!" An obnoxious motion would be introduced. Anxious looks on the countenances of the apprehensive minority waiting for the chairman to come to the front. He was always calm, always ready, always "in battery." Rising slowly to his feet he put the question with impressive, honest deliberation. "All did vas was in favor of defeating dot raisolution will say ja." "Yaw!" barked the exultant minority, in a roar that made the gas flicker. "All obbosed to defeating der raisolution say nein." The thinly squeaked the exasperated majority. "The raisolution was defeated," calmly announced the chair, and the wrathful howls of the crowd utterly drowned out the triumphant shouts of the minority. It was no use to appeal from the chair or call for a division, he always got the "yaws" on his side.—Burdette, in Brooklyn Eagle.

Why Few Women Learn to Swim.

He was teaching his wife to swim.

"Woa—woa," she sputtered as she tipped up and got her mouth full of water. "I can't learn."

"Oh, yes, you can," he urged; "just keep your mouth shut and persevere."

"Can I learn without keeping my mouth shut?" she asked.

"Not very well. You see, if you——"

"Groan," she interrupted, "take me right out to shore; I didn't want to learn on any such condition, and I don't suppose that one woman in a good many thousand could."

George did his subsequent bathing alone.—Yale Lit.

[BY AUTHORITY.] LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

An Act authorizing the boards of chosen freeholders of Essex and Hudson counties to borrow money for the purpose of building a bridge across the Passaic river.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the boards of chosen freeholders of the counties of Essex and Hudson be and they are hereby authorized, by a vote of a majority of those present at any regular session, or adjourned session thereof, of the said boards, to borrow money for the purpose of building and erecting a bridge across the Passaic river, at or near the point where the line between the said counties strikes the said river, and to issue the bonds of the said counties therefor, in the manner hereinafter provided.

2. And be it enacted, That whenever the said boards shall determine to borrow money for the purpose aforesaid, they shall cause to be made a survey and estimate of the cost of such bridge, and the approaches thereto, and shall also cause to be made a map or plan of the same, and of the lands and buildings necessary to be taken for the purpose, showing the lands and buildings taking the title thereto in the corporate name of the said counties, and the said boards shall thereupon ascertain that the total cost of such building, with the lot whereon the same shall stand, shall not exceed the sum of one hundred thousand dollars; and the portion of the property in each township for the purpose of taxation shall be ascertained.

3. And be it enacted, That whenever the said boards shall have determined upon the cost of such lot and building into not more than three parts of public money, and in all cases prior to the annual tax levy of each year until the whole is paid, and may borrow, upon the credit of the township, or townships, in which the said property is situated, a sum sufficient to pay for such building at the time of its completion, or such part thereof as may be necessary, or as aforesaid; and said committees are authorized to borrow money for the purpose of the counties to be assessed.

4. And be it enacted, That the building when erected or purchased shall be used for town committee meetings; for the meetings of the town boards and papers; for a place of deposit for the records of the township; for all town uses of the polling places of such township, and for such other purposes as shall be authorized by the town committee of said township.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1886.

CHAPTER XL.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to incorporate the town of Plainfield, and for other purposes," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to erect or cause to be erected, and any person or persons who may own any lot, hereafter, shall not suffer or permit to be erected thereon any wooden building, shed, stable, outhouse, shop, barn, fence, or other structure, or any part thereof, within the fire limits of the said town of Plainfield, as the same has been established by ordinance of the said town committee, and approved January twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, without the consent in writing of the owners of two-thirds in value of the property fronting on the street or streets on which such building, shed, stable, outhouse, shop, barn, fence, or other structure or any part thereof, may be proposed to be erected, and which consent shall be filed with the town clerk of said town.

2. And be it enacted, That any person or persons who shall violate the provisions of this act shall forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than twenty dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each and every offence, to be recovered by the said town committee of the said town of Plainfield, in an action of debt, in the name of the said town committee, before any justice of the peace or court having cognizance thereof, and the said penalty, when collected, shall be paid into the treasury of the said town of Plainfield, to be used for the purposes of the said town committee.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1886.

CHAPTER XLI.

An Act to authorize the boards of chosen freeholders of the counties of Bergen, Passaic and Morris to borrow money for the purpose of building bridges over the Passaic river, and to issue the bonds of the said counties therefor.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the boards of chosen freeholders of the counties of Bergen, Passaic and Morris be and they are hereby authorized, by a vote of a majority of those present at any regular session, or adjourned session thereof, of the said boards, to borrow money for the purpose of building and erecting a bridge across the Passaic river, at or near the point where the line between the said counties strikes the said river, and to issue the bonds of the said counties therefor, in the manner hereinafter provided.

2. And be it enacted, That whenever the said boards shall determine to borrow money for the purpose aforesaid, they shall cause to be made a survey and estimate of the cost of such bridge, and the approaches thereto, and shall also cause to be made a map or plan of the same, and of the lands and buildings necessary to be taken for the purpose, showing the lands and buildings taking the title thereto in the corporate name of the said counties, and the said boards shall thereupon ascertain that the total cost of such building, with the lot whereon the same shall stand, shall not exceed the sum of one hundred thousand dollars; and the portion of the property in each township for the purpose of taxation shall be ascertained.

3. And be it enacted, That whenever the said boards shall have determined upon the cost of such lot and building into not more than three parts of public money, and in all cases prior to the annual tax levy of each year until the whole is paid, and may borrow, upon the credit of the township, or townships, in which the said property is situated, a sum sufficient to pay for such building at the time of its completion, or such part thereof as may be necessary, or as aforesaid; and said committees are authorized to borrow money for the purpose of the counties to be assessed.

4. And be it enacted, That the building when erected or purchased shall be used for town committee meetings; for the meetings of the town boards and papers; for a place of deposit for the records of the township; for all town uses of the polling places of such township, and for such other purposes as shall be authorized by the town committee of said township.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1886.

CHAPTER XLII.

An Act to authorize the boards of chosen freeholders of the counties of Bergen, Passaic and Morris to borrow money for the purpose of building bridges over the Passaic river, and to issue the bonds of the said counties therefor.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful for any of the boards of chosen freeholders of any county in this state, by virtue of any power in this act, to borrow money for the purpose of building bridges over the Passaic river, unless the board of chosen freeholders of such county shall have previously obtained the consent of the board of chosen freeholders of the county on the opposite side of the river with which such county may propose to build such bridge, and shall have made a contract with such board for the payment of one-half of the cost of such bridge, including the approaches thereto, and the lands and buildings necessary for the purpose of the bridge, which contract shall be executed by the said boards, and shall be binding upon the said counties.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1886.

CHAPTER XLIII.

An Act to authorize the boards of chosen freeholders of any county in this state to create and maintain a paid fire department.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of any city of this state, or for the township committee of any township having a population of not less than ten thousand inhabitants, by virtue of their appointment, and who shall serve without salary or compensation, to create a board of fire commissioners of said city or township, which board shall constitute a board of fire commissioners of said city or township, and shall have the powers and duties of which board shall be prescribed and regulated by this act.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately; provided, that its provisions shall not be operative in any city or township until the same shall be adopted by a majority of the legal voters thereof, at a general election to be held in such city or municipality; and the city clerk or the clerk of such township shall give notice of the adoption of this act by the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of such city or municipality, which shall order a special election of such election, ballots to be printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, which shall be either the words "For a paid fire department" or "Against a paid fire department."

3. 2. And be it enacted, That if any corporation shall have been organized in accordance with the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, and the act of which it is amended, and the acts supplemental thereto, and shall have failed to be deemed to have been valid and effectual for all purposes.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXXI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act for building school-houses in townships," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act it shall be lawful for any township in this state, at any annual meeting, to vote money to build a school-house, or to purchase a site therefor, or to repair the same under any existing law, and to provide land for the same, and to borrow an aforesaid, exceeding the sum of one thousand dollars, and to issue bonds therefor, in such sum as may be necessary, not exceeding in any such person or persons' behalf or request, prior to the first day of January eight hundred and eighty-five, and none of such taxes or assessments shall have been in arrears of seven per centum per annum, to be calculated from the time of the first default in payment thereon to the time of such payment, together with the interest thereon at seven per centum per annum, to be calculated from the time of such payment, together with the costs and charges of collecting the same by any such city for the enforcement and payment thereof, shall be entitled to receive from the collector of taxes or person authorized to receive the same a receipt or receipts in full for the same, and shall make and deliver to the person or persons making such payment a receipt therefor, and shall forthwith cancel the record of such tax or assessment, and no such property shall be sold for the same; and no right to any further interest or penalty by reason of such tax or assessment not having been paid within the time hereinbefore required for the payment thereof shall accrue; provided, however, that the payment hereinbefore authorized of any penalty or penalties imposed upon any delinquent taxpayer or assessment; provided, however, that nothing in this act contained shall authorize the receipt, under the provisions of this act, of any such taxes or assessments in cases where land has been sold for the non-payment of such taxes or assessments, and bought in by any other person than the city, or where the time of redemption has expired, or where the city has received a deed for the same, or some other for the use of such city; nor shall any such taxes or assessments be received by the collector before he shall have ascertained the amount of any certificates or declaration of sale, or deed which may be issued by anything in this act contained; and, provided further, that the provisions of this act shall not become operative in any incorporated city in this state, unless the common council or other governing body having charge and control of the finances of such city shall, by a vote, authorize the collector of taxes, or other person authorized to receive the same, to receive payment for the same under the provisions of this act.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXXII.

An Act to facilitate the foreclosure of mortgages made by consolidated railroad companies of railroads lying partly within and partly without this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any railroad company created by the consolidation of a railroad company or companies of this state with a railroad corporation or corporations of any other state or states, which railroads shall lie partly in this state and partly in another state or states, shall have executed a mortgage upon its entire line of road, and a sale of the entire property, rights and franchises of such company shall have been adjudged and decreed by a court of competent jurisdiction of such other state or states in which the greater part of such line of road shall be situate, and such sale shall have been confirmed by the said court, and the conveyance to the purchaser or purchasers thereunder shall have been approved by the said court, and the said purchaser or purchasers shall have organized a railroad company under the laws of the state in which the greater part of such line of road shall be situate, and shall have accepted a conveyance of the property, rights and franchises of the said railroad company, and shall have filed a certified copy of such conveyance in the office of the secretary of state of this state, and shall have caused a notice of such conveyance to be published in some newspaper published in the county of Essex, for the space of three months, requiring all persons interested in any lands assessed for the payment of the cost of said improvement, and which remain unpaid for the space of two years after the same shall become payable, to appear before the said commissioners at a time and place to be specified in said notice, and show cause why the said lands should not be sold for the payment of the taxes assessed thereon, and the interest and charges thereon; and if no sufficient cause be shown to the contrary, the said commissioners shall make an order directing the sale of the said lands, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to pay the said taxes, interest and charges, and the same shall be sold by the collector of the township of Belleville, in the same manner and at the same time as other lands are sold for taxes in said township, and the proceeds of such sale shall be applied to the payment of the said taxes, interest and charges, and the surplus, if any there be, shall be paid over to the owner of the said lands.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 16, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXV.

An Act concerning salaries of certain officers in addition of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That where, in the opening of the fiscal year, the salary of any officer, the salary as now fixed by law for the clerk of the treasurer of any city in this state is insufficient to compensate such officer for the performance of such clerk work; it shall be lawful for said board to fix the salary of such clerk at a sum not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars per annum; provided, that the same shall be approved by the mayor of such city before the same shall go into effect.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 16, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXVI.

An Act to enable citizens of each town to employ counsel to assist in maintaining hospitals located in such town.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall and may be lawful for any city in this state which has no hospital located therein maintained by a board of managers, to appropriate a sum of money not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars per year, to be expended by the mayor and common council of such city, in employing counsel to assist in obtaining the passage of any law or laws for the benefit of such hospital, or for the protection of the property of such corporation from taxation for city purposes, or for any other purpose connected with the welfare of such hospital, and to pay the expenses of such counsel in attending the legislature.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXVII.

An Act to authorize certain boards of commissioners and common councils of cities to change the date of their annual elections.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for any board of commissioners or common council of any town or city now existing or which may hereafter be incorporated within any township in this state, to change the day of the annual election of officers in such town or city to any day in the month of October in any year, and upon such payment or payments from the treasury of such township to the said town or city as may be agreed upon between the said township and the said town or city, and upon such payment or payments being made, the said town or city shall be entitled to receive from the said township the money due to it for the collection of taxes, and the said collector or collectors of such township shall have the power to collect the same, and the said collector or collectors shall pay over the money so collected to the said collector or receiver, who shall cause the same to be applied to the payment of the debts of the said town or city, and the said collector or collectors shall have the power of enforcing the same, in the same manner as the collectors of said township are empowered to do.

2. And be it enacted, That the ordinances for the change of the annual election of officers in any town or city shall be published in some newspaper printed and circulated in such town or city, for the space of three months, and that three weeks before the same shall go into effect and be operative.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning official newspapers, and of this state," passed March thirteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for any city in this state to designate as an official newspaper, in addition to the official

ON THE STILL.

Far away in Jersey,
Out upon a farm,
Where the country
Possessed of every charm.
Hard by golden cobweb
Shining in the sun;
Eyes as very dark-
est,
Filled with mirth
and fun.
Simplicity so rural Makes her closely kin
From the hat she wears
To her shoeless feet.
When I saw her first
Upon the window smile,
It was near her favorite form,
Seated on the stile.

The next time we met
It was in the city.
Gracious, what a change!
Heaven what a pity!
She'd drawn up her hair
Underneath her hat
And frizzed her "golden crown."
Only think of that.
Dressed up like a figure
In a fashion plate,
With a yellow rag doll
A dog that I do hate.
Her pa had come to "York"
To stay a little while,
Though she's left the country
Still she's on the style.—Chip in The Judge.

Why George W. Peck Enlisted.

It was in 1864 that I joined a cavalry regiment in the department of the Gulf, a raw recruit of a boy. I was only 17 years old. I asked why I waited so long before enlisting, and why I enlisted at all, when the war was so near over. I know that most of the soldiers enlisted from patriotic motives, and because they wanted to help shed blood, and wind up the war. I did not. I enlisted for the bounty. I thought the war was nearly over, and the probabilities were that the government I had enlisted in would be ordered home before I could get to it. In fact, the recruiting officer told me as much, and bade me if I would get my bounty, and a few months' pay, and it would be just like finding money. He said that at that late day I would never see a rebel, unless I went to fighting them. He would provide me with a horse and gun, and if I ever got that near the front I could have all the fighting I wanted. But I was determined to enlist, and I did. I thought I would be sent to a camp of instruction in the north, and would get a furlough before I was ordered to the front. But I was not. I was ordered to the front at once, and I was sent to the front at once. I was put into a regiment that was composed entirely of men who had seen service, and I was put into a company under command of a veteran officer, and by virtue of which my company was entitled to the front of the column every time it marched. I was the only recruit in the company, and I was the only one who had not been under fire. I was the only one who had not been under fire. I was the only one who had not been under fire.

THE FARM AND GARDEN.

SOME ILLUSTRATIONS OF MODERN METHODS IN BEE KEEPING.

Raising Asparagus From Seed—Ex-Minister Bar Sargent on Riparian Rights—The Most Destructive Bees Sting Illustrated Yesterday—A Vineyard Apiary.

Among his means of income the farmer should always have some stands of bees, a larger or smaller number, according to his means with them. It is not a great amount of money from a few such sources, but the small amounts from many sources, that the agriculturist in our time should count on. Honey is not as profitable as it used to be, but the price per pound is lower. On the other hand, its consumption is increasing year by year. New uses are being found for it in confectionery and the manufacturing arts, so that after all the thing is about as broad as it is long.

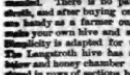
If you have never kept bees, begin to do so this year. Honey is good for us Sunday evening tea, with bread and butter; it is good for the children's sore throats, and for helping to make a cooling drink in harvest it is beaten.

Find out where you can get Italian bees and buy a couple of stands. They are move profit and easily handled than the frisky and fat-footed native. Assemble your supply. Move the bees in cold weather when they can't get out and punish mankind for buying and selling them like so many slaves or dumb, driven cattle.

LANGSTROTH HIVE.

Get the Langstroth hive. It is about the best, though the Blanton movable-comb and the Martin spring frame are also highly commended. There is no patent on the Langstroth, and after buying one or two, if you are really a farmer you ought to be able, you can make your own hive and save money. The simplicity is adapted for use in the south. The Langstroth hive has a broad chamber for brood and honey immediately above. Honey is stored in rows of sections holding either one or two pounds each. These are different sizes of the Langstroth hive, but no slight difference in construction. They are numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4. Charles F. Muth, the famous Cincinnati bee keeper, prefers the No. 3 hive to all others. Frames holding one pound of comb honey fit in with the best sets. There is not space here to describe the interior arrangement of the Langstroth or any other hive. Full directions will be given to the purchaser of the hive, wherever obtained, so that he can readily understand.

Strained honey is now obtained by a process very unlike the old way. There are honey extractors which by means of a whirling motion force the honey from the comb and leave it empty and dry. There are many inventions nowadays which make honey taking comfortable and profitable. One of these is especially commended is the bee smoker.



PERFECTION SMOKER.

The "Perfection" Cold Blast Muzzle Feeding Smoker is the one shown in the illustration. It was designed by Charles F. Muth. In this prior arrangement is such that the smoke pipe cannot clog. The furnace is lined with asbestos so that it will not burn the operator's fingers, and make him say bad words, and vow that the smoker is worse than the bee sting. There are various patterns of these smokers. The particular feature about them is the bellows attachment, which enables the bee man or woman to blow the smoke upon any point needed.

One of the most helpful and ingenious devices lately invented is an actual foundation honeycomb. It looks even better than the real. It is taken in thin strips and put in a hive for a fresh swarm to begin work upon. It encourages them to set about their labors at once, as it were. It really saves the bee, in some degree, from commencing the substance making comb. This is a very exhausting operation. The beautiful artificial comb foundation is the invention of an ingenious Illinois man. On the whole, the country has reason to be proud of the achievements of her bee keepers.

HEXAGONAL VINEYARD APIARY.

We have only space for notice of one more interesting apiary. We reproduce here a picture of a model apiary. It is from Mr. Root's book. The square blocks represent stands of bees, the lines of dots stands of grape trellises. The bee plot is in a vineyard. Evidently Mr. Root is not afraid of the bees hurting his grapes. The hives are seven feet from the grape rows.

In the center of the plot the square is the honey house. A miniature railway and car lead to and from it to the wagon road. The track and the car are not shown in the plan. The wooden box mounted upon iron wheels and axles. The railway is a great convenience, for both honey and grapes have weight about them.

The only questionable point about this business and picturesque apiary would be the inquiry arising in the mind about how the vineyard could be plowed and tended with the beehives in it. No patent ever yet invented kept bees from stinging either the man or the horse that disturbed their repose. Perhaps Mr. Root can explain this satisfactorily.

In the advanced style of honey raising bees no longer swarm. They are kept from doing so by management on the part of their owners. The swarms are divided. Anybody can learn to keep bees, though it will take a couple of years for a novice to make it profitable. Begin with New Hampshire bees, not more than a swarm with only two hives. Remember of this: Bees always sting a person who is afraid of them, or an illnatured or nervous person.

There are some books on bee keeping which will add you in learning this pleasant and profitable business. Two of the best are: "A Year Among the Bees," by Dr. C. C. Miller, and "The A, B, C of Bee Culture," by Rev. A. I. Root. There are also two small pamphlets by Charles F. Muth: "Beekeeping, and How It can be Made Profitable," and "Practical Hints to Beekeepers."

Beekeeping supplies, bee veils and gloves, honey jars, extractors, etc., can be got from dealers in most parts of the country.

Asparagus From Seed.

An asparagus bed from the seed is cheaper than one from plants, although it takes a year longer to come. Below are Peter Henderson's directions for starting such a bed: In the fall, prepare the land by manuring, deep plowing, and harrowing, making it as level and smooth as possible for the reception of the seed. Strike out three feet apart and about two to three inches deep, in which sow the seed by hand or seed drill, as is most convenient, using from five to seven pounds of seed to the acre. Cover the seed well, before covering, tread down the seed in the rows with the feet evenly; then draw the back of a rake lengthwise over the rows, after which roll the whole surface. As soon as the land is dry and fit to work in the spring, the young plants of asparagus will start through the ground, sufficient to distinguish the rows. By following the rows with hand or horse cultivator, and stir the ground so as to destroy the smlyroo weeds, breaking the soil in the rows between the plants with a fine rake or hand weeder for the same purpose. This must be repeated at intervals of two or three weeks during the summer, as the success of this plan is entirely dependent upon keeping down the weeds which, if allowed to grow, would soon smother the asparagus plants, that for the first season of their growth, are weaker than most weeds. In the fall of the year after starting the asparagus will have attained ten or twelve inches in height, and it must now be thinned out, so that the plants shall not be inches apart in the rows. They will then be from two to three feet in height, and, if the directions for culture have been faithfully followed, strong and vigorous. When the stems die full in the fall, before cut them off close to the ground, and cover the lines for five or six inches on each side with two or three inches of rough manure. The following spring renew cultivation, and keep down the weeds the second year exactly as was done during the first, and so on to the spring of the fourth year, when a crop will be produced that will well reward all the labor that has been expended. Sometimes, if the land is particularly suitable, a marketable crop may be secured the third year, but as a rule it will be better to wait until the fourth year before cutting much, as this would weaken the plants. To compensate for the loss of a year's time in the growing of asparagus from seed, cabbage, lettuce, onions, beets, spinach or similar crops that will be marketable before the asparagus has grown high enough to interfere with them may be planted between the rows of asparagus the first year of its growth with but little injury to it. I had an old friend near Macon, Ga., who grew an acre of asparagus after this plan. It was sold on the New York market, and brought him an average of $1,000 a year for six years after it came into bearing. He died some ten years ago, and I presume the plantation was neglected, or it might have been in full bearing yet.

Good Plums.

In setting out fall orchards don't neglect the plums. The following are among the best and most reliable varieties:

Bradshaw, a large purple plum ripening the last of August. Coe's Late Red, medium size, light purplish red, September. Duane's Purple, very large, reddish purple, last of August. Lombard, of medium size, violet red, very productive, last of August. Red Magnum Bonum or Purple Egg, etc., large, productive, valuable only for cooking. Bleecker's Gage, medium size, yellow, excellent. Coe's Golden Drop, very large, yellow, late, excellent. Green Gage, Imperial Gage, both fine and well known. Jefferson, large, greenish yellow, and excellent. Langford, rather large, yellow sprinkled, with red, excellent. Reine Claude de Bavay, yellow spotted with red, very productive. Washington, very large, yellowish green, early and of good quality. Damson, if wanted, and some of the German prunes. The Jefferson should be added to the above list as being very desirable. There are many other varieties than the above, many of very fine quality, but with reputations not yet established. Trees selected from the above cannot be far wrong.

Closing Fruit Cans With Cotton.

In reference to using "cotton batting" canning process, Mrs. Kedzie, of the Kansas Agricultural college, has tried the method in considerable tests of corn fodder feeding. Last winter he fed some of the stock at the state farm on hay, stover and corn fodder, without grain. The second winter he fed the same stock fodder corn says a good article of corn fodder will keep fruit the stock now averaged to be fed upon it. The labor can be saved and seed time and harvest. Every acre saved of good corn fodder will add a acre to the number now kept.

As to the right time to cut corn the professor's judgment is well worth regarding. He tells us the first corns should be cut just when the grains are beginning to harden. Next come the silking. Should not be cut till the kernel is out of the dough state and crushes dry.

SPIRAL CORN BUSKER.

There has been no corn cutting machine as yet invented that suits the practical success. The corn husker in the illustration is the one recommended in "How the Farm Pays." The cornstalks are run through it. They are crushed, so as to be easily fed in fodder. The ears of corn are stripped clean of silks and all. The husks come out in good condition, ready for shipping down the wind. The machine husks 500 bushels a day, taking the ears from the stalks.

Another useful article at this time of year is a corn sheller. Modern inventions are well nigh done away with the old slow process. The farmer must avail himself of these time-saving machines if he holds his own.

CORN SHELLER.

For small quantities the sheller shown in the picture is a very good model. The grains of corn fall from 15 clean, leaving cobs and chaff behind.

For larger quantities the sheller next given is much used. From its long, round shape it is called the Cannon corn sheller.

CANNON CORN SHELLER.

It will shell seventy-five bushels per hour.

Professor Sanborn always selects seed corn from short stalks. Tall growths run to stalk at the expense of the ear. The short stalk seed makes more bushels of corn, but less fodder to the acre. He selects seed ears standing corn in the field before it is cut up.

Premiums on Cattle.

As a general custom judging cattle at state and county fairs is one of the most disgreeable things in connection with such contributory to the owners. There is no uniform system established for the selection of judges, nor any rules for them to pursue when appointed. As a rule they are governed by favoritism and prejudice. Men owning good stock have little or no confidence in an ignorant awarding committee who know nothing of the importance of a knowledge of pedigrees, and who know nothing of points or merits. Whether the committee be one or three, the owner always cringes when he sees a committee proceeding to act on the question of his stock. Their decision, of course, cannot change the real merits of his stock, but they can easily seriously injure its commercial interests. And this is the case the world over, mankind being incapable of judging themselves, rely on what awarding committees decide. Without real experts it would be a farce to attempt to have a scale of points established. And without experts and a scale awards are games of chance, dangerous and deceptive.

With the immense capital invested in thoroughbred stock, with our advanced position in stock breeding, and with the large number of new points and points and pedigrees, it time something better than injustice and lack of all common sense was exercised at our annual shows. The directors and managers of agricultural societies report and all trades, professions and industries, and it is not expected of them that they could deliberately mature strict rules and lay down points by the aid of experts for judging, which should satisfactorily solve the problem of judging justly thoroughbred stock. But we have thoroughbred stock associations and conventions filled with men who understand pedigrees and points, and their interests should prompt them to take this matter in hand and prepare such plain rules and regulations, and for distributing the awards, as will satisfy communities so that justice may be done to the large interest and the stock of the country more thoroughly improved. This matter certainly cannot be engaged in a more important work. As things are conducted at fairs with fine stock, it is a farce, and a disgrace to justice, and sometimes, we think, villainy.—Iowa Register.

Meadows in Autumn.

Stock has now full possession of the meadows almost without exception. Many of our meadows are pastured too much. They do as hard, even this early in the season, as the pastures are.

Where the matter of fences and other growing crops is all right, the stock is usually turned in upon the meadow soon after the haying is done. This practice is peculiarly trying to the meadow. It has just lost its mulching covering in the haying, the season's growth taken off for hay, and the sun and drying winds have free access to its unprotected roots.

Nature seeks to provide for it in this emergency by throwing out a fresh growth. To his own loss man obstructs this natural process by turning his animals in to feed it down. A lot of hungry sheep or cattle are tramping to be sure, especially when the pasture is dry and short; but too many times a flow of the meadow should first be considered. The meadow should not be pastured to such a degree that the new growth has again covered the meadow, and the dry, hot weather is past. Better have an acre or two of sowed corn or other soiling crop to help out the pasture than to run the risk of ruining the meadow.

Meadows are too often kept closely picked down even to the time of snow-flying. Such a practice is sure to be injured to a great extent the succeeding winter. The ground is trodden hard, so that the upheaval of the frost will tear the roots of the grass apart and kill them. Many of these will be found to be winter killed, and the question is asked, "What shall we do for our meadows?" The answer should be, "Leave 'em alone" in autumn. Meadows will stand, perhaps, an amount of fall picking, but they should never be close picked. There is then nothing left to protect the grass roots. The fall and winter growth of grain itself after the frost is killed by frost may not offer any great protection, but it offers an obstruction to the snow, which it gathers and holds as a protecting mantle against the alternate freezing and thawing, so fatal to grass roots.—Indiana Farmer.

A New Swindle.

A well dressed, smooth talking young man, giving his name as Professor J. L. Hendricks, has been going around for some weeks past, and it is believed that he has obtained several hundred dollars by a very neat swindle. He goes with him a box of little tablets looking like red lozenges. One piece of this is lump sugar guaranteed to make a quart of oil last twelve nights and render it non-explosive. To prove this he puts a piece into a lamp, lights it, lets it burn to the wick and dropped it into the oil. The lamp did not explode. He did not say that it would not have exploded in this experiment if it had been filled with kerosene. When the price of the tablets was $1 a box. They were probably worth a cent. But the tempting part of the business was the story that the man intended to spend $100,000 in advertising this thing, and if the customer would pick out a piece of furniture, a chair, a sofa or a bedlet from the sample book exhibited, it would be sent free of charge. The only explanation was that the party should speak well of the tablet and recommend it to the neighbors. If anybody bought ten boxes of the lozenges at $1 a box, a handsome furniture would be sent free of charge. This bait took and everybody paid $1 for the tablets and picked out a chair or something to be sent on. Of course no furniture ever came, and it is unnecessary to say that the tablets are simply worthless.—Orange County Farmer.

The Boys.

When my boys got to be 14 years old I laid aside every week $1 for each of them to be considered as wages. When they wanted some new clothes I took them into town and let them pick out samples themselves and get just what they wanted. The money for the clothes came out of their wage money, and other expenses were figured in the same way. The plan worked well in every way. My boys got an idea of business that has stuck to them. Too many boys are just taught to lie and steal by their fathers. I know men who tell their boys they must not touch an apple, or a peach, or any other fruit. Who ever yet heard of a boy who could keep away from fruit when he really wanted it and it was right before him? I wouldn't give a cent for such a boy even if he could be found. A wise man will have a barrel of fruit opened and tell the boys to help themselves to what they want. If they do this there won't be any sneaking about to get an apple, or any trying to hide the fact after the apple has been taken. Be fair and honest with the boys if you want them to make men.—S. H. B. in Rural New Yorker.

Absorbents in Stables.

In hot weather the droppings of animals confined in stables ferment very quickly, and therefore absorbents are necessary, not only to save waste of fertilizers, but for the comfort and health of animals. Something is wanted, not merely to hold liquid excrement from waste, but to absorb its odors. Straw makes good bedding, but it is next to worthless for this purpose. Dry earth is a good absorbent, and it may be got anywhere on much traveled roads, and in the country from fields. When returned to the field, as it should be, the fertility of the earth is excellent fertiliser. A very thin covering of earth is enough, and the manure may be scraped in heaps so as to leave a smaller surface for drying. Plaster will answer the same purpose, but are not so good as dry earth.

When to Pick Pears.

It would seem that people who grow pears should by this time have learned when to pick them, but this is not the case with many. Every season, and already this season we have seen illustrations of the error, pears are allowed to ripen on the tree. When they have reached their full growth and will separate from the twig without breaking the stem, they are about ready to pick. Picked then and allowed to ripen in the house, and not from the light when it suits them, they will be at their best. If allowed to ripen on the tree they are sure to be gnally deficient in flavor and often rot at the center, while the exterior is still hard. Watch your pears and pick them in time.

Things to Do and to Know.

Plant shoots grafted upon wild plum stocks do well.

Why do not farmers send one of their own number to congress?

The common verdict is in favor of the Fulta wheat for seed.

The editor of the Orange County Farmer tries the tomatoes to pine and they grow six feet high.

A very successful western dairyman says he has only one ration for his cows, and that is corn-meal cake and bran.

Don't locate an apiary where the bees must travel eastward to get honey. This is on account of storms which come from the west.

Every farm should be supplied with a flock of geese. They are hardy and long lived, the best protection against hawks and a sure exterminator of insects.

The freight for shipping California fruit to Chicago is $450 a car load. Grain and all other farm and garden products in proportion. This explains why farming does not pay.

If farmers have safe storage for wheat and corn, and do not need to sell when the crops are harvested, they can gather their fall profits and sell at their leisure. Many are compelled to sell at once, and the middlemen get the profits. Let the farmer be independent and sell when he pleases.

The United States bureau of animal industry is under the charge of the commissioner of agriculture. He has recently promulgated a set of rules to prevent the spread of pleuro-pneumonia. Quarantine and slaughtering are the chief measures resorted to. Owners of cattle slaughtered by government will be paid for them.

Legislation in a Nutshell.

The Nebraska, Kansas, legislatures has declared all legislative measures as an appreciation, instead of a mitigating circumstance, when accompanying any crime or misdemeanor.—Chicago Times.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do.

Mr. W. Frost Green, Plainfield, N. J., June 23, '86.
Dr. Chas. Thiers,

Dear Sir—I have used my supplies of your Stomatine with a knowledge of its merits, and will say that it is the best article of the kind I have ever used, and I do not hesitate to recommend it to the public, but the best. I can safely say I have sold more of it than any other article I have ever handled in the same time, and I know of no person who has used it but what is loud in its praise. I am, yours truly,

WILLIAM M. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers,

My dear sir—I gladly avail myself of the opportunity to add my testimony to the many you have received in favor of your preparation called "Stomatine," a remedy for sore throat, mouth and tender gums. On the 4th of October, 1885, I was taken with a severe cold in the head, which settled in my throat and lungs, and I was confined to the house for two weeks. During that time I used a number of remedies, but the best I could get relief from was Stomatine, which I used as a gargle and mouth wash. I am satisfied that I have at least one year's time, and I am sure that I know of no other one that can produce it. Wishing you success, I remain, yours truly,

Mrs. E. A. Dougherty, Elmira, N. Y.

Dr. Thiers: Dear Sir—I have used your Stomatine for some time, and find it a very pleasant and effective remedy for the troubles for which you recommend it, and can cheerfully recommend it to any one troubled with sore throat.

WILLIAM M. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers,

Dear Sir—I must cheerfully bear out many in the testimonials you have received in favor of your Stomatine. I have used it for sore throat and gums, and it personally has been recommended to me in my experience and they all speak in the highest terms of it. Yours truly,

E. M. STELLE.

ARISTOCRATIC AND RESERVED LOOKING YOUNG CLUB MEMBERS.

An Illustration of the Astounding Airs Which Some of the Younger New Yorkers Put on When They Obtain Any Social Recognition.

A small club, of which I am a chance member, grew suddenly under the management of a lot of popular men, who had been taken into the organization, and moved into a new club-house with extensive surroundings. The event was celebrated by an entertainment, which began at 9 o'clock at night, and which consisted of recitations, music, stories, and speeches. The day of the great occasion I never saw worse, the previous night had been somewhat obstreperous and difficult to subdue, and I had just been back from a long walk at my summer club grounds at Staten Island, with a good-natured old rounder, who was one of the instructors who had charge of me. He has an interest in a steamship line, is easy-going and pleasant, an authority on club matters, and has the entree everywhere in New York. He called to see me the week before Thirty-fourth street, and ate until 9 o'clock, when we both thought of the club reception. We drifted up to the club-house and went in. There were 150 young men in the place, and all but ourselves were in evening dress. I don't think either one of us had ever seen a dinner coat in tweed suits, but then men don't care particularly about their attire in a club with which they have been familiar from its infancy. At all events we pushed our way into the rooms on the first floor.

A dozen pale faced, small-featured, and effeminate young men stood at the nightly and refused to make room. We looked about, and neither of us recognized an acquaintance within speaking distance. They were all fellow-members, but they were all a lot of the most aristocratic and reserved looking youngsters that I have ever seen, and it was evident that we had not created a good impression. One or two of the older club servants saw us, and hurried in with clerks, but they met with stubborn opposition from the dainty young men who had seated, as well as from those who stood in the way. I turned to the young man who stood next to me, and looked at him inquiringly. He wore a white waistcoat with gold buttons, two cat's-eye studs, a black tie, a well-fitting claw-hammer, wide suits which covered the sides of his trousers, bows on his boots, and pearl-colored gloves, with black stripes half an inch wide along the back of the hand. He was about six feet high, and presented a mean average girth of about ten inches. His face was decorated by an exceedingly sparse mustache, and his eyes were partially closed, as though he was very much bored with life. He must have been nearly 30 years old. After looking him over carefully, I ventured in a low, quiet and respectful tone, if the president of the club had spoken yet. The young man turned his head slightly, opened his eyes, examined my companion and myself with the utmost care, and then said: "Aw."

"How's that?" my friend said, sharply.

"Aw."

We both looked at him inquiringly, but he dropped his glass and deliberately turned a stiff back upon us. We were somewhat hurt and rescued by some friends farther away, but neither one of us forgot the haughty young man in evening dress.

WE SAW HIM AGAIN.

We were walking up town briskly, together, when we saw him again. His manner was the same, but he had lost the look of his reserved expression of the face, but all the glory of apparel had departed; his boots were worn over at the sides, he wore a shiny office-coat, and under both his arms he carried big rolls of cloth, which he was evidently taking from one importing-house to another. A great dyspepsia was depicted on his countenance, and his eyes were full of loathing and despair. He was walking along at a violent rate with his bundles of goods. We stopped him and begged a light from his cigarette. He handed it over hastily, in the most undignified manner, so as to hold one bale of goods on his knee while he removed the cigarette with his free hand, and each of us consumed as much time as to hold one bale of goods on his knee while he removed the cigarette with his free hand, and each of us consumed as much time as he could in order to prolong the interview. He was evidently in the employ of some New York men as ill-mannered and shoddy as true as far as it concerns a few thousand young strips, and who depend very largely for their reputation upon the fact that he was a 20 a week errand boy down town, lived in a cheap boarding house in Forty-first street, and supported by the kind remittances from his father, who keeps a small supply store in Hackettstown, N. J. His manner was somewhat changed when he saw a man of great elegance of attire, and he got into a club of some position, as many other men have, simply because he was unknown. The man of wealth who was in the height of the reception is as well known in clubdom that any man of acquaintance in New York must know who has been long in town. Yet he was insulted and insulted by an errand boy in a club which he had helped to organize, because he wore a tweed suit instead of conventional evening dress.

There seems to be a wide difference of opinion about evening dress outside of New York. In this city it is worn by any gentleman in which it is regarded here. A young man who is unknown and who has social aspirations would do well to wear evening dress in the afternoon, and he would do well not have to depend on their clothes for social recognition. Dress about in frock coats, and when the warmer months come on, in light suits, to entertainments of all sorts. If a man accompanies a lady or a party of ladies to the theatre he usually wears evening dress, but there is no penalty of unconsciously high social position go to the theatre, and even to the opera, when they feel inclined that way, in morning suits. Society! Hail in San Francisco Argonaut.

The Swing of Frisco's People.

The whirl and swing and rattle and rush of things here reminds one very much of the great Pacific metropolis—Chicago. Everybody is rush, rush, rush, and nervous excitement from early morn till close of day, and everybody ex spring the Chinese seems to be affected in this same way. Even the ladies catch the contagion, and they, too, go brushing along the streets as if they were sent for and "got there" on the under favor of the severest penalties. We must say we rather like the swing of the people to th a respect. Aside from the heavy Chinese element here, the people of the city seem to be truly American, and a brighter, cleaner-cut looking set of men we never before saw in the streets of any city in the globe. They are sharp and set down as a two edged sword.—San Francisco Chronicle Leader.

A CINCINNATI BOOM.

HER EXPOSITION AND HER NEW CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

A Procession Six Miles Long—The Exposition Now in Progress the Most Varied and Extensive Yet Held in Cincinnati—New Chamber of Commerce.

The thirteenth annual Cincinnati exposition is now in progress, and will continue till October. The opening is claimed to have been the finest show ever witnessed in the Queen City. From the size of the crowds that Cincinnatians made that day, it seemed as if for the time "Solid Cincinnati," had been changed into Chicago.

They had reason to tickle themselves and be happy. The procession inaugurating the exhibition was six miles long. They say it was looked at by 250,000 people, though per haps a little whisk at the mouse unlikely two in accepting this statement of a reporter in his enthusiasm. The greatest of Ohio's statesmen were present, and distinguished among them Senator Sherman, Governor Foraker and Congressman Butterworth. In the course of his happy, though brief, remarks, Mr. Butterworth made this striking observation: "The inventive genius of man is the divinity within him, and it never worked to the detriment of mankind."

EXPOSITION BUILDING.

The beautiful Cincinnati exposition is one that artists never tire of copying. Many fine views of it have been taken from different points. Its architecture is unique and unsurpassed.

So was the procession that inaugurated this great display of the victories of peace. The line of carriages was led by one containing Senator John Sherman and Governor Foraker. In some features the procession was a sort of carnival show, imitating the grotesque and the comic with solid business sprinkling. A group of bicyclists formed part of it, riding slowly and solemnly upon their shining wheels, among them was a tricycle containing a lady and gentleman.

The Zoological garden in Cincinnati had been levied on for a contribution gathered from many lands. A great elephant, a splendid lord of merry children in a cage upon his back, paced along snuffing the ground with his trunk, and wondering what it was all for. A group of big little Shetland ponies, ridden by gayly dressed, pretty children, followed the elephant. But the most of the Zoological contributions which attracted most attention were not animate. A great dyspeptic, the bottom of a light cage at the feet of its keeper, sometimes raising its paw toward him, playfully, as it was said. But what an awful row he might have raised, a countenance and a pantie, with one little stroke of that paw. Spectators looked at him with great interest, as they were relieved when he had passed. He was like a ghost story, intensely fascinating just because he was a little scary.

The floral show this year, it is believed, will be surpassing. It must be remembered that Cincinnati set the fashion of industrial expositions in America. The first one was held in 1870, in an unpainted, barnlike, wooden structure. The shed was temporary, and was soon pulled down. Unplaned board walls made the background for the light of display which the spectators looked at that year. These unpainted barns were thought good enough for expositions in those days all over the country. We have changed our ideas since then.

Special attractions for various days of the great show in the programme for expositions in recent years. Interest had quite died out in viewing, year after year, the same industrial products, arranged in the same order. Horse exhibitions, however, are a thing of the last. The modern exposition is more like an entertainment than a fair. Cincinnati has a very full list of the special attractions for different days.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Cincinnati seems to be having a boom in a general way this year. A new bridge and elevated railway across the Ohio is one temptation, to cost $10,000,000, making the fourth bridge over the river here. The new structure will have an elevated railway along with its footpath and carriage way.

The chamber of commerce building now being rapidly completed, is seen in the illustration. It will cost $600,000. Money is plentiful for public uses in Cincinnati. That is more than can be said of most cities. The chamber of commerce building will be a handsome and substantial structure. It is at the corner of Fourth and Race streets, upon the site of the old postoffice. It is hoped and believed that it will be genuinely fireproof and not rentable.

One of the chief beauties about the new edifice in the eyes of Cincinnatians is that it will be paid for "spot cash" when done, with the exception of a comparatively small sum. There will be offices and rooms to rent in it from which an income of $30,000 a year will be had. Times have been supposed to be hard since 1873, yet the rent roll of offices in certain lines has increased in Cincinnati some 700 per cent.

A Professional Beauty Craze.

Washington is threatened with a professional beauty craze during the coming winter. Several of the Republican senators' wives are sure they know one or two young women possessing charms of face and figure quite equal to those of Mrs. Cleveland, and they propose to invite their beauties to visit Washington during the next session, and eclipse the White House soldiers.—Washington Letter.

AN AMATEUR VAGRANT.

A MENDICANT'S ADVENTURES IN THE STREETS OF NEW YORK.

Advice from an Old Stager—Careless Generosity of New Yorkers—Knowledge of Human Nature—Filthy Pens Where Men Sleep—Needed Sanitation.

The "make-up" for this exercise was obtained some little difficulty at first. I had never encountered any beggars' fashion plates, but understood in a general way that they were quite destitute. The ragged parts of these old suits belonging to three different individuals, were brought into competition, and surrounded by a halo that had been obtained from various spittoons from the Fourth ward. The variety and historic interest of this combination impressed even my fellow-tramps.

I made my public appearance as a beggar on Twenty-third street. The thoroughfares and Fourteenth street are the most unpromising parts of the city for this sort of work, and Twenty-third street is the most generous city. There are certain choice corners on these streets in special favor. A sort of proprietary claim on them has been built up by some of the veterans, and the beggar who persistently intrudes on this territory can never expect to enjoy again the full confidence and esteem of his brethren. I had always seemed to me that beggars upon the stage at least were a well-fed and jovial set, and with this pleasant view of my new profession I lighted an after-dinner cigar and strolled alone to Madison square. Several unpublished scenes from the inside life of the elevated road station at Sixth avenue, and gave me a cold stare as we met. I formed a hasty resolve "to strike" them all for a quarter, and then I passed them contemptuously without waiting to hear my story. This rendered it a little harder to approach the next man. He was dressed in the latest cut-aways. Edging up to him in the most approved mendicant manner and throwing all the pathetic appeal at command into my voice I staggered the object of my advancing a poor unfortunate a dime. He looked me over critically a moment and then, pointing to the cigar unconsciously held in my outstretched hand, he mildly observed:

ADVICE FROM A VETERAN.

"Young man, if you are to make a success at it, begging will abstain from smoking Havanas during the business hours." Then he walked away. The point seemed to be well taken, and I was really something inconsistent between smoking and begging at the same time. The gruff old gentleman who was next solicited said that he was astonished at such an exhibition of cheek on the part of such an evidently disreputable character, and declared in no uncertain tones that he would have me arrested if I didn't "move lively." After several other attempts it grew apparent that the path even of an amateur beggar was not strewn with roses, and I gave it up.

But these rebuffs were largely due to my being a novice. A veteran at the business, who was playing his trade in the vicinity, was friendly enough to afford me some points as we lounged on the seats in the square. "Now, young fellar," he said, condescendingly, "you don't understand the biz. Us sidewalk gents must know human nature. I could a told yer none of them coves would give yer a cent. Yer must spot the right sort of a mug. Don't work the prim, respectable sort of people. Most they'll ever shell out 'is a lot of advice. Work the jays for it. They're good fer a dime every time. Sometimes, when they're got pretty women on their arms, they'll set out up big. Don't go to no great extra mean. But that's uncertain. Always strike actors and actresses. They rarely give yer the cold shake. Then yer want ter git ter know people and keep a list of 'em. I've got a list of 100 men who come through the square every night. I'm pretty sure to get a quarter out of any of 'em. Got one Wall street chap here who hands out 50 cents regular every time. But I'm square with him. Won't like to crowd my friends, yer know."

LOOKING FOR LODGINGS.

I could not serve myself to do any more direct begging, though doubtless by following the suggestion more in the spirit some money might have been solicited with success. What chiefly surprised me during my ramble about the city that evening was the readiness with which people offered money that was not solicited at all. Several times I was startled to see a policeman on the corner what could be done in the way of lodging for a man without a penny, some young fellow standing near by took a deep interest in the question, and I got no lie. The policemen were kind and courteous without exception. They invariably said they would provide for me, and I was then tense if nothing better could be found.

While in the vicinity of the imposing structure of the Young Men's Christian association building I was struck by the accuracy of that organization to deal with destitute cases. The assistant secretary, after hearing my story, told me to come and get ten cents from his private purse, directing me where good lodging for that sum could be found and promising to assist me in securing work if I would come around again in the morning. In the presence of such ready and practical charity a twinge of conscience that I was playing a false part became unavoidable. So much money indeed was forced upon me during the evening by the charitably inclined, when informed of my destitute condition, that I grew to dread to gain a penniless status I was obliged to hand it over to some more genuine beggar. It would not have been of course been since reimbursed.

But where to lodge for the night was a puzzling question. It is one there is not a free bed to be had in the whole of this great city, despite its innumerable charitable institutions. Many of the police stations furnish beds in the prisoners' cells rooms, but the bedding consists of plank planks. I looked into several of them. A dozen or two extremely dirty men were stretched out on the floor of each cell, packed closely and compactly against the walls in very promiscuous fashion. They looked like pigs in the pen. The air was rank and fetid, and it was impossible to stand this even for the sake of "experience."—New York World.

Bulletin of News from America.

The following was bulletined in Holland as a synopsis of the news of America, April 14: "New York, April 13.—General railroad strike throughout the country. Riots in New York and St. Louis. Destruction by dynamite of great Milwaukee breweries. Marriage of President Cleveland to Miss Frances, of Baltimore. Victory gains along the coast. Angry debate on silver question in the house. Members come to blows".—Chicago Herald.

INTERNATIONAL YACHTING.

The Steps by Which the Modern Yacht Has Developed.

Now that the American type of yacht has proved again the fastest afloat, it is interesting to note the stages by which this degree of perfection has been reached. When racing vessels were first built is unknown. But that such were in use by the northern nations of Europe is well attested. The sturdy old Norse chieftains were so proud of their boats they had inscribed on the prows of them. Many of their graves have been unearthed with the hulls of their vessels in sufficient preservation to show that in shape they were as beautiful and perfect as anything we produce to-day for propelling with oars. When the Phœnicians and Arabians were contending for the India trade a model of sailing ship was developed which was strikingly similar to the old-time clipper ships, which came after. The fleetness of these latter sailers, was sacrificed to the requirements of carrying.

The first yacht club on record was the Royal Cork Yacht club, organized in 1720. It demonstrated the necessity for speed of sharp bows and long, superbowed lines, and the bulging hulls that were common up to that time. Their yachts were richly carved and gilded. The next heard of the British yacht clubs they learned a lot of lines from fleet vessels was from the French smugglers, whose vessels could outsail the government vessels in every time.

The first international yacht race of which we have any record was sailed at Bermuda in 1849, between the English cutter Pearl and the American yacht Brenda. The Brenda was victorious by a large margin. The model of the yacht America in the race around the Isle of Wight, in 1851, in which she distanced the sixteen competing yachts, that astounded the nations. Its possible improvement in yacht modeling, and brought about a revolution in yacht building.

THE GALATEA AND MAYFLOWER.

The above sketch of the Galatea and Mayflower as they appeared in running before the wind. The Galatea is considered a yacht of excellent idea of the number of sails that are crowded on to a modern yacht, and also the beautiful curves the outlines of these sails assume when filled by the wind. It is in the shape, size and management of sails that the greatest improvements have been made of late years. In this both countries have made great strides. But it is the use of the Yankee centerboard that American yachts owe most of their superiority, and it is only by adopting it that crafts of other countries may successfully compete for the international challenge cup.

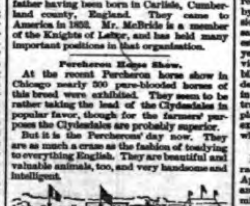
tive of the Miners' union. He progressed until, in 1883, he was elected president of the Ohio Miners' association, the strongest labor union in the state. He was reelected by unanimous vote in 1883, 1884 and again in 1885. He was defeated for representative in 1881 by only sixty-three votes. He was renominated and elected in 1883 by a majority of 1,500. Faithful to the interests of his brethren, he at once took a stand in the legislature as the champion of labor. He joined other workingmen in the assembly in the perfecting legislation which has given to the laboring classes more benefits than any legislature has ever given. During the terrible strike in the Hocking valley John McBride was the leader of the men in the state of Ohio. As president of the Miners' association he was kept busy night and day, and was prostrated by the strain. He went into death. He is made of good material, however, and has since recovered. He comes of good Irish-English stock, his mother and father having been born in Castle, Ireland, land county, England. They came to America in 1832. Mr. McBride is a member of the Knights of Labor, and has held many important positions in that organization.

Percheron Horse Show.

At the Percheron horse show in Chicago nearly 300 pure-blooded horses of this breed were exhibited. They seem to be a perfect horse for draft, and the Clydesdales in popular favor, though for the farmer's purposes the Clydesdales are probably superior.

But it is the Percherons' day now. They are in such demand as the Romans were of tending to everything English. They are beautiful and valuable animals, too, and very handsome and intelligent.



HORSE FAIR BUILDING.

The recent exhibition was probably the most important horse fair ever held in America. Canada and the United States were ably represented. The jury of awards was appointed by the ministers of agriculture of France, Canada, and the United States.

About $7,000 in money was given as prizes, and many gold, silver and bronze medals were distributed. The fact was plainly brought to light that France possesses some of the finest horses in the world.

The Percheron cross is as pronounced elsewhere as in America. The animals flourish so as fast by European nations, by Egypt, South America, and even Japan that it is impossible to supply the full demand for them in France. There are now some fifty Percheron breeders in Canada and the United States.

A Mummy in a Cellar.

M. Brouardel has reported to the Paris Academy of Medicine upon the mummification of the body of a young woman which was found in a heap of straw in a cellar. The cellar had not been opened for eight months. The body was in a remarkable state of preservation. The embalmment was not due, according to MM. Brouardel and Magalit, to myriads of acari of various kinds, whose eggs, were embedded in the tissues.—Chicago News.

A SUMMER DAY IN LONDON.

GOSSIP ABOUT THE MEN AND WOMEN OF ENGLAND.

Bad Dressing of English Ladies—Charming Scenes by Gas Light—Triumphs of Art—Severe Criticism—Magnificent Rooms of Men.

I feel convinced that I am the only truthful American who has ever been abroad, and, in this vast city of London, have passed ten days in a state of unalloyed happiness. I have learned about by the wanton duplicity of a previously traveled acquaintance. How any one short of an imbecile could consider London undesirable, even to the intelligent consumptive, though one can easily understand that the average tourist, fired with the noble determination of "doing" the continent in two months, should find the vastness of London, whose every inch of ground is saturated with the history, poetry and romance of the Anglo-Saxon race, quite divert his feeble mind with the frivolity of modern Paris. Neither high nor low is to be sent of the traditional soot and filth of much maligned London—an impossible, this is the cheapest, brightest place imaginable, but with a sharp, clear wind that bloweth where it listeth after the same uncomfortable, unexpected manner as the Gulf Stream governs the climate. The oft repeated assertion that one does not mend clothes, and plenty of them too, while traveling abroad probably sprung from the envious, spiteful souls of those who considered a visit, self there without them and has taken this low revenge on her sex. Never has the vital necessity of beautiful dinner gowns been so keenly impressed upon my mind as during my visit. All one hears, reads and laughs at of badly dressed English women may be accepted blindly, without even the proverbial grain of salt, as they are the considered while taking their walks abroad.

DRESS OF ENGLISH WOMEN.

In truth, they are all so inconsistent in the matter of attire as to defy both soil and clime that, even at this chilly season, in an atmosphere which causes a civilized American to shiver under a warm wool costume, the English girls and matrons appear on the streets, the hotels, the galleries, the parks, the restaurants, in cambrics, linens and muslin pinks, blues and whites, wearing them, too, with a complacent self-satisfaction that, in view of their absurdity, is perfectly maddening. The other day at the Royal academy, at the exhibition of the summer's work and century, which are exquisitely beautiful and far more entertaining than the "antiques" at the National gallery, which, entre nous, simply bore one to extinction, I was more amused in diverted by the bad dressing that the pictures became a secondary consideration. The day was thick, rainy and hopelessly dark, yet a lot of pretty strippers on which young persons appeared in delicate lawns and light and odious silks, to which an American would unhesitatingly prefer death as the alternative.

TRIUMPHS OF ART.

But however hideous on the street, the English women at the dinner table is superb. She is fit to sit with the fairies, with the gods and the candelabra. She is a glorious creature, who blooms out at eventide like the flowers and Miss that toil not, and she sheds a perfect radiance about her in a rose colored light which is more than startling to the American eyes, accustomed to the somber silks in which our country women grace the festive public board. Even the dining rooms are tinted, brilliantly illuminated, elaborately decorated with flowers, the table adorned by hundreds of wax tapers, fruit and ornaments of gilt and bronze, and when the women in their full dress fullest of full dress are eating their separate dinners as calmly as if in the seclusion of private life, it is a sight to gladden before its taste whether it is entirely good form to appear thus decollette in a public dining room, to which any decently dressed individual may be admitted on payment of the price of a dinner, which is $1.50, but every one does it here with a result that is certainly very decorative, gay and nice to look upon. They rise from the table at 10 o'clock and go to opera and small balls (though I believe a different, a more elaborate and a more decollette attire is donned for large balls) and proceed to show off the results of their wardrobes, which, pure and shining, well dressed heads over some other household for the rest of the evening.

CHARMS AND DEFECTS.

What constitutes an English woman here. Marvels of marble beauty, white, firm, satin-skinned and with full, round throats that are beautifully sensual. But anything worse than their complexions cannot easily be imagined. Except when very young the handsomest of those women are disfigured by a coarse, red skin, like the ruddy cheek of a British tar, and, rising above the low dress neck, produces the disagreeable effect of an ugly mask. And their arms! Oh! their arms! Where are they to get such huge, disjointed, gaunt, uncouth, masculine appendages is food for deep reflection. They apparently have no connection with the rest of the body. They give one the impression that they are some thing abnormal and extra, which have been hung on as monocentral experiment, and yet the first appearance of these arms is red, raked, hideous, their ugliness accentuated by cumbrous bracelets on all possible occasions, and that with an unutterable, adorable song Dodd which half suggests their unspeakable charm. The British matron of advancing years is certainly not beautiful to outward view, though adorned with a stern respectability which suggests that she, too, is devoted to "evening dress" and adheres to it, in spite of protesting nature, as one of the truthful virtues of economy, and each evening places her mature and complexioned charms on exhibition, with a faithful devotion to duty which is worthy a better cause.

PRAISE OF ENGLISHMEN.

But the men are simply a magnificent race of creatures, a lot of heroic, herculean Apollos, with a leggth, a breadth, a thickness and a strength which dazzle the woman fresh from the effete civilization of Europe or America. They are huge, high colored and handsome—even though rake and reprobate are written on each line of their face, as indeed it ever is on the face of a man who is a prodigious lot of them! They swarm everywhere—gigant, dominant, powerful, fascinating—in a splendor of attire which may be likened only to the rising sun. Perhaps, after all, as a feminine tribute to their strength and beauty, it is not so wonderful that our native born American citizen should singe his brain with Anglomania and our proud American maidens forget their independence and seek the matrimonial yoke on British shores. —Letter in London Letter in San Francisco Chronicle.

A RUSSIAN VILLAGE.

A MENNONITE SETTLEMENT ON THE PRAIRIES OF DAKOTA.

Interviewing Some of the Inhabitants. The Hour of the House in Front—Making Cigarettes—How Walls are Built. An Evening Meal.

When Peter the Great, czar of Russia, began to lay the foundation of the present powerful autocracy he invited the more civilized and ingenuity of Germany and France to settle on the vacant lands of his vast dominions, guaranteeing to all who would do so certain privileges, among others an entire exemption from military duty. Of this liberal offer large numbers of the people of Germany and France took advantage, and remained in northern Russia, settling in the provinces bordering upon the Black sea, where they founded towns and villages, and enjoyed the benefits of a free government. The present rulers of Russia set aside many of the grants of Peter the Great, and required a certain amount of military duty performed by the subjects of the czar, irrespective of all former exemptions, and to avoid this duty many of the descendants of these German settlers left Russia, coming to the United States. It is of these immigrants that the village population of Menno and nearly all the surrounding farming community is composed, and here I had come in my ramblings.

I believed to inquire into the reasons for such wholesale migration from Russia, I started out from my lodging house one morning for an interview some of the inhabitants. At last I found some one who spoke enough English to understand me and tell me what I wanted to know. After an hour's talk with this man I went on my way about town, stopping here and there to ask a question, sometimes to be answered, oftener to see the inimitable shrug of the shoulders and hear the "Nichweiss" of a RUSSIAN VILLAGE.

Travelers in the countries of Europe have often described the customs and habits as well as the scenery, and here we have it in all its oddity and originality, for here we have a Russian village reproduced in all its strangeness. The women wear the little square shawls folded and tied over their heads, some of these head shawls being richly embroidered, while others are simply plain cotton of different colors, and, behind all the edges, to be worn while working with the men in the fields, as all women do here. In building their houses the rear of the house is placed fronting the street—if you will allow the Irishism—and the only entrance is by going around to the back part. Only the plain, blank siding of the gable faces the street, without window or door.

Here everybody smokes cigarettes except the women (they are not considered anybody here). Stop to converse with one of the men and he'll begin hunting for his cigarette paper and tobacco pouch, often very fine ones of silk embroidery. It is wonderful what skill is acquired by constant practice. One of the Mennonite will detach a small quantity of a little tobacco on it, make a turn with his fingers, and lo! it's done. I have tried it many times but always failed, either tearing the thin paper or spilling the tobacco. It is a great, coarse-fisted farm laborer will twist one as daintily and as easily as a professional.

One day while out among these I was invited by Dr. W. to ride with him, about ten miles to visit some patients to whom he had been called; and as I wanted to see their mode of life more closely, and the doctor spoke the language, I very gladly availed myself of the opportunity thus offered. We drove over a very fine country for some miles, past groves of cottonwoods and maples that had been set out in regular rows by owners of farms, and here I noticed what seems a very peculiar way of building their houses far from where they had planted their groves and shade trees, the houses standing out in the open glare of the sun, far from any sheltering shade. Houses here are built of mud, a sort of clay mixed with straw. They first lay a very loose, rough wall of small bowlders, cementing them together with clay. They then plaster this wall thickly over with the mixed clay, and allow it to stand until thoroughly dried by the sun, when it is again plastered with clay. This is repeated a number of times, the last coat being given a thorough whitewash of lime. The walls, when thus finished, are nearly two feet thick, and enclose about as damp, ill-ventilated and unhealthy a habitation as can be found or constructed.

AN EVENING MEAL.

Arriving at our destination about the time for the evening meal, we were invited to take supper before returning. The doctor, being acquainted, at first hesitated, but on my expressing a desire to stay and see what we would get, accepted the invitation, and we entered the house, stooping and walking through a shed-like structure into the kitchen, which also served as dining room, sitting room, as well as nursery. Phew! On entering the room we were met by the nauseous and most fearful odor arising from the compost which was used for fuel. After sitting a few moments, my olfactories becoming somewhat accustomed to the smell and my eyes accustomed to the darkness, relieved only by the faintly straggling light that forced its way in through two small narrow windows set deep in the thick mud walls, I found time to take a survey of the inside of the room, and this is what I saw: A small square room, with a large bed in one corner, a table in the other, while at one side was an oven made of clay and covered with sheet iron, upon which the woman was cooking the supper of which we were called to partake.

Perhaps this may reach the eye of some one anxious to learn the secret of tastily spreading an evening repast, so I will attempt to tell you how they had put upon the table for us. The doctor said was far better than the average, or to be gotten in the neighborhood. In the center of the table was placed a large bowl, containing a mush of milk and some of the ingredients were prunes, dried apples, flour and water, onions and milk. In addition to the soup a huge loaf of dark looking rye and wheat flour bread was placed on the table, and we were asked to "eas," which we proceeded to do in as hearty a manner as the circumstances would allow. Coffee was served in glass tumblers, and drunk without sugar, though we did have milk. I ate my dish of soup to convince the doctor that I was accustomed to good fare like this, while he advised us to "ourvince me that I filled to live among the people here, and I think we both tried to eat a false part.—Dakota Cor. Scented Eggs in Scotland.

In a country where laundry requires to be mentioned eggs are sometimes scented on Sunday in the time to guests who, on account of a certain sort of parliament, dare not call for a "drink." The eggs are full of whisky, the meat having been blown out and the whisky put in its place. Then the egg is hermetically sealed and ready for use. A Scotchman never tires of eggs.—Chicago Herald.

THE WORLD'S PROGRESS.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPHIC ALPHABET ILLUSTRATED.

How Ocean Telegraphic Messages are Read—You Can Not Drown if You Wear a New Kind of Clothing Made in London—Tuscia Trees.

On the Mojave tract, east of southern California, one of the most grass-strange, weird growths, the veritable reptiles of the vegetable world in the remarkable shapes they assume. Nature seems to have exhausted all her ingenuity in finding new forms and positions for the trees growing in the sand, as dry as the utter absence of moisture can make it. They rise from ten to thirty feet in a single stalk, and then branch off in club-like limbs, attaining every possible shape. Some appear like strange insects of gigantic stature, sprawling over the plain; others, and most notable, like the thick, branching spines representing the charred wick; others again look like weird hands extending from the ground, as if grasping or groping after the unattainable.

YUCCA TREE.

One of the most remarkable positions is shown in the accompanying cut, which shows a yucca of extreme size, top of which, so heavy for the trunk, has bent over, descended and attached itself to the earth again, forming a complete arch, under which four or five persons could pass abreast, and twelve or fifteen feet at the highest point. From near the top of this singular arch springs a single limb, presenting the appearance of a tree of a totally different kind, growing from the bent arch curved trunk. Our engraving is taken from a photograph of the tree.—Scientific American.

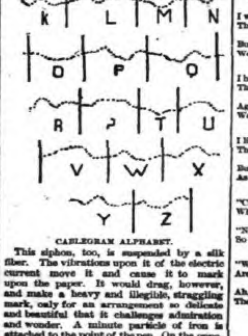
How Cablegrams are Read.

Few persons have any idea of the difficulty of reading the telegrams many that come under the ocean. Ordinary telegraphing is inadequate here.

Until recently, all letters were made by fleshes of light from a mirror, suspended by the finest possible silk fiber. At best there was a good deal of guessing.

Recently an Englishman, Sir William Thompson, has invented a method which does away with the uncertain mirror flash.

The new plan is called the siphon method. The tiniest of all possible glass siphon pens, "no thicker than the hair of a man's head," is filled with blue ink. The point of it touches a steadily moving paper tape, and makes letters, one after the other.



CABLEGRAM ALPHABET.

This siphon, too, is suspended by a silk fiber. The vibrations upon it of the electric current move it and cause it to mark upon the paper. It would drag, however, and make a heavy and illegible straggling mark, only for an arrangement so delicate and beautiful that it challenges admiration and wonder. A minute particle of iron is attached to the point of the pen. On the opposite side of the paper tape, at the back, is an electro-magnet which is magnetized and demagnetized about ninety times a minute. Thus the tiny siphon pen catches on and lets go of the paper at the rate of ninety times a minute. The effect is practically that of a continued line, which moves in curves and angles, as you see in the picture, a line of different curves and angles for each letter.

Painting Microscopic Slides.

The dust from the wings of butterflies was picked up and placed in position by Henry Dalton, of London, who is now dead. Dalton, with the aid of a microscope, picked up one particle of the dust at a time on the end of a hair, and adjusted it to the slide in such a manner that, when his task was finished, the bouquet assumed its present beautiful and perfect form. Although Dalton was well paid, he excelled most of his imitators in his peculiar line of art. Among microscopists at this writer is the highest in the world. Light up those eyes with tender grace. He shields me from the storms of life;
I bring him offerings pure and sweet—
A wreath of flowers for his head.
He stands unmoved by praise or blame,
Till from my heart the wound complete
He frees for labor, art and fame,
Nor heeds the offerings at his feet.

I'd give the world were I the Sun
To him to soothe that haughty face,
And see what lightning-like delight
Light up those eyes with tender grace.
I smile in vain at his cold heart,
He shields me from the storms of life;
And when the sun its bows has kissed
It smiles with kindly sunshine!
The fertile valley lies below
Clothed in her shimmering robe of green,
And smiles up to the gray, cold rock
That guards, but stoops not to caress.

I know a face, a kingly face,
That towers high above my own—
An artist's eye, a form of grace,
A poet's mind—a head of stone!
He stands unmoved by praise or blame,
Till from my heart the wound complete
He frees for labor, art and fame,
Nor heeds the offerings at his feet.

Gravitation in Different Planets.

It is the attraction of gravitation that makes our weight. An inhabitant of the moon could jump to an amazing height in the moon because its mass is so much smaller than that of the earth. This same effect would be produced upon all other bodies. Horses would travel at a greatly increased speed, and, if the rider was thrown, the consequence of his fall would be much less serious; the elephant would become as light footed as a deer; a stone from the hand of a careless boy might fall in an adjoining town before accomplishing its mission of destruction; armies could engage in battle at great distances from each other; and nearly every kind of labor would be lightened, from the diminished weight of tools and materials.

In other planets an opposite state of affairs would ensue. Jupiter, Saturn, or the Sun, with their immense masses, would exert so strong an attraction that we should scarcely be able to move, and then only by crawling slowly as if our feet were weighted with lead. It is possible, even, that the larger animals would be crushed by their own weight; and, if there were any inhabitants, their vitality is a sufficient one against the frenzy that the sun and larger planets are inhabited by beings like ourselves.

Unsinkable Clothing.

The new material for unsinkable appareal has been further tested, with success, in London. This material is composed of threads of cork interwoven with cotton, silk or woolen, machinery which slices the cork to the required thickness forming part of the invention. The garments which are made in this manner have the same appearance as ordinary clothing, and possess remarkable buoyancy in water.

Good for Brass Castings.

It is said that if brass founders will stir powdered glass into the molten metal in the crucibles, that sound, nice castings will be the result. The claim is that the glass flux will collect all impurities, which rise to the top and can be skimmed off, while otherwise the same impurities would be poured into the mould with the metal.

Bricks Colored in the Glaze.

A process has been invented the object of which is to treat bricks or building blocks to solutions of coloring matter and glaze, whereby their appearance for building purposes will be enhanced, and a structure be ornamented by allowing a choice of colors and shades at the will of the builder.

THE CHILDREN ARE AT PLAY.

I watched the look of strange surprise
That came so swiftly to her eyes;
For mine were full of tears unshed—
But all the hurry ebb and flow,
Were these the simple words she spoke:
"The children are at play," she said.

I heard the words as those who hear
The voice of reveler and to cheer;
And hearts that ask for rest instead.
Again the silence full of gloom
Was broken in our lonely room—
"The children are at play," she said.

I lifted up my eyes to see
The children playing merrily,
Then sadly turned away my head;
But heart still aching, ached deep;
Dark, stern, magnificent! It stands
And guards the hamlet at its feet,
Though cloud, and storm, and howling mist,
Unmoved by tempest, storm, or time;
And when the sun its bows has kissed
It smiles with kindly sunshine!

And smiles up to the gray, cold rock
That guards, but stoops not to caress.

AN OLD WAR HORSE.

The Democratic Nominee for Governor of Texas.

LAWRENCE SULLIVAN ROSS.

Mr. Ross, who was recently nominated unanimously by the Texas Democratic state convention for governor, was born in Bentonsport, Ind., Sept. 29, 1826, but spent his boyhood and early manhood in Texas. At the age of 19 he entered the Florence Wesleyan college, in north Alabama, where he graduated with honors in the class of 1856. During his vacation he conceived the idea of going to the frontier on an expedition against the Comanche Indians who were committing numerous atrocities on the settlers. After reaching the scene of their operations, his regiment had a bloody engagement with the Indians, which resulted in their defeat. An incident of this expedition was the rescue of a little white girl who had been for some time held in captivity by the Indians, by Lieutenant Sullivan Ross. Ross charged himself with rearing and educating the orphan, sending her to a female seminary, where she proved herself in every way worthy of the care bestowed upon her. She is now the wife of a wealthy merchant of Los Angeles, Cal. While Mr. Ross was victorious in the engagement with the Indians he did not come out unscathed, being badly wounded in the arm by a rifle ball, and also in the side. In 1859 he was placed in command of the frontier by Governor Sam Houston, with the duty before him of clearing the country. Having established his post, he proceeded on another expedition against the Comanches, and secured a complete victory. At the breaking out of the late civil war Gen. Ross resigned his commission and entered the company of Capt. Peter F. Ross as a private. His participation in this engagement, had several horses shot under him, and on the close of the war a brigadier general. In 1873 he was elected sheriff of McLennan county; in 1875 he was elected to the constitutional convention, and in 1881 he was elected to the state senate.

A BASEBALL TROPHY

For the Winning Team of the American Association.

The baseball trophy, for the winning team of the American association, was ordered by Erastus Wiman for two purposes; first, to prove that he had no ill feeling toward the members of the association because of the bitter legal fight which he encountered on entering it, and second, as a stimulant to extraordinary exertion for the various clubs, in order that they might possess so valuable a work of art. It was, of course, expected by AMERICAN ASSOCIATION TROPHY.

Mr. Wiman that his own club, the Metropolitans, would have a prospect of winning and retaining the trophy, but their misfortunes and poor play have long ago caused him to abandon that hope. Nevertheless, he fully expects in subsequent years to be the holder of the trophy, simply because of his made up his mind to have the best club that money, ability and an attractive location can secure. New York is the greatest baseball city in the world. There are more people of leisure in that city than in any other on the continent, and the growing interest in baseball constantly enlarges the area from which sufficiences and good matches can be drawn from. For this reason Mr. Wiman has provided a baseball ground on Staten Island that is equal to anything of the kind anywhere. It is only a ferry ride from New York city, and the multitudes that have visited it this season attest the far-sightedness of Mr. Wiman in preparing for them. Mr. Wiman is an enthusiastic lover of out door sports. This trophy which he presents is worth $1,000.

EXPLODING TORPEDOES.

One of the Latest Devices for Protecting a Harbor.

At the recent naval operations at Milford Haven, England, the chief interest centered in torpedo warfare.

EXPLODING A SUBMARINE MINE.

A novelty in harbor defense is shown in the illustration. The officer is standing in a bomb-proof shelter on shore watching the movements of a hostile fleet at the harbor through a telescope. This telescope is so adjusted that on moving it to follow the course of the vessel a metallic pencil is moved over a sheet of paper in a corresponding with the path of the vessel. As the vessel approaches a submarine mine it is shown on the glass by the pencil moving toward a series of metallic buttons inserted in the glass and corresponding with the location of the different mines in the harbor. When the vessel is immediately over a mine the pencil and a button come in contact and the mine is exploded. The recent trials of this system proved that as it performed the work automatically there was no danger of a premature or faulty explosion through the nervousness of the operator.

SPINNERS AND WEAVERS.

ALL THE WAY FROM THE PICKER TO THE CLOTH-ROOM.

Work in a Lowell Mill—A Peep at the Processes of Manufacturing Cotton Goods—Combing, Drawing and Spinning Out the Raw Material—Weaving.

The writer promised himself at the office of one of the Lowell mills and requested the privilege of inspecting the processes of manufacturing cotton goods. The permission was finally given, the only condition being that the mill should not be named.

"To begin with the first process," said the agent, who kindly accompanied the writer through the mill, "we take it in the picking-room. The picker is as you see, something like a hay mower, only instead of cutting the cotton it simply beats it by means of knives set in a cylinder which revolves. The object is to open the matted lumps of cotton and clean the fibers."

This was the "opener picker." Each machine was tended by a man, generally a French-Canadian, whose duty it is to hook up the cotton, which comes in firmly packed bales, and throw pieces of convenient size upon the endless apron leading into the machine. The cotton comes out of the opener picker in a fleecy sheet of uniform thickness, and is wound upon a roller. The picker beater revolves from 1,300 to 1,600 revolutions per minute in performing its work, and the fan rather more.

COMBING OUT, DRAWN OUT, SPUN OUT.

From the finisher picker the "laps" or rolls of partially cleaned cotton are taken to the "breaker card." This consists of a large cylinder with teeth upon it, under three feet in diameter, revolving at the rate of 125 times per minute, and coming almost in contact with another system of smaller cards. The slightest of the cotton is still further clean the cotton, and to "comb out" the fiber and remove any knots or lumps which may have remained in it. After passing over the large cylinder of the machine the fibers are taken in a fine fleece by the teeth of a smaller cylinder called a "doffer," and from the doffer this fleece is taken by the "doffer comb" and formed by means of a tin funnel into an endless ribbon.

After going through the breaker card the lap of cotton is taken to the "finisher card," which finishes the process of cleansing. The cotton comes out in a light and fleecy ribbon as before, and these ribbons from many cards are united at the "railway head." By means of the "drawing frame" and the "finisher drawing frame" a number are united and at the same time drawn out at greater length, by that means uniformity is secured, lapping in the ribbon of cotton. Following the drawing frames come the "speeders," coarse and fine, by means of which, successively, this process of drawing out and twisting is continued.

Two machines for spinning are employed—the "ring frame" and the "mule." The ring-frame is from twenty to twenty-five long, and contains from 250 to 275 spindles, according to circumstances and the nature of the work required. The spindles are placed at the sides, and the bobbins, from which the roving is drawn, are placed upon a rack above. The spindles make each from 6,000 to 8,000 revolutions per minute.

Samuel Crompton, an Englishman, was the inventor of the mule. His invention consists in a railway movement by which the roving, or incipient thread, is alternately spun and wound upon the spindle. As the mule runs out the roving is drawn out and twisted into thread, and then as it runs back the continued revolution of the spindles winds up the thread. Each mule originally carried only about twenty-five spindles, but now they are sometimes built to carry over 2,000, and are still operated by a single spinner. Each spindle makes from 4,500 to 5,000 revolutions per minute.

"It's as good as a walking match," said a mule spinner, who happened to be idle for a moment. "You watch that man running that mule for a while, and see how far he will walk. The mule runs out five feet seven inches, and is about 100 feet long. It makes about five trips in and out every minute; and he has to follow it pretty much all the time. With all his walking, up and down and back and forth, for ten hours a day, it amounts to about twenty-five miles.

MADE READY FOR THE SHUTTLES.

The yarn which is spun on the mules is wound on the "cops," and is ready for the shuttles of the looms. The yarn which is for the ring frames, which is used for the warp, has a number of processes yet to pass through. First it is taken to the "spoolling" room, where by means of machinery the yarn is transferred from several bobbins to one spool. The spools are then taken to the "warper," a machine operated by a large driver holding the reins over the backs of a couple of hundred horses at once. The frames are arranged in wings to contain from 200 to 400 spools, and the yarn from these spools passes through a comb and over a roller, through another comb and then is wound up on the "warper beam." The warper has a sort of automatic movement. The beam revolves at the rate of thirty or forty times a minute, but if anything goes wrong, as if a thread breaks, it immediately stops, and nothing can start it until everything is set right again.

After the warping comes the "slashing," a process of sizing or starching, which is performed by means of a large trough filled with size vats and steam cylinders. The final process in preparing the warp for the loom is the "drawing in," or placing the separate threads of the warp in proper order in the harness and the cords of the "harness." This is an operation allthe thing to the eyes and the patience.

If the spinning department was noisy, there is no worse din in the next section, which the weaving department make upon the ears of the visitor. A good-sized mill has 2,000 or 3,000 looms, and they are crowded in certain parts of the mill, where each loom tries to drown the noise of all the rest.

"I want you to observe those stoppers," said the agent, as the deafening roar that sounded amid the rattle of the looms like a far-away whisper. "Each stopper commences a quart of water in an hour, and in this room there are 300 of them. Two hundred quarts of water will go a good way toward purifying the atmosphere, even in a room of this size."

Packed as closely as the floor space would allow, the looms were arranged upon long lines, through which the operatives passed in performing their duties. There were usually from four to eight looms under her care. Her work consisted chiefly in replacing the empty cops in the shuttles, and in repairing broken threads.—Cor. Boston Globe.

I have been wondering why it would not be a humane thing for the city to set up a pound for stray tramps as well as stray cats.—Cor. New York News.

A DRAMATIC WORKSHOP.

HOW YOUNG WOMEN ARE MOULDED INTO STAGE JULIETS, ETC.

Developing Grace in Classic Skirt-Dancing—Instilling Elasticity Through the Agency of Fencing Foils—A Veritable Human Workshop—Picturesque Wires.

The first thing to be done with the young lady—but, by the way, having paid for her first course, she is no longer a young lady, she is an "Aspirant"—is to get her used to being. That never do in real life. In real life women dress. In professional life they "drape. A lady has plaits and things. An actress has folds. If she has been married on the sea of high comedy she might as well begin by getting her sheets in the wind. She must look like Juliet before she can talk like her.

Here she is, learning "sweep," "pose," "repose" and "impose." Her first lesson in her skirts. She has to get them about her ankles and shapes at all her lessons are taken in costume. She has to manage her train while the teacher manages the trailing. She may be said to be hanging on the skirt of the drama. Dress first, address afterwards. Tragedy begins with the monumental and ends with the sentimental. After the aspirant has learned how to have things hang right she must learn to have them move right. She has got to loosen our her joints, and it is proverbial with every social young lady who has not become an aspirant uses her arms from the elbow and her elbow from the wrist and her wrist from the finger-tips. She must learn to use her strike. She is a charming combination of stile, slope and slump. She melts from one action to another in snow-like fashion without a perceptible joint. She has a delightful inclination to glide when she ought to step out aggressively.

HOW TO STAND, MOVE AND SPEAK.

So she has the foils put into her hands to loosen her up and astonish some of the girl muscles that have been lying dormant. For this she wears the elegantest knickerbocker skirts and dons a pair of short trousers and blouse jacket. She looks very pretty in it if she has a trim figure, and it is fascinating to note how the lithe supple body adapts itself to the rules of the art. At first she is a little timid. She is afraid of having her eyes put out, and winks with her head averted, and reminds you of a girl on a washstand killing mosquitoes. But as soon as she finds out that she has foxers there is fine vital grace gets into her limbs, and a fine glow comes into her cheeks—two shades excitement and one shade muscular exercise. Of late, boxing lessons have become quite fashionable at the dramatic schools, most of the aspirants preferring the gloves to the foils, though as a rule they do not take to them as naturally as they do to the rapier to the same picturesque advantage as with the duellist's weapons.

Having learned how to stand and how to move, the next thing is to learn how to speak. Here comes in the whole elocutionary business. Most of the theatrical coaches have their special recitation nonsense. "Anz Italiene" and the "Manlas" have no place in their text books. They put the aspirant into an acting role at once, and make her go through with all the stock business as if she were before an audience. The professor always lets her do it her own way first, and endeavors to make her think it out with her own intelligence, thus preserving, if possible, her individuality and originality.

It is a very pretty sight to watch some of these girls developing into stage pictures from neophytes to nymphs. A natural nymph is of no account, it seems, on the stage. She has to be reconstructed, have her feet turned out, her knees straightened, her toes painted, her arms bent into curves. But it all comes about by degrees. She gets structural ease and poise after awhile; finds out that she has legs instead of limbs and begins to have a pictorial sense of things, and then the graces of nature and the technical graces that marks the aplomb of the professional actress.

TRAINING FOR PICTURESQUE WIFEHOOD.

This human workshop deals with two kinds of material. Of late a new order of aspirant has crowded into the fold. She is the social deadliner—the amateur professional who doesn't want to go on the stage, only to make a sensation in the salon with a "Cartier Jon" and similar sentiment. But she wants to do it with the air of an actress who knows all about it. This order of aspirant is distinct from the girls who mean business. But it is interesting to know that she begins with the same methods and puts on the gloves before she puts on the sock and buskin.

"If you could drop in some morning on the pupils you would see Juliet in all stages of construction. Kate, ethereal, voluble, quivering with intellectuality, would have finished past the balcony and arrived at the "potion scene." Ruth, trim and graceful as a sprig of golden rod, would be hanging on Romeo's "farewell-love," and Cora would be haranguing the nurse or asking the wall-paper, "wherefore art thou?" After which she would proceed

Mar Season Was Affected.

Special Policeman Geo. Smith, who is located at the depot, discovered a woman acting strangely at that place about seven o'clock on Saturday evening. He arrested her, when she became violent and tore her hair out by the roots. The woman had apparently been drinking and told the officer that she was in search of her husband, whom she said had left her at their home in Port Reading, near Wilmington, Pa. She said that she had engaged a hackman at the depot here, who made an attempt to assault her. An express wagon was brought into requisition to convey her to the station house, where she went into convulsions and Dr. Hedden, who was summoned, administered sedatives to quiet her nerves. Having become reconciled she was yesterday released and started for Philadelphia, where she claimed to have relatives living. The woman gave her name as Susan Moore, and her age twenty-four years. The story told by her to the policemen is believed to be a result her is discredited by the authorities.

The Plaques on Exhibition.

Miss Lillian Paul's silhouette was on exhibition at the Job Male Art Gallery, during Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. Mr. E. M. Odam, the manager of the building, says that on Thursday 1,500 persons viewed the lights and occupied benches, 2,250 on Friday and 600 on Saturday, making a total of 1191 persons who gazed at the picture during the three days. A new session to the Art Gallery is also the life like portrait of Rev. Dr. H. Winsor, which was placed on exhibition Saturday and is loaned the association by Miss Eda V. Thorn who has also loaned a beautiful child's portrait for exhibition. Mr. Odam says there is scarcely a day that less than sixty persons visit the gallery and oftentimes the number reaches one hundred.

He Abused His Wife.

Mrs. Chas. McGinley of East Third street appeared before Justice Nash on Saturday and lodged a complaint against her husband, charging him with having committed an assault upon her. The woman's eye was draped in mourning and she displayed other marks of violence alleged to have been inflicted at the hands of her inhuman husband. A warrant was issued for his arrest and Constable Smith arrested the man at his home, and arraigned him before the justice, when he waived examination and was held in the sum of $250 bail to await the action of the grand jury. James McGinley, the father of the accused, became his bondsman and he was released.

—Policeman Lynch arrested James Totten in an alleyway on East Front street on Saturday night for being intoxicated. This morning he was sentenced to pay a fine of five dollars, or be committed to the county jail for twenty days.

—The new clothing establishment, Werner's clothing house, is announced elsewhere. It will be conducted by Harry Werner, who solicits a visit from his many friends and customers. Mr. Werner will carry the largest assortment of mens, youths and boys' clothing ever offered in this city, with one price and no deviation as his motto. For particulars see advertisement.

—Martin Galbraith, a young man employed by Charles Arnold, of Liberty street, was driving a horse attached to a business wagon Richmond street this morning, when in the vicinity of the oil cloth works the animal became frightened and darted off, throwing the driver out and seriously injuring his back. He also sustained bruises about the head and face. The horse was unhurt, and captured on East Third street. The wagon was wrecked.

This evening the Dramatic Association will prove at the laughable farce, entitled "Master of the Situation."

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Amplified Lecture Delivered in Reform Hall—By T. S. Lambert, M.D., A. M., LL.D., of New York City—Subject—"The Truth About Alcohol—Its Chemistry, Genesis and Physiological Effects, Individual and Social."

PART X.

Philosophy of Fermentation.—I thought that this part would open too suddenly for the subject, "The Alcohol upon the Individual," but a gentleman of your town wants to see a letter to-day, and after much mature consideration, I do think such a letter as I think should be answered before we are ready to enter upon, so to speak, the second grand division of our subject, and which to me is by far the most interesting of the two.

He asks if I mean to be understood as saying that the Roman meade beer is an alcoholic, because it is fermented with yeast? If so, is yeast fermented dough to be called an alcoholic? Do I think such a belief dangerous? The syllable ic, as an affix, meant partaking of; as in this case: it meant partaking of beer, or partaking of, alcohol. As viruses or common fermentations of beer and wine-only produces some alcohol, that being the result of the first vinous fermentation, it would follow that fermented dough would be in fact an alcoholic; but, it would be an exception to common custom to call anything but a liquid an alcoholic. The Roman meade is and is called, an alcoholic; and also is a solid when frozen, that is, a semi-solid, but as ordinary alcoholics, it is liquid. Fermenting dough is not so, therefore, ever called an alcoholic, although it contains alcohol all the same, and for several reasons it is best not to call it alcoholic. Whether the alcoholic small beer is dangerous or not will be tested somewhat in a few days through the second grand division.

There are many small "beers" sold now-a-days that are not in any correct sense of the word beers—they foam, yet they are not fermenting, nor have they been fermented, and of course no alcohol. They come properly under the head of soda, or carbonic acid waters. They are certain flavors, syrups and water, strongly impregnated with carbonic acid; bones, bubbles and foam is the result. Ginger ale is a beverage, and when a person is too warm in winter, this gas is quite salutary to the stomach, and if the person has no internal fire or efforts, and should not be mis-called beer; which thus has an honor conferred upon it that it does not merit, for it is not beer, it is not even an alcoholic, and should be stigmatized on all occasions, and not have the semblance, even, of being honored upon any occasion.

The correct idea about fermentation is, that it is a process of decay, or rotting, of certain vegetable matter, mucus, such as the starch, cane, saccharine and gluteous, of which there is an immense quantity produced every year, throughout what is termed by all the higher animals, and man of course included.

If this immense surplus should remain in the soil from year to year, it would be of little or no use. Let a person try the effect of putting some starch, sugar or gluteous around any plant, as well as he can, and he will soon remain such they will not "manure" the plant a whit, but be a nuisance.

Nature, therefore, has caused them to decay by being eaten by Torulæ Cerevisiæ in such a way that they are formed into gas and a very light vapor, the hydrogen of which will balloon it to the clouds to be electrified, decomposed, and then come down to the plants, and serve as food to them the same as carbonic acid gas does, by its carbon entering the leaves of plants.

The nitrogen of the decaying or thus eaten vegetable unites with the hydrogen in them and they form ammonia, the hydrated vapor which makes it very light, volatile or high flying. Thus, by this decay or rotting, or descending process, nature changes nearly all the solidity of the vegetable surplus into gases or vapors resembling gases in their nature, by which means it can be blown about by the winds and brought within absorbing distance of the freshly growing plants in their new growth on earth. And again: Thus, there is provided a constant round of food for the vegetable and animal kingdoms in a constant circle.

Says the poet Bryant: "These lofty trees wave home the loss proudly that their successors monister beneath them." And again: "See how on the faltering footsteps of decay youth presses, ever gay and beautiful youth in all the freshness of its glow. The young and succulent plants and fruits that are so toothsome are but the terrible and grand work over which the laughter of old time! The new moon is only the same old thing with a new face. In fact there is nothing new, nothing but old forms; the soil of realities of the world and all things therein are ever and forever in a constant round of change. But there is an apparent exception. The tender cellulose of the young vegetable, when it becomes old and woody, and still more when that becomes fossilized into coal, seems to have some solidity, some staying power; but this is only apparent, for the cellulose is lagging, that is all. A thousand years is but a fleeting moment on the clock of eternity; and a million years is but a moment in a geological period, and a few years and one comes; a day or a night is as the wink of an eyelid.

Thus, the cellulose of coal is for a time, but the most lasting quickly begins to rot, which means slowly burn up, chiefly into carbonic acid gas and water, and the ashes of coal, charged into coal, which seems to be so solid as the roots of the earth, the impurity and parts of coal, are the same ashes that are left of the bowels of the earth, and from its black ooze produce the light and food of the sun light vegetables, and the vegetables, when a few millions of years ago it was blown upon by the circulating air, by the decaying of the vegetable, leaves the carbonic acid gas of those times, and from which is digested the carbon of their stored up coal for the then growing, stocking my food by heat and also lighting the page over which I am guiding my pen.

Thus, the vegetable kingdom is constantly in use of Nature's Processes, for returning back surplus food to feed vegetable life; and the animal life, by the decaying of which it did not culminate to high animal life by serving as its food. There are then two great kingdoms of life, the vegetable is, feeding by nature's processes the animal life of the lowest order to make it a ground; except in case of disease or casualty, and the animal life feeds the vegetable, but is found to go around by the shorter process of eating it, although more labor is taken, yet as the plague through which it passes are fewer, it is called the shorter process.

Now the man will then make his food of the most highly perfected fruits—and which has been long the process of decay, and which has even begun the process of decay, since that is no longer food nor can it be used into blood, bone, muscle, nerve, &c., until it has passed through the vegetable process of synthesis.

Fermenting substances is not meant to be food by animals but should be eschewed and shunned. Fermenting dough should not be eaten, for it is in the process of decay, and substance, carbonic acid gas and alcohol, are driven off and the bread therefore is free from the latter, and the former is left in the mass, so in passing away these substances have made it light.

Alcohol therefore can have no claim to the food, much less to be wholesome food; but it is declared, as I have, by others to be, as all products of decay are, a poison; which will I hope and believe to fully realized by all readers who shall peruse the Lecture of its Effects upon the Individual, which will begin with the next part.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Justices' Court Notes.

The action upon contract case brought by Homan vs. Ubdal, which was to have been tried before Justice Nash on Saturday, has been adjourned over for one week.

The writ in the case of Lawrence Paoli vs. John Adams, in which an action for debt is involved, was made returnable to Justice Hetfield on the 25th instant.

A similar action brought Jere Rowe vs. Hugh Tood will come up for trial before the same Justice on Saturday next.

—The Congregational church took up a collection to aid the Charleston sufferers, yesterday morning

—See special notice for grand collation to be given by Alex. Hill, the tonsorial artist of Liberty street, to-night.

—Two dirty-looking beasts and three dirtier looking men exhibited themselves about the streets of the city on Saturday blockading traffic and frightening horses.

—The 25th anniversary of the organization of the Society of Friends in this vicinity was observed in Rahway on Thursday, at the old Irving street church, with interesting services. Several prominent Friends from New Jersey and adjoining States were present and made addresses.

—The seventeenth annual fair of the Somerset County Agricultural Society will be held on their grounds in Somerville on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 28, 29 and 30. Trotting Wednesday and Thursday, commencing 11.30 a. m. each day. For list of purses and information apply to Wm. S. Potter, secretary, Somerville, N. J. If either day proves stormy the fair will be continued the next day.

—A four-year-old son of Charles Byran of Chatham street, North Plainfield, was knocked down by a rig belonging to Mr. C. W. Opdyke of Broadway, at the corner of Front and Peace streets at about half-past six o'clock this morning. Dr. Lang, who was summoned, found the child to be suffering from severe external injuries, but it is thought that no bones were fractured. The doctor dressed the wounds and took the boy home in his carriage.

—The attendance at the Reform Club meeting in Reform Hall last evening was fair, the auditorium being about half filled. President French directed the meeting, Freeholder Vanderbeek leading the choir, which was assisted by a cornet well handled by Prof. Lawrence. Rev. Allen Smith was in her accustomed place at the organ. The first speaker was the Rev. W. H. Hampton who was warmly received by the audience and made one of his characteristic addresses in which he exhorted everyone to belong to their midst again after a prolonged illness. He was succeeded by editor Leonard of the Methodist Review, who spoke in favor of prohibition as the temperance cause. President French wound up with an invitation to sign the pledge.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Rumors to the effect that a new railroad is to be built through this place are rife, and rumor has been busy near Scotch Plains for a week past.

The East Jersey Sunday School Convention will be held at Scotch Plains in the Baptist church on Tuesday, October 12. Three sessions will be held during the day.

DUNELLEN NOTES.

Chief of Police Bowen arrested a man named Oriel on Friday night for being drunk. He was locked up for the night and released next day.

A LIVELY CYCLONE

BURSTS UPON JOLIET AND PLAYS HAVOC GENERALLY.

A Bridge Carried Two Blocks, and a Grist-mill and Many Houses Carried Away and Wrecked—The People Had Warning and Fled in Time.

JOLIET, Ills., Sept. 20.—The scene of Saturday night's cyclone in this city was visited by fully 10,000 people. It is a remarkable fact that although fifteen or twenty houses were completely demolished and within the terrific wind, yet not a single person was fatally hurt. Everybody seemed to be aware of the approach of the cyclone some minutes before it struck the city, and secured safety by fleeing to cellars. The course ran from the southwest, straight up the Desplaines river. The quickest flashes of lightning lit up the sky so that the funnel shaped monster could be plainly seen as it came whirling toward the city with a roar like a hundred locomotives blowing off steam. As it neared the city limits it turned east on Monroe street, demolishing houses, barns and outhouses. The air was filled with boards, limbs of trees, pieces of roofs and pieces of heavy timber. The bridge on Monroe street was picked up bodily and deposited almost intact two blocks away. A heavy grindstone belonging to Mr. Pusey was blown 250 feet. The residences of the Schlim Brothers, John Day, Hod Brown, Jerry Buckley, Patrick Daly, Peter Daly, William Barrett, John Meher and William Hines were scattered to the winds, pieces of some of these houses were carried a quarter of a mile. A large number of houses were more or less moved from their foundation and wrenched out of shape.

The house of Peter Daly on Chicago street was turned upside down. The root now rests on the ground and the front door is high up in the air.

Telegraph poles were twisted off like pipe stems, the wires being blockaded with a mass of tangled wires, along Fourth avenue great holes were scooped out of the hard, gravel road. Eye witnesses state that these holes were made by what appeared to be balls of electricity or fire, which bounded along the ground. The horse and buggy of Deputy Sheriff Ward was hitched in front of his house when the cyclone came, and after it had passed the horse and buggy had disappeared. No trace of it has since been found. The damage to property in the city is estimated at $75,000.

MANNING AND AUSTRIA.

Treasury Officials Discredit the Report in the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Secretary Manning's probable appointment to and acceptance of the Austrian mission has been a topic of much discussion here for the past two or three days. The statement when first published was generally credited as altogether probable, but subsequent inquiries at the state and treasury departments, of officials who certainly should know something of the president's purposes and Secretary Manning's plans, weeks and believe in the truth of the report.

Secretary Bayard says, emphatically that he has no knowledge of any proposition to send Secretary Manning to Austria; adding Secretary Fairchild has so far obtained all the information on the subject in his possession from the newspapers, and Treasurer Jordan and other treasury officials laugh at or ridicule the notion of increasing Secretary Manning's usefulness in solving the troublesome international silver question, by taking from him the portfolio of the secretary of the United States treasury, and sending him to fill a second class mission in Austria.

Danger in Unattended Rollers.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Sept. 20.—The boiler of an engine used to run a cider mill at J. H. Spalding's nursery, near Riverton, exploded and instantly killed two men. Barney Elling, the engineer, was hurled 120 feet away, and Patrick Kelly, the other victim, was picked up forty feet from the spot. Harry Williams, a son of A. B. Williams, of this city, who was in the mill at the time, was seriously scalded. It is supposed the water was allowed to get too low in the boiler, and when a fresh supply was turned on it caused the explosion.

An Aged Lady Drowns Herself.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, aged 88 years, widow of Maj. Hall, who served on Gen. Scott's staff during the Mexican war, committed suicide yesterday by throwing herself in the Central park reservoir. Mrs. Hall was in good circumstances, she resided with her daughter, and has for many years drawn a pension of $80 per month. It is believed that she was temporarily insane when she committed the act.

A FATAL FAMILY FEUD.

Brothers-in-Law Fight Each Other in a Brutal Manner.

AKRON, O., Sept. 20.—Ellis Gangler and Joseph Boettler, brothers-in-law, farmers near here, have fought a terrible battle, in which the latter received internal injuries from which doctors say he cannot recover. Boettler was driving away in a wagon when Gangler met him, and, leaving his team, sprang into Boettler's wagon and opened the fight. Boettler became frightened and ran furiously for fully five miles while the men were fighting in the wagon. Near Boettler's home Gangler, with face covered with blood, fell from the wagon. Boettler was unable to move when his team reached home. His face and chest had been stamped until they were raw. The bottom of the wagon looked like a slaughter pen. There had been trouble between the two men for some time.

Others Coming Home.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Violet Cameron and her company, together with the Daly and the Thalia Theatre companies, of New York, have sailed for America on the steamer Aurania. It is said that Violet Cameron's husband, Mr. Debenham, sailed on the same day on the steamer Alaska. Lord Lyndale will probably sail on the City of Rome.

"STOMATINE"

FOR THE

MOUTH, THROAT and Diseased Gums. Being slightly astringent it speedily removes all diseases of the mouth and throat such as spongy gums, cancer sore mouth, sore throat, smoker's breath, etc. Its great specialty is counteracting the effect of medicine on the teeth, making it an unequalled tonic for the sick room, removing the taste of medicine and in a fever keeping the mouth and tongue in a healthful condition.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do. 56 W. Front street, Plainfield, N. J., June 23, '86. Dr. Chas. Thiers,

Dear Sir—You ask my opinion of your Stomatine. With a knowledge of its formula I will say with pleasure that the chemical combination is perfect, and the ingredients are not only wonderfully pure, but are the best that can be obtained for the purpose. I believe and know it to be a good remedy, and the best one I have ever handled for the purpose. With my experience of 20 years as a pharmacist in this city, I can say that I have never before met with one so free to say that it does all that is claimed for it. As you have requested it I know of, and I have used it freely in my own family, I will say that from what I have seen of it that anyone afflicted with Diseases of the Mouth, Throat and Gums will be relieved and cured by its use. Respectfully,

WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers.

My dear sir—I cheerfully affords me GIVE pleasure to write the testimonial in behalf of your preparation called Stomatine. For diseases of the mouth, throat and tender gums. On the 4th of October, 1885, you gave me the formula and state that I have since used it in my practice. I find it to act wonderfully and admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is designed. Wishing you success who am "Stomatine" prin it very much.

I most cheerfully recommend your valuable preparation to the public, believing it to be as well as a gargle, giving strength and tone to the vocal organs.

R. J. SHAW, Druggist.

Plainfield, N. J., August 19, '86.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers,

Dear Sir—I cheerfully bear testimony to the unrivaled excellence of Stomatine. I have not only used it personally, but have recommended its use in my practice and shall continue in the highest praise of it. Yours Respectfully,

E. M. STELLE.

A Lesson Lost.

H. M. Hoxie, of the Missouri Pacific railway, is noted in railway circles for his promptness to give his inferiors good, lectures on the slightest provocation. Hoxie is a hard worker, and all who have seen him know how scant is his stock of hair. One day a brakeman called on him with a letter request for a pass in his pocket, leaving the door wide open as he entered the office, and wearing his hat on his head in true brakeman style. In a loud voice he called out:

"Is Hoxie in?"

At this stage the general manager looked up from his desk and replied:

"Yes, sir, Mr. Hoxie is in."

The brakeman took his letter out of his pocket, grabbed the corner of the envelope between his thumb and forefinger, and sent the missive spinning and whirling upon his superior's desk. Hoxie looked up in astonishment, and said:

"Now, young man, would it not look better for you, when coming into a gentleman's office, and especially when asking a favor, to remove your hat, wipe your feet, and inquire in a quiet voice: 'Is Mr. Hoxie in?'"

The brakeman looked at the general manager in a moment, salted for his letter, got it, went out, closed the door, and in a moment searched in again, closed the door softly after, took his hat off, put his hat under his arm, and in the most polite manner possible, inquired:

"Is Mr. Hoxie, the general manager, in?"

"I am Mr. Hoxie," replied the general manager; "and can I do for you?"

"You can go to h—, you round-shouldered son of a gun," retorted the brakeman. "I don't want none of your favors—I'm from Texas."—Chicago Herald.

Bringing it Home.

He was an undersized man, with burning eyes and fierce gestire, and he danced around the saloon on one leg and cursed the Chicago jury which condemned the Anarchists, and shouted around on the other and yelled about free lunch and free press, and waltzed up and down and vowed that capitalists ought to be blown from the mouths of cannon.

"Stop!" said a big bulk of a chap who had his head on the table and was aroused by the racket, "free speech's all right, ain't she?"

"It is! Free speech or blood!"

"Shay, you're a liar! You're a thief! You're a scoundrel and swindler and robber! Shay, you're children are fools, and your wife don't know 'nuff 't pound sand!" You're the meanest, most contemptible looking cur I ever shaw! I wouldn't be found dead on your level!"

"I'll kill him!" howled the little one as he pushed off his coat.

"Shay, hold on! Don't go back on 'er constitution, you know! I shee you've got a money. I haven't got 'er red cheni. You're one of 'em infernal capitalists, an' I'm going to blow you sky high!"

He rushed the little man over a beer table and jammed his head against the wall, and when four or five men pulled him off and hustled him out doors he turned and shook his fist and yelled:

"Shay, what sort of a crowd are you, any how? Think I whoop 'er up on free speech and try to down monopoly you go back on me and fling me out! Rah! for 'er constitushen! Rah! for 'er free speech! Free country for everybody—whoopee!"—Detroit Free Press.

Condition of Things in Persia.

Everybody in Persia admits that the shah is animated by the best intentions, and that he would restore to his country the ancient splendor; but at the same time everybody sees that his good intentions are never carried out, and that no sovereign ever met with less sympathy. It is the dissatisfaction of the shah that he has completely given up control of the state, just as he allows the fortified walls surrounding his residence to crumble and fall into the ditches. During our sojourn in Teheran we witnessed the curious spectacle of the minister of fine arts taking possession of one of the outbuildings of the palace and declaring that he would not leave until the salary due him was paid. The shah, who loves a good joke, has the obstinate vizier well taken care of, and asks him, every time he meets him on the walks, whether he is satisfied with the cuisine. The vizier declares that it is excellent, and swears that he will send his boys near the person of his majesty. His majesty laughs, thanks him and proceeds on his walk.

This is a fair example of the condition of things in Persia. The taxes are in arrears, the sums accruing to the colonels, who send three-fourths of the men on furlough and pocket their wages. The lower officers allow the soldiers to practice a profession on condition that they divide the proceeds with them. Many a soldier who guards in the morning the door of the palace, in the morning sold lettres de faire at the corner perched up there in the shadow of a mosque.—Mme Cor. Paris Journal.

Growth of a Mountain.

Mount Tarawera, one of the New Zealand volcanoes which recently displayed such extraordinary activity, is 300 feet higher than before the eruption. The scene at this moment is said to be one of unparalleled grandeur. Balls of fire shot high into the air, and enormous tongues of flame, 500 feet wide, rose to a height of 1,000 feet.—The Argonaut.

Wild Cane in Nevada.

Wild cane grows in abundance about the lakes of Nevada. Of this cane the Indians manufacture mats, which is said to be quite superior to that made from best root or produced in the south.—Chicago Times.

EARTHQUAKE ECHOES.

EVENTS WEIRD, COMIC AND TRAGIC, FOLLOWING ITS WAKE.

Newspapers Call it the Quake-Colored People Hold Revivals—A Wife Beater Takes it as a Warning—Damage Done. Charleston Must Be Rebuilt.

When the American people had sufficiently recovered their balance to speak of the calamity at Charleston as "the quake" that was a sign they believed the worst was over. It took five days for them to do this. The Sunday papers next following that terrible Tuesday night spoke jocosely of "the quake." They went further than this. They even chaulked their stars that the earthquake had for the time quite shut up the prohibition row in Atlanta. The night of the first shock, immediately after it was felt, a Prohibition citizen of Atlanta would wildly into the street without much clothing on, binding his wife and little ones follow him, vowing the bloody whisky men were blowing up his house with dynamite. His quiet friend met him with the cool assurance that it was only a case of the jim-jams, and persuaded him to go back to bed. But from that evening no word referring to the whisky war was heard in Atlanta for a week. That, at least, was something.

NEGRO REVIVALS.

Both in Atlanta and in Charleston wildly thrilling scenes were witnessed at the religious revivals which immediately broke out among the colored population. They believed beyond doubting that the day of judgment had come, and they begged for mercy in a frenzy of fear. A weird spectacle it was to pass through their camps and hear the strange, more than half barbaric chants and the wild prayers that rose from the throngs in the open squares and streets. They sang hymns like this.

Sometimes I'm up, sometimes I'm down;
No man like Jesus.
Sometimes I'm almost on de groun',
No man like Jesus.

Their prayers were wild and appealing beyond description:

"Oh, my handsome God, dear sir, look down on us. We know what the little finger of the Lord can do. Sometimes the world can kick up in thunder, but do take care of our brothers. Ain't the black lamb and the white lion done lie down together in peace? Move along my brothers, move along! God gimme grace to move along, ain't I dun promise to be baptize?"

The excited throng took up the words: "Promise to be baptized," and made a song of it, shanting the chorus with a roar like a singing earthquake itself. They stopped to take breath, and the leader fell into another frenzied prayer.

"The last chance is come to save old Charleston! Oh, my Lord, don't touch my city any more! I pray God to hold the world. Rip, big, big! Oh, Lord, take me in Your charge to-night. Night before last I didn't expect to see Jesus. Oh, God, look at those dry bones in the valley. Didn't you hear Gabriel blow? Oh, Gabriel, turn the horn to the land of Egypt on the miserable sinners, and not on we. Oh, Lord! the birds have rest, but we are here to-night for mercy. Oh, Lord, have mercy!"

MASS IN THE OPEN SQUARE.

Meantime, on Sunday, the white shoop of the great fold were gathered in a very different scene. The white people's worship was conducted in a quiet, solemnly impressive manner, and in the square, Bishop Northrop, the Charleston diocese, celebrated mass in the open air, in the presence of a vast throng. These religious services, in the midst of the earth tremors and the rents, form a most striking scene, and were participated in by the various denominations, each in their separate gathering.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.

The medical college of which Charleston was justly proud, is a ruin.

At a colored church in Barnesville a deacon was just praying fervently to clean the meeting. He was just saying, "Good Lord, come down an' bless de chillens. Bring on de time when Jesus am a-comin'. Good Lord, come down an' take de chillens home to Thee. Good Lord, Yous knows all from dis world ob sin and sorrow." At that instant the earth began to rise in billows and the church to rock to and fro. A wild affright the deacon and all his congregation sprang to their feet and fled out of the building. They thought the Lord was taking the deacon at his word.

A characteristic freak of "the quake" is manifested in the case of the old house in which Gen. Wade Hampton was born. It is built in colonial style, and is older than the revolution. During that war a 32-pound British shot struck it, and is still imbedded in the wall. Through the fierce bombardment of the late war, through three great fires, and through the cyclone recently it has stood unharmed. Struck to-day, the earthquake spared it too. It stands entombed in the midst of ruins all about. It almost seems as if a charm had been put upon the old house.

HIBERNIAN HALL.

The beautiful porch of Hibernian hall, with its large fluted pillars, is a total wreck. Only the lower parts of the two middle pillars are left standing. On falling the roof of the piazza brought down with it the front pediment of the hall. The large golden harp, with the date of construction, 1840, is still intact. This hall is the property of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, of which there is a large membership in the city.

In great tragedies there are always comic incidents. The quake so thoroughly frightened members of the operatic company that for the time at least they became the veriest saints. One of these was an old tough in Cherokee county, Ga., in which county he is a famous ground where the Indians in their day used to play ball. The old tough in question habitually amused himself by beating his wife. He lived upon the ancient Indian ball ground. On the evening of the earthquake he administered to his beloved companion the customary drubbing and stalked out doors to cool off. The earth began to tremble and heave, a sullen roar smote the ear. Suddenly the tough fancied he saw, floating in the air all about him, wicked specters, phantoms of the merciless Indians who used to gather there. In no other way could he account for the shaking earth. He fell upon his knees then and there and implored the spooks with all his soul to spare his life and he would never whip Peggy Ann again.

NEWS AND COURIER OFFICE.

Looking at the remains of The Charleston News and Courier office, one is not surprised that the printers on the top floor declined to continue setting type up there. Every sort of jar in building the night of the first great shock, except the proprietor, Capt. Dawson. The earthquake left the edifice in such a forlorn condition that it will undoubtedly be pronounced unsafe by the government engineers and have to be pulled down. The paper has been uncommonly prosperous of recent years, and the proprietor had recently put in a fine new printing press.

At Columbia, S. C., an old man had been a helpless rheumatic for years. He could scarcely walk, even with crutches. At the earthquake alarm he sprang from his couch like a deer and skipped into the street at three bounds. He has not used his crutches since. The earthquake was so effective on the mind cure.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH.

The steeple of St. Michael's church is eighteen inches out of plumb, and unless the lead engineering talent of the country can warp it back to its old position it must be torn down. The massive portico of the church covering, its entrance on Meeting street is uninjured and will not topple.

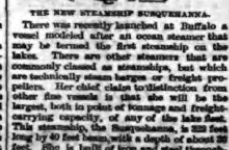
As sad as anything in this sad story is the natural discouragement of the people of Charleston. Heavy rains flooded what the earthquake had left. Soaked to the skin, wandering in the streets, without food, over them the agonizing terror of earthquake shocks almost every hour, for weeks, their plight was sorrowful enough. Added to this, disease broke out among them. The accumulated garbage of all that time was left unremoved upon the streets.

But beautiful, hapless Charleston must take heart again. As with Chicago after the fire, money will pour into her from her generous sister cities all over the Union, and Charleston will be rebuilt, greater, more prosperous and more beautiful than ever.

A SHIPBUILDING REVIVAL.

The Unprecedented Demand For Vessels on the Great Lakes.

There is at present a revival in ship building going on on the borders of the great lakes which is as unprecedented as it was unexpected. It is caused by the increased demand for vessels by shippers. At all the great shipyards orders have been launched as fast as they can be put together. One of the best informed shipbuilders on the lakes estimates that the yearly output from the ship yards on the lakes will be at least $3,000,000.



THE NEW STEAMSHIP SUSQUEHANNA.

There was recently launched at Buffalo a vessel modeled after an ocean steamer that may be termed the first steamship on the lakes. There are other steamers that are known as ocean propellers, but which are technically steam barges or freight propellers. Her chief claim to distinction from other lake vessels is that she will be the largest, both in point of tonnage and freight-carrying capacity, of any of the lake fleet. This steamship, the Susquehanna, is 320 feet long by 40 feet beam, with a depth of about 26 feet. She is built of iron and steel throughout and will be used as a freight boat between Buffalo and Chicago, her carrying capacity being 2,250 tons. Prince was with every appliance that experience suggests, and her success may be followed by a fleet of similar craft.

[BY AUTHORITY.] LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

CHAPTER LXXXIV.

AN ACT to prevent deception in the sale of dairy products, imitations of any imitation of dairy products, and to punish offenders thereof.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no person shall manufacture out of any oleaginous substance or compound, or any combination of the same, other than that produced from pure milk or cream from the same, any article designed to take the place of pure butter, and known as oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or any substance in imitation of pure butter, of which pure milk or cream is not the basis, or shall offer for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, any article of food not being butter, but made in imitation of pure butter, and known as oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or any substance in imitation of pure butter, of which pure milk or cream is not the basis, unless the same shall be distinctly marked, stamped or labeled as oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or with the name or names given to the substance in imitation of pure butter, of which pure milk or cream is not the basis, in letters of not less than one-half inch in length and one-half inch in width, which mark, stamp or label shall be printed in black and in the English language.

2. And be it enacted, That no person shall offer for export for sale, or shall have in possession for the purpose or sale, any oleomargarine, butterine, lardine or any substance in imitation of natural butter, which is not packed in firkins or other packages, manufactured or compounded out of any material or ingredients other than pure milk or cream from pure milk or cream with pure salt, and which shall not have the words "oleomargarine," "butterine," "lardine," or other coloring matter or substance, or any substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, stamped or marked in a conspicuous manner on the top and side of each firkin or other package, unless he shall first indicate by placing upon the top of each tub, firkin, basket or chest, but in imitation butter or other package containing the same, the word "oleomargarine," "butterine," "lardine," or other coloring matter or substance, or any substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, as the case may be, and shall give to the purchaser a card or notice printed in plain type, stating that the package contains oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or other coloring matter or substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, as the case may be, and said notice or card shall be at least six inches in length and four inches in width, and the word thereon shall be in letters at least one inch in length and one-half inch in width, and the word "oleomargarine," "butterine," "lardine," or other coloring matter or substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, as the case may be, shall be printed in black and in the English language.

3. And be it enacted, That no person shall offer for export for sale, or shall have in possession for the purpose of sale, any oleomargarine, butterine, lardine or any substance in imitation of natural butter, which is not packed in firkins or other packages, manufactured or compounded out of any material or ingredients other than pure milk or cream from pure milk or cream with pure salt, and which shall not have the words "oleomargarine," "butterine," "lardine," or other coloring matter or substance, or any substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, stamped or marked in a conspicuous manner on the top and side of each firkin or other package, unless he shall first indicate by placing upon the top of each tub, firkin, basket or chest, but in imitation butter or other package containing the same, the word "oleomargarine," "butterine," "lardine," or other coloring matter or substance, or any substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, as the case may be, and shall give to the purchaser a card or notice printed in plain type, stating that the package contains oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or other coloring matter or substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, as the case may be, and said notice or card shall be at least six inches in length and four inches in width, and the word thereon shall be in letters at least one inch in length and one-half inch in width, and the word "oleomargarine," "butterine," "lardine," or other coloring matter or substance in imitation or resemblance of butter, as the case may be, shall be printed in black and in the English language.

4. And be it enacted, That no person shall offer for export for sale, or shall have in possession for the purpose of sale, any oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or any substance in imitation of natural butter or cheese, "shall be taken to mean the product of the churning of milk or cream for the purpose of making butter, and which are made and manufactured exclusively from milk or cream, with or without coloring matter for export purposes, and which shall be free from all filth and rennet, and with or without coloring matter for home consumption, and which shall be free from "oil," "suine" or "substance in imitation or resemblance of butter," and which shall be in accordance with the provisions of this act, and which shall be marked and branded in accordance with the provisions of this section. And that the word "oil" shall be prima facie evidence of intent to sell the same.

5. And be it enacted, That no person shall in any way or manner evade, cancel or obliterate, deface, or cover over or remove either the brand or stripe of oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, or either of them of not to be placed on the tub, box, pail, or vessel containing any oleaginous substance or compound as defined by this act.

6. And be it enacted, That any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for the first offense, and two hundred dollars for each second or subsequent offense.

7. And be it enacted, That every district court in any city, and every justice of the peace in any county, and any recorder in any city, is hereby empowered, on oath or affirmation made according to law that any person or persons has or have violated any provision of this act, to issue process at the suit of the state of New Jersey, on complaint as plaintiff for the use of the state of New Jersey, either in the manner of a summons or warrant, against the person or persons so offending, which process shall, when in the nature of a warrant, be returnable forthwith, and when in the nature of a summons, shall be returnable in not less than five nor more than ten entire days; such process shall state what provision of the law is alleged to have been violated by the defendant or defendants; and on the return of such process, or at any time thereafter, the court shall have been duly entered the said court, justice of the peace or recorder shall proceed to hear testimony and to determine and give judgment in a summary way, without filing of any pleadings, for the plaintiff, for the recovery of such penalty as is provided for such violation; and the said court, justice of the peace or recorder is further empowered to cause the said judgment to be collected by execution against the goods and chattels of the said defendant or defendants; and the said court, justice of the peace or recorder is further empowered to cause the said defendant or defendants to be committed to the common jail of said county, to be there detained until fair trial or hearing of said charge.

8. And be it enacted, That either the complainant or the defendant may have a trial by jury, and by filing with said district court, justice of the peace or recorder, at any time before the return day of the summons or warrant, and to bail the person so charged in such sum as he shall direct, not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, conditioned for his appearance at the next court of general quarter sessions of the peace of the county in which said complaint is made, to answer the charge in such complaint, and to abide the judgment of said court of general quarter sessions of the peace; and the said justice of the peace or recorder is hereby empowered to cause of such trial before the said court of general quarter sessions of the peace.

9. And be it enacted, That all penalties imposed by this act shall be sued for and recovered, and paid into the treasury of this state by the prosecutor.

10. And be it enacted, That the state board of health shall appoint a dairy commissioner, who shall be known as the state dairy commissioner, who shall be a citizen of this state and who shall hold his office for the term of three years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, and whose salary shall be the salary of two thousand dollars per annum, and his actual expenses incurred in the performance of his duties, to be audited by the treasurer of this state, on the certificate of the state board of health, and paid out of the salary fund appropriated for that purpose; and said commissioner shall be qualified to act as an analyst of dairy products, and it shall be the duty of said commissioner, with the assistance of the state board of health, to make such analysis of dairy products as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act, and to prosecute all violations of the same; and the said commissioner shall report to the governor of this state, on or before the first day of January in each year, his proceedings for the year next preceding, and such report shall be laid before the legislature by the governor, with such recommendations as he may deem proper.

11. And be it enacted, That the said commissioner shall have an assistant to expend for the purposes of this act, not more than one thousand dollars in any one year, and all such expenditures shall be audited and paid in the same manner as the salary of the commissioner.

12. And be it enacted, That the said commissioner shall appoint a deputy commissioner in each county of this state, who shall hold his office for the term of one year, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, and who shall receive for his services the sum of two hundred dollars per annum, and his actual expenses incurred in the performance of his duties, to be audited by the commissioner, on the certificate of the board of health, and paid out of the salary fund appropriated for that purpose; and said deputy commissioner shall be qualified to act as an analyst of dairy products, and it shall be the duty of said deputy commissioner, with the assistance of the state board of health, to make such analysis of dairy products as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act, and to prosecute all violations of the same; and the said deputy commissioner shall report to the commissioner, on or before the first day of December in each year, his proceedings for the year next preceding, and such report shall be laid before the legislature by the commissioner, with such recommendations as he may deem proper.

13. And be it enacted, That this act and each section thereof shall take effect immediately, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXXV.

AN ACT for the protection and to limit the time and manner of taking oysters in the waters and on the grounds and beds of Delaware bay.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful for any person to take, kill or capture any oysters, shell or seed, from any of the public shore lines next after the passage of this act, between the fifteenth day of May and the first day of September in any year.

2. And be it enacted, That after the expiration of the time mentioned in the preceding section of this act it shall not be lawful to take, kill or capture any oysters, shell, partridge or seed between the hours of 6 o'clock in the forenoon and December in any year, under a penalty of five dollars for each bushel of oysters so taken, killed or captured.

3. And be it enacted, That any person who shall at any time take, kill or capture any oysters or seed from any bed, rock or bar which is the property of another person without the consent of the owner or his agent, shall be liable to a penalty of twenty-five dollars for each bushel taken, killed or captured.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act for the better encouragement in Maurice River cove and Delaware bay in the preservation of clams and oysters," approved April fourteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, and the supplements thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the oyster beds in Maurice River cove and Delaware bay shall be open for the taking of oysters from the first day of October next after the passage of this act, to the first day of May following.

2. And be it enacted, That after the expiration of the time mentioned in the preceding section of this act, it shall not be lawful to take, kill or capture any oysters, shell, partridge or seed between the hours of 6 o'clock in the forenoon and December in any year, under a penalty of five dollars for each bushel of oysters so taken, killed or captured.

3. And be it enacted, That any person who shall at any time take, kill or capture any oysters or seed from any bed, rock or bar which is the property of another person without the consent of the owner or his agent, shall be liable to a penalty of twenty-five dollars for each bushel taken, killed or captured.

Approved March 22, 1886.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

AN ACT to regulate the taking of oysters from the oyster grounds in Maurice River cove and Delaware bay, and the licensing of vessels employed in taking oysters from the same, and to punish offenders against the laws of this state in relation thereto, and to repeal an act entitled "An act to regulate the taking of oysters from the oyster grounds in Maurice River cove; he shall likewise, at the same time, make oath to the names of the owners of the vessel, and of the number of persons in the crew thereof, and places of residence, and which oath shall be reduced to writing, signed by such captain or commander and left with the said collector, to be by him entered and filed; and the said collector is, in all cases where he shall have granted a license, to enter in a book to be kept for that purpose the name of the vessel, the name of the captain or commander and the number of persons in the crew, and the time when such license was granted, and the number of the license; and he shall also deliver to the said captain or commander a certificate of such license, which shall be signed by the said collector, and which shall state the number of the license, the name of the vessel, the name of the captain or commander, the number of persons in the crew, and the time when such license was granted; and the said collector shall receive for each license granted by him the sum of two dollars, and shall pay the same over quarterly, from time to time, to the treasurer of this state, and render an account of the same to the comptroller of this state.

3. And be it enacted, That in case any vessel may have been or may hereafter be made fast to any stake, pile or obstruction or encroachment of any description on the oyster grounds, or any part thereof, the owner or owners of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty of twenty-five dollars for each and every day during which such vessel shall be so made fast, to be recovered, with costs of suit, by the owner or owners of such stake, pile or obstruction or encroachment, in an action of trespass, before any court having jurisdiction thereof.

4. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners shall have power to appoint, for the purposes of this act, three constables, who shall receive for their services the sum of two hundred dollars per annum, and their actual expenses incurred in the performance of their duties, to be audited by the commissioners, on the certificate of the board of health, and paid out of the salary fund appropriated for that purpose; and said constables shall be qualified to act as analysts of dairy products, and it shall be the duty of said constables, with the assistance of the state board of health, to make such analysis of dairy products as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act, and to prosecute all violations of the same; and the said constables shall report to the commissioners, on or before the first day of December in each year, their proceedings for the year next preceding, and such report shall be laid before the legislature by the commissioners, with such recommendations as they may deem proper.

11. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Approved March 22, 1886.

A VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

"Yes, I had a very narrow escape," said a gentleman, whose face was disfigured with a scar. "I was standing on the platform of a railroad car by myself, when one of the brakemen, in the discharge of his duty, came out and asked me if I had a ticket. I replied that I had not, but that I would buy one. He said that would not do, and that I must get off. I refused, and he struck me in the face with his fist, cutting a gash in my cheek. I then got out." Today Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the only reliable blood purifier. 9-15-3

JOTTINGS.

—A special meeting of the City Council will be held in the Council chamber at eight o'clock this evening.

—One week from Thursday the excursion of Perseverance Lodge K. of P. to Fairmount Park and Philadelphia takes place.

—The Middlesex County Grand Jury yesterday sent in a batch of ten indictments, which include cases of libel, slander, murderous assault and larceny. They will be tried next week.

—An appointment was made yesterday at the City Hall, Elizabeth, of the city taxes thus far collected for the year 1886, amounting to $10,000. This will enable the police to get their April pay.

—The barn belonging to Sandford F. Roll of Rahway was destroyed by fire in an early hour yesterday morning. Mr. Roll succeeded in rescuing three horses. The fire is thought to have been caused by an incendiary.

—Constable Smith at noon yesterday began to serve the delinquent fire tax warrants. He reports having met with but two or three refusals to pay promptly, and in each case payment was promised in a day or so.

—If white clothing, say a dress, is put away in a dark closet or drawer, it will in time become yellow. But if it be placed in a box lined with blue paper, or even wrapped in dark blue cloth, it will come out as white as it ever was, no matter how long it has.

—Mr. C. W. Opdyke, whose beam was reported to have knocked down and seriously injured a young son of Charles Morgan on Peace street yesterday morning states that it was not his team which injured the boy, notwithstanding the report of others to the contrary. Mr. Opdyke says his horses were not out of the stable during yesterday.

—John H. French having sold his ready-made clothing department to the Werner clothing house, will continue the merchant tailoring at the old stand, No. 29 West Front street. Mr. French says he will now carry a large stock of fall and winter suitings and goods, consisting of English, French and American clothes, cassimeres and coatings of the latest styles and patterns, and what he will guarantee every customer a perfect fit or no sale, and offers every inducement in his power to prevent people from buying out of town, thus making it profitable for them in every way to encourage home trade and thereby help to build up the business centre. He invites all to give him a call before leaving Fall purchases. See advertisement.

Probably Identified.

The mystery surrounding the death of the unfortunate man, "Patrick J. Halpin," who was killed by jumping from a passing car train at the Fence street bridge several weeks ago, and whose remains were buried in St. Mary's Cemetery after unsuccessful efforts had been made to ascertain his home or the home of his relatives, has probably been cleared up, through the indefatigable efforts of Andrew B. Keaney, the President of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, who, on the 20th of August last, while the victim's body was lying at Ford & Stiles' morgue awaiting identification, addressed a letter to the Parish Priest, and one to the Postmaster at North Strand, Drogheda, Ireland. Mr. Keaney also enclosed the full particulars surrounding the man's death, together with an account taken from The News, in an envelope addressed to "Julia," the signature to the letter found on the dead man's person. Last evening Mr. Keaney was the recipient of the following letter from Ireland:

NORTH STRAND, Drogheda, Ireland, September 5, 1886.

DEAR KIND SIR:—The postmaster is just after sending us your letter containing the heavy news of our poor brother being killed. We shall feel for ever grateful if you will add to your list of kindnesses by sending to every particular, as we are almost heartbroken fearing it is our own darling brother. The letter published was written by my sister, Julia. I enclose you the last letter written by himself. It was time our letter was addressed to him. We cling to the hope that some other man may be wearing and using it to him. Our dear brother is only in his 31st year and will be sadly missed by us all at heart. I am sure he was six feet high. He was fair complexion. In his last letter to us he had been ill with dysentery and had to leave off work in consequence. He was born and reared in Newry, Ireland, and has a brother, a solicitor, living there. The poor fellow has neither father or mother and is only three years in New York. I am going to Germany and Belgium, and I hope and pray some definite word may arrive before I leave. You will have all our prayers for your great kindness. Hoping to hear from you per return mail,

I remain yours very sincerely,
MARGARET HALPIN.

P. S.—My brother and all our family are Roman Catholics.

The following is the address above alluded to, and to which a letter was written on receipt of the foregoing: "P. J. Halpin, care Mr. Michael Burns, 220 Market street, Newark, N. J., U. S. America."

More Burglars.

Within the past few weeks several unsuccessful attempts have been made to rob places on Madison avenue, but in but one case the burglars have either frightened away soon after they gained admission to the place or were unable to find anything of great value. During Sunday burglars effected an entrance through a back window in the store of Messrs. Lufkins & Hammon on Park avenue, and after rifling the money drawer they left through the back entrance, leaving the door wide open. Louis Mulford, an employee of the firm, says he opened the store on Monday morning and found that an unused money drawer back of the counter opened. He says he thought nothing wrong at the time, as he always kept the money in a drawer in the office. An investigation disclosed the back door to be wide open and that a number of empty, as well as a dollar's worth of pennies and the safe-key were the only articles missing. The door of the safe had been drilled in a manner in order to get the books out. Mr. Mulford says the burglars must have gained an entrance in the daytime, as the shades in front were down during the day and bolted at night.

St. Mary's Fair.

The interest taken in the fair now in progress in St. Mary's Hall for the benefit of St. Mary's church is unparalleled in the history of similar entertainments gotten up under the auspices of the Mercy Fair. Last evening the hall was filled with a well-disposed gathering bent on contributing their surplus cash to the success of the undertaking.

The Dramatic Association appeared in a farce entitled "Matter of the Situation"—which earned the plaudits of the spectators. Tomorrow evening the contest for the diamond ring between Miss Jula Field and Miss Maggie Day will be decided, and on Thursday evening, evenings the gold and silver watch contest will be decided. On Saturday evening, at ten o'clock, the fair will good for a passage to Europe and return will be disposed of.

Ordained to the Ministry.

The Auburn (N. Y.) Daily Advertiser of the 13th instant thus speaks of Prof. R. S. Holmes of this city, who, with his wife, are on a three weeks' visit to Auburn: "Professor Richard S. Holmes, registrar of the Chautauqua university, was yesterday ordained to the ministry by the First Presbyterian church in this city. The services were impressive and interesting. Rev. C. C. Hemenway of the Central Presbyterian church delivered the charge to the candidate and Prof. Wm. C. Wilson, D. D., of the Theological seminary preached a discourse on the character and office of the Holy Ghost."

Howell Division Reception.

This evening at their headquarters on Front Front street, Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, will tender a reception and collation to New York Division, No. 1, of New York city. A delegation of Lincoln Division, S. of T. of Elizabeth, will also be in attendance, and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

—The Democratic primary to elect delegates to the State and county conventions will be held in the Democratic Association rooms on West Front street this evening. The city is entitled to four delegates to the Gubernatorial Convention—one from each ward—and five delegates to the Congressional convention—one from each of the First, Second and Third wards, and two from the Fourth.

—A man from New Brunswick is said to have driven up and alighted from a wagon in front of a pawnbroker's establishment in town for the purpose of wheeling to some business, and when he returned his horse and wagon were missing. A description of the rig was given to Borough Marshal Bodine, who says he succeeded in tracing the horse and wagon to a place known as "Stoumen's Woods" in Washington Valley, and there lost all trace of them.

Crescent Avenue Church Organ Recital on their New $5,000 Organ.

The organ recital at the Crescent Avenue church last evening, displayed the qualities of the new organ recently purchased for that magnificent edifice, was attended by as fine an audience of between eleven and twelve hundred people, all present by tickets of invitation, and all delighted with the program, the rendering of which occupied nearly two hours and a half. The Crescent Avenue people and their friends are justly pleased with the instrument to add to Divine praise at that church, so noted for its beauty, but none the less for its religious usefulness. The program was the same published in these columns last Thursday, excepting the first of the ten numbers. "Theme and variations" by Henry Eyre Browne, the famous organist of the Brooklyn tabernacle, who made a change on account of a sprained ankle, from which he was suffering, and which would have interfered with rapid chromatic pedal passage in what is known as the "Thiele Selection" occurring therein. He substituted his Fantasia in D, which required less effort. This explanation we are requested to make, that the organist may not appear to have acted in bad faith in departing from the program. One of the trustees informs us that the cost of the organ is about $5,000. The following is a description of it, as given on the program:

Pneumatic tubular action applied to bellows, thereby giving to the keys a light and their wind direct from the bellows, and not from the wind chest.

The mechanism, workmanship, and arrangements throughout are of the highest type. The interior finish is in keeping with the exterior, all of construction.

The specifications all the best points of American and European schools. The great delicacy and characteristic quality of tone is unsurpassed by pipes of any kind of full organ without harshness, and the perfect blending of the various stops, together with immense tone, yet not lacking in brilliancy, are remarkable features. Every stop has been carefull and special style of voicing. The scales are remarkably even and the quality of tone of each register is true of the Diapason, Gamba, Flute or Reed genus, is admirably preserved.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Regular meeting of the Senior Society, Boys' Branch, in the hall to-night at eight o'clock.

An important meeting of the Ways and Means and Membership committees will be held to-night at eight o'clock.

There was a fair-sized audience at the young men's meeting last evening. The interest and spirit manifested was very striking. Many young men spoke at once on the subject of "What think ye of Christ?" Mr. G. F. Brown led the meeting. As usual the singing was a pleasant feature.

PERSONAL.

George F. Opdyke, wife and children have returned to their house on Seventh street, after summering at Monticello, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Martin of New Brunswick are visiting the family of Dr. Lewis Craig on Somerset street. Mrs. Martin is a niece of the doctor.

Hugh Boyd, editor of the New Brunswick Home News, with his family, are expected to arrive home on the 26th instant, after an absence of several weeks abroad.

Mrs. Kelly and her daughter Miss Rachael, together with Mrs. Baldwin, all of Newark, N. J., have been visiting at the residence of William B. Brown on East Third street.

Joy reigned supreme at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Sauter of North Plainfield on Saturday evening, a young son heralded to the world his presence, he having arrived during the day.

The Elberon Hotel at Long Branch closed a successful season on Saturday evening, at which time the proprietors of the hotel tendered a german to its guests. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Fraley of this city.

Among the prizes awarded the competitors at the State Fair at Waverly, which closed on Friday, was one each awarded to the following named from this city: Halsey C. Compton, second prize, one dollar, for mowing machine; Mrs. Curtis, first prize, one dollar, for tidy; Mrs. Curtis, first prize, one dollar, for tidy; Mrs. Curtis, first prize, one dollar, for toweling; Mrs. Vandervoort, same department, first prize, one dollar, for towel in drawnwork.

Oliver Cruse, a brother of Mr. U. B. Cruse of this city, died at his home in Orange yesterday, after an illness covering a period of several weeks. Deceased was stricken down about five weeks ago with paralysis of the extremities which finally developed into abscess of the liver and caused his death. He was about 53 years of age at the time of his death, and was for seventeen years a resident of this city. A wife and two children survive him. The funeral will take place from the late home of the deceased to-morrow afternoon.

Library Directors' Meeting.

A special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Job Male Art Gallery and Public Library was held in the library building at the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street on Saturday evening. President Male called the meeting to order and the roll call showed the following directors to be present: President Job Male and Messrs. R. P. Talmadge, George H. Babcock, Col. M. W. Tyler and William H. Stillman.

On motion the reading of the minutes of the meeting of August 4th were dispensed with.

A bill of J. S. Cutter, $31.59 for oil, etc., was on motion referred to Mr. Nodyne, the former Librarian for certification.

The following bills were ordered paid being on motion approved, the same to be paid out of the special fund according to the resolution passed at the meeting of August 4th, 1886.

A. M. Griffen	$ 12 91
J. L. Gilbert	17.00
R. T. Perine	22.00
Harry L. Mason	26.50
C. H. Tyler	100.00
T. W. Morrison	17.80
Emma L. Mason	24.75
R. M. Olsen	35.00

A motion was made to take from the table the report of the committee appointed to revise the by-laws and draft rules and regulations for the Art Gallery and Library "being that portion of their report relating to the rules and regulations for the Art Gallery and Library," Carried.

The rules were then read and adopted as read.

On motion the Library Committee was authorized to purchase such printed matter as cards, etc., and a set of drawers as may be necessary for opening the library for circulation. Carried.

A communication was presented and read from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital asking permission to hold their monthly meetings until further notice in one of the rooms of the Library Building. On motion the request was granted and the Secretary was instructed to advise Mr. Cook, the secretary of the Hospital Board of Governors, that they could have the use of the room as desired.

The bill of Mr. H. A. Thorne for books amounting to $17.20 was ordered paid when properly certified to by the librarian and the meeting then adjourned.

Harrigan's Hibernian

Of Irish and American tourists will be at Music Hall on Tuesday, the 23d instant. The company is highly spoken of and the entertainment is said to be very funny throughout. The company is a large one, and each member of the organization recommends himself at once to the audience by good theatrical talent and accomplishments. The illuminated scenes of Ireland, representing the various towns, villages and cities with their ancient towers, are portrayed upon the canvas. In connection with the panorama the inimitable comedy, entitled "The Two Barneys; or Mulligan's Double," will be enacted.

WESTFIELD.

Chas. R. Brown has gone for a week's fishing at White Lake, N. Y.

A temperance mass meeting will be held at Arcanum Hall Thursday evening.

Rev. N. W. Cadwell returned on Saturday from Meriden, N. Y., where he had been spending his vacation.

An alarm of fire brought out the fire department on Saturday morning. Although no smoke was seen, word was brought that the Blake House was on fire. Hose reel and the little giant soon got to the scene, but it was found that some of the Bucket Company members had extinguished the fire before it got any headway. An oil stove was the cause.

The Town Committee held a special meeting Saturday evening for the purpose of hearing Foreman William Gale of H. and L. Co., No. 1, who claims that the present fire department ought not to have been organized, that the H. and L. Co. was the real fire department, and organized as such in 1874. Empire No. 1, was No. 2 and Lion No. 3 originally, but divided into two companies so as to have two more representatives in the fire department. The H. and L. Co. gave to the Empire Co. the engine, etc., and now finds itself short of members, and unable any longer to bear the burden of keeping up the house and repairs. Therefore, the company wishes to have the apparatus and the services to the township as a township fire department, to be under the control of the Town Committee, and of course draw the township's fire appropriation. A number of the firemen were present at the meeting, and the chief talker was Foreman Gale. After recognizing the present fire board, by twice voting for their officers, accepting their bonds, etc., and taking the oath of office, recognizing the present fire board, by twice voting for their officers, accepting their bonds, etc., and taking the oath of office, Foreman Gale stated that he had come to the conclusion that

WALL STREET DID IT ALL.

How the Crookedness Leaked Out During the Cashier's Absence.

"Drive Me to the Jail"—How the Trusted Cashier Received the Fatal Blow to His Good Name—Gen. Neal Dow as a Philosopher—His Aged Father Overcome.

Portland Opinions on the Case.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 21.—It is now thought that the defalcation of W. R. Gould will reach $145,000. The directors think the bank will not lose $867,000. The excitement over the affair is intense. Mr. Gould is 53 years old and has aged twenty years within a week. Besides being cashier of the First National bank he is vice-president of the National Bankers association, also of the Portland Trust company, and a trustee of the Maine Savings bank. It is said that he began embezzling ten years ago. Others declare that the first stealing was done in 1883. There has been a run on the bank in particular about the business affairs. He first bought a very modest home for about $5,500. Later he sold it and purchased an estate in Deering for some $17,000. Recently he sold and built his present residence at a cost of $70,000. He has not been asked to give a bond for many years. All of his original bondsmen, save Gen. Neal Dow, are dead. Neal Dow, and Gen. Dow can only be held for $20,000 of the original $50,000, if at all.

In a similar case here last spring it was decided that the First National could not be held. The discovery of the defalcation is said to have come about as follows: About ten days ago Gould went to New York. During his absence a pistol discovered in Gould's in his affairs. He informed an official, who in turn notified the directors, and they summoned an expert. The latter soon found a shortage. The directors were astounded. As Gould was absent, and a large amount of the bank's collateral was gone also, they supposed he had skipped to Canada. Investigation showed that the missing cashier was in New York. Instead of sending his arrest the directors sent a cautiously worded telegram summoning him home to advise concerning the investment of funds. Mr. Gould seemed to have no fear of the possibility of discovery and promptly returned. Governor Robie, when he left for Boston, accompanied him to this city to prevent him from the least opportunity to escape. After reaching home, and while the investigation was going on, the doomed cashier was kept in ignorance that he had and the knowledge when he came to him gradually was a blinding surprise. It was then too late to escape, and early last week the end came. The fallen man had at the last the frequent consultations of his counsel. He ordered his carriage, and gave to the driver the order: "Go direct to the jail." He had at that time formed the resolution of giving himself up, and of confessing at once to the sense. The order was obeyed, but on the way he met a friend, to whom he told the terrible story of his fall. The gentleman said to him: "But you can't go to jail; no one has made the slightest charge against you."

A SEEMING CROOKEDNESS

Mr. Gould then drove about the city for a time and then went to the bank. Prior to this the bank he was met by the directors, and at the suggestion of one he went to the Falmouth hotel, took a room and was seen and consulted with in regard to the disordered affairs of the bank.

All the week the directors worked on the accounts, assisted by an expert, but instead of finding the shortage diminish it grew worse, and at last it was plain that close to $100,000 had been lost. Then the directors laid the case before Hon. William S. Putnam, who told them that Gould could be arrested and that a further neglect on their part to secure his arrest would make them liable for the loss. Mr. Gould was then arrested and left a

PRISONER IN HIS OWN HOUSE.

Gen. Dow assisted at the investigation and declared that he could not have been more astonished at the result if the city of New York had sunk out of sight, but he had no trouble like a philosopher. He said: "I never fret over what I can't help."

The Rev. Dr. Shailer, Hon. Edward Gould, who is a very old man, seems more affected by the trouble than any one else. If it proves that Mr. Gould has been carrying on the peculiar financial business for the last ten years there will be little sympathy felt, as the greater part of his public and religious labors have been within that period. "How could he have practiced as he did while all the time engaged in stealing?" is the question on many tongues. It was perhaps the unexpectedness of the discovery.

Gould will be held till the comptroller orders proceedings against him. The bank officials have made no criminal charge against him. Treasurer Lapham says:

EVERY DOLLAR OF THE SECRET MONEY

was lost in Wall street.

Gould has conveyed to Governor Robie, as trustee for the bank, all his real estate, and has also, it is understood, given all the personal property, the whole amounting to $60,000. He has left himself and family without a dollar, being entirely dependent upon what he can make good the amount taken. Mrs. Gould has joined her husband in this manly act, and has conveyed the real estate standing in her name to Governor Robie as trustee for the bank. It is said apparently on authority that unless Mr. Gould has made away with the returns to the comptroller of the currency he will not be held responsible to answer as defendant of a criminal charge. National Bank Examiner Wiswell is here. Receiver Bodwell, late bank examiner, have arrived, and will at once make a most thorough examination into the affairs of the bank.

The Argus says the misfortune is not so serious to the bank, which can stand its loss, as to the people of Maine, who have lost confidence in a man to whom they had been taught to look for pure an act.

ROBERT AND EXPERT FINANCIER,

one who was regarded as foremost in the Congregation of American Bankers and whose paper before that body had attracted widespread attention. It says: It is certainly unfortunate, perhaps wrong, to put the whole blame upon the shoulders of Mr. Gould. It is possible that the neglect or carelessness of others, or what, in the quaint language of the Norman French law, so long imbedded in English statute and commentaries are called laches, have something to do with the case. At any rate it is well to reserve judgment until the facts are known. Mr. Gould may be entirely to blame, but that inference remains to be demonstrated. It is turns out that the fault is entirely his, words of condemnation too strong can hardly be found in any language.

WHITE PLUMES WAVING.

What the Knights Templars are Doing at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Sept. 21.—Twenty thousand Knights Templars were brought to this city yesterday by river and rail to the triennial conclave of the Defenders of the Cross. All the hotels and other available buildings are crowded to their capacity with the knightly hosts and their families. Special trains continued to arrive all day, bringing thousands more, and conclaves, headed by bands from the local commanderies, with relays of military bands, escorted the visiting commanderies from the wharves and depots to their respective headquarters.

The city has been given up to the entertainment of the plumed guests. From every window the Templar flags and pennants bearing the signs and emblems of the order are flattering in a bracing September breeze.

One of the chief subjects, if not the main one for discussion and determination at the meeting of the grand encampment is the question of amending the organic law of the order with regard to the powers and privileges of the grand encampment. A meeting of members of the grand encampment has been called for this afternoon, at the Masonic headquarters, to decide what course the opponents of the proposed change shall pursue.

The call is addressed to all members of the grand encampment who oppose its enactment, and the object of the call is to "devise ways and means to give effective expression to the desire for reform (if reform be needed) within our order as now constituted, and to defeat the existing effort to weaken our general governing body, thereby destroying its efficiency." The propositions for change made by the grand commandery of Pennsylvania were adopted by the views of the Iowa grand commandery, and were formulated by the latter body in five resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That the grand encampment, Knights Templars of the United States abandon the system of centralized and exclusive power which it now maintains and return to the general system devised by the founders.

Second—Resolved, That the constitution and code be revised and so simplified as to include general principles, leaving to grand commanderies ample power, which of right belongs to them, to legislate upon all matters of detail.

Third—Resolved, That sovereign power be recognized as vested in grand commanderies, and such general powers only in the grand encampment as may be expressly delegated to it.

Fourth—Resolved, That under the general legislation of the grand encampment jurisdiction be vested in grand commanderies on the subjects of uniforms, ritual and membership.

Fifth—Resolved, That in order that the general encampment may in peace and quietness provide the legislation necessary to carry out the foregoing changes, it is its duty bound to positively prohibit all parades and entertainments at the time and place when and where it is conclave shall be held.

The question involved seems to be what is known in politics as the "state's rights" problem, and according to one of the Nebraska opponents of the proposed changes, the Knights, speaking in general terms, are divided on about the same geographical lines as those which have been marked the dominance of the political parties upholding "state's rights" and "centralization" respectively.

The Apaches at Fort Marion.

St. Augustine, Fla., Sept. 21.—The band of Apaches, numbering 187 men, women and 145 children, have arrived at Fort Marion. They were in charge of Col. J. F. Wade, Eighteenth cavalry, and two companies of troops, numbering in receive them were the Chihuahuas, Nani, Hosen, Colay and others of the band of seventy-five who have been here some months. The men are in the main strong and muscular. Many of the younger women are good-looking, with hands and feet small enough to provoke the envy of the fair ones in the case. "I had not learned to make any remarks on the question before the chamber," he said. "I suppose the report of the committee would speak for itself, but when a member, however guarded his language, reflects upon the committee and the president of the chamber—"

Mr. Mahoney interrupted to disclaim any such intention, and the president continued: "I wish to say that I do not think the mayor intended to wrong the city out of one cent; but the only thing for me to do is to report, as did the majority of the committee, on what he did not or what his motives were—common council must consider that this body has no right to sit in judgment. It cannot usurp the place of select council. To pass a vote of censure is to pass judgment on the charges and say they are true."

"It is not an impeachable offence," said Mr. Zane, "to receive money which he was required to receive for the city."

Finally the following resolution that the opinion of the city solicitor be obtained on the legal plan upon which counsel could proceed, and that he report to council on Thursday next.

The consideration of Mr. Smith's substitute to pass a vote of censure was discussed and voted down—yeas, 62; nays, 43. After the result of this vote had been announced the committee's report for impeachment was adopted by a vote of: Yeas, 69; nays, 38.

A resolution appointing a time for the appointment of a committee to notify select council of the finding of articles of impeachment against the mayor was postponed, and the chamber adjourned.

There has seldom been witnessed such a scene of excitement as was presented in and about the council chamber during the session. The galleries and lobby were packed to their limit and hundreds were turned away. Nothing was thought of beyond the impeachment of Mayor Smith—the first event of the kind in this city. Every member was in his seat, and the arguments pro and con were forcible and eloquent. The arguments of Mrs. Clay, in behalf of the report, and Mr. Hudson, against its recommendations, were masterly. When the last speaker had resumed his seat the vote upon the motion of censure as a substitute for the report of the committee for the impeachment itself were quickly taken. The result spread the wildfire through the city, forming the absorbing topic of discussion.

Petroleum in Austria.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Consul Gilbert, of Trieste, gives tables showing a rapid falling off in the import of American petroleum and a corresponding increase in that of Russia since 1880. The price of the American article is 6.60 florins per 100 kilograms, and substantially the same quality of Russian only 7.15 florins. Unless American exporters can make it possible to place upon the markets of Trieste petroleum of the same grade at better quality than the late shipments and at a lower price there is little prospect of their retaining even the present portion of the trade.

Bicycles Still Running.

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 21.—There is every indication that the bicycle tournament of the Lynn Cycle club on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week will be the largest of the "big four." There are 233 entries, against 241 for four days at Springfield. This large number of riders includes nearly all the noted flyers. The number of men booked to participate is 53.

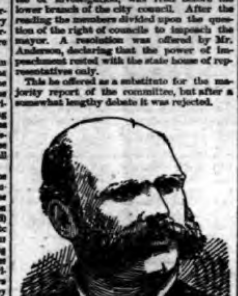
THE MAYOR IMPEACHED

ACTION OF PHILADELPHIA'S COUNCIL ON MAYOR SMITH'S CASE.

After Voting Down Various Substitute Resolutions, the Original Report of the Investigating Committee was Adopted, Which Charged Malfeasance.

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—The impeachment resolution against Mayor Smith, as recommended by a majority of the committee of investigation, was taken up before the lower branch of the city council. After the reading the members divided upon the question of the right of councils to impeach the mayor. A resolution was offered by Mr. Anderson, declaring that the power of impeachment rested with the state house of representatives only.

This he offered as a substitute for the majority report of the committee, but after a somewhat lengthy debate it was rejected.



MAYOR W. B. SMITH.

The chair recognized Mr. Maloney, who offered as a substitute for the recommendation of the committee a resolution of censure for the mayor for his gross and reprehensible business methods. Mr. Maloney supported his resolution by a speech, in which he said that to say the worst the mayor only mingled wrongs and errors. The belief of a portion of the city's, every cent has been accounted for and paid into the city treasury.

Mr. William M. Smith presented as a substitute the following resolution, which was accepted by Mr. Maloney in place of his own: Resolved, By the common council of the city of Philadelphia, that William B. Smith, mayor of Philadelphia, deserved and should receive the unqualified censure of the councils of the city and of the people of Philadelphia for their gross, negligent and careless manner in which he has performed many of the duties of his office, and that nothing but the general belief that the said William B. Smith had no dishonest purpose or corrupt motive in his reckless and reprehensible use of the public money has enabled common council to come to the conclusion (in view of the fact that the said

ODD FELLOWS' MEETING

THE SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE BEGINS ITS WORK AT BOSTON.

Reports of the Grand Sire and Secretary Show a State of Great Prosperity—In the Order of the "Three Golden Links."

Lots of Money Handled.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—The sixty-second annual session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., was called to order at 9:30 a. m. yesterday. An address of welcome was made by the grand master of Massachusetts, Mr. Hill, and was responded to by Henry F. Garey, of Maryland, grand sire.

The reports of the officers of the grand lodge were presented, and were referred for judgment to a special committee, consisting of Representative Goodwin, of Georgia; Jarrett, of Iowa; Lamb, of New Jersey; Marvin, of Vermont, and Higgins, of Maine.

In his annual report Grand Sire Garey said that when the sovereign grand lodge last met in Boston, in 1868, the number of lodges in order in the whole world was only 7,000, members, and its total revenues only $1,161,-220.65. To-day it was 17,210 members, and in 1885 its total revenues was $5,309,693.77. In 1864 the order existed in only one foreign country—the Sandwich Islands—while to-day it flourished in Germany, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Chili, Peru, Mexico, Cuba and Australasia. The grand sire does not favor the proposed removal of the headquarters of the order from Baltimore.

The grand sire thanked his officers for their aid and support and made glowing predictions for the future prosperity of the order.

Grand Secretary Theodore A. Rose reported that since 1885 the net gain was 11 lodges and 1,080 members, and 13 encampments and 119 members, 115 Rebekah degree lodges and 6,081 members. The table of statistics of the subordinate lodges of the order from 1830 has been revised by adding the information received for the year 1885, and is submitted as follows:

Subordinate lodges in subordinate lodges, 1,404,110; members relieved, 1,260,180; widowed families relieved, 187,683; members, 717,996; total relief, $11,164,900.09; total receipts, $10,930,564,362.08.

The following embracing Australasia and Germany, represents the condition of the order Dec. 31, 1885:

Sovereign grand lodge, 1; independent grand lodge (German empire and Australasia) 2; subordinate grand encampments, 2; subordinate encampments, 1,959; subordinate grand lodges, 65; subordinate lodges, 8,181; encampment members, 74,741; lodge members, 534,387.

From the report of the Grand Treasurer, Isaac A. Sheppard, it appears that the Sovereign Grand lodge is in a good financial condition. The balance on hand Aug. 20, 1885, was $16,574.65; receipts of the year, $40,045.-86; expenditures, $45,430.07; balance on hand Aug. 20, 1886, $22,206.42.

The available assets of the sovereign grand lodge are $22,206.42 in cash and $55,-300 in government bonds, a total of $78,-506.42. The appointments to a large number of committees were then announced. The remainder of the session was devoted to the presentation of business.

The thirteen sections of the eighteenth excursion of wounded Odd Fellows have arrived without accident.

The passage of so many excursion trains at one time with right of way over so great a distance as that between Chicago and Boston is something that is said to be unprecedented, but so far no accident has occurred beyond the breaking down of two Pullman sleepers near North Adams.

At the grand banquet to the Odd Fellows last night addresses were delivered by W. E. Parmenter, P. G. M., presiding; R. Bentley Young, Grand Secretary Garey, Governor Robinson, Mayor O'Brien and others. About 500 persons were present, and it was a very enjoyable affair.

West Pointers Sentenced.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 21.—The sentence of the thirty odd cadets who engaged in the "hash" on Aug. 28, has been made public. It is a general deprivation of privileges until July, which puts off the graduation of the first class men for some weeks, and walking "extra," that is marching up and down a certain space for so many hours every Saturday for ten weeks. The cadet officers who were court martialed for disobedience of orders have had the decision in their cases forwarded to Washington. This means a heavy sentence, probably dismissal, as ordinary punishment can be inflicted without authority from the war department. The general belief among officers is that the president will mitigate the sentence.

Making Silver Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The amount of silver issued from the treasury is steadily increasing. During the week 1,114,904 new standard silver dollars were put in circulation, a larger amount than has ever before been put out in one week. There are now nearly 60,000,000 silver dollars in actual circulation. Treasury officials predict a large issue of $1 silver certificates, as it is thought they will take the place of some of the larger denominations of greenbacks.

Official Vote of Maine.

AUGUSTA, Sept. 21.—The official vote of Maine for governor, except a few small towns, returns from which have not been received, gives the following result: Bodwell (Republican), 68,837; Edwards (Democrat), 58,987; Clark (Prohibition), 4,972; scattering, 90. Bodwell's plurality, 12,850.

MORE NEEDY THAN CHARLESTON.

The Railroads Support the Fasts of the Texas Drought.

BUFFALO, Sept. 21.—Rev. John Brown, a Presbyterian clergyman of Albany, Tex., is in the city in the interest of 100,000 starving families, representing 500,000 people, who he says are starving in the drought-stricken district of northwest Texas. Appeals have been made by him in different churches. Mr. Brown says that the suffering and distress caused by the drought, which has existed for the past fifteen months, was even greater than at Charleston, but the railroad authorities, who owned lands which they wanted to sell to settlers, consented to keep up the usual condition of the people, lest it should interfere with emigration. Thousands of families had not tasted meat in the country, corn valued is being carried thirty miles for household use. The object of his mission, he says, is to procure 100,000 bushels of seed wheat, but owing to the Charleston disaster he had thus far only received tens where otherwise he might have obtained thousands of dollars. The task was greater than the people of Texas could perform, and in the name of humanity, mercy and charity he appealed to the charitable public to help the starving multitude.

Patent Office Facts.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—A statement has been prepared at the patent office showing the operations of that bureau for the last fiscal year, ended June 30, 1886. During the year 40,676 applications for patents, designs, trademarks and labels were received; 37,097 of these applications were for new patents alone, 721 for designs and 168 for reissue of patents. Seventy-four hundred and thirty-four patents and designs were issued during the year. The receipts of the office were $1,200,167; expenditures, $992,909; surplus, $207,258. The data included in the statement it seems the office has run behind in its work during the past year. On July 1, 1885, there were 6,712 applications awaiting action by the office, against 5,760 on July 1, 1885.

No Hope for the Lost Miners.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A Scranton dispatch says the shaft where the miners are imprisoned is so dangerous that not only are further explorations impossible, but great care has to be taken to prevent an explosion which might wreck the whole mine. Hopes are stated not to be very high away from the entrance to the mine, and watchmen are guarding them.

Two Rifled Mail Bags Found.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 21.—Two rifled United States mail bags were discovered under the platform of the cotton press here. Both were cut open and empty. No letter or sign of the contents was found, but there is reason to think that they were rifled on Saturday night after having reached from an incoming train from Nashville.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The Stock Market Takes a Little Bit of a Boom.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Money opened at 5-highest 5, lowest 4. Exchange closed firm at 4.86@4.86. Actual rates, 4.81¼@4.81¾ for sixty days, and 4.85¼@4.87¼ for demand.

The stock market was more active and higher for all stocks, the leading feature, however, being Reading, Lackawanna, Delaware and Hudson, Lake Shore and Western Union, all of which were largely traded in and showed advances by 1 o'clock on all stocks, ranging from ½ to 2 per cent. About 2 o'clock, caused by heavy selling to realize profits. In the last half hour there was a general recovery.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do.

N. Y. Front street, Plainfield, N. J., June 25, '86.

DR. CHAS. R. THIERS,

Dear Sir—You ask my opinion of your Stomatine. With a knowledge of your formula I can say with confidence that the combination is perfect, and the ingredients are only such as should enter into the best. I can also say from personal experience that it is a good preparation, and I trust that I have not the time that you prescribe it. With my experience of 30 years as a pharmacist, I am free to say that yours is the best preparation of the kind I have ever compounded, and I have used it and I freely to my own family. I feel satisfied that it will do all you claim for it, and recommend the trade to for which you recommend it, may be relieved and cured by its use. Respectfully,

WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers,

My dear sir—It affords me great pleasure to write the testimonial in behalf of your Stomatine, which I have used in my family for years with much benefit and no other remedy for the teeth, gums and mouth can compare with it. On the 4th of March last I had the misfortune to lose my left arm, and since I have manufactured and sold about five gross of your Stomatine.

Be ng familiar with the component parts I can readily say it is a long action up on a scientific basis, and I consider it a valuable addition to the materia medica. I have also advised and recommended it to the purchase for which it is designed. Yours respectfully, WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers,

Dear sir—I most cheerfully bear testimony to the unrivaled excellence of Stomatine. I have not only used it personally, but have frequently called it to my customers and they all speak in the highest praise of it. Yours Respectfully,

E. M. STELLE.

MANY YEARS AGO

WOMEN DIDN'T WEAR WARM CLOTHING AND OFTEN CAUGHT COLDS.

It Was the Fashion to Go About in Low-Necked Dresses and Short Sleeves in Winter, and Most of Them Married at Sixteen.

I have a dear old friend—a genuine "lady of the old school," who has a hobby. It is the precocity of the present age.

"Pray, madam, how old were you when you were married?" I asked her one day.

She hesitated, and the blood rose a little in her delicate old face.

"Just 16," she responded.

After awhile it all leaked out. Most of the girls of her day were married at 15 and 17, often at 13. All of her sisters were married before they were 20. Then, after little diplomacy, she gave some particulars of the way they did it fifty years ago. Hygiene was not invented then; even the name was not known. The wonder is how any of the children survived to be born. The wonder is how any of the women survived at all. Nobody but men wore flannel; my old friend told me that the young ladies couldn't, positively couldn't.

"Why not?"

"Because they wore low-necked frocks all the year round. In winter they wore capes to cover their bare shoulders. Of course, they were not strictly comme il faut, but the most delicate part of the chest and between the shoulders was exposed. The little girls wore not only low-necked, but short-sleeved, woolen dresses, with nothing over their poor little chests and arms but a thin muslin apron."

"Poor things," I said, "how they must have shook and shivered—in the good old days. Fancy one of the little girls of to-day, clothed in warm flannel from her neck to her heels, with stout woolen stockings coming quite over the knees—trying to adopt the costume of the good old days!"

"Then, the babies! Bare armed and bare necked, too, except in the coldest weather, when they had a thin merino sack put on them."

"Poor babies," said I. "The general idea seemed to be to expose the neck and arms as much as possible. Under the most adverse circumstances. Wasn't there a good deal of rheumatism in the good old time?"

"I am afraid I must say yes," replied my old friend, doubtfully. "All middle-aged people, it seems to me, had the rheumatism then. And they don't seem to me now," continued the old lady, "to have made any change in their clothing according to variations in the weather. No dress waists for summer were used. The line between summer and winter clothes was rightly drawn. In May, ladies put away all their thick dresses, and wore nothing but the thinnest muslins and cambrics until autumn. Of course, we had cotton wool, but we managed to shiver through them in our airy garments. If I had gone and put on a thick frock, as my daughter did when the thermometer gets down to 50, I would have been thought crazy. Besides, they were all packed away.

"The one thing which they wore without regard to the seasons was a bonnet. A young woman in moderate circumstances fifty years ago seldom had but one bonnet, and that she wore until she wore it out, summer and winter. If she in most genteel society, in summer, most likely she bought a straw or drawn silk bonnet, which she wore the next winter without considering remark; and if it was winter she bought a velvet bonnet, perhaps, and wore it bravely through the dog days. Dunstable bonnets were very fashionable when I was a girl. They were a kind of plaited straw, but they melted away if water touched them. A rain storm was death to them. Dunstable bonnets and percussion caps appeared about the same time, and a good many people confused the names and called them Dunstable caps and percussion bonnets."

"How about the shoes? In these bad modern times any young woman appearing on the street in cloth gaiters would be thought a lunatic. Nobody is admirable except a rugger lar kid or leather walking shoe, substantially cut and made."

"I'm afraid," sighed the dear old soul, "that we didn't even always wear cloth gaiters. Many a day in winter I have gone down the street in low cut cloth shoes and silk stockings. Indeed, that was considered the only correct thing for a young woman with any pretensions to elegance."

"I have seen some of those old gaiters," I remarked with gentle malice. "They barely came to the ankle; they were of the thinnest kind of cloth, and the soles were no soles at all—scarcely thicker than good wrapping paper. I would be afraid to go around the corner in such shoes."

"I am afraid we girls had a good many colds and coughs," my old friend sighed.

"I should think so."

"Then as to wraps," she continued, "it was the height of every girl's ambition to have a Chantou crape shawl. If a girl had one she wore it, no matter how cold it might be. I was pretty cold, I remember, one January day, with nothing around me but a silk shawl, but I didn't mind it. Then, we couldn't walk fast to keep up our circulation. It was proper for ladies to walk in a slow and leisurely manner."

"That, together with the insufficient clothing and scanty food you allowed yourselves, must have made you rather pale and nervous."

"Well, it was not considered elegant," remarked the old lady, "for young girls to eat much. A delicate appetite was considered refined and feminine. As to sleeping rooms, it is true that we had open fireplaces, which afforded some ventilation, but as none of the windows let down from the top of course we couldn't do without a fire in our bedrooms. We slept on feather beds. They lasted a long time. Sometimes they were in use fifty years. When I waked up in the morning I always felt dull and heavy. In the summer we had mattresses put on top of the feather beds. There were very few hair mattresses in those days. Most of them were of corn shucks, with an occasional corn cob thrown in."—New York Mail and Express.

A Curious Chinese Myth.

The curious belief exists in China that white hairs are spread over the ground by earthquakes, and are actually dug up. These hairs are those of the huge subterranean animal that shakes the world. Dr. Macgowan has suggested that fine crystals have been deposited from percolating water on the hairs of animals, in clines to the opinion that the hairs of the Chinese traditions had a vegetable origin. This leads Professor W. T. Dyer to point out that an English writer who had been deputed to investigate the alleged phenomenon after an earthquake at Shanghai in 1852, found that the hairs were those of horses, dogs and wolf-like animals, and, of course, were no more uncommon than at other times.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Earthquakes.

A good number of jokes are being poked at the earthquake, but the Charleston papers are not copying any of them.—Detroit Free Press.

When the earthquake came the other night more than 30,000 women in Georgia were convinced that they had discovered a man under the bed.—Macon Telegraph.

The jury in the Gilbert Davis case were in their room at court house until 2 o'clock to agree, and, it is said, there was no probability of their arriving at a verdict. After the earthquake was over, however, they agreed in short order unanimously.—Boston Gas. Times.

The idea of naming a little girl baby Earthquakeana just because she was born in Charleston two or three hours before the shaking up is simply horrible. The poor innocent little thing may have cried, but she didn't cause the earthquake, and there is no sense in tying it to her, and making her drag it through life.—Cleveland Leader.

It is strange how a circus will upset a town. I have been taking an oath—solemn oath—that if my wife died and I should marry again my new and wife will be an orphan if I have to wait till she is 100 years old."—St. Paul Globe.

UNDER ITALIAN SKIES.

GRACE GREENWOOD CHATS ABOUT MANY INTERESTING THINGS.

A Make-Believe Regicide—Exiled Claimants to Crowns—King Humbert in the Halls—About Titles of Nobility in the French Republic—They Cannot Survive.

[Special Correspondence.]

MILAN, Sept. 1.—We have been having a little sensation in the regicide line. Last week a young soldier of good standing, a sergeant in the Eighty-eighth infantry, was stationed at Monza as guard of the king at his summer palace, attempted to commit suicide by discharging his fusil plump and square into his breast. By almost a miracle he escaped death, the ball not touching any vital part; but it lies so near the heart, they say, as physical wreck, his right arm being paralyzed. When this would-be suicide was discovered weltering in his gore, in his pocket there was found a letter, peremptorily addressed, "To his Majesty, Humbert, King of Italy," and running thus:

KING HUMBERT OF ITALY

I have received a command to kill your majesty, but at the moment of action I have thought that your life is precious and that mine is dear only to my mother and to myself. I refuse to kill myself. Before dying I commend to your majesty my poor mother.

FRANCESCO DE PASCHALIS.

On reading this letter, Humbert made a remark which spoke both for his courage and goodness of heart. He said: "This is a crazy fellow, who would render his suicide interesting." The king was, however, mistaken. Though when first interrogated, the sergeant had declared that the "removal" of Humbert was a "little job" laid out for him by a secret society of conspirators who met one night in an hour of Nihilistic infatuation, he had solemnly sworn to obey, he since has confessed that this story was a mere fabrication, and that he concocted it to give his poor mother a claim on the generous charity of the king. As for the motive of his attempt on his own life, the heroic-hearted youth in the case," was not a good old lady, but a very naughty young one, whom, on a recent leave, he had met at Alzano, his native town. It is said that the fickle fair one, tired of his attentions, has fallen to a fellow soldier, which time-piece Signorina Delilah had taken a fancy to and gained possession of by some means, and Francesco Paul, being able to summon up no disappearance, was on the eve of being denounced as a thief, disgraced and stripped of the sergeant's stripes, and preferred death. Perhaps it is a pity he could not have had his choice.

The son of Vittorio Emanuele does not seem well. On the very morning of this pretended event, while many about him were alarmed by the sergeant's letter, Humbert drove down to Milan in an open carriage, with no guards, and remained there all day on the day of one of the most terrific thunder storm of the season. What a rain was that—rushing, roaring, pouring, plunging down. It looked, seen across the wide Piazza del Duomo, like a lake on end. Just when the tempest was at its height the king drove into the piazza, toward the royal palace. Some of his loyal subjects, sheltered under the colonnades, raised a shout of "Viva il Re!" and he, seeing himself found out, bowed in return, lifting his hat with his usual unbending courtesy, having its anointed head to the pelting flood—for that was a storm in which no stoutest umbrella could live. About an hour later he started back to Monza still in the rain, still in an open carriage.

Yet King Humbert knows, by experience, the peculiar perils which beset the best regulated royal families nowadays. "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown"—the only exceptions among present European monarchs being the Infantile Alphonso, of Spain, and the imbecile Otho, of Bavaria—and yet how many heads there are that ache and itch to wear that troublous and perilous circlet. Behold in France, or Republique Française, the four pretenders, all after that old crown which the republic has laid on the shelf, yet all posing as distinguished patriots, thinking only of their country's good (they say), and lifting her from the slough of republican vulgarity and corruption to the old height of imperial glory or Bourbon purity. They are ready and eager to lay down their lives on the altar of la patrie—they are as sacrificial lambs, bleating to be offered up. I thought, with many of them, that the government of M. Grevy was of that worm thing than a crime, a blunder, in expelling all those princes, till the indignant exiles went to "revolutionize" on their own hook. Some of each fellow showing his hand for the proposed game of revolution.

These Parthian arrows were dipped in the very venom of dissection and disgust, and furnish the best defense for the severe action of the government. Since those manifestoes appeared, since the Empress Eugenie's well-conned "the illustrious exiles" with much sanctatious sympathy, I have hoped more ardently than ever that the French republic would continue to "hold the fort" against the two elder men and the two boys, who threaten her most direfully. In the number of the pretenders is her safety, perhaps.

The four "heirs" may wring one another to death. I do not believe that the dainty Bourbon lilies will ever again really flourish in their native soil, water them with blood any more with tears with the hope will. They will be overgrown by vulgar democratic cereals, or perhaps choked with communistic and atheistical brambles and thistles. I believe the last Napoleonic throne was burned with the Tuileries. If the present government has strengthened and not weakened itself in the seven years' period of power and prosperity, its tendency must be more and more democratic. An able English writer says: "Titled nobility cannot long survive in the French republic."

A member of the chamber of deputies stood in a doorway at them not long since by a comfy propounding the question: "Who is the open market. According to his plan, plain citizens, by the payment of certain guaranteed fees to the government, could call themselves dukes, marquises, counts or barons. The old aristocracy of France is, after all, wise enough to reap the inevitable title of chaff and weed. He is no longer the "proud and "mighty" caste it once was.

GRACE GREENWOOD.

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

CHAPTER LXXXVIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Delaware and Raritan canal and to guard and protect the," approved March 4th, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the aforesaid section of the act to which this is a supplement, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That the commissioners appointed by the governor of this state, to appraise lands, waters and water rights, and other property taken, and damages done, under the said act, with power to act in case of the absence, refusal or disability of any of their number, be and they are hereby authorized and empowered to appraise, assess and pay for all lands and the compensation for all damages, or for both such lands and damages, at the discretion of the court before whom such application for appraisal is made.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER LXXXIX.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to authorize cities to construct sewers and drains and to regulate the assessment of taxes therefor," approved March eighth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That where any property shall have been assessed, or may hereafter be made under the authority of the act to which this is a supplement, and the assessment or assessments have been issued in pursuance of the same, and the property upon which the same is assessed shall be sold for the non-payment of the same, or may be lawfully so refused the principal of the said assessment, with interest thereon, from the date of sale, and all costs and charges, and the interest for a period of two years, of such deficiency, shall be assessed upon the remaining property at not exceeding ten per centum per annum, and payable at such place as the common council or other governing body of the city of Paterson may designate, and may be negotiated and sold for any sum not less than par, by the said common council or other governing body, and the said certificates or bonds, as far as the same may be necessary for the purpose, placing the same in a separate class.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed March 22, 1886.

CHAPTER XC.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act constituting courts for the trial of small causes," (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the twenty-second section of the act of which this is amendatory be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

22. And be it enacted, That all suits brought or commenced before the said court shall be by the plaint in this state, which, under the present practice, would be either a capias ad respondendum or summons or trespass on the case, for injuries arising from the wrongful taking or detaining of goods or of duties arising from contract, shall be in the name and style of actions upon contracts, and actions for the recovery of debts arising by bond in the same suit, any law, usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

3. And be it enacted, That actions of trespass for injuries to the person, and private property, and of trover and of trespass on the case, for injuries arising from the wrongful taking of goods, shall be in the name and style of actions of tort, and counts for said causes of action may be joined in the same suit.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 27, 1886.

CHAPTER XCI.

An Act to regulate the issuing of bonds by municipal corporations.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful for any municipal corporation in this state to issue any bonds whereby the indebtedness of such municipal corporation shall be increased, so long as any such municipal corporation shall be entitled to issue bonds in payment of any past due bonds or the interest thereon, or shall remain in arrears in the payment of any moneys justly due and owing by such municipal corporation, that this act shall not be construed to prohibit the issuing of bonds for the purpose of paying obligations in anticipation of taxes; provided, also, that any such municipal corporation may issue bonds for the purpose of funding the payment of any such county or state tax or assessment.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts of the Legislature, general and private, inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 26, 1886.

CHAPTER XCII.

A Further Supplement to the act entitled "An act for the improvement of public roads," approved April 25th, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the owner or owners of any toll road shall have the right to make a justice of the peace in the township to try before him any violation of any ordinance of its mayor and council, or any violation of the rules and regulations of said road, and that the said justice shall have the same power and authority in the premises as he has in the trial of any case of assault and imprisonment, upon conviction, in all respects, as the said justice has in any township in this state.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the mayor and council of any borough to make and establish ordinances and regulations for establishing the grades and boundaries of all toll roads which may hereafter be laid out.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 26, 1886.

CHAPTER XCIII.

Supplement to an act respecting bridges.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever a majority of the board of chosen freeholders of any county of this state shall agree upon the necessity of improving any bridge, whether the same or incorporated property, as a free bridge, and shall so declare by a vote to that effect, and shall publish the same in two of the daily newspapers, if there be two published in the county, to be designated by the said board, for the term of six weeks before the public may, provided that the act shall not apply to any bridge the annual receipts of which, by any turnpike or road company or individual, shall exceed $1,000.

2. And be it enacted, That so much of the act of incorporation of any bridge company hereafter incorporated as may be inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same is hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 26, 1886.

CHAPTER XCIV.

An Act in relation to mendicant and vagrant children.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any person or persons who shall hereafter cause, procure or otherwise, having in his or her custody or control any child or children under the age of sixteen years, shall wilfully neglect to give away, let out, employ or otherwise dispose of such child or children, in any street, highway or any house, tile or premises, for the purpose, or in any manner, as to cause, encourage or allow such child or children to beg or receive alms, or to go, sing, play or perform for money or other valuable thing, or to solicit or receive any money or other valuable thing for any exhibition or for any service or pretended service, or to sell or expose for sale any article whatsoever, or to be present for any of the purposes aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months, or both, at the discretion of the court before which such conviction may be had.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 26, 1886.

CHAPTER XCV.

An Act relative to recorders in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the recorder of any city of this state may, in case of inability from any cause to act therein, designate in writing a justice of the peace in his county to act in his stead during the period of such inability, and such justice of the peace shall thereupon have power to perform all the duties of such recorder in such city during the period of such inability, and the person acting shall have, hold, exercise, use and possess all the powers, rights and privileges of such recorder, and shall be entitled to receive and retain all fees and emoluments of such recorder during the period of such inability.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 26, 1886.

Jottings.

—An entertainment is being arranged for the benefit of the Reform Club reading room, to take place in October.

—Music Hall Association to day advertise Thatcher, Primrose and West minstrels as the next entertainment given by the association.

—The oil in a lamp in a Park avenue cigar store ignited about half-past nine o'clock last evening, and might have resulted in a conflagration, had it not been promptly thrown into the street.

—An old lady caught her right foot between the narrow recess in front of the postoffice yesterday afternoon, and assistance had to be rendered before her foot could be extricated.

—Some miscreant, with a limited amount of brains, went along West Fourth street last evening and lifted off the gates in front of several houses, depositing the same to the walk in such a position as to make pedestrians stumble over them.

—It is now proposed to engage a new choir for Trinity Reformed church. Pastor Raymond said on Sunday that a number of new plans would be submitted to the consistory during the week, among them one to consider the advisability of adding a choir to the church.

—According to the weather prognostications the autumnal equinox will occur at ten o'clock this evening. The sun then enters the sign Libra, the ecliptic, and the equator cross each other, and the astronomical autumn commences. The sun shines from pole to pole and night and day are of equal length all over the globe.

—The W. C. T. U. of New Brunswick has had a cart built with four large bullets for making coffee for firemen. A colored man in charge of the cart, making the coffee and distributing it to the firemen at each fire. This new departure by the W. C. T. U. is said to be giving general satisfaction to them having the matter in charge.

—Complaint is made of the boys who congregate about the entrance to Music Hall during the day and evening, and whom it is said to their heart's content. A delegation of street gamins of the city assembled there on Monday at noon and kept up a continual screeching which so annoyed the residents and business men in the immediate vicinity, that they were finally compelled to drive the boys away.

Howell Division Sons of Temperance.

The members of Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, held a meeting in their rooms on East Front street last evening. The meeting was presided over by Sister Worthy Patriarch Sarah A. Mattox and after the usual business was disposed of, which included the initiation of four new candidates —Miss L. Marsh, Messrs. Southard, Baber and Livingston—the meeting adjourned, to be followed by a reception and collation to the visiting delegates. The committee in charge had tastefully decorated the assembly room with Chinese lanterns, flags and hunting, and on the platform was a fine display of cut flowers. Grand Deputy Keenan of Amerous Division, No 254, of Metuchen, and Mr. W. R. Mattox of Howell Division, No. 97, were appointed as a committee to introduce Grand Worthy Patriarch Day of New Jersey, and the following delegations: New York Division, No. 1, of New York city; Scarlet Division, No. 81, of Newark; Columbia Division, No. 209, of New Brunswick; Dunellen Division, No. 196, of Dunellen; Lincoln Division, No. 27, of Elizabeth; East Orange Division, No. 184, of East Orange; American Division, No. 102, of Metuchen; Peace Light, No. 208, of Newark. After a few words of welcome by the Worthy Patriarch of Howell Division, remarks were made by the following named: Messrs. P. Day, T. Smith; W. P., Sisters Larkins and Payne; Chaplain Wright; R. S., Sister Mattox; J. S. Cogan and C. Dodsworth. The exercises then proceeded according to the following program:

Song	G. Smith
Remarks	Rev. G. Vic Alpin
Remarks	Brother Dehart
Song	G. Smith
Remarks	P. G. W. P. J. Perrine
Comic Recitation	S. E. Mattox
Negro Dance	Jas. Bryan
Song	G. Smith
Speech	Wm. A. Brown
Song	J. Keenan
Speech	Rev. Livingston

Recitation	A. S. Tilsworth

During the exercises an intermission was taken and refreshments were served. The visiting delegates left on the late train for their homes, each apparently well pleased with the enjoyment provided for them.

—Henry Robinson was committed to the county jail yesterday from Railway on a charge of assault and battery.

—The diamond ring contest now progressing at the fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church will be decided this evening.

—About half-past six o'clock last evening a kerosene lamp exploded in a Liberty street butcher shop. The flames were extinguished before doing much damage, other than the burning of some aprons and towels.

—The lawyers of the city had a practice game of ball on the grounds near the Cotton rink Monday afternoon. Some of them are said to be quite up to the standard, and some "tail" playing may be expected when they compete with the Rahway lawyers to-morrow afternoon. The match will be played on the grounds situate on Park avenue to the south of Cedar brook, and the game will be called at three p. m.

—The Prohibitionists of the Second and Third Assembly Districts of Middlesex county met at New Brunswick Monday afternoon and placed in nomination the following candidates for State Assembly, Rec. Thomas Lynch, Joseph Cornell; Third District, Peter Barclay. Resolutions were adopted at the meeting and a mass meeting was decided upon for Sept. 30th, when Gen. Fisk is expected to be present and make an address.

—"Illustrated Jersey Lightning" is the name of a new monthly published at Rahway by Augustus Hyer, the first number reached us on Monday. It is nicely printed, the drawings are well executed, and the title page says the paper is intended to be funny. The judge is a good editor, with a genial face, and a bald head, and that may account for the bald-headed yarns in the paper, which we are told are funny. "Jersey Lightning" is an infringement, it appears, on a copyright held by some one else, to evade which the paper says the, word "Illustrated" has been prefixed—logic, which maybe the exonerated editor of THE NEWS should appear a really funny Judge, if that embodies all his knowledge of the copyright law, not only damages for infringement of which being recoverable in a civil action but also a penalty of one dollar for each sheet found in the infringer's possession, one half going to the owner of the copyright and the other half to the use of the United States. But we suspect that some novice is using the Judge's good name to make him appear both a funny man and a funny Judge—which effort must end in more jeers for both the friends. If the paper survives its present troubles it is promised to appear again with another instalment of the Judge's funny efforts. It has a pleasing illustrated "poem," on the lightning photograph of Miss Lillian Peal of this city, also matter which the unsympathetic people may regard as a fling at them, and other matter which may offend Republicans. All these things come of trying to be funny to order, but we judge "hyer" efforts may pull the goosing away from the "Jersey Lightning" which now entangles it, after which it will make another start on its mission of trying to be funny.

Personal.

The wife of William Snell of West Front street, gave birth to a 12-pound female child Saturday afternoon.

The family of George H. Babcock of Central avenue and Eighth street have gone on a three weeks' visit to Wisconsin.

Miss Kittie McCann has returned to her home on West Third street after a two weeks' visit to friends in Washington, N. J.

Miss Mamie Tracey on Monday returned to her home in New York city after an extended visit to friends on West Third street.

The many friends of Mrs. Charles H. Sanderson of this city, who was with an accident at Mt. Pleasant, in upper New York State, a short time ago, will be glad to learn that she has so far recovered from her injuries as to be able to leave for Pine Hill, Ulster county, N. Y., where she, together with her husband and son, Charlie, Jr., are registered at the Catskill House.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

SEVENTEENTH MEETING.

The Water Works and Sewerage Question Taken Up and Debated at Length and No Definite Action Taken in the Matter.

A special meeting of the City Council was held in the Council chamber on 4th West Front street last evening for the purpose of considering the various applications to furnish the city with water, a system of water works and sewerage and to debate as to the advisability of adopting the same.

In the absence of the President City Clerk Merritt called the meeting to order, and Mr. F. H. Marsh was elected President pro tem. The roll call showed the following Councilmen to be present: Messrs. Bowers, Cumberson, Dumont, Goddard and Marsh—5. The absent members were—President Bogelin and Councilmen Cox, Gallup, Simpson and Voorhees—4. Mr. Voorhees arrived later.

Upon motion of Mr. Dumont the reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting was dispensed with.

Mr. Dumont made a motion to suspend the rules for the reading of the bills and accounts chairman of the Finance Committee, made a motion to refer the Collector's tax duplicate for taxes for 1886 to be approved as presented, and it was so ordered.

Second Councilman moved that the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps report on the various Water Works and Sewerage propositions that have been presented.

Mr. Bowers from Fire, Water and Lamps Committee reported back all the petitions and communications relating to the matter of water works and sewerage, some of which he said had been presented to a former Council.

Mr. Dumont thought the committee had made no report and that the Council was at liberty to act as the matter as they were six months ago.

Mr. Goddard said the committee had held a conference, but no power had been vested in them to solicit bids; he thought the meeting was called for the purpose of exchanging views on the matter; the Council should decide whether anything permanent was to be done in the matter, then ask the committee to make a report.

Mr. Marsh suggested that an informal discussion by the Council would be in order now, and the matter was debated at some length.

Mr. Voorhees said he thought the city ought to have water works and sewerage and that he was ready to vote for them.

Mr. Dumont said it may be that the people would prefer to build their own water works; he thought if the committee would report back some of the probable cost of the same, it would assist the Council in acting upon the matter.

Mr. Goddard said the cost of employing an engineer to go over the proposed route would probably exceed $100; he was in favor of both water works and sewerage, and thought that they would be beneficial to the city, but he did not think that the majority of the people would concur in his views; he would not advise the Council to employ an engineer without a reasonable offer to build the works would be accepted by the city.

Mr. Voorhees thought it was useless to employ an engineer at present, as the committee he said, had already had engineers go over the route and had progress maps; he had thought the committee had visited water works in other places, and had come to the conclusion that both were a great necessity to insure the health of the community. He made a motion that all of the propositions returned by the committee lie over. The motion was seconded by Mr. Bowers, and carried.

All of the communications and petitions, with the exception of one from the "West system," presented to Council of 1885, which had been lost, and which Mr. Dumont requested to withdraw, were read, and included the following: From Samuel R. Bullock & Co., N. Y.; Dickerson, Dodd & Co., N. Y.; C. M. Patent & Co., Portland, Me.; F. M. Lowrie, Newark, N. J.; "West system;" H. Ludlow and Lyle and Ludlow; F. M. Hopkins; W. M. Dutch, Newark; J. M. Lowe, Kingston, N. Y.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps report the number of feet of water mains they would require, will make a careful survey of the city of Plainfield for a system of water works and sewerage, and report the probable cost of the same. The resolution was adopted.

Councilman Dumont left the meeting room, being excused, and Mr. Voorhees was called to the chair to allow Mr. Marsh to give his views on the subject. He said that his opinion was that it was to the interest of water works to introduce sewerage. He thought the people were ready for the step; he was ready to help along the cause if in his judgment it became necessary; he didn't think that the people were in immediate danger, but thought the adoption of both water works and sewerage was a good thing. He made a motion which was carried "That in the sense of this Council it is inexpedient to introduce water works without sewerage."

Mr. Bowers from the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, to whom the bill of Thomas Vrooman, and asked the Council to act in conjunction with the committee.

Councilmen Dumont and Cuthbert act in favor of the scheme.

Mr. Marsh made a motion to the effect that the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee be requested to report to the Council as soon as possible the condition upon which a franchise for the construction of the Plainfield water works should be granted. Carried.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the following taxes for the year 1886 be as follows: First Ward—J. T. Veil's office, North avenue; Second Ward—Hall's office, Park avenue; Third Ward—Hugh McDonald's livery stable, Sixth street; Fourth Ward—Lovegrove's, Front street. The resolution was adopted, all voting aye.

A petition from A. M. Powell was presented to the Council asking for permission to erect frame addition to building on the corner of Sixth and Washington streets.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the following rate of interest on delinquent taxes for 1886 at 10 per cent., and it was so ordered.

Mr. Dumont said that a vacancy existed in the Fourth Ward Election Committee by the removal of Andrew Lowe from the city, the Council would proceed to fill the Election Board with instructions to fill the vacancy.

Upon suggestion from the chair, Mr. Goddard offered a resolution that the Finance Committee be authorized to make out the tax duplicate printed for 1886 and 1887. So ordered, all aye.

The Council then adjourned.

Base Ball.

The Stars of Bonbrights are by challenge any club under 19 years of age to play a game of base ball. W. H. Craig, captain.

The Junior Base Ball Club of Bonbrights play the Morristown nine a game of ball on the grounds of the former club Saturday afternoon, Sept. 25 in favor of the Morristown nine. The Junior Club will play another game next Saturday at Morristown.

—John McNally, a brakeman on the P. & R. railroad had his left foot cut off on Saturday night by being thrown from his train at Round Brook.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

In Exoneration.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—In the item in THE NEWS giving the account of the accident Monday morning by which my little boy came so near losing his life, there was a little misunderstanding. And to avoid leaving the driver of any one, even by implication, I wish to say that the accident was one of that class in which no one could justly be blamed. Mrs. Henry Opdyke, who occupied the carriage, was very much distressed by the occurrence, and her sympathy was very kindly and practically expressed, for which we feel very grateful. Please give this a place in your columns in justice to all concerned, and oblige, C. H. BEYAN.

North Plainfield, N. J. Sept. 22, 1886.

Democratic Primaries.—Act 1.

More than usual interest is felt in Democratic circles this fall in relation to the proposed nominations of that party. It will be the first election since the installation of a postmaster and there are obligations which is to be expected to liquidate in favor of the more or less prominent individuals to whom he owed his position.

The First ward held its primary last night for the election of one delegate to the Gubernatorial Convention, one delegate to the Congressional Convention and one member of the Democratic Executive Committee. Such an assembly, it is said, has never been gathered together since the First Ward was formed. It was almost entirely composed of property and house holders.

Judge Wadsworth, John Rafferty and Solomon Fleig were placed in nomination for the several positions by the citizens, and Edward P. Thorn was nominated delegate to both conventions by the postmaster's special adherents and the particular friends of Congressman Green.

The following is the result of the election:

DELEGATE TO GUBERNATORIAL CONVENTION.

	No. of votes
Louis F. Wadsworth	10
Edward P. Thorn	60
Jacob Smallens	1

DELEGATE TO CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

John Rafferty	60
Edward P. Thorn	11

MEMBER OF COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Solomon Fleig	74

The delegations from the city were authorized to fill vacancies.

Thus endeth the first chapter of the Plainfield primaries. The second will be published to-morrow.

—It becomes necessary at this time of the year to look for thicker clothing—Pope Bros. announce in another column a full line of seasonable dress goods, blankets, etc. With an experience of twenty-five years, they feel confident they can be suited at their store in quality and prices.

—The lobby of the Council chamber was well filled with spectators last evening, many of whom were evidently drawn there to see what disposition the Council would make of the water works question. Among the number was the venerable Job Male, the first mayor of Plainfield.

—Edwin Longley and Patrick Moran, both of this city, appeared before the City Judge yesterday to answer to a charge preferred by Policeman McCue, for quarreling and fighting at the corner of Third and William streets on the 19th instant. Longley pleaded guilty and Judge Ludlow fined him the sum of $50 to appear for sentence on Saturday morning next. Moran pleaded self-defence and Judge Ulrich reserved his decision until Saturday morning.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

There will be a meeting of the Reception Committee in the parlor to-morrow evening at eight p. m. It is hoped every member of the committee will attend.

The first social reception to the young men of this city will be given by the Reception Committee of the association on Thursday evening, 30th inst. Full particulars will be given late in the week.

Henry O. Williams, formerly general secretary of this association, who, since he left here, has been engaged in the work in New Haven, Conn., will on December 1st enter upon the duties of State secretary of Virginia.

DUNELLEN.

Edward Ingram and Miss Kate Storms of New Market, were married yesterday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Colbberly in the Methodist church. About midnight the happy couple have gone to western N. Y. State on their bridal tour.

Petty thieving is becoming prevalent. Water melons and vessels of peaches are suffering almost nightly. Plied about last night around a number of the goodly-disposed fruit trees of this place were found generally some of the invaders were shot. It is hoped that the thieves will be captured soon.

Tunis Brokaw, whose farm is located on the line of Bound Brook and Dunellen, between Bound Brook and Dunellen, had thirty-eight chickens stolen from his place by free evening visitors, and has no clue to the thieves.

Near the Greenbrook water tanks, which are about a mile west of here, a few nights since, some one got up on the roof of Ford Bird, let down the fence, so that his cows were left to wander at will, returned. A neighbor drove the cows to the pound. The invaders were not content with this, but also destroyed the fence and left. Yesterday Mr. Bird has no clue to the villains engaged in destroying his property, but hopes to eventually discover them.

STATE NOTES.

The annual parade of the Fire Department took place at Paterson yesterday afternoon, and most of the mills were closed in consequence.

Some amusement has been created at Paterson by the action of the Board of Aldermen in granting a license on Monday night to a dead man to sell liquor.

George G. Stebbins, the ticket agent at the Spring street station of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, Trenton, is reported missing with his accounts short.

The trial of Edward, alias Porter Flanagan for killing Watson Pangborn on Saturday at Cape May City is a repetition of murder in the second degree. He will be sentenced next week.

Quartermaster Ira R. Hall, of the Third Regiment, Sixth Brigade, has resigned his position on account of the severe reprimand given to him by Col. R. H. Rowe in regard to a short supply of rations at Sea Girt.

THE SECRET OUT.

WHY MRS. SCHILLING HAS KEPT SO QUIET AT HER PAPA'S HOME.

The Latest and Probably the True Secret of Victoria's Sudden Departure From the Stage—What a Postal Card Said. What Morosini Didn't Say.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Strange rumors indeed have been afloat of late about that much talked about lady, Mrs. Victoria Morosini-Schilling. Just exactly what was meant by many mysterious shakings of the head by certain ladies, and just how to interpret certain very wise looks of prominent business men familiar with Mr. Morosini's affairs, was a puzzle.

"Oh," exclaimed a bashful lady of 46 summers, if we only had some bright lady reporter, how soon they would have known the truth!"

A servant of Mr. Morosini's who was seen recently, also affected a very mysterious air, and said that Mrs. Victoria Morosini-Schilling is the mother of a lovely boy nine days old, born in her father's mansion.

No name was given by the writer, but the postal card bore the postmark "Riverdale" on its face and read like truth itself.

"It is surprising," said one of the younger Morosini's friends yesterday, "that nobody seems to have ever suspected the truth before. This clears away every mystery, explains the reticence of her friends from making publication of her interesting condition, and the otherwise inexplicable fact that when she came to arrive at Riverdale, her trunk was ascertained to have followed her thither, and yet she had no baggage. Now you can see for yourself. You may congratulate yourself upon having solved this mystery which for over a week past has been occupying the Morosini family every time they take a newspaper."

"Do you know anything positively regarding the truth or falseness if that statement?" she Wall street man asked.

"I cannot betray what has been told me in private," he answered, looking very severe, "but between you and me I have the best of reasons for stating that a woman's secret, with a woman's intuition, if not with positive information, has hit the nail squarely on the head."

The reporter called at the office of Mr. G. P. Morosini.

"Yes," said the attendant; "Mr. Morosini is in, but he has left strict orders that he could see no one."

Would the attendant kindly carry a short note to Mr. Morosini? Personally, he had no objections, but that course would do no good.

The following was, however, written and the clerk was prevailed upon to carry it to his dark-eyed lord.

MR. MOROSINI: We have received word of the happy arrival of a bright little son to cheer your daughter Victoria. Is this so?

REPORTER.

There was a bang as though a few pugilistic, well-fed man had leaped some five feet out of his chair and had alighted square on both feet, and then the sounds of vociferation and afterward milder tones of expostulation. Suddenly the glass door was flung out and out rushed the clerk with a white, white face.

"Mr. Morosini will not see you, sir."

At the Casino last night the information of a lovely baby girl was given by a coachman having come to bless the Morosini household did not seem to be such great news. There were members of the members of the Morosini household present, many who had heard of the birth, were not at all surprised to have their suspicions confirmed.

"Never will be visited to death," smiled the Landlord Stolpe, Conductor Schilling's best friend. "He is a family man by nature, and loves children with all his heart, poor fellow. The little woman knew she could never get through her confinement on $15 a week, and so she went home."

Mr. Augustus Brentano bit his lip when he was asked about the matter, but finally he protestended that to be very indignant that anybody, much more a lady, should have such a terrible piece of gossip. He advised the reporter to just let matters rest and all would come out right. But it was noticeable that he neither affirmed nor denied the story.

The Accident Record.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Australian mail brings the news that the German gunboat Albatross was destroyed by fire upon the natives of the New Hebrides, in retaliation for the murder of Klein and Cullen. Twenty of the natives were killed and a large number of them wounded. The Albatross then landed her crew and took refuge in Pentecost island, where the mate of the Upolu was murdered. The Albatross changed her position and opened a bombardment on Pentecost island from her Gatling guns, slaughtering the natives like sheep. The state was soon set on fire, and they were totally destroyed.

Methodists and Prohibition.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Dr. Buckley, editor of The Advocate (Methodist organ), says in regard to the story of the Methodists going into the Prohibition movement: "The church is committed to Prohibition, but it is not a partisan. It will not support the Labor party as a church, but I have no doubt that a large share of its members will support Prohibition; what proportion, I cannot say."

Discharged for Lack of Evidence.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—The Matthews district attorney of Fairfield, are discharged from custody for lack of evidence against them.

CHARLESTON NEEDS MORE HELP.

An Appeal to the Grand Army for Consideration.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Gen. Lucius Fairchild, of Wisconsin, commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, has returned from Charleston, where he went to see if the people needed aid.

The following order was issued to-day officially, and explains fully Gen. Fairchild's opinions:

HEADQUARTERS GRAND ARMY REPUBLIC,
MADISON, WIS., Sept. 20, 1886.
CHARLESTON, Sept. 14, 1886.

Comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic:

With you, I have been profoundly touched by the great calamity to Charleston and vicinity caused by the recent earthquake. I have come as your representative to learn the exact facts as to the necessities of the people, and to take such action as the case may seem to require.

The most pressing need of this fair but immediate demand for food is promptly answered by funds already contributed, but there is a class of citizens whose homes are more or less shattered, who have no means with which to repair them. This class, and those who, being homeless, have been rendered penniless by the calamity, require aid from abroad. It will be necessary to continue it for some months to come. The community here have done and are doing nobly, but their means are limited, and a sum of money is required to do all that ought to be done. The condition of affairs warrants immediate and extraordinary effort. I feel confident that comrades all over the country will do what he can to bring comfort and happiness to this stricken people. I therefore request department commanders to call upon their respective departments at once to appoint a committee which shall collect such sums as comrades and their fellow citizens in other villages and on the farms may desire to contribute.

The money should be transmitted to department headquarters, whence it will be forwarded to Gen. A. Courtenay, mayor of Charleston, S. C., chairman of a committee of the best citizens of Charleston will see that the money is properly applied to the relief only of the most needy cases.

LUCIUS FAIRCHILD,
Commander-in-Chief G. A. R.

That the action of the G. A. R. may be prompt and effective, it is suggested that on receipt of this circular each post arrange for a Charleston meeting of the G. A. R. and citizens of the vicinity to obtain subscriptions. Be sure that all outside our order who wish to contribute have an opportunity to do so in such manner as may best suit the locality.

If any department commander has already published a plan of procedure, follow it.

DIVING FOR WEALTH.

A Philadelphia Company After Ten Millions—Boss Sunken Treasure.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—A company was recently formed in this city to search for $10,000,000 in treasure, said to be sunk in the British frigate De Braak, off Cape Henlopen, in 1798. A number of divers have been at work ten days ago. They report that they have brought to the surface a large brass cannon, which they say is, without a doubt, from the sunken vessel. This has greatly encouraged them, and they say they will surely, within a few days, locate the vessel. They have a tug, sails and three-quarters northeast of the pitch of Cape Henlopen, three-quarters of a mile from the Delaware breakwater. The specie which was on board the De Braak, they estimate, was three Spanish galleons captured in the West Indies. When the sloop sank she carried every one on board down on her, with the exception of the pilot, including the treasure owners. Ten per cent. of the wealth saved from the wreck will be the property of the government.

Massachusetts Labor Party.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—The National Labor party adopted the platform which declares that the Knights of Labor, with the insertion of a plank opposing the repeal of the present coinage law until the appearance of the money controlled by the cupidity and cunning of a few shall have been sufficiently enlightened to establish a currency which will serve as a just and equitable standard of payment and exchange. Gold and silver-coins are relics of barbarism." Resolutions favoring the Tobin bill and woman suffrage and opposing "all illegitimate trades" were inserted. After condemning the Anarchist doings in Chicago. The selection of the state ticket was referred to the executive committee, with power to confer with other labor organizations. The expenses of the convention was collected at the door in hats.

Pennsylvania Railroad Litigation.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 22.—Judge Simonton has issued the injunction applied for by the Reading Railroad against the Pennsylvania Railroad company from entering into any alliance so as to cross property owned by the Reading Railroad at Shamokin. The latter proposed to connect with the South Pennsylvania. The real defendant was the Pennsylvania Railroad company, which desires to move the coal in order to straighten its railroad tracks. The Reading will take the case to the supreme court.

Mr. Gladstone Not to Become a Catholic.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Mr. Gladstone publishes a letter again denying the persistently repeated report that he is about to join the Catholic church. He says: "The statement that I intend to become a Roman Catholic is a revival of a miserable falsehood which I have refuted from time to time, without a shadow of evidence in its favor, and is unworthy of notice until it assumes a character very different from a merely calumnious invention."

A Shake at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 22.—Another very distinct shock of earthquake was felt here yesterday. The shock lasted several seconds. Many people who were awakened by rattling windows, and doors, badly frightened, although no general alarm was felt. The citizens talk about it very coolly, and only the more nervous apprehend further quakes.

Trotting Association Affairs.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 22.—The committee of the National Trotting association, which has been examining the books of the Secretary Vail, of that society, have finished their inquiry, but will not make the report public until Sept. 28, at which meeting it is said the findings are entirely satisfactory.

Miss Cleyz and the War Veterans.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 22.—Miss Varina Davis, daughter of Jefferson Davis, has been elected an honorary member of the Lee camp of southern veterans. She accepted the honor, and had a reception at the Soldier's Home last evening.

Mexico Asked to Pay.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 22.—Governor Ireland has been notified that the Arrasola family, through their attorney, had send to him for approval a claim against the Mexican government for $100,000 indemnity for the murder of Arrasola.

THE BURIED MINERS.

SIX BODIES RECOVERED FROM THE CAVED-IN MINE.

They Had Not Been Killed by the Falling Rock, but Had Been Buried Alive and Starved to Death—The Names of the Recovered Men.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 22.—The bodies of six of the eight miners entombed in Morris' shaft, of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, a week ago, were recovered yesterday at 2 p. m. The rescuing party met with a sad disappointment on first reaching, when, after cutting through a pillar of coal 15d feet thick, in the hope of reaching the entombed miners, a cry of fear from the gangway so full of gas that life could not be sustained for three minutes.

Superintendent Nicol ordered a cessation of work for the day, and no doubt was the cause of the man who ran the large hoisting engines at the top of the shaft, more than 1,500 feet from the fall, becoming exhausted to such by the dim light and watery nature of the work to avoid a terrific explosion. The huge fan was started around at three times its usual speed in order to drive out the gas, and after a suspense of more than thirty-six hours, the two brave men took their chance and entered the mine to ascertain the condition of affairs. Superintendent Nicol, Superintendent Andrew B. Nicol, of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, who has directed the rescue from the start, said: Fire Boss Joseph Pryor, one of the rescuers, said:

The few bystanders who saw the men enter the carriage had many misgivings, but the men were undaunted. Arriving at the foot of the slope, Superintendent Nicol and Pryor dropped a distance of about 1,500 feet, until they came to the opening in the coal pillar. The gas in this locality was very thick, and the rescuers could not be seen from above. They went through the opening and beat their steps to what is known as Rastly's chamber, where it was supposed the entombed miners had taken refuge. Arriving there, they found that a fall had occurred, and that the men had doubtless gone still further back to a place of safety. Here, they found Foreman Lockhart then proceeded about twenty-five feet onward, to a passage known in that mine as Hagy's gangway.

Here they found eight men still gasping. The bodies of six of the ill-fated miners lay stretched upon the damp and rocky floor. The rescuers pushed their lamps close to the faces of the dead bodies in order to be sure that the remains of Patrick Murphy. Then in turn they recognized the features of Patrick Harrison, John Young, Patrick McNulty, John Shaster and John Carden. The dead miners were all in recumbent position, and each had his arms tightly folded across his breast. The eyes of each had been its work. They fell asleep from the effects never to wake up. The bodies of the men were highly decomposed, a sickening odor arising. The faces were swollen out of all proportion, and the flickering light from the lamps made the sight a most revolting one. Nicol and Prondlock hurried down the slope and were soon followed by the rescuing party, who announced that the bodies had been found.

The news soon spread and in a short time about 2,000 people assembled at the mine. Mr. Nicol at once ordered all coffins and many coarse blankets. After a hasty meal in the engine room several stout-hearted miners, headed by Mr. Nicol and the mine bosses, went into the mine to bring the bodies out. Each body was wrapped in one of the blankets and then carried to the foot of the shaft, where they remained until the arrival of the coroner. In the meantime relatives of the dead men began to mingle in the crowd and renew their way to the head of the shaft. The wagons were then loaded with the dead, a force of their bereavement dawned upon them and filled the air with their cries and lamentations. The bodies were then sent away, but they returned and refused to be comforted. The scenes were heartrending. On the order of Coroner Dean the bodies were sent up to the engine room and tenderly laid in the rough pine boxes provided for them.

Two bodies yet remain to be recovered. They are those of Cornflack McGuire and Patrick Cavanaugh.

Coroner Dean said:

"Friends of some of the deceased objected to several of my jurors and argued with me for some time after the jury had been sworn in. I took pains that none of the jurymen should be employes of the Delaware and Hudson company. The bodies were found about two workings beyond where the rescuing party cut through the wall on Sunday. The jurors found the dead men's dinner pails on William Hagy, aged 26; William Malcolm, aged 25; and Solomon Kosly, aged 31, all of New York. Kosly is also known as Solomon Bruenthal, and married a daughter of "Gen." Bruenthal, an East Side character. It is claimed that they were canvassing for advertisements. They will be photographed in their New York home. Letters and cards were found on them which showed where they had been in Bridgeport. Kosly is a pal of old Bo Vail and Farnsworth, and has come for burglary.

New Hampshire Granduckers.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 22.—The New Hampshire Granduckers met in convention here yesterday. J. T. Greenleaf presiding. Gen. Carpenter, of Swanzey, was nominated for governor, Daniel Mason, of Rockford, for congress from the first district, and Joseph G. Williams for congress from the Second district. After adopting a platform the convention adjourned subject to action with the organized labor convention also in session here, but the latter preferred to stand by their own platform, and to make no nominations.

Retesting a Constitution.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 22.—General Secretary and Treasurer Turner, of the National Council of the Knights of Labor, has written a letter to the Labor Manufacturers' association of Salem and Beverly, suggesting an interview with a member of the general executive board for the purpose of settling the trouble between the association and the employes. The association has replied, "Replying to yours of the 18th, we inclose copy of letter of July 13. Our position remains unchanged."

CHAIRMAN O'BRIEN'S RESIGNATION.

The Reasons Given for His Action—His Successor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—At the meeting of the New York state Democratic committee yesterday the following was read:

To the Democratic State Committee:

Prior to the last state convention, upon the assurance of Mr. Hill that he would not be the state committee, without any solicitation on my part and against my own better judgment, I was selected as chairman, having previously been secretary. Such action had my unanimous support. After the convention had met and the present committee was chosen I was in the interest of harmony asked to continue in the chairmanship, and I accepted the position and discharge its duties to the best of my abilities.

After the successful termination of last fall's campaign, I found my private affairs so extensive and pressing that I contemplated resigning at that time, but could not well do so until the county should meet. Pressed by a number of the members of the committee with which your kindness has clothed me, and unwilling for any advantage of my own to imperil a great political issue, I did not resign, but to share with you, I hereby tender my resignation as executive head of your committee. Conscious of my many imperfections and personal defects of nature, and of my ability, unaided by any position of honor or trust, to vindicate it whenever an occasion may be offered me, I am unwilling to give any counter political enemy any advantage by affording a pending contest to divert public attention from their own shortcomings by personal assaults upon me. In closing I desire to say that the harmony which I have restored from you all, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN O'BRIEN.

Mr. Rochstuhl then proposed the following, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the committee be and are hereby extended to the Hon. John O'Brien for the able, faithful and efficient service to the Democratic party, a service which largely contributed to the signal victory of last year. Appreciating the motives and desires prompting him to tender his resignation, it is with great regret that we accept the same.

On motion of Judge Miller, Congressman C. C. B. Walker, of Corning, was chosen unanimously as Mr. O'Brien's successor. Several other vacancies were filled. At the same time the resignations of Judge Miller, as counsellor, chairman of the executive committee, was received and accepted.

The committee decided to hold no convention, and nominate a candidate for judge of the court of appeals. A proposition to confer with the Republicans in regard to a joint nomination was defeated.

CHESAPEAKE AND DELAWARE CANAL.

Seeking to Arrange Matters with the Bondholders.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—At the regular meeting of the directors of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal company, the following was adopted providing for the conversion of bonds by the absconding treasurer, J. A. L. Wilson. The plan proposes the payment of interest from July 1, 1886, and the right to the present holders of the loan to surrender their old certificates and to take in exchange new certificates of the loan, bearing 5 per cent. interest, payable by coupon at the banks, and registered at some reliable trust company. Said loan to run for a term of thirty years, with interest at 5 per cent. from July 1, 1886.

All the net earnings of the company, outside of a moderate reserve for contingencies, exceeding 5 per cent. interest, shall be used in the drawing of bonds by lot, for their gradual extinguishment, provided the bonds can be purchased at a price not exceeding 5 per cent. premium. Should such purchase, the surplus earnings shall be applied in other good securities, and held for the payment of the loan at maturity, thus appropriating for the benefit of the bond holders all the earnings of the company.

The report that Wilson, the absconding cashier, was seen in Chatham, England, is treated by the Wall Street brokers as a joke. The accountants are busily engaged upon the books, and there is no indication of when they will be got through.

Wanted to See the Odd Fellows.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—Pinkerton detectives attached to the Boston office picked out Thomas Kenna, a man among the crowd at the Old Colony depot as well-known New York bunco swindlers, and notified officers, who arrested them. They gave their names as William Healy, aged 26; William Malcolm, aged 25; and Solomon Kosly, aged 31, all of New York. Kosly is also known as Solomon Bruenthal, and married a daughter of "Gen." Bruenthal, an East Side character. It is claimed that they were canvassing for advertisements. They will be photographed in their New York home. Letters and cards were found on them which showed where they had been in Bridgeport. Kosly is a pal of old Bo Vail and Farnsworth, and has come for burglary.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

GOING TO THE PUMPS.

This company is prepared to furnish night lights and to make connections for incandescent lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained in any part of the city, the poles and wires of the company will be erected, and lights will be furnished. The rates at which lights will be furnished will depend largely upon the number of applications for light and their duration.

The supply to the houses consists of the current from a dynamo, driven by a steam engine, and is regulated by automatic devices, so that both lamps and motors will run steadily. Both lamps and motors will be used from the same circuit. The current is furnished at a pressure of 100 volts, and is of the kind known as the "alternating current." The company has contracted with the Westinghouse Electric Company, of Pittsburgh, for the machinery, which is of the latest and most approved pattern, and has been used for the past year with the best results in the city of Pittsburgh. The company has also contracted with the Westinghouse Company for the erection of the buildings, which will be of brick, and will be erected in the most substantial manner. The engines and dynamos will be placed on the ground floor, and the boilers in the basement. The company has decided to give the people of Plainfield the first opportunity to subscribe for the stock of the company, and for the next thirty days will receive applications and for the same. Those who would have their names and for their purposes as soon as the first section of the wires are completed, and the lights turned on, should send in their applications at once. Applications will be received at the office of the company, in the Plainfield Savings Institution building, corner of Park place and Second street, Plainfield, N. J., and

THE GRAND LODGES.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR AND THE ODD FELLOWS IN SESSION.

The Reports of the Knights Templar Jurists Frequently to That Order—Their Proceedings at St. Louis—The Odd Fellows Elect Officers for the Ensuing Year.

St. Louis, Sept. 22.—The grand encampment of Knights Templar opened its session. Most Eminent Grand Master Withers being absent, Deputy Grand Master Roome presided, the most eminent Mayor D. R. Francis welcomed the grand encampment to the city in an eloquent speech, which was followed by Grand Commander Bowens, of Missouri, tendering a welcome in behalf of the Templars of Missouri. Deputy Grand Master Roome responded, and the encampment proceeded to business. Most Eminent Grand Master Withers was submitted, as was also that of Deputy Grand Master Rosser and appropriately referred. The reports each of Grand Masters of a grand commandery in the territory of Dakota; also commanderies at Seattle and Walla Walla, Washington Territory; Huron, Watertown, Fargo, Sioux Falls, and Yankton, D. T.; Eugene City, Ore.; Las Vegas and Albuquerque, N. M.; Tucson, A. T., and Boise City, Idaho. In addition, the deputy grand masters for the several districts of the commanderies are as follows: Rawlins, Wy. T.; Spokane Falls, W. T.; Ogden, Utah; Miles City, M. T.; Silverton, W. T.; Laramie City, Wy. T.; Albany, Oregon and Deming, N. M. Twenty-four deaths have occurred among members of the grand encampment since the conclave in 1883. The grand recorder's report of his official report, in which considerable space is given to a difference in opinion as to the scope of the recorder's duties. Grand Treasurer Bonsall reported: Balance on hand, $61.46; disbursements, $9,356.95; balance, $10,804.53. The flattering prospects of the order were set forth in the report, and it was stated that hitherto grand inspectorial masteries would probably be formed soon in Oregon, Montana, New Mexico, Washington Territory, Wyoming and Arizona. The following grand master then appointed committees upon unfinished business, jurisdiction of grand officers, finance, dispensations, returns of commanderies, appeals, grievances and appeals, Templars' jurisprudence, to designate the place of the next conclave, on necrology, and the grand encampment then took a recess until 10 a. m. to-day.

THE ODD FELLOWS

Elect Officers for the Ensuing Year—Proceedings at Boston.

Boston, Sept. 22.—At the session of the sovereign lodge of Odd Fellows the first business in order was the election of officers, which resulted: Grand sire, John H. White, of Albion, N. Y.; deputy grand sire, John C. Underwood, of Covington, Ky.; grand treasurer, Isaac A. Shepard, of Philadelphia; grand secretary, Theodore A. Ross, of Baltimore. Grand Treasurer Shepard was present yesterday for the first time, having been detained at home by sickness in his family.

Several committees reported, and considerable routine business was transacted. It was voted that resolutions of thanks should be presented to the grand lodge and grand encampment of Massachusetts for the hospitable reception and beautiful entertainment provided. A committee was appointed to carry these resolutions into effect. It was voted to hold the next session of the sovereign lodge at Denver, Colo., on the fourth Monday in September, 1887. The various amendments proposed were indefinitely postponed. Lieut. Gen. John C. Underwood, of the patriarchs militant, presented his report which was referred to an appropriate committee. From this report it appears that the movement has been very popular from the beginning, and the organizations of the branch of the new degree have more than been met, as there are now in the patriarchs militant army 357 cantons and an active membership of 14,000 chevaliers. So great was the encampment that it became necessary to extend the provisional period until April 26, 1887. Various business matters, not of public interest, were reported in detail, and various resolutions of great importance to the degree are proposed. The total revenues from all sources has been $10,488.24; expenses, $10,-501.98. The total assets were $1,342.26. The report is elaborately and beautifully printed, with illustrations in colors of the various flags in use by the army. Chief Marshal Porter issued orders regarding the positions of the different divisions in to-day's parade.

Arbuthnot's Confession.

St. Louis, Sept. 22.—Sheriff Hoplquet, of East St. Louis, has received from Sheriff Taylor, of Tipton county, Tenn., where Arbuthnot is confined, the confession of the late ex-Mayor Bowman, is confined, a letter urging him to make a careful and complete review of his prisoner's confession, and intimating that the guilt of Arbuthnot is really the murderer. Investigation in East St. Louis relative to him while there shows that he was known to several residents of the place as a tough character, and the descriptions of his personal appearance tally exactly with that given of the prisoner at Covington. Sheriff Hoplquet will demand his return to East St. Louis.

MR. GOULD'S SPECULATION.

An Intimation That a First-Class Sensation May be Developed.

Portland, Me., Sept. 22.—The friends of defendant William R. Gould express that he will be tried, convicted and imprisoned, but there is a report that he will shoot, if forced to do so, that he has been a Ward in the case. "He will not," said one of his friends will be a confession of his criminal transactions unless he is put on the stand, then he will tell the truth. If forced to do so, he will show that he had a right to the speculative system, and that they received, to put it mildly, some thousands of dollars profit."

It is safe to say that Mr. Gould will be given an opportunity to tell his story from the witness stand, and if he has a sensation to reveal he will have the fullest chance to unveil it.

There are rumors that Mr. Gould was a ward to other parties. There is a story that he received of a lady $97,000 to invest for her, and there are said to be other cases of the same kind. Of course, until Mr. Gould breaks his silence and gives to the public the full story of all his somewhat remarkable series of financial transactions, nothing will be started and believed, both for and against him, and it is not probable that he will break that silence before he is called to give evidence in his own case. If he has indulged in a private banking business it will make the less fall upon private individuals instead of on the bank. It seems to be a fact that there had been for some time a feeling against the trust in Mr. Gould. Many business men declined further dealings with him, and yet his associates in the bank have apparently never have known that the feeling existed, some never to have seriously suspected him. "He was a good talker, and talked all around the directors," is the way one put it. It is also true, that many persons must have known that Mr. Gould was a very bold speculator.

Sealing Spring Vines.

Boston, Sept. 22.—Samuel G. Snelling, the embezzling treasurer of the Lowell Five Cents Savings bank, and the fugitive at Charlestown. He walked from the van to the prison entrance with a slow step, and he seemed bad heavily on a cane he carried, held in his right hand, while he bore a bucket in the other. On being ushered into the guard room he looked sadly around the rotunda.

A conspicuous feature of the prison is kept up, and upon being introduced shook hands with the new prisoner and opened the register for the insertion of the name. A few moments later and Snelling was taken out from the guard room and began his seven years' sentence.

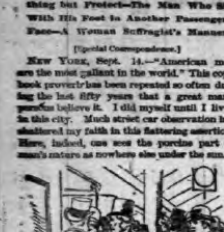
HORSE CAR MANNERS,

AS SEEN AND STUDIED IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

"Natural Protectors," Who Do Everything but Protect—The Man Who Sits With His Feet in Another Passenger's Face—A Woman Suffragist's Manners.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—"American men are the most gallant in the world." This copy book proverb has been repeated so often during the last fifty years that a great many persons believe it. I did myself until I lived in this city. Much strict car observation has shattered my faith in this flattering assertion. Here, indeed, dear to the profane part of man's nature as nowhere else under the sun.



"NATURAL PROTECTORS" GETTING ABOARD AN ELEVATED TRAIN.

There must be a peculiar viciousness about public conveyances, street cars and elevated railroads. They exert a demoralizing influence which works upon male travelers, to the temporary extinction of their natural and acquired politeness. Men whose manners are unblemished blands in the parlor, at the theatre or club, develop into superlative boors the instant they breathe horse car atmosphere.

The New York man makes the earth terribly bitter for women who are obliged to travel unattended in the cars. As a "natural protector" he does everything but protect. Ladies can only board a car at the peril of their lives where he is numerous. The picture above represents the difficulties encountered by the fair and delicate sex when undertaking to get aboard a car for which several of the "most gallant in the world" have been waiting. The man rush in, knocking the women to the right and left, with no more care for their comfort than they would have for so many flies. Feminine hats must be held on by the hands, sachels and parasols are knocked out of their grasp, broken and possibly trampled on. The "gentlemen" must get aboard at whatever cost. Being always first aboard at whatever cost. Being always first on the car, they have a chance to get the seats, which they at once take possession of, and never relinquish till they reach their journey's end. When the ladies do at last get aboard, with crushed hats, disarranged garments, and bruised bodies nothing is left for them but the aisle. Every male lisped sits as firmly in his seat as a cowboy in his saddle, evidently anxious to prevent themselves from being betrayed into some act of politeness—an altogether unnecessary self supervision.

These are creatures whom Tom Platt has appropriately christened "car hogs." No man, who pretends to possess the instincts of a gentleman, would be caught sitting down in a parlor while a woman stood for want of a chair. Does the nickel he pays for a ride absolve him from the claim of being a gentleman? Is he absurd to sell his politeness at such a figure? or any figure? Occasionally some one comes to the defense of the street car hog, and in explanation of his selfishness says that the women for whom he thus sits out, do not thank him or smile upon him. Could any plea be more childish? No one is honest simply for the pleasure of being thanked for his honesty. Why should a man be polite only when he is rewarded with gratitude? He owes it to his self-respect to be polite, thanks or no thanks. One wonders how many of them can so unblushingly advertise their bad breeding.

If keeping their seats were their only offense against manners, they and their selfishness might go unrebuked, but their coarseness goes to disgusting lengths. Behold the result in the following picture. He is one of thousands who always, while on the horse car, cross their legs, letting the upper foot reach clear over the aisle and into the lap of their opposite neighbor. Any woman who in this case it is a woman, whose morning ride to her place of business is made unendurable by the smell of dirty leather within a foot of her nose or corner of the foot would probably fight any man who told him to his face that he was no gentleman. He dresses like a gentleman. I have seen him accommodate such. He certainly would never win the prize at Princeton college for being a gentleman, the definition of the term being, "One who habitually prefers the interests of others before his own."

How could any person, man or woman, pass the man of the elevated foot? By crawling under him or by climbing over like an athlete. Four or five such monsters in one car do much toward adding picturesque disagreeableness to a two-cent trip.

Another excuse frequently offered in behalf of "car hogs" is that they are business men, and tired, and that nearly the ladies who crowd on the horse cars at 5 or 6 o'clock have been "doing nothing but shop all day."

THE PASSENGER WHO PROTRUDES HIS FOOT.

If that were true, which it is not, the excuse would still be the meanest within the power of the human intellect to invent. There is no harder work than shopping, and among all classes it is as much a necessity as anything else. It is noticed, however, that the male lisped is as firmly glued to his seat in the evening going down town as in the morning coming up. None of the women he keeps out of seats are in business, and are much harder worked and far worse paid than he.

Indeed, I have noticed that men and again that the most completely developed car hogs are well-to-do brokers, lawyers, men who have good incomes and lead luxurious lives. The women who hang to straps are mostly weary clerks, teachers, typewriters, copyists, sewing women, all orders of industrious femininity who usually go nightly to their homes worn to the bone. Let the man who has any vous hands ought to shame the stalwart men who rush in ahead and grab the seats before they can possibly get their noses inside the car.

On the elevated railroads women who value their lives can't get aboard until the "natural protectors" are all on board, comfortably provided for. Here, indeed, the "natural protectors" are shown off to great advantage. He protects women from getting on in time to get a seat. The horse car platform is also inconspicuous by the remote gallant in the world." The railing which passengers, by printed injunction, are commanded to take hold of to get on and off, is used exclusively as a prop for their elbows. Ladies can only get inside the car by squeezing themselves past the capacious and protruding stomachs of these snakes, with nothing to steady themselves by. They usually get on with ashes on their clothing, and consider themselves lucky not to have had their garments set on fire.

When they finally get in, if they are permitted to sit down at all, it is apt to be in places recently vacated by expectorators of the most active habits. The floor is filthy. The floor is unavoidably mopped up by the skirts of their gowns, and their misery is complete. O. P. Bunce, in his little manual of mistakes and impropriety more or less prevalent in conduct and speech, known as "Don't," says:

Don't rush for a seat in a car or at a public entertainment, in utter disregard of any one else, pushing rudely by women and children, hustling men who are older or less active, and disregarding every law of politeness. If one does on an occasion of this kind, lose his seat in consequence of a little polite consideration, he would have the consolation of feeling himself higher in his own esteem, which is something.

Again he quotes from some other writer with equally correct views:

The manners of the people in public vehicles seem daily to be growing worse, and if they continue to decline it will become almost impossible for ladies, and for gentlemen of refinement, to enter them. The first thing one encounters when he attempts to take a car, is a cad lazily lounging against the platform with his hat on the back of his head, a cigar in his mouth, and his eyes scanning out do that, unless you are alert, you stumble over him, who, perhaps, a puff of smoke is blown in your face. Such a fellow should be promptly lodged in the street; but he seems to be under the protection of the conductor, and the best he can do is to pay parent business it is to give moral support to all the loafers that take pleasure in inconveniencing travelers. Any one who attempts to get on a car as it is tripped up by another man's extended legs; and if the occupants are few enough, or complaisant enough, to enable him to get a seat, he may find himself by the side of a fellow who is industriously making a pool of tobacco juice on the floor between his feet. It is said that such a thing should be tolerated; but ladies dare make no open protest. gentlemen are heedless, the conductor is complacent, and the best remedy is undisturbed, although he has no more right to empty the contents of a pail on the floor than any other kind of filth. Ere one has left the car the conductor has probably rudely seized him by the shoulders in demonstration of his fare; he has been compelled to listen to idiotic whistlers and other noise-makers, and his emergence from the vehicle has been accompanied by the rude jar or scramble with the boors that congregate on the platform.

THE SUFFRAGE RANTER WHO NEVER BUDGES.

I have noticed that the men here who do gallantly get up and give their seats to ladies are apt to be either western or southern. The native New Yorker regards himself as too much a gentleman to do more than lounge up and down the platform, and consider his fellow passengers with the contempt of superiority.

Indeed, I have noticed that the more boors we are in business, and are much harder worked and far worse paid than he.

A COLD MILLION

Is What G. M. Bartholomew is Unable to Account For.

THE BIGGEST CRASH YET.

Hartford Banks and Other Creditors Left in the Lurch.

One After Another of New England Crashes Have Followed in the Wake of Each Other, and Now Hartford Sees All the Rest and Goes Them One Better—The Charter Oak Succumbs.

HARTFORD, Sept. 21.—Since the disappearance of Thomas F. Plunkett, the treasurer of the Union Manufacturing company and president of the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance company, and the discovery that he was a defaulter, the most serious rumors concerning the stability of George M. Bartholomew, president of the Charter Oak Life Insurance company and the Union Manufacturing company, have been in circulation. He was known to have been a large borrower for years, but was supposed to be worth a few millions and not likely to suffer for his indorsements of Plunkett's paper for about $40,000. Small credition attached to stocks and bonds in the Union Company, but it was thought he would come out all right. Two days ago Cyrus W. Field, of New York, Bartholomew's brother-in-law, and Plunkett's brother-in-law, it is understood, that Bartholomew would have all the temporary aid he needed to carry him through. On Monday Bartholomew left town, and it is now known that he took with him nearly half the amount of over $125,000. Of this sum $105,000 is cash, and there are notes for $12,000 and $10,000. Yesterday the Charter Oak Life Insurance company applied for the appointment of a receiver, and Isaac Brock, of Torrington, and Edward A. Stedman, of Hartford, were appointed. The Charter Oak has for years been the only company

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

HOLD THEIR GREAT CHARITY ENTERTAINMENT AND PRIZE DRILL.

St. Louis Business Suspended and Everybody Goes in for a Day of Festivities. Some Magnificent Drilling by the Competing Commanderies.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—The Knights Templar conclave was ecopied yesterday according to programme, with the prize drilling at the fair grounds. Fully 25,000 people attended. The proceeds of the day were for the benefit of the Masonic widows and orphans' home.

The first commandery to appear in front of the grand stand was that of Jackson,

R. E. WITHERS, LEADING TEMPLAR.

Mich., followed by Detroit, Louisville, No. 1, then came St. Bernard; of Chicago, showing the largest and finest body of men of all. Next was the famous De Molay, of Louisville, with a prize banner won in 1883 at San Francisco, Cal., valued at $1,000. The Knights Templar cavalry band, of Pella, Ia., the most notable thing in this commandery was their splendid band led by the most magnificently dressed drum-major on the field, Mr. J. M. Cox, of Pella, Ia. His high top boots, white pants, gold plush coat and white hat brought rounds of applause.

Lots were drawn for precedence in drilling, resulting in De Molay, of Louisville, first; Zion, of Minneapolis, second; Louisville, of Louisville, third; St. Bernard, of Chicago, fourth; Detroit, of Detroit, fifth; Jackson, of Jackson, Mich., sixth; Raper, of Indianapolis, seventh. At this point Ivanhoe No. 8, of St. Louis, appeared mounted in front of the grand stand, with the famous cornetist, Signor Liberati, as trumpeter. Halting in front of the stand, he performed a medley of military calls, tyrolles, assembles, etc., which brought out storms of applause. Immediately after this De Molay's band marched across the field, playing "Dixie," and the audience arose and applauded and cheered itself hoarse. De Molay, of Louisville, followed with twenty-four men and two officers, and gave a magnificent drill, and marched back to their seats. Following this came Zion, of Minneapolis. The attention of the people was somewhat distracted from their opening evolutions by St. Bernard, of Chicago, which at that moment appeared in a very conspicuous uniform, and marched to their field headquarters. Zion commandery drilled with twenty-four men and their officers, and, notwithstanding they were some time in getting the attention of the audience, they presented a drill which captivated the people. Then Louisville commandery came on to the music of "The Old Kentucky Home," and presented a magnificent drill. Following came St. Bernard, of Chicago, with thirty-six men and four officers, preceded by the Thirteenth regiment band, of Hamilton, Ont., playing "Yankee Doodle" as gallantly as if they were not the queen's own tooters. The nobby uniform of the St. Bernard's caught the crowd, and every evolution was greeted with rounds of applause. They occupied the full half hour, and put up a drill which neatly combined the Templars' and military drills. Then Detroit came on with fifty-one men and six officers, and presented a drill which was generally considered perfect. They covered considerable ground and executed each movement with brilliant rapidity and finished with a sword exercise, which was a feature of the entire exhibition. The Jackson (Mich.) commandery gave mounted drill, and Raper commandery, of Indianapolis, only occupied a few minutes in some fancy evolutions, and then Gilmore's band led the procession of all the bands in attendance to a temporary stand, where the united bands, under Professor P. S. Gilmore, entertained the audience with a choice selection of music. Most noticeable of the concert was "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner," rendered with artillery accompaniment, the guns being set off by electricity, and a selection from "Il Trovatore," in which the "Anvil Chorus" was introduced.

The day remained perfect throughout and nothing occurred to mar its harmony. The success of the undertaking surprises all, there being no less than 125,000 people in attendance.

It is Pleuro-Pneumonia.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Dr. Salmon, chief of the National Bureau of Animal Industries, after an examination of the lungs of one of the ailing cows at the Phoenix distillery, decided that the disease existing among the cattle there is pleuro-pneumonia. A meeting of the state live stock commission will be held soon, and it will probably be decided to have all the distillery cattle killed and the sheds burned, as there is no other way to prevent infection.

Sentenced With Tears in His Eyes.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 22.—Dr. Smith Sattersmore, a former member of the legislature, who was convicted of obtaining over $12,000 for an alleged hospital for miners, to have been located at Connellsville, stood up in court yesterday for sentence with tears in his eyes. Judge Simonton sentenced him to $500 fine, the costs of the prosecution and to be confined in the county jail for sixty days.

Coal and Oil Train Burned.

BUFFALO, Sept. 23.—A very bad wreck occurred on the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia road at Holland, Erie county, yesterday. Freight train No. 8 was thrown off the track by a broken wheel. Thirty-five coal and oil cars were derailed and caught fire, making a terrific blaze. The cars and contents were a total loss. One brakeman was injured.

Pennsylvania Congressional Nominees.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—H. H. Bingham was renominated from the First congressional district, Charles O'Neill from the Second, H. Kelley from the Fourth and A. C. Harmer from the Fifth by the Republicans yesterday. The nomination in the Third district is postponed for two weeks without [illegible] a nomination.

Fell Dead in the Street.

WINCHELL, Minn., Sept. 22.—Ex-Lieut. Parker, of the Bosqua police force, fell dead on Chicago avenue at noon yesterday. It is supposed, of heart disease. He was visiting friends here.

CONNECTICUT RAILROADS.

A Grand Network Under One System Contemplated.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 23.—It appears that at the recent meeting of the stockholders of the Danbury and Norwalk railroad there were present representatives of only 6,000 out of the 20,000 shares, and that the lease of the road to the Housatonic company was consummated by a vote of less than half of the stockholders. In commenting on this fact, a prominent railroad official said: "In my opinion we will live to see a great railroad deal before long. Mr. Bishop owns and controls a large amount of the Housatonic road, and that as that road has now absorbed the Danbury road it would not surprise me to see the Consolidated road absorb them both. General Superintendent Shepard has advised the Housatonic service to be constructed subservient to that of the New York road. After these roads are added to the Consolidated as feeders it may be expected that the Boston and Albany will consolidate with the New York and New Haven and the whole network become one grand system like the Pennsylvania system.

Minnesota Republicans.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 23.—The Republican state convention met yesterday in Exposition hall. After the appointment of committees the convention proceeded to ballot for governor. After two ballots for governor had been taken, the convention adjourned until 8 p. m., when A. A. McGill was nominated for governor on the fifth ballot. The ticket was completed by the nomination of A. E. Rice for lieutenant governor. Frank B. Kellogg, attorney general, and Frank Sheuer, treasurer. Hezekiah Stockwell, secretary of state. The platform adopted favors free coinage of silver, high license, local option, and the right of assessment of existing laws relating to the liquor traffic, and instructs the duties of the majority of the Minnesota delegation in congress in voting to consider the bill for the revision of tariff.

That Contested Cup Match.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 23.—The secretary of the citizens' committee on Saturday's race has sent the following dispatch to the regatta committee:

NEW YORK, Sept. 23, 1886.

Just ascertained that Clarence had no club consultation nor heard consultation and voted out. Also that Clara did finish, and cup awarded to her instead of Cinderella.

After receiving the final official decision from the regatta committee, the citizens' committee will meet and determine of what value each prize shall be.

A Scholarship in Dartmouth.

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 23.—The late Mrs. Caroline Lawrence, of Winsted, Conn., bequeathed $1,000 to the Chandler department of Dartmouth college to establish a scholarship in memory of William Lawrence Baker, of the class of '58, who was a lieutenant in the United States army in the civil war and killed in battle.

Edward Everett Hale's Son Edward.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Edward Hale, son of Rev. Edward E. Hale, will be ordained as associate pastor with his father over the South Congregational church, on Thursday, Oct. 4.

Another Shock at Summerville.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 23.—Charleston passed a quiet night, with no shocks or alarms. At Summerville there was a slight shock at about 8 a. m. to-day.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—For New England and the middle Atlantic states, local rains, followed by fair, warmer weather.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
CARD TO THE PUBLIC.
This company is prepared to receive applications and to furnish the electric current lighting for both domestic and business purposes.
It rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, in each section of the resident portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed, so that the facilities for lighting will be commensurate with the demand. Applications for light and their location.
The supply to the business section of the city will be commenced very shortly after the fulfillment of the contract with the city for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in consequence of the company having committed to act back their building line after having commenced building, and the consequent removal of the bulk of material which cannot be immediately replaced.
The company has decided in lieu of expending money upon a canvass for light consumers to appropriate the amount which would have been used for that purpose to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first fifty aggregating 600 lights, named 50 in the business section and 200 in the resident sections.
A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Mulford, real estate and insurance agent, 36 and 37 North avenue, opposite the railroad depot, where arrangements with the company will receive application and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 8.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do.
W. Front street, Plainfield, N. J., June 19, '86.
Dr. Chas. Thiers,
Dear Sir—You sent me samples of your Stomatine. With a knowledge of your formula I will say with pleasure that it is a very combination, a perfect and the ingredients are first class and pure, and not the best. I can safely and positively say, I believe and know it to be a very remedy, and that I have that I know of for the use that you propose it. With my experience of years in a retail drug store, I assisted and druggist in the city and New York, I am free to say that yours is the best preparation for the use you propose. I have used it myself and in my own family. I feel safe in recommending it to the public, and I am sure that the trade so for which you recommend it, may be relieved and cured by its use. Respectfully,
WILLIAM H. VOORHEES.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers.
My dear sir—It affords me great pleasure to write this testimonial in favor of your "Stomatine" preparation called "stomatine," a remedy for sore mouth, canker, etc., which I used in the fall of 1885, October, 1885, you gave me the formula and since then I have manufactured and sold about five gross of the preparation.
Being familiar with the component parts I can recommend it as being up to date, and a reliable remedy for the purposes for which it is designed. Many of my customers who use it speak in the highest terms of its merits.
Very respectfully yours,
E. M. BUELL, Druggist.
Plainfield, N. J., August 19, '86.

Dr. Chas. E. Thiers,
Dear sir—I most cheerfully bear testimony to the merited success of your "Stomatine." I have not only used it personally but have recommended it to many customers and they all speak in the highest terms of its merits.

Many are surprised to find us so busy in the midst of summer, but when they look around our store and see our prices and our goods they cease to wonder. We are busy selling Summer Goods at half their value until we are busy receiving new goods for fall wear. Rather early for fall wear, but the way weather makes us think of them and the sooner we make room for them by selling these the better. This week we will offer special inducements all through our stock so come and see us and get the bargains.
We have received another lot of those Torchon Laces. We will sell them for 5c. per yard or case at 5c.
We will sell one case of best prints at 5c. We will sell 1200 yards all linen crash at 5c.
We will sell one case of Best Dress Gingham, fall styles, 10c. If you want Oriental Lace come and see what we have. Our Misses' Underwear suits to a great extent are sold out and will continue for another week. We will sell 1000 yards Black Cashmere at 25c., worth 37½, and don't forget we only keep a full line of Tinware and Crockery.

I IMPROVES A SEASON OF COMPULSORY IDLENESS.

A Word to Ugly Women—Woman and Her Resources—Mrs. Frank Leslie—A Plucky Schoolma'am—A Study of Girls—Paragraphs.

A worker found himself suddenly shut off from his daily earnings, but he did not seek either involuntary killers like himself to bewail the ill-fortune. He looked at home for something to do, and found it. Several of the heavier locks on the doors refused to catch their bolts. He took them out, and found broken wire spiral springs. For these he substituted bits of rubber, and made the locks better than before. He washered the knobs of the doors that had a rattling play whenever handled. He put new thresholds and storm guards to outer doors which had admitted a flood to the front hall and to the kitchen whenever the rain was from east or south. He tightened rattling windows, and where the upper and lower sashes must be placed flat strips of wool covered with woolen cloth on one side and edge; this kept out a deal of cold wind.

The stove top was not large enough to hold utensils in cooking in addition to others just filled out. He went to a building in process of erection, and was given four pressed bricks. He made a frame to hold these side by side, and pitted it alongside the stove. His wife considered it a great convenience. Several shelves were placed where they would do the most good. He fixed a piece, holding a number of pivoted arms, to the wall back of the stove, and the good woman had a handy drying horse for dish wipers, towels, etc. Some small articles, and the bars, when empty, could be swung against the wall out of the way. The little girl had dolls, and other playthings to be mended, there were chairs with broken backs and loose rungs which required dowel and glue, and a table with rickety legs, and one with a leaf hinge rotted through by rust. Tubs and pails were in danger of coming to pieces for want of hoops. He made better hoops of wire than the original ones of paper-thin iron. As cold weather was coming on he hung a door to the pig's sleeping place, a door double-hinged with leather at the top, so as to swing both ways, and when released to bar vertically.

There was scant closet room in the house, but in the kitchen was a space between a corner and a window where a good-sized cupboard could be placed. The mechanic-handbut busy man of family, constructed a "dresser," as he called it, which, after a year's use, his wife said was the handiest piece of furniture in the house. It was 5 feet long by 3 feet wide, having a table of these dimensions, directly under which were two drawers, running on strips furnished with rolls, for the drawers were nearly 3 feet by 3 feet 6 inches, and 8 inches deep. Under these drawers were two cupboards, side by side, one furnished with shelves. The sides of the dresser extended above the table, at the back, of a width of about 8 inches, and high enough to receive 3 shelves. The contents of these shelves could be covered by curtains sliding by rings on a brass wire. Apart from labor, this piece of furniture cost less than $3.

This instance of useful home employment in a case of enforced idleness is cited merely as a suggestion; but many of these little jobs are sure to await a strike or other compulsory withdrawal from ordinary work; they are appropriate for evenings and otherwise unused holidays.—Scientific American.

A Word to Ugly Women.

Somebody said the other day that the Princess Metternich delighted in her unique ugliness. That is past belief. However, yet lived a woman who liked to think, no matter what her mirror told her, that anybody thought her ugly. And the brighter the woman is the more it is true. She might have the genius of Shakespeare, the ability to paint like Raphael. She might sing like the angels, be as lovely as possible in her mind, and yet she would not succeed in turning to any one who was ugly. It would hurt her as nothing else could, and she would walk with her head bent down upon the ground, to buy a bow at the girl who sold her a yard of ribbon had perhaps a prettiness that did not belong to her. There would be more bountiful women in the world if the ugly ones were not made so conscious of it.

Occasionally there is a chic in ugliness, but be very sure, even to the woman who attains it, there is never-ending suffering. How a man would laugh at this. But beauty in men is not desirable. A man grieves in his way when he is little, when he cannot count on his strength, and when he is old. But who has ever heard a man grieving for pink cheeks, bright eyes, or a mouth shaped like Cupid's bow? A man unfortunate enough to have presumed on the intellectual strength of a woman and to have told her that she was ugly, has made a mistake which he can never remedy. Tribute to her wit and wisdom, to her charms or lasting league can follow, but merely pretty face never remedy it. If he neglects her for one hour she attributes it to her lack of beauty; if he converses with the simplest civility to a pretty woman, and not a great throb and she will accuse herself of folly in coming where her fault showed more positively by comparison with others.

There is no use in telling her that when others pall upon him she is ever a pleasure, that she is his rest, his delight, and his pride; he can never tell her that men have spoken of her beauty, and that so the trump card has been played. Women know, more, I really do believe, of beauty than men. A man finds pleasure in a woman; she is, therefore, simply herself to him, and to be loved for that reason; but always there is present the love that is given to the beautiful face. Ugly women have been most truly, more passionately loved, and everybody knows that a man is doomed who once gives his heart to an ugly woman, for she has power untold by which to hold him; but the woman is never quite satisfied. Well, there is hope for all of us. Madame Recamier is said to have been thick lipped, to have had small eyes and bad teeth, yet men loved her.—Bab" in New York Star.

London Reporter and Mrs. Leslie.

"You wish me to tell you something about my paper?" Mrs. Frank Leslie says, and for the course of two wide columns she gives their history with great pleasure. From it I learn that Mrs. Leslie's editorial policy is to "proceed on the earliest moment to the defense of our cause," etc. Beyond a little "evening" now and then, she has no social life. But a great many people either go to see her "for the sake of a paragraph than to see a woman journalist at her desk." All through her trials the press has been with her. The reporters are very kind to her, and she says: "Mrs. Leslie, you owe words and to us any day. Won't you give us an interview?" The coming success is, perhaps, the most bewildering of all. "Do you ever get writing yourself now?" said the reporter. "No. Why should I? I have been asked to write anything, and am offered enormous sums if I would do so. I could write a book, but I shall decline it I feel not time to write, and still more prayed me to send them some letters from Europe. But now, since I have made

A Word to Wives.
It is a fact well known to druggists that more than one-half of the women who purchase medicine are in poor health because they suffer from some form of female weakness. Secret diseases destroy more lives than consumption. Secret diseases are caused by menstrual irregularities, and are the most terrible scourge that ever afflicted humanity. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the unhappy homes in the land. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the divorces granted. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the insanity in the country. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the suicides committed. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the social evil. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the sickness and suffering in the world. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the deaths of children under five years of age. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the deaths of women between the ages of 20 and 40. Secret diseases are the cause of more than half the deaths of men between the ages of 30 and 50

JOTTINGS.

—Some farmers are cutting their second crop of hay.

—For peace of mind and future happiness religiously observe this rule—Patronize home merchants.

—A delegation from Lincoln Division, Sons of Temperance from Elizabeth, paid a fraternal visit to Dunellen Division, No. 196, at Dunellen, last evening.

—The work of laying out and grading the new Hillside cemetery will be commenced in a few days and the work will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible.

—The wind for the past few days has caused the hickory nuts to fall from the trees and the small boys employ their time when out of school in gathering them.

—The fare of the Hunterdon County Agricultural Society at Flemington closed yesterday. The number in attendance from this city was small, there being but fifty tickets purchased at the depot here.

—Any person who allows any deleterious substance to be put into or flow into any waters in this State whereby fish are killed, is liable to a fine of $2,000 or two years' imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of the court.

—The Prohibitionists of Middlesex county are said to be scattering cards broadcast over the county asking that they be filled up by those intending to vote against the sale of liquors and send them to the county secretary.

—Commencing on Sunday the Sunday school of the Crescent Avenue church will hold its session at 3 o'clock instead of in the morning, as heretofore. The five o'clock service will be discontinued and an evening service will be substituted.

—A cooking school for adults is held every day in the basement of Reform. Two sessions are held daily, one from 8.30 to 11 a. m. for fancy cooking and the other from 2 to 5 p. m. for plain cooking. Both classes are two classes each with a membership of twelve.

—The prisoners in the county jail at Elizabeth are, according to the new rules adopted, compelled to wear convict clothes when working outside of the jail in the yard and around the offices. The clothes are striped white and black, making it impossible for any of them to escape without being detected.

—The biggest advertisement of the season appears on our last page to-day. It is the same size as Sichwel Brothers had last year, and on that occasion we advertised, they informed us, paid them so well that they repeat it this season, and we trust their same prize will be as well rewarded as it was on the former occasion referred to. Read it.

—Werner's clothing house grand opening takes place to-morrow. They have a fresh large assortment of men's, youth's and boys' clothing just received, of the newest styles and latest cuts. This house proposes to compete with New York and Newark on prices, and endeavor by fair dealing and small profits to encourage people to patronize home trade. They ask a call, and say in their advertisement that "no trouble to show goods." Courteous salesmen ready to wait on customers at all times. See advertisement.

—Woodruff is reported to have secured a lease of the Fanton cottage at the corner of Ravine Road and Berkeley avenue, Netherwood Heights, where he and Mrs. Cheveliti may reside after their marriage from Bound Brook. They have purchased the furniture at the hotel, which under his management has been a monument over the grave into which the souls of many worthy Plainfield merchants misfortunes lie buried, to bear fruit, of course, in the sweet by-and-bye, when Woodruff's golden age shall arrive. Mr. Woodruff desired to make a statement in these columns and proceeded to set himself right therein. The promise was made some two weeks ago, and as it has not yet appeared, we presume it is yet the green to be digested. The story might stick in the mouth. Of course it is wanted to go down, and, of course, there are plenty of gullible ones to swallow it body and branches. By the way, how about that $300 license fee due the city.

Coal Train Wrecked at Westfield.

Between three and four o'clock this morning, as an east-bound coal train, drawn by engine No. 497, of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, was passing within half a mile (Westfield depot, one of the axles of a car in the centre of the train broke, the sixteen cars next to the caboose were strewn in all kinds of directions and shapes across the three tracks, completely blocking further traffic. Two wreck trains, one from Elizabethport and the other from Junction, were quickly despatched to the scene of the wreck. At six o'clock the north track was cleared and the trains due at Westfield at 6.40 and 6.52 a. m., which had been held at Plainfield, were allowed to pass down on the up track, on their way to Jersey City. All west-bound trains were held at Westfield. The paper train, which arrived there at 4.56, was then allowed to proceed to Boston, over an hour and a half behind her estimated time. All east-bound passenger trains were run down on the west-bound track from Fanwood to Westfield until 8.30, when the other two tracks were cleared and the trains held at Westfield and Plainfield were allowed to pass.

No one was seriously hurt, but the enthusiasm was badly shaken up by the sudden stopping and jerking of the train, which also knocked three cars off the track in different places along the train. The smallest p one of the unavoidable class, but of course no blame is attached to the train hands.

PERSONAL.

Horace Hoff of this city is vacationing with friends and relatives in Centreville, N. J., and vicinity.

Mr. C. H. Backalow of this city was this week granted a patent at Washington for a submarine tunnel.

Clarence Teal of North avenue is home again, after a two weeks' trip to Lake Hopatcong and vicinity.

Joseph G. Miller and daughter of Penn street are visiting relatives at New London, Conn., and Westerly, R. I.

Miss Carrie Tindall of Crescent avenue is stopping at the Gilsey House in New York city, where he is being treated by a physician.

Mr. E. D. Coppins, the General Passenger Agent of the Vermont Central Railroad, visited friends on West Front street, yesterday.

Mrs. Samuel D. Frazee of Orchard Place left town on Wednesday for a two weeks' trip to Ontario, Canada, going via Niagara Falls.

Mr. S. Marsh and family have returned to their home on Third Place after summering for several weeks at the Neptune House, Ocean Beach.

Mr. F. W. Jones, the general manager of the United Lines Telegraph Company, has secured quarters and will make Plainfield his abiding place.

Mr. R. H. Mims of Willow avenue, North Plainfield, will sail for Europe to-morrow per steamer "Ethiopia," whither he goes to Scotland to join his father, who is indisposed.

Theodore J. Gillies, Jr., son of Mr. T. J. Gillies of Madison avenue, entered Rutgers College at the opening of the fall term on Wednesday, for a scientific course of instruction.

Mr W. J. Todd, wife and family are on a short sojourn at Netherwood. Mrs. Todd is daughter of the late Rev. S. J. Drake for a long time pastor of the First Baptist church here.

After summering for several weeks at the Ashland House, Asbury Park, Mrs. A. Benson and daughter, Miss Sayre, and Addie Gardner of West Front street, have returned home.

Miss Louise DeMorest and Miss Mamie Crow of Spring Valley, Rockland County, N. Y., are visiting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Laine of West Front and Liberty streets.

Rev. R. H. Greene of Brooklyn, who preached in the Park avenue Baptist church two weeks ago, will again occupy the pulpit of that church on Sunday, preaching both morning and evening.

Richard Day and bride have returned to the city, after spending a ten days' honeymoon in South Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Day will reside with the groom's brother on East Second street for the present.

Rev. Dr. J. L. Burdett of this city was elected Principal of the C. L. S. C. at the annual assembly held in Chautauqua, N. Y., recently. During Chancellor Vincent's absence abroad, Rev. Dr. Burdett will assume the duties of Chancellor.

The wife of Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham will arrive home to-day from Dunkirk's waters, where she has been summering with a view of regaining her health. Her many warm friends here will regret to learn that the change of air has been of but little benefit to her.

Mrs. Alpheus A. Mundy, who with her husband was for many years a resident of this city, died now at Minneapolis, Minn., after a serious accident at her home a few days ago. She inadvertently stumbled and fell down a flight of stairs into the cellar, receiving severe bruises about the body.

Robert B. Carter of Burlington, N. J., arrived in Plainfield yesterday after summering at Atlantic City, Long Branch, Newark Bay, Ocean Gap and other healthful summer resorts. Mr. Carter was a resident of this city during last summer, as a guest at the seminary. He has a most exalted opinion of our beautiful little city as a place of residence, and will probably remain for several weeks.

The Plainfield Sentinel, published at Pine Hill, Ulster County, N. Y., of the 23d inst., has the following to say of Manager H. H. Schoenhorn and family of this city who are sojourning in the Adirondack mountains: "C. H. Schoenhorn, manager of the W. U. Telegraph office, accompanied by his wife and son Charles, of Plainfield, N. J., are stopping at the Central House. Mr. Schoenhorn is one of the jolly kind of gentlemen that are generally found among the telegraph force. He is a welcome visitor to the sanctum of the Sentinel, and also to our telegraph office."

PLAINFIELD VS. RARITAN.

Plainfield Lawyers Compete with the Railway "Lawyers" — Some Good Playing, but the Railwaymen Get There.

The long talked-of ball match between the Plainfield lawyers and the lawyers from Railway took place on the grounds on Park avenue below Cedar brook yesterday afternoon. There was a large crowd present, and much excitement was felt when it became apparent that the Railway "lawyers" were noticeably absent, it is said, on the Railway team, which was complemented in the absence of Senator Yall, City Attorney Berry, C. R. Lindsley, Esq., H. Durand, Tom. H. Baker, Capt. Legion and other well-known Railway legislators. The players from Railway were in fact young men in active practice and experts in the game. Taking these facts into consideration the home team did remarkably well in winning the game they did.

Among the Plainfield lawyers who are entitled to special notice on account of their excellent playing should be mentioned Samuel St. John McCutchen, who played as catcher; Harry Hopkins, pitcher, and Chairperson Counsel Marsh who occupied second base and caught Hopkins' swift delivery and put out several on the base. As a bystander remarked, Plainfield's good players are all in a row—counting the catcher, pitcher and second base.

There were others of Plainfield players who distinguished themselves equally as much in an opposite direction, but it would take too much space to go into details of this branch.

A noticeable feature of the game was the improvement in the play of the Plainfielders in the latter part of the game, and had the darkness put an end to the game at the end of the 7th inning, it is possible even under all the disadvantages they would have won; for at the end of the third inning the score was Railway, 19; Plainfield, 8; words at the end of the 7th inning it was Railway 19, Plainfield 18, showing that in the last four innings Plainfield scored 10 runs to Railway's 7.

A return game to Railway, perhaps next week, is contemplated, when it is to be hoped the Railway lawyers will play and make the game a test. It was intended, in one game of yesterday, of the skill of the members of the Bar of the two places represented.

The following is a summary of the game: Railway nine—Hunt, pitcher, four runs, one out; Post, short stop, three runs, two outs; Ward, first base, two runs, four outs; Savage, second base, one run, three outs; Hopkins, catcher, one run, three outs; Huff, centre field, three runs, two outs; Stoddard, third base, three runs, one out; Wolverton, left field, two runs, three outs; Miller, left field, five outs. Total—19 runs.

Plainfield nine—McCutchen, catcher, four runs, one out; Bayliss, centre field, two runs, two outs; Marsh, second base, one run, four outs; Hatfield, third base, two runs, three outs; Durand, first base, two runs, two outs; Gilmore, short stop, one run, two outs; W. Marsh, left field, four outs; Jackson, right field, one run, three outs; Van Winkle, first base, three runs, one out; total 18 runs.

Umpire—J. Harvey Doane.
Scorer—John Ulrich.

Mitten by a Dog.

On several occasions attention has been called to the vicious dogs which are allowed to run at large through the streets of the borough. Especially noticeable is the number of canines found running about Manning avenue, and several times ladies who pass along that thoroughfare have been compelled to seek refuge in front yards to escape the attacks made by these vicious brutes. On Wednesday afternoon, as little Hattie Conover, a five-year-old daughter of George Conover of Jackson avenue, was passing through a vacant lot on her way home from Manning avenue, she was set upon by an overgrown white and black dog of the mongrel species, which is said to belong to the Rev. Mr. Carey of Manning avenue, and severely bitten in the hip, the flesh being lacerated by the dog's teeth. The little girl was taken to her home and a physician who was summoned cauterized the wound. Yesterday the dog was shot.

—Read Edsall's red letter day advertisement on page seven.

—The regular Thursday evening meeting of the Reform Club was held in Reform Hall last evening, when remarks and singing were indulged in by those present.

—To-morrow morning the sale of reserved seats will commence for the appearance at Music Hall of the monarchs of minstrelsy, Thatcher, Primrose and West, on Tuesday, Sept. 28.

—Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Farrell, D. D., bishop of Trenton, will lecture in St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, on Sunday evening, from the subject: "Ireland, the Hope of the Present Hour."

—Chief A. Saltzman, ex-Chief T. C. Doane, Mr. W. R. Cook and Samuel Robinson are the delegates from the city selected to attend the State Convention of the New Jersey Firemen's Relief Association, which meets at Phillipsburg, N. J., on Wednesday.

—Marshal Gordon of New Brunswick about a week ago arrested Mrs. Mary Rogers of Elizabeth N. J., as a deputy marshal to serve U. S. Court writs, and collect fines. Rogers is sergeant-at-arms at the Court House. The Democratic papers, a Republican says, seem so ashamed of the appointment that no mention is made of it.

—Judge Ulrich has written a small pamphlet entitled "Visitors' Guide to Philadelphia," in which is noted objects of interest to be seen in this famous historical city. It begins with an historical sketch of the city from its formation, and commends upon Independence Hall, Carpenter's Hall, Girard College, Christ Church, the navy yard, Fairmount Park, etc. The pamphlet contains two illustrations—Fairmount Park and the Aviary House of the Zoological Garden. It was originally intended to present every person with a copy who attended the exercises of Perseverance Lodge to Philadelphia on Thursday, but a sufficient number of copies have been printed for general distribution. Copies can be had gratuitously by calling at the law office of Judge Ulrich on Front street, opposite Park avenue.

Democratic Primary—Ant. Hill.

The number attending the Third ward primary last evening was unprecedented in the history of the ward. Thos. J. Miller was made chairman and Augustus Baltzman secretary. The Board of Election consisted of George Natorp, judge; Daniel Hibbits, inspector, and Augustus Baltzman, clerk. James Clark was nominated for Gubernatorial delegate, Senator Miller, Congressional, and Augustus Baltzman, member of the County Executive Committee.

A ballot was had, resulting as follows, 39 to 9 having been cast:

DELEGATE TO STATE CONVENTION.

James Clark	39
John Van Doren	9

DELEGATE TO CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

Stewart Milligan	39
Opposition	9

SOMERSET COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Augustus Baltzman	39

Mr. Cameron was understood to have declined after a bystander's statement, but Democrats are getting shaken in all who decline in that crowd.

Seventh-Day Baptists.

The twenty-second annual session of the Seventh-Day Baptist General Conference convened at Milton, Wis., on Wednesday. The denomination had its beginning in America in a church founded at Newport, R. I., in 1671, a second church parish having been established near Plainfield, N. J., in 1705, at which time they were known as Sabbatarians, owing to their observance of the seventh instead of the first day as the Sabbath. The reports presented at the session on Wednesday showed that the Missionary Board is supporting two foreign missions, one in China and one in Holland. The church maintains a university at Alfred Centre, N. Y., and a college at Milton, Wis., which were jointly attended, last year, by 700 students. The session was opened with devotional exercises, followed by an address by Rev. George W. Hills of Plainfield, N. J., president of the conference, who reviewed at some length the growth of the order.

Sent to Jail.

Borough Marshal Weaver yesterday afternoon arrested two dilapidated looking tramps on Somerset street, for being drunk. The two men became demonstrative and one of them pulled away from the marshal and fell striking his head on the sidewalk. This somewhat sobered him up, and the two are incarcerated in the borough lock up to do p or c in her stench. This morning when arraigned before Justice Mettler, the two men, although sober enough had been struck by an earthquake and had crawled into a corner for refuge. They were sentenced to the Somerville jail for thirty days each. Marshal Decker took the men to Somerville on the 10:30 train this morning where they were recognized by Sheriff McMurtrie as old offenders.

Fruit Thieves.

Complaints are numerous by residents in various sections of the city of the petty thefts which are nightly being perpetrated in gardens and flower beds. It may be well to note the law under which fruit thieves are liable to a fine and imprisonment. The law is as follows:

"If any person shall dig, pull up, or gather, with intent to steal, any turnips, potatoes, rutabaga, parsnips, carrots, peas, beans, pumpkins, squashes, melons, apples, peaches, plums, cherries, or other roots, vegetables, or fruit of any kind, standing or growing, of another, and the value of the same is forty dollars, every person so offending, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon his conviction, shall be punished by fine, not exceeding forty dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail, not exceeding three months, or both.

The Gold Watch Contest Decided.

The contest for the gold watch at the fair for the benefit of St. Mary's church was decided last evening in the presence of a large number of friends of the contestants. The polls were closed at ten o'clock and shortly afterward the following result was announced by the tellers: Miss Bridget Kane 8587; Miss Kate Lally, 8115.50; Miss Julia Kane, 899.50. Father Smyth then presented the watch to Miss Kane, she having collected the largest amount of money. The silver watch contest between John McCarthy and David Berry will be decided this evening. The fair will be open to-morrow afternoon and evening, when votes can be cast. Dancing will be a feature during the evening. The fair will close to-morrow evening.

Patents to Jerseymen.

The following is a list of patents granted to residents of this State for the week ending Tuesday, Sept. 21, 1886:

C. H. Backalow, Plainfield, submarine tunnel; R. R. Cresson, Jersey City, speaking apparatus for prospective drawing; T. F. Hirst, Jersey City, machine for turning irregular forms; H. S. Jackson, Newark, assignment for one-half; G. W. Kelly, Paterson, barrel truck; F. M. Shepard, East Orange, loop for securing apparel; J. Stevens, Hoboken, apparatus for communicating sulphuric acid; John Van Nest Bonnevelle, steam leaf turner; C. W. Van Riper, Hackensack, steam engine; A. A. Wolcott, Toms River, pivot cutting implement.

Union County Courts.

In the Union County Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth on Wednesday, two prisoners, Thomas Miller and William Pomeroy were arraigned in the criminal branch for stealing a horse and wagon from Abram P. Smith, a farmer, residing near Mountain-ville, Union county, on Monday night. They are charged that they purloined taking the horse and wagon back. Prosecutor Wilson moved for sentence and Judge McCormick sentenced them each to one year in State Prison.

W. C. T. U. Anniversary.

The annual meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Reform Hall on Tuesday afternoon next at three p. m. The anniversary of the Plainfield W. C. T. U. will be held in Reform Hall on the evening of the same day. Mrs. Ella Boole, the corresponding secretary of the New York Women's Christian Temperance Union, is expected to be present and address the meeting.

A LIVELY RACE RIOT.

Sons of Italy and of Erin Agree to Disagree.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 24.—Race hatred was the cause of a fight between a number of sons of Italian and Irish residents of the Fourteenth ward, this city. The quarrel resulted in the stabbing of Patrick Kennedy and the fatal injury of "Paddy" Boyle, an Italian, whose head was crushed in with an ax. The row was the sequel to an attack rendered on Vernard Schiavone by Patrick Kennedy. Vernard last incurred the wrath of his neighbors on account of his marriage to an Irish woman. On his return home he was held up and nothing short of a pitched battle with Vernard claimed to have two guns standing by his brother Mike, John and Pat Daly. The victim dragged himself home more dead than alive. Soon after the afternoon's events related by the Dalys, demanded admittance to Vernard's house. On being refused admission they battered down the door with a shower of shot and confusion. The frightened Italians were driven in every direction by the invaders, who numbered about twenty. "Paddy" Boyle, a brother of the pugilist of same, Mike Daly, fighting him savagely, when one of the gang struck Rocco on the head with an axe.

His skull was laid open, exposing the brain. He is in the greatest danger. The two Italians fled to Kensington, where they were found by Kensington officers and arrested. Vernard and his brother-in-law, Rocco, were locked up in the Allegheny lockup. The latter was charged with the murder of Boyle, and Vernard with inciting the mob and Patrick Cunningham fell, the ball of a large calibre revolver having entered his back, passing nearly through his body. Mr. Cunningham died in a few hours. It is not known who fired the shot. The police have five Italians under arrest and are searching for the rest of the mob.

He Wept Seeking Tears.

A man stood in Philadelphia horse car and looked into the eyes of every woman seated therein. Then he got off and looked into the eyes of every woman on the next car. Another man looked for tears on the platform of a Chestnut street car, and when he found none he jumped off and looked for them in the gutter. Then he got on the next car and looked into the eyes of every woman there. Then he got off and looked into the eyes of every woman on the sidewalk

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

HE BREAKS THROUGH ETIQUETTE AND GOES FISHING.

The Cottage Where He and His Bride and Mother-in-Law Folsom Dwelt on Saranac Lake Shore—The Car in Which They Journeyed.

President Cleveland has about succeeded in breaking through all precedents established for the behavior of presidents. That ought to be a consolation to him, even if he shouldn't get elected a second term. He was married in the White House, which no president ever was before; he has got a beautiful and gentle wife, which some presidents have not had, and he has done about as he pleased in all which few have been able to do.

PRESIDENT'S CARIB.

Finally, instead of spending the summer at that stupid "president's cottage," at the Soldiers' Home at Washington, and staying there through that hot season, he has gone, installed his lovely wife under his arm, invited his mother-in-law along, and like John the Baptist of old, went into the wilderness. He is to be hoped, like "the" prophets, he got inspiration there, and his certainly got fish. We hope he has not rested from the Adirondack fuss of spirit and physique so much as to prevent the proper relish of the many choice messes of trout he has caught, and we hope he has not gained in flesh any. At any rate he is to be thanked for breaking up that solemn old humbug about the president spending the summer at Washington, as though the country couldn't run itself a few weeks without him. That notion was getting so far to ingrowed into the boarding house keepers and the old cats of both sexes, who attitude to society at the capital, that shortly it would have been crystallized into a part of the unwritten law, and become religious. Then there would have been no hope for any president getting away in summer any more. Therefore heaven be praised that Grover went fishing.

The first illustration shows the cottage in which the president and his wife and mother-in-law stayed on Saranac lake shore. It is of logs, boarded over the outside, and curved like a Swiss chalet. It belongs to W. K. Bixbee, of Philadelphia. A glorious view of lake and sky and mountains unfolds before it.

On their return from the Adirondacks, at on the way thither, the presidential party used the directors' car of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad Company. It had been used only once before it was put at the service of Mr. Cleveland. It is seventy-five feet long, built of mahogany, and as fine in its way as a millionaire's pleasure palace.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

But they say it appears really elegant now. When the home journey began operations they found that about twenty of the panels were from the car resthetics were missing through the house. They had been stolen by relic hunters. These have been replaced. A large shelf might have been above the corridor on the second floor. All have been arranged, just as Mrs. Cleveland would like it, since the fire.

Martha Washington's is the first woman's head that was ever engraved on a banknote. The next one ought to be Francis Cleveland's.

Henry Bonehenan.

An association recently met in Cincinnati called the National Kriegerfest. The word is German, and means a warrior's festival.

The association is made up of Germans who fought the battles of their country in Europe, when Prussia was their country. After fighting in each of great battles as Essslingen, Gravelotte, Sedan, etc., and mixing up the various wars with credit to the German arms, these doughty soldiers migrated to America to fight the battle of peace, and to grow up with the country.

HENRY BUSCHMANN.

The association, nearly three thousand strong, was entertained at Cincinnati by the German local military society, called in Fatherland vernacular the Landwehr Verein. The president of this local union is Mr. Henry Buschmann, whose portrait is here given. He is one of the younger heroes of many battles, having seen service in the Franco-Prussian war. After that war he laid his weapons down and became a peaceful citizen of Cincinnati. At the recent meeting he was elected president of the National Kriegerfest. He was educated at the university of Goettingen.

Every man in the German empire is liable for military service twelve years. He must go into the standing army three years, then serve in the reserves four years, and finally in the "landwehr" or militia five years. At the expiration of all this time he may start out and begin life for himself. Many hasten out of Germany at the expiration of the military service and come to America.

CHILDHOOD'S FRAILTIES.

An old, but artistically well-preserved, club man, who prides himself upon his reputation as a beau, made great efforts to force an acquaintance with a handsome lady in a Madison avenue car the other day. The lady held upon her lap a very pretty little girl, and it was through a pretended admiration for the child and solicitude for her that the old beau sought to open a conversation with the lady. He gave his gold-headed cane to the little one to play with, and asked, "Do you like it, pretty?" the child was silent for a little, and then said, with critical gravity, "Mamma, he has a wig just like grandpa's, but he is uglier than grandpa is." The club man rejoined the end of his journey right there.—New York Sun.

The Worst He Could Have Said.

"Sister, what would you take me to be, Mr. Snoo ?" she lisped, looking innocents things at him.

"I dunno," he replied, twisting nervously about in his chair.

"I'm awfully old, I assure you. I've seen twenty-three summers!"

"Then you ought to wear glasses," he replied, tersely.

"Why, Mr. Snooks! Glasses at twenty-three!"

"Yes; your eyesight must be bad."

"I guess I don't know why you should think so," she pouted.

"Because I'm afraid about twenty summers have gone by that you haven't seen."—Chicago.

He Had Guess.

Col. Ethan Allen, of Lisbon, Conn., was at one time a guest at the Howard hotel, corner of Broadway and Maiden lane, New York. On entering the dining room he was ushered to give him a seat. The colonel readily walked to a table near by, and taking a chair which was turned up at the head of the table took a seat. He was hardly in the chair before a waiter came hurriedly to him saying:

"This seat is engaged."

"To whom?" asked the colonel.

"To a gentleman," replied the waiter.

"He's come," said the colonel, and remained at his dinner undisturbed, amid peals of laughter from the guests at the table.—Norwich Bulletin.

It is said that when a gentleman was introduced to Mayor Carter H. DEATH OF A WESTERN PIONEER.

The Career of G. S. Hubbard, Chicago's Oldest Settler.

Garden S. Hubbard, who died in Chicago on the 14th inst., at the age of 84, was the oldest Chicago settler. From choice he was contained two white families. Of early Chicago Mr. Hubbard would affectionately recall some times before his death he said of that section:

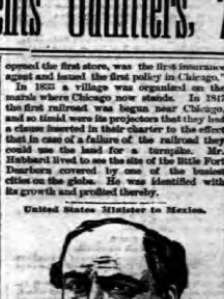
"Up to 1827 there were no signs of civilization on the west shore of Lake Michigan. One year Hubbard made a yearly trip to carry supplies to Fort Dearborn. The first steamer to come to Chicago in 1832, bringing Gen. Scott and troops for the Black Hawk war. Up to that time the country north and west of Chicago was almost a wilderness. I went from Chicago to Detroit on horseback, without meeting a white person until reaching Ypsilanti, where there were a few log cabins. In the summer of 1833 I opened up the corner of Smith and La Salle streets, Chicago, being the first actual building there in the state. It was a frame, and two stories high, and the shrewd old Yankee thought it would pay. I called the building 'Hubbard's folly.' I was the first packer of beef and pork, opened the first store, was the first insurance agent and issued the first policy in Chicago."

In 1831 a village was organized on the marsh where Chicago now stands. In 1847 the first railroad was begun near Chicago, and so timid were its projectors that they had a clause inserted in their charter to the effect that in case of a failure of the railroad they could use the land for a turnpike. Mr. Hubbard lived to see the site of the little Fort Dearborn covered by one of the busiest cities on the globe. He was identified with its growth and profited thereby.

United States Minister to Mexico.



THOMAS C. MANNING.

Thomas Courtland Manning, the new Minister to Mexico, is about fifty-five years of age. He was born in North Carolina. In 1859 he moved to the town of Alexandria, La., as a lawyer. He was a member of the state constitutional convention in 1861, which voted the Pelican state out of the union. This record was, and he immediately enlisted, and rose to be adjutant general of the state in 1862. In 1864 Governor Allen appointed him associate justice of the supreme court. After the war he resumed his law practice. In 1877 he was appointed chief justice of the state of Louisiana.

In October last Judge Manning brought to President Cleveland the official notification of the latter's election as a trustee of the Peabody fund, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Gen. Grant. After Judge Manning had completed his interview with the president and cabinet officers, the president remarked to Secretary Bayard, "I shall ought to be in the public service," and on the first opportunity—that offered by the resignation of Minister Jacbourne—he has appointed him.

A Memento of Her Mamma.

A touching story is related of a young lady whose home was laid in ashes by the great conflagration in Chicago, on Sunday, October 8, C. She hopes to be a resident of Dunsmuir, B. C. In the hope of finding some memento of her former happiness she searched the ruins, and, after considerable labor, found a diamond screw in a small piece of paper, which proved to be a remnant of John Howard Payne's song, "Home, Sweet Home." The only words untouched by the flames were "There is no place like home."—Chicago Tribune.

For Governor of Connecticut.

Phineas C. Lounsbury, the recently nominated Republican candidate for governor of Connecticut, is the son of a farmer and was born in Ridgefield, Fairfield county, Ct., where he still resides. He was educated in the common schools and when 15 years of age, became a clerk in a store in New York. Five years later he returned to Connecticut and formed a copartnership with his brother, under the name of Lounsbury Bros. for the manufacture of boots and shoes. PHINEAS C. LOUNSBURY.

Phineas C. retired from the firm five years ago. Mr. Lounsbury represented his town in the legislature in 1876. He served four months as a private in the seventeenth Connecticut volunteers. In 1880 he was elected president of the Exchange bank, of New York, and is also a director of the American Bank Note company. In the last state convention, Mr. Lounsbury received 105 votes, the present governor receiving the number necessary for a choice.

Not a Single Remaining House.

According to the religious conceptions of the Egyptians, it was important for him to prepare a permanent home for his death sleep. He had none at least for the prolonged life he foresaw then of his living body. Thus thousands of graves have been preserved, while scarce one cannot find a single remaining house to betray even the slightest change of Egyptian domestic architecture.—Boston Budget.

This paper represents his views. Kansas has a stronghold of Republicanism and Prohibition, and it was in that state that this movement began. Mr. Griffin was chosen chairman of the organizing committee. He traveled through the western states making the organization of Republican clubs, and the result of his work was the gathering at Chicago.

WILSON BARRETT.

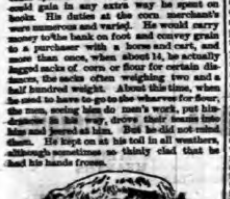
HIS CHILDHOOD OF HARD WORK AND YOUTHFUL STRUGGLES.

His Six Weeks of Schoolings—His First Drama, and the Way in Which It Was Presented—Early Premonition of Success—Working Up from the Foot.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Mr. Wilson Barrett, actor and manager of the Royal Princess' theatre, London, will soon arrive in America, and will appear in his favorite roles in all our large cities. He will be in Chicago at the time of the celebrated actor has furnished me many fresh details of his early life which will be read with interest at this time, when Mr. Barrett is about to land on our shores.

Wilson Barrett was a precocious boy. Between 12 and 13 he learned every word of Hamlet and Richard III. He was employed hard at work in the office of a wholesale corn merchant who paid the lad six shillings a week. Out of this sum he parents allowed him two shillings for his support at home. The rest he was expected to clothe and feed himself. He had only a bed and supper at home. His hours of labor were from 7 in the morning until 10 or 11 at night, with a half hour's rest for breakfast and another half hour for lunch—the larger portion of which time he employed in reading whatever he could lay hands upon, especially anything about plays or the stage. Every cent that he could spare from his tiny weekly stipend or could gain in any extra way he spent on books. His dream at this time was to become the man, seeing him do man's work, put him together in his way, drove their team into him and feared at him. But he did not succeed at this. He was an ink boy all his days, although sometimes so thinly clad that he had his hands frozen.



WILSON BARRETT AS CHATTERTON.

When young Barrett was 14 he begged his master to let him leave work at 6 o'clock in the evening in each week in order that he might attend evening school at a charge of twopence. This request the merchant granted to him for about a month, but at the end of that time, finding that the boy was too much missed, he withdrew the permission. And this was the extent of the schooling of Wilson Barrett. But his mind was developing rapidly without the aid of teachers. He had been drying his hand at little dramas, and on his way home from the store at night he frequently used to slip into the theatre and see the last part of whatever play was on. Then he would "shin up" the water pipe and into his low bed room and undress as quietly as possible so as not to awaken his parents, who, he knew, would not approve his conduct. But this growing love for the stage became stronger and stronger in him. One night he saw Henry Neville, then the leading actor of the Olympic, in "Camille's Husband." It was a very warm evening. Young Barrett sat in the galleries and then ran all the way home after the play. He took a chill which resulted in inflammation of the lungs and pleurisy, and for a long time the poor child hovered between life and death. During this sickness, the sum of sixteen shillings which he had been saving up penny by penny as a starting fund for entering the profession, and which he had, as he says, always kept in his pocket by day and in a little canvas bag under his pillow at night, was discovered and paid over to the doctor. Fortunately, when Mr. Neville told Mr. Barrett that English actors looked to him as the head of their profession, the latter said: "That's good to hear from you, as you nearly killed me at the beginning."

After his convalescence young Barrett went back to the corn dealer's, and shortly managed to get a large part time printing office. Here he rose rapidly, drawing at the start fifteen shillings a week, and as the hours of work were not so confining as with his former employers he found time to write his first complete drama, "Claudian," when he was now 15 years old, and with some other lads of about the same age accomplished a very creditable thing. He arranged an old shed in the back of a garden as a theatre, with stage and scenery, and in lieu of gas or, footlights devised a scheme of pill lamps, whereby which could be turned up or down all at the same time by pulling a wire. For the boxes a board was painted and cut out in the shape of curtains, so that a man could peep through and look at the stage as if seated in a regular theatre box. There were six members in young Barrett's company, and, after several rehearsals, they were allowed to fifty of their friends and relatives as of the actors. The play was a great success, and the summer theatre was nightly crowded. The actors did the scene shifting, and Mr. Wilson Barrett's brother George, the now well-known comedian of the Princess' theatre, had for his inspiring portion of the work to sit on a raised platform and up over their heads in the fire, the ladder to which he would have to swing down in order to make sure of his staying there till the end of the play. It was not by hot on the perch, and he sometimes got very tired, and had to be prodded with a long stick in order to be kept up to business. They purchased calico and stained and cut and dyed with their own costumes, young Wilson doing all the painting, designing and necessary work. Their orchestra consisted of a violin, English concertina and flute. They wanted a drum, but the orchestra being too small to accommodate that instrument the piece was hit on of covering a small square box with their brown paper, kept taut by a spirit lamp. This was a fair drum if not his too hard.

About this time a very large robbery of bank notes occurred and detectives were following every person connected with the printer's firm where young Barrett was employed. Next that time—I wish I might call him friend—I would have been just as much of a notoriety if he had been the real criminal as a detective. He was one of nature's noble-men."

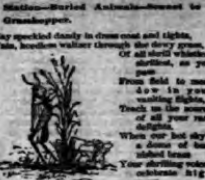
THE TRUE STORY OF THIRTEEN DOGS ON A STRING.

Miss Loretta Wilkins and Her Large Family of Queer Visitors to a Police Station—Buried Animals—Sweet to a Grasshopper.

Gay spotted dandy in dress coat and tights,
Vain, heedless walker through the dewy grass,
Of all the insect nations,
Or air or earth or waters,
From field to meadow to your waiting nights,
Touch at the flowers
Of all your rare delights;
Where you for but shy's
A dance of fantasies,
Your short lives
Your short lives celebrate high



And vespers chant through all the sultry night.
Your piping music in the summer air
With every cadence its magic yields,
Even drowsy labor scorns not your delicate care
And rest in benediction on the field.
Gay, heedless revelers, your glad carousal
Belokens our coming, unwelcomed, all.

—E. S. Hopkins.

A Lone Woman's Dogs.

Miss Loretta Wilkins was very fond of dogs. She had not much else to care for, so she put her heart on them. It is better to care for a dog than for nothing at all.

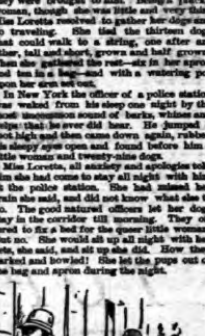
Miss Loretta had a large collection of pets, and took care of them all herself. They were as much trouble as half a dozen babies would have been. But their paltriness did not think of that, and her affection for them kept on increasing at such rates they would soon not her out of house and home, and then, getting hungry, might eat her up, too.

She ranged in size from six to one of them. She had thirteen setters, which are good hunting dogs. Several of them had good-sized families of children, so that there were twenty-nine of the setter tribe in all. Miss Loretta set much round out where a man lived who wanted a whole pack of setters. He kept a kennel, and bred and trained dogs for sale.

But he could not take the animals unless they were brought to him. Being a plucky woman, though she was little and very thin, Miss Loretta resolved to gather her dogs and go traveling. She tied the thirteen dogs that could walk to a string, one after another, tail and short, grown and half grown. Then she gathered up the rest—six in a gunny sack and ten in a large one, with a watering pot upon her arm set out.

In New York the officer of a police station was waked from his sleep one night by the most imposing sound of barks, whines and yelps that he ever did hear. He jumped a foot high and then came down again, rubbed his sleepy eyes open and found before him a little woman and twenty-nine dogs.

Miss Loretta, all anxiety and apologies told him she had come to stay all night with him at the police station, and that the dogs had train she said, and did not know what else to do. The good natured officers let her dogs stay in the corridor till morning. They offered to let her sit in the office with them. But no. She would all up all night with her pets, she said, and sit up she did. How they barked and howled! She let the pups out of the bag and sprou during the night.



WITH HER TWENTY-NINE DOGS.

Next morning she tucked them all away again as before, and with bag and apron and watering pot, and leading the thirteen dogs on a string, she started for the railway station. A policeman escorted her through the streets to see that no harm came to her or the thirteen dogs on a string. At the railway waiting room the officer said:

"Now, you've come in time with these dogs."

But go in she would. She was nervous as she did so, and a little excited, and in her hurry she dropped the bag and lost the purse. It was evidently time to kick and wriggle round like a headless fire thing, and from it came such cries as though a dozen babies were being murdered. The officer picked up the purse and dropped it into the bag, wagging their tails and howling too. For a few minutes nobody could hear anything but those demoniac dog yells.

Then little Miss Loretta said to the officer: "Now, sir, please put the bag full of puppies again, and remember that the ones deliver the pet, and if you see who lost it, tell them to call at my house."

And she started in peace in the passenger room for the train.

She had to charter a whole baggage car all to her twenty-nine dogs and herself, though, before she got to her home. It was a long journey. The station master offered to take them in the freight car for $7.25. But Miss Loretta thought that was not a stylish enough way for her family to travel, so she got the baggage car.

Buried Animals.

The name of an animal, with the letters in their natural order, will be found in each of the following sentences:

1. If you will give me the broken seal, you can replace it. 2. Mr. Hall is constantly be a very good idea to do so, Ethel. 3. The little black cub is only waiting for a chance to bite you. 4. I will not give up my share. 5. He gave them a few pieces of preserved ginger. 6. She did not encourage Nellie to pursue her musical studies. 7. The parlor is already dusted and ready for our visitors. 8. How will a man, in this condition ever retrieve himself? 9. I was there when Leon urged his claim so persistently. 10. Did you ever see a more beautiful bird? 11. Fe ran stop, I say sure. 12. I sent out this shallow pan daily, for the birds. 13. At the second of the familiar tap I ran to the door. 14. Did you call Jack a lazy lad?—St. Nicholas.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
CARD TO THE PUBLIC.
This company is prepared to receive applications and to make contracts for incandescent lighting for both domestic and business purposes.
As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, it is proposed to extend the system to the remaining portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed. The date at which domestic lighting will be commenced will depend somewhat upon the number of applications for light and their location.
The electric light in the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the lighting of the streets, and from that time forward within the city for street lighting. Some delay has previously been incurred in consequence of the consumers failing to get a bill for their applications aggregating 200 lights, namely 80 in the business section of 100 in the residence section.
A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Wm. Hubbard, the genial ticket and freight agent, 39 and 37 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will be found between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

IN SOUTHERN IRELAND.

A LOOK AT CORK AND ITS IRISH CHARACTERISTICS.

Paddy as He Is at Home—The Slaves, the Saloons and the Peasants' Homes. Big Estates and Poor People—Jaunting Cars, Beggars, Etc., Etc.

[Special Correspondence.]

DUBLIN, Ireland, August 3.—Landing at Queenstown, I came at once to Cork, the third city of Ireland, and the capital of the south. It is beautifully situated on the banks of the Lee, and it is surrounded by a country rich and rolling. My guide book proudly says it has increased 4,000 in the last ten years, and it has now a population of 104,000 people. The streets of Cork are as irregular as those of Boston, but they are wider and better paved. St. Patrick's street, which is the chief one, has some fine stores, and, commercially, it seems to be prosperous. The city is a great shipping port, and all the cattle, sheep and agricultural products of south Ireland are sent from here to England. Everything is the best next in the world, though she is too poor to eat it, and I saw sheep, cows and horses by the hundreds driven through the streets in front of my hotel, on their way to the boats. Cork butter is advertised all through England and in the other Irish cities, and the tweed mills at Blarney, near Cork, make some of the best cloths made in the kingdom. This tweed outwears the Scotch make, and it is very cheap here. A good suit of clothes, made to order, can be got for from $12 to $15, and I have seen attractive suits in the tailors' windows offering good goods as low as $10 per suit.

There is little brick used here in building, and the Cork business blocks lack the architectural beauties of an American street of the same sized city. Stone and stucco seem to prevail in building, and everything is massive and somber. The smaller houses of the city, or the dwellings of the laboring classes, are low one or two-story houses, confining from one to seven other stories and go away imagining that in kissing these that they carry with them the mysterious power given by kissing the Blarney stone as described in the Irish tunes. For

Like a magnet its influence such is.
Attraction it gives all it touches.
If you kiss it, in truth you'll say that blessed day,
You may kiss whom you please wit your blarney.

BLARNEY CASTLE.

Blarney castle is now owned by the young Lord of Blarney, who has inherited a great estate surrounding it. He has had much trouble with the tenants and some of the lands are lying idle. One of his tenants not long since refused to pay the rent demanded of him and he was shown the door. The young lord's agent tried to get another tenant, but when a tenant is turned out on such grounds it would not be safe for another man to take the property. The lands of this tenant were left idle for a year or two, and a short time ago he was reinstated upon his own terms.

As we drove from Cork to Blarney other empty houses were pointed out to us, and our driver told us that these were idle on account of such evictions.

The country drives through Ireland are very beautiful, and about Cork they are like driving through continuous gardens. The roads are piked and they are as smooth as a floor. The pikes are broken rock. We drove them by walls of stone and hedge and great trees, the trunks of which are covered with ivy, hung over them. Now and then you pass the entrance to the grounds of some great lord, who has his porter's lodge beside it, and who owns his acres often by the tens of thousands.

Along those roads about Cork, and here and there scattered over the landscape, are numerous one-story cabins, of stone or of mud, whitewashed with a coat of paving or whitewash. They are usually of one low story and an attic, and their roofs are of thatched straws. This thatch, in many instances, is old and brown. The grass grows on it, and the moss springs up all over it. The edge of the roof is often no higher than a man's head, and many of these huts have but one room. Four persons sometimes do. They belong to small tenants, men who have from one to thirty or forty acres of land, at a rent of from $5 to $12 per acre. They are very dear, being $400 a year rent for forty acres of land, with a cabin hardly fit for a hog pen on it, and you have the condition of these people.

Nearly the whole of Ireland is rented out by landlords who live in England, and who spend their money there. Many of them never come to Ireland at all. Others have never seen their estates, and there are many who get from $50,000 to $200,000 a year in rents. These rents are collected by agents, and land in Ireland rents from 40 to 50 per acre. A good average would perhaps be $5 or $6 per acre. Some rent as high as $45 per acre.

Speaking of large estates, three men own estates in Ireland of more than 100,000 acres each, and fourteen own estates of from 50,000 to 100,000 acres each. The whole of Ireland is not as large as Ohio, and it is owned by a very few men. The workers of the country in the lowest instances own the land they till. The products of the country are shipped out of it, and the money earned by it is spent abroad. A member of parliament, whom I met at Belfast during the riots, tells me that from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 is sent to England in payment of Irish rents yearly. I have heard it estimated elsewhere at $80,000,000 a year. But the $30,000,000 is striking enough. Can you imagine the United States such a drain year after year? It is no wonder that the laboring classes of Ireland are the poorest in Europe, and that their condition of living is the worst.

The country of Ireland resembles in its natural character many of the United States. It is made up of gently rolling lands in the south and these along the coast rise into low rocky mountains. About Cork it is a garden, and as far as you can see rich crops fill your eyes and the darkest of cattle and sheep dot the landscape. The fields look like those of a model farm. They are often as rectangular in shape and are, as a rule, small, seldom being over five or ten acres in extent and often only one or two. These fields are separated by stone walls about four feet high and five wide at the bottom and banked up with earth, so that in many cases the stones are not seen and the fields seem to be separated by walls of green grass, which are often as high as four feet. On many of the walls hedges are planted and in some of them small trees grow. There are no wooden fences on the farms of southern Ireland, and the only wire I have seen is here and there a strand or two on stakes about a foot high, running along the tops of the walls which line the railways.

These fences add greatly to the beauty of the landscape and make it look totally different from an American one. They take up, however, a great deal of valuable land, and in most cases have as much space allotted to them as the woven rail fences. Often there is a deep ditch running around the fields at the side of the walls, and in such cases the fence and ditch wastes a strip of land from ten to fifteen feet wide all around it. It is in this waste of land in fences that I see a great deal of all the troubles of Ireland. It is certainly a great waste, but I imagine Ireland's chief troubles come from other causes.

Before I left America a friend, an editor, who makes it his rule to spend 100 days every year abroad, asked me why I wanted to go to Ireland, as "there were no antiquities there." This is a mistake. Ireland is rich in ruins, and you find old castles everywhere. Blarney is only one of hundreds, and old monasteries, and there is a greater number of ruined abbeys here than in England.

ROCK OF CASHEL.

The round towers of Ireland are remarkable ruins, the use of which is not known, though it is supposed that they were the watch-towers of the people against the Danes, away back when England and Ireland were almost savage countries. Between Killarney and Dublin there is one of these towers in almost perfect preservation. It is known as the Rock of Cashel, is made of sandstone, and is as high as an eight-story house, or ninety feet. There was an abbey built near this during the middle ages, but it is in ruins, while the tower, much older than it, stands out a proud monument of early Celtic architecture.

I took a day's drive in an open stage over the mountainous hills of southern Ireland, going through what is called its most picturesque scenery and stopping at the Lakes of Killarney. Leaving Cork by rail, we rode about two hours through Cork county to a little town named Bantry, owned by Lord Bantry, one of the nabobs of the county, and from here drove about three miles to the Bay of Glengariff. The drive all this way was largely through this lord's lands, and rich fields of hay, sheep and cattle, and paupers were the chief features of the landscape. Bantry is named after the noble family which owns it, and this owning of a town is not uncommon here. Almost all or many of the little Irish towns are owned by one man whose agent rents them out to tenants. In other cases the tenant rents the land on a long lease and builds upon and improves it. These in turn he re-rents, and by paying a ground rent of from $5 upwards for a little block of ground, builds a property upon it which will rent for a fair interest on his investment.

These little towns scattered over southern Ireland are much like the Cork suburbs. They have no gardens, have no architectural beauties, and the poorer parts of them are not fit for such hermits as Dickens' Tom Tiddler's ground, but few families of one and twelve children, added to the father and mother. The roads of Ireland are fine everywhere, and the improvements in the way of bridges are of the most substantial character. In this day's ride through the mountains we were on a pike all the way, and in some cases the road was cut through solid rock. We drove through a great part of Cork and Kerry counties, the latter of which has over 1,000,000 acres, and Cork, the largest county in Ireland, more than 1,800,000 acres.

BEGGING PENNIES.

Beggars followed us everywhere, and they were of all classes and ages. At every turn of the road and from every rock, bareheaded, barefooted, ragged girls and boys from 4 years old to 16 sprang forth and made for our stage, holding out their hands as they ran, and saying, "Penny if you please, sir. Penny if you please." Often they would keep up for miles, running all the time as fast as the horses and jumping over with the stage. If a penny was thrown to them, they would scramble and fight among themselves for it and then dart on to beg for more. Some of the little girls were almost naked, and even of these last baby, three or four clothes. One I remember, a straggling, good looking girl of 13, had upon her rags which left her in a state of semi-nudity, and which looked as though they were pinned on with a brier, for her clad a la Madam Eve before the fall. She got about five pennies in a three-mile run and was grateful in her God bless you.

One of the best beggars of the whole lot was a little red-headed boy of about 10 years who followed us five miles or so on foot in all rags, but getting pennies, and his bare feet kept him up with the stage though his face was flushed with the exertion. He ran along singing Irish songs for us, and then called us if we would give him a penny if he would stand on his head. Without waiting for a reply he dashed about of the trotting horses' heads, turned a few quick somersaults in the air and then he stood on his head and balanced his bare legs in the air, and so remained with red face while the stage passed, his almost bursting eyeballs looking back to me and inquiring as to the result of his chief begging trick. He did this a half dozen times, until I promised him a penny if he would throw a no beggar. He promised. I threw him the penny, and he turned to run back when an Australian wag on the front seat held up another copper, and he broke his word and just after us again.

At the LAKES OF KILLARNEY the beggars are legion. They seize hold of you and will hardly let you go. They beset you at every turn and by laughing or crying, by importunity and cheek, coax the coppers out of your pocket at every turn. They try to force you to buy their wares, and I am glad to say at present that the scenery is hardly worth the struggle in getting past them.

The same begging I found at Dublin, and so strong a feature is it in the Irish life where tourists go. There was less of it in the northern counties, and off of the lines of travel scarcely any. Mr. Robert P. Porter, who traveled all over Ireland, counting, tells me that away from the railroads he found the people miserably poor but no beggars.

Western and southern Ireland are the poorest parts. Here the potato, pounds of Indian meal mush, which they call stirabout, is the staple diet, and meat is seldom seen except on holy days and Christmas. Northern Protestant Ireland is better off, but the bulk are here of the same character and there is much poverty. A change must take place in this country soon, but when and how I leave it for the politicians to say.

FRANK GEORGE CARPENTER.

NEW YORK NOTES.

Probability That Mrs. Potter Will Adopt the Theatrical Profession.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—From the many stories afloat, all of them singularly concurrent, it appears entirely probable that Mrs. Dion Boucicault Potter will soon adopt the stage as a profession. She has carried amateur acting to such extremes that there will be very little difference between that and entering the stage regularly. She has been as conspicuous through advertising as she is ever likely to become, perhaps much more so. Any and all pretense of her privacy is quite impossible in her existing conditions. She is as much talked and written about, commented on and pointed out as any actress in the city. She knows it, too, and enjoys it for vanity, however it may be disguised, is one of her leading traits. The Browns and Potters, two of the most conservative families in town, can hardly relish the idea; but the change is coming. It comes will scarcely be perceptible, and the lady herself will be far more consistent as a complete professional than as a professional lady while assuming to be strictly in private life. Mrs. Potter is pretty and clever. As Cora Urquhart, a native belle of New Orleans, she was much admired by the best of the men, and she seems to have it still in the face of any amount of orthodox and social opposition.

Very few persons who remember the Church of the Puritans in Union square, in which the Rev. George B. Cheever preached so eloquently and passionately against slavery in the days before the war, have any idea that it occupies in the same locality another quarter of the town. Tiffany's jewelry and silverware establishment occupies its site. It was a handsome pile of brick structure with its granite walls and clustering ivy; it was remarkable for having one tower much shorter than the other. The story is that, while the building was contemplated, one of the members of the Congregational society, while traveling in Europe, was particularly struck with a church in England. Having come back to New York and laid his plans of architecture, he made a copy of the English edifice on paper, brought it home, and it so pleased the building committee that they submitted it to the society. Long ago after they learned that the reason of the short tower on the other side was that the British congregation had not sufficient money to finish it. This greatly annoyed Dr. Cheever's congregation, but did not alter their opinion of the picturesqueness of the abovementioned tower. When the Puritans was sold, the stones marked and put into the Mt. Olivet (colored) Baptist church, in Fifty-third street near Seventh avenue, as exact reproduction as the cost of piecing pile of a quarter of a century ago in Union square, minus the ivy. But in the street through which the elevated railway runs it naturally does not look half so handsome as it did in the famous square. Hardly any old New Yorker recognizes it, I suspect, when he passes it.

Dr. Cheever is the extant, though generally supposed to be dead, minister retired from the pulpit during the civil war on account of delicate health, and has been living most of the time in Europe, where Mr. Tiffany got to him. He has had an active career. Born in Maine, a graduate of Bowdoin and Andover, he was pastor of a Congregational church at Salem, Mass., for years, a writer and a powerful advocate of temperance, he published at 28 a reputed drama, "Deacon Gile's Distillery," in which the liquors were described at outstanding dances, and containing an infernal pit. The article had wide popularity in the form of a temperance tract; Deacon Gile was thought to be a wealthy citizen, and the play was popular with the temperance class. Consequently, Cheever's skit excited wrath against him among the common people, who assaulted him, and handled him roughly in the street. He was also tried for libel and committed to jail for thirty days. He has always taken profound pride in that imprisonment for the liberty of freedom of expression. For the last twenty years he has taken no part in public affairs, passing his time among his books, and with some of his old friends. He has been known as a prolific author, but has written nothing for a long while. He is now 72, and wholly unknown to the rising generation.

JUDITH HENRI BROWNE.

The chief priest at Pesaditte to Edwin Arnold: "Let not the sacred cow die." Arnold: "Let that and everything else die, death, into its essence. Your wise men are not wise to speak even here of five sexes. There is a sixth sex, and it is the neuter. It is that which truly sees, hears, smells, tastes and touches; not the organs. When eyes and ears and nostrils and tongue and hands are laid aside, the master sense becomes all the more free and opened. It is to this sex we must look for the future. It is this sex we seem to be nearer making up the world—because it is nearer making up its mind to be concentrated into one whole taken piece by piece.

For a statesman: "Do what you seem to be."

For a messenger boy: "He who runs may read."
For a lover whose fiance has a glass eye: "With all thy false eye love thee still."

Enjoying Hotel Life.

A great summer hotel near New York is frequented by a solitary watchman. Once in a while the watchman goes up to the clock tower. If there are any letters, smile himself, follows an imaginary bell boy up eight flights of stairs, brings himself a very small pitcher of lemonade and gives himself a dollar bill, sits down to a large plate with an oyster cracker on it, and feels that he is really away for the summer.—Boston Transcript.

Peach leaves resonant to a pain, and applied to a bruise or wound from a rusty nail or a simple cut, will give immediate relief.

AMERICAN HOMES.

OUR CLIMATE TO BE CONSIDERED WHEN WE BUILD.

Some Things Which We Must Do With-out—Tree and Wall Vines—Old Country Best Remedied—Drainage—Material. Locality—Style.

It is amusing to hear a man or woman who has crossed the ocean ridicule our country dwelling house and compare it with the thatched cottage of the English cottage, of the German farmhouse, the vine-grown walls, the windows projecting from the roofs, the low height, the shadow, the quiet and the absence of the irregular form. They would have them all the staring, formal villas of this country in an English hawthorn lane, or a green German valley. But experience teaches us a country's architecture is, to a large degree, a necessary fruit and outcome of its circumstance. We have a peculiar and difficult climate here and must, first of all, consider it in our building. There is the heat of the tropics in the summer, and the chilliness of the Arctic cold in the winter. We cannot have Arctic cold here, for the rooms would be intolerable in summer. Low, sharp-gabled cottages, with dormer windows in the roof, are no doubt picturesque, but they make a bad chamber under the roof and low, close sitting rooms. Even if an air chamber be built between the roof and the lath and plaster, still the upper rooms, in such nights as we have now, would be almost unendurable. We must have houses high between floors and the bed room well separated from the roof.

TREES AND WALL VINES.

Then another element of the picturesque is the deep shade and thick vines overclambering the walls. But our experience has shown that sun and air are indispensable for health in a house, and we are compelled more and more to plant trees at a little distance, securing shade by verandas or balconies and allowing the sun free play on roofs and walls. A moderate use of wall vines is, of course, permitted under these conditions, but any excessive clinging of wild vine or creeper attracts insects and increases dampness. The constant liability to malaria, of course, modifies all our modes of building, and compels us to admit much shade. Indeed it will be noticed now in England that all the country houses are built much more in the American or French style than they used to be, and their deep, high stories and much openness to the sun, and summer balconies for shade.

The regular form of English houses is a practical fossil—a result of growth. It appears here sometimes where an old country seat has been enlarged and remodeled, and is wonderfully attractive. I live in such a house, and while I enjoy it and am proud of it, I must confess that it is exceedingly inconvenient. It requires great expense in the care, lighting, warming and drainage. The cheapest of all cities is the square house, and we most people build with small means in this country, they naturally adopt this, or some modification of this form. The crooked and irregular English villas, it should be remembered, have become nuisances under modern sanitary ideas. Their drainage is execrable, and they often nests of typhoid fever.

DRAINAGE THE FIRST THING.

In this country the first thing for a housebuilder to consider, before all ornamentation or architectural effect, is drainage. He must see that the water pipes and drain pipes are well protected from the frost, that the traps are close, and that the outflow is unimpeded. In all small households it is the part of wisdom to place the water pipe behind the kitchen chimney, which is always warm, and to have but one angle and no cross pipes to keep backward to fall and the return gases from a drain, that it is safer to keep up the old country custom of bowl and pitcher in the bedroom, and obtain all the water from the bath room, which is generally and should be entirely separated from the bedroom. It is believed by physicians that one of the most prolific sources of diphtheria and all foul-air diseases is the return gas through the Croton water drains.

In regard to material, it is doubtful if anything is more suitable for this climate than wood well thick filled in." Thin walls are cold, warm. But in every locality there are peculiar, and often beautiful, building stones, which could be combined with wood in the finish of many parts of the house. Yet small house builders will find that every deviation from the ordinary style is expensive. Stone alone seems often deep and, for the coldness, noisome, and is a poor non-conductor. Brick and terra cotta are very pretty features, but if of tile or slate it is expensive, and if of shingles, exposed to rot. It seems a pity that the modern, black and blue slate is so much taking the place of shingles in country houses. Plazzas are the great necessity in Mid-climate, and the prettiest feature in our architecture. They should not, however, be built on the south side of the building, and on the east should not be so broad as to exclude all winter sun. A balcony for open air breakfast would be an exceedingly pretty feature in our best villas.—Boston Budget.

It Was All Foolishness.

He was rather sentimental, and he and his friend were in the park. A little way off two girls were seated. One of them was very pensive, and extremely sad. She was resting her cheek on her hand, and her eyes were full of far-off contemplation.

"She is pretty, isn't she?" said he. "By Jove, I'm falling in love with that girl. I wonder who the fellow is she's thinking about? I say, wouldn't it be pleasant to think a pretty girl like that would be sad and lonesome because you are she's dreaming about somebody? Let's walk past and look at her."

So they walked slowly past. The maiden was still wrapped in contemplation, and, as they passed, her companion said, quite distinctly:

"Say, Emily, this is all foolishness. Let's go in to Dr. ——and let him take the tooth out."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Prof. Calvin E. Stowe.

The Hartford Times, in an editorial, says that the late Prof. Calvin E. Stowe had more than a faith in life hereafter, he had knowledge, derived from actual personal experience. He was aware of the reality of the spirit world and of its nearness to the earth and through his own experience. To him the veil was often withdrawn and he was permitted to see and hold communication with those who had gone before. He was entirely satisfied that he often saw and conversed with, in the privacy and quiet of his own home, those who were no longer the occupants of earthly bodies. This gift of spiritual discernment and clairvoidance was potent to help or smite the name of bereavement, and to fix his thought habitually on the higher realities.—New York Sun.

A Sick Children's Mission.

A sick children's mission is doing good work in New York city this year. A corps of physicians visit sick children in all parts of the city, and mothers receive at the central office such articles as condensed milk, farina, barley and other nourishing food, which the poor themselves could not afford to buy themselves.—Chicago Times.

THE STUDY OF ART.

PICTURE OF GIRL STUDENTS' LIFE IN A PARIS ATELIER.

What One of Their Number Says of Their Work—A Pleasant Bit of Student Life. Sunday Afternoons—Not Unfamiliar.

Better than any words of mine is what one of these girl students says herself in some notes which I asked her to make for me in addition to the sketches made by another girl at the same atelier. I give them just as they are:

"For any girls coming to study art in Paris, to live as we do in a quiet hotel, is far better and more economical than to board with a French family or pension, unless with a wish to learn the language. Nothing can be more simple than our habits. We have one room, and we descend to talk dinner when we choose, and cook ours. We cook our own breakfast over a spirit lamp at 8 a. m. and go straight to the atelier, where we work till 1. Then dejeuner at a creamerie and work again till 5 or 6. Then dinner, and then we undress if we like, but more often we boil our bottle, have tea and an egg, and spend the evening over a book. It sounds rather a monotonous life, but we all find it very attractive, and the weeks slip by only too fast.

"Even the regular morning walk is pleasant. At the hour of 7 the Latin Quarter is filled with street sellers wheeling their stalls about, housewives marketing in their white caps, and children in black pinafores and long white cases bring back the bread for the dinner or garden. Streams of men, too, on their way to business, a newspaper in one hand and a roll in the other, imply that hard-working Paris is waking up to daily life.

ATELIER CHARACTERS.

"Our atelier gives us every opportunity for the study of character. In daily work together many people get to know a great deal of each other. There is the elderly spinster, prevented from study in her youth, and always envying the younger students who have their life before them. There is the sad, patient artist who has been toiling for years without making any visible progress, but who still hopes to succeed one day. Another, equally sad, is the artist who has the will and the work, scorns such a thing as outward appearance, and her dress, once esthetic, looks like a worn out robe de chambre slowly emitting dust as it drops off. Then a girl who combines the love of fashion with the love of art comes here in costumes more suited to the Champs Elysees than our crowded studios, and is in danger of rubbing against palets, knocking down easels, etc.

"Companionship is one of the pleasantest bits of student life. Our frugal tea parties, when the hostess boils the kettle and sets the table, and we all sit round the fire and discuss the last exhibition, especially our own professor's work therein, or the success of one of us in getting into the salon, which is held as a universal triumph to all. Conversation never flags, for every girl has lived and seen the ends of the earth, and can describe them well, and others are political spirits who belong to a debating society, and wish to reconstruct the world after their pattern, which the rest good-naturedly but resolutely disapprove. Then where to spend our Sunday afternoon is always an important consideration. Usually we go out of the town by road or rail, and after six days spent in the atelier, its close atmosphere reeking with oil and turpentine, the smells, sights and sounds of the country are only too delightful.

INTERESTED IN WORK.

"Such are our pleasures; but, after all, the most interesting thing is the work. Every Monday we have the excitement of posing the new model. We begin enthusiastically, but Tuesday, after the professor has criticised our drawings, our spirits usually sink a little. Lower still they get Wednesday and Thursday. By Friday, when the second professor comes, they are usually down at zero, and should be entirely separated from the bedroom. It is believed by physicians that one of the most prolific sources of diphtheria and all foul-air diseases is the return gas through the Croton water drains.

In regard to material, it is doubtful if anything is more suitable for this climate than wood well thick filled in." Thin walls are cold, warm. A WILD FAMILY.

CURIOUS DISCOVERY MADE AMONG THE BLUE RIDGE FASTNESSES.

A True Tale of the Mountains—Extracts from the Story of a Strange Trio in Jackson county, Texas—Autistic Instinct—The Founders Cabin.

We all took stations at a little distance from the rickety structure and listed their hopes, and awaited developments. Presently one of the female creatures ventured shyly to the opening styled the door. The other timidly leaned forward upon her companion and knee, and stretched her head from the side. They looked wild and rude, indeed, and as much excited as if they were the first of the civilized beings had never before been heard by them. The one standing had eyes glistening black and rolling in quick, restless motion between New Year's and Christmas, the $10,000 a year, and $100,000 a year income of not less than $100,000, provided he has any intention of living within his resources or of accumulating a nest egg.

SECURING THE COW.

Boston yachtsmen are not, as a rule, so extravagant as their New York brethren, and many of them seem to think that unless a man is prodigal in his salt water hospitality he should be able to weather the season without crossing the $5,000 line. "The Huron's owner must have thrown a good deal of his money overboard if he has not cleared $10,000 every year," said a gentleman who owns one of the largest and best known yachts in eastern waters, and as the unhappy proprietor of the Huron has a share of the credit of the extravagant host there would seem to be a great deal of truth in this assertion.

A vessel like the Huron could be launched complete for the estimates of the leading builders in this section of the country, at a cost of from $20,000 to $25,000 at most. The jolly tars on board would number eight or nine men for the watch, and a captain, a mate, a cook, a steward and perhaps a cabin boy. The pay of the crew will average about $30 per month for each man before the mast, from $40 to $100 per month for the captain, from $50 to $75 for the mate, and, according to the epicurean tastes of the owner, the cook's wages will range from that of the heave-o'-my-timbers tar to that of the gallant and gold-laced captain. Some yacht owners who are inclined to "put on style," will select from their crew a steward, a second mate, a "bosun" and quartermaster for an additional wage of $5 every thirty days. Putting the number of a working crew of a crack yacht at twelve and the pay at the rate therefor according to the following liberally calculated table, the expense of maintenance can be easily determined:

Captain's salary per month, say	$100
Mate's salary per month, say	50
Second mate's salary per month, say	35
Quartermaster's salary per month, say	30
Bosun's salary per month, say	35
Six seamen at $30 per month	180
Cook per month, say	40
Total per month	$470

NO END TO THE EXPENSE.

Adding this to the cost of the "keep," and bringing the total up to $600, we have the sum of $1,800 as the season's expenditure for the crew. Placing it at $5,000, the allowance is liberal indeed.

But yachting has this in common with housekeeping, that one never knows where his expense will end. There always seems something to be bought, whether it be some adornment for the cabin or some supplement to the outfit. Another item is collision, bumping upon shoals, the hundred and one mishaps which befall nautical locomotion, and the various causes for frequent "hauling up" on the docks, all up the total sum. Then the things provided for, it remains with the owner to determine whether his reputation for hospitality and dinner-giving shall follow him from Commonwealth avenue to the ferry. If he is accustomed to playing mine host upon ship, he is likely to find this item in his dog-day expenditure beating the ship's maintenance bill out of sight. At this point the cost of yachting becomes more conjecture, but he must, indeed, be a generous skipper who entertains to the extent of $3,000 during the season, and thus brings up his account with Neptune to the comfortable figure of $5,000. What shall be said, then, of the man who regards $10,000 as a moderate season's yachting bill? He must have a cellar filled with champagne and Burgundy, and dined his crew and his guests upon Delmonico menus every day in the week. Considering the fact, however, that few Boston yacht owners live on board their sloops or schooners, and that still fewer keep open house for an army of acquaintances, it is difficult to understand how a man could find an outlet for the sum which he is said to have expended.—Boston Herald.

Gen. Skobeleff's Lucky Flag.

Verschagin, the distinguished Russian painter, in the course of some reminiscences of his friend Skobeleff, the late Russian general, was very superstitious. Skobeleff had made him a present of the flag under which he had gained twenty-two victories. It was made of red silk, with a yellow cross embroidered in the middle, and it was torn by many bullets. On leaving for his last Turkestan expedition, Skobeleff remarked to Verschagin: "I asked his friend either to give it back to him or to send him another in exchange. Madame Verschagin made an elaborate new flag, which was gracefully received on the arrival in the camp both by the general and his men. "But Skobeleff was just then unsuccessful. The enemy made a sortie from Geok Tepe, took, a number of arms, a cannon and a flag. On behalf was said: 'Give me the old flag back; the new one is unlucky,' he wrote to me. I gave nothing back. Another sortie, another flag, and consolation from me. Then other appeal: 'Give back, give back my lucky flag; take the one away which has no luck.' Still I did not give it back. Finally, Geok Tepe was taken, and the number of the enemy were killed, and an abundance of arms and baggage fell into the triumphant general's hands. My flag regained its favor, and returned his fortunate career until of advancing it. To-day this 'lucky' flag rests on the tomb of the general."—Exchange.

Stimulating Superition.

You are right, my son; too much sleep is injurious. Beware of too much sleep. But, then, too much watching is also injurious, brethren. Eighteen hours' sleep will hurt you less than six hours' wine supper. Some of the wakingest times you have, my boy, are liable to bring on serious harm to you, causing you to indulge in too much sleep.—Burdette.

No Room for the Position.

Miss Dorothy Howe, great-grandniece are weighted with common sense, writes to The Boston Transcript that "there is no room for the aristocratic pastime of fox hunting in this country. It is a forced importation, not a natural development, and will die like an exotic in an unfriendly soil."

[Valuable Collection of Coins.

A New Hampshire man has declined $10,000 for his collection of coins. The would-be purchaser is a Philadelphian who is already said to have over $40,000 value in his own collection.—New York Times.

PLAINFIELD TESTIMONIALS.

From a pharmacist who knows what it will do.

Mr. W. Front street, Plainfield, N. J., June 23, '86.
Dr. Chas. Thiers.

Dear Sir—I can ask my opinion of your Stomatine with a knowledge of your formula. I will say with pleasure that the chemical combination is perfect, and the ingredients are of the purest quality. I have used it in my own family, and can say that it is the best. I can safely and conscientiously say, I believe it to be the best article for the purpose that I know of for the use that you prescribe it. The rule I have adopted in selling proprietary medicines is to use and recommend in my own family those I can recommend to others. New York, I have my own family those I can recommend to others

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

CHAPTER C.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning [illegible] and the fines and costs collected thereon," approved April ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the state of New Jersey, That whenever any township in this state, or any board of chosen freeholders of any township in this state, shall have in contemplation the laying out or opening of any road or roads, or widening any road or roads, or shall have taken any steps in the laying out or opening of any road or roads in such township, it shall be lawful, at any time before the damages to be assessed for the laying out or opening of any such road shall have been assessed for a majority of the owners of the land to be taxed for the payment of the same, or in lieu thereof, to be assessed for such improvement in the [illegible] the township clerk a request, in writing, that the same be assessed by the jury of view hereinafter mentioned, and thereupon the said township clerk shall give notice of the time to be appointed for the meeting of such jury of view, as well as any act of assessment or report of such jury of view as to the damages which they may have been appointed or selected for laying out or opening of any new road or roads, or for changing the course or improving any road or roads, from or connecting with such proposed improvement, and to the owners of the land which is taxed further with the opening or laying out of such road or roads, and which shall have been assessed in the same proportion as the land which is taxed in lieu of such damages, and the costs of the assessment and payment of the ordinary expenses of such township.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 26, 1886.

CHAPTER CI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" (Revision) approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted, by the Senate and General Assembly of the state of New Jersey, That the seventy-eighth of an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction," (Revision) approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

78. And be it enacted, That the board of the [illegible] trustees of the school district of [illegible] legally known by the name of [illegible] shall have power to levy and collect by tax, in the manner provided by law, such sum or sums of money as may be necessary for the purpose of building, purchasing or renting a school house or houses, and for the purchase of lots, and the improvement of the same, and for the purchase of furniture, fuel and other necessary articles for the use of the school or schools, as well as the property of the district, as well as the payment of the district school tax on such property or the owner; and the money so raised by such district shall be paid over to the collector of such district, and that in all other respects the said board of trustees shall have the powers and authority of boards of trustees of school districts; and that in all proceedings for the collection of such taxes the said board of trustees shall be entitled to the same remedies as are now provided by law for the collection of taxes by the assessor of the township in which the district shall lie.

2. And be it enacted, That the district clerk, or other person performing the duties of a district clerk, in any school district in this state, shall, on or before the first day of October in each year, report to the commissioner of public instruction the number of children of such district between the ages of five and eighteen years, and the number of children between the ages aforesaid who attended the public schools of such district during the year ending on the thirty-first day of August next preceding, and the length of time such schools were kept open during the year, and the amount of money received by such district for the support of public schools during the year, and from what sources such money was received, and the amount of money expended during the year, and for what purposes such money was expended, and the amount of debt owing by such district, and for what purposes such debt was contracted, and the amount of money in the hands of the collector of such district, and the amount of money in the hands of the treasurer of such district, and the amount of money in the hands of any other person or persons, and the amount of money due from any person or persons to such district, and the amount of money due to any person or persons from such district, and the amount of property belonging to such district, and the amount of property belonging to any person or persons in trust for such district, and the amount of property belonging to such district in the hands of any person or persons in trust for any other purpose, and the amount of property belonging to any person or persons in trust for such district in the hands of any other person or persons, and the amount of property belonging to such district in the hands of any person or persons in trust for any other purpose, and the amount of property belonging to any person or persons in trust for such district in the hands of any person or persons in trust for any other purpose

Democratic Primary—Act IV.

The Democracy of the Fourth ward gathered in the Democratic Association rooms last night to make their selection of delegates. When interested, they never fail either in enthusiasm or numbers. Vincent L. Frame was elected chairman and James O'Neill secretary.

The Board of Election was composed of R. D. Moffett, judge; John Hatfield, inspector, and James O'Neill clerk.

Seven names having been completed 107 votes were cast, and the result was as follows:

DELEGATES TO CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

Daniel McCarthy..... 103
Wm. Herring..... 4

DELEGATES TO SENATORIAL CONVENTION.

Peter Flynn, jr..... 107
Stephen A. Davis..... 102
Scattering..... 5

MEMBERS OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Vincent L. Frame..... 103
Scattering..... 3

It was the same old story. The government bosses have been annihilated in every engagement. The THORS they would have planted withered, and their whole GOVERNMENT has not put forth a single SHOOT or blossom.

North Plainfield Democratic Primary.

The Democratic voters of North Plainfield township held their primary in the basement of the new school building on Somerset street last evening to elect delegates to the Democratic State Convention which will be held at Taylor's Opera House in Trenton, on Tuesday, the 28th instant. Somerset county, which includes North Plainfield township, is entitled to seven best delegates. Of this number North Plainfield is entitled to two. At the meeting last evening Mr. J. S. Martin was elected Chairman and Andrew E. Kenney Secretary. Messrs. D. Campbell and Henry Woodland were tellers. A large representation of the voters from each of the two districts were present and more or less enthusiasm was manifest throughout the meeting. The following is the result in detail:

FIRST DISTRICT.

John Becker, jr..... 58
John Schaffer..... 4
Joseph Billery..... 6

SECOND DISTRICT.

Wm. H. Ludlow..... 61
John Bottles..... 49
D. D. Smalley..... 15

Messrs. Becker and Ludlow having received the largest number of votes were declared elected, and the meeting then adjourned.

St. Mary's Fair.

An unusually large attendance was present last evening at the fair now progressing in St. Mary's Hall for the benefit of the St. Mary church. The contest for the silver watch was decided in favor of David Barry, he having collected $134 to John McCarthy's $131, winning the watch by $3. Among the many handsome articles on exhibition are a flour and doll, which was won by Miss Mary Callahan; an album was won by Mrs. Preston; Miss B. Kelly won a cashmere dress; a china tea set was awarded to Miss Mary Schenck, and a toilet set to Mildred Farley. The hair will continue this evening when the ticket, good for a passage to Europe and return, and a number of other useful articles, among them a bed room suit, will be disposed of.

—To-morrow frost is expected by those who believe it due six weeks after the arrival of the hatchlids, when chirp we gus will depart from Aug. 25th, and people take to their plants in time to avoid it.

—The new blue-stone walk in front of the "Bryant" school building on East Sixth street, which excites so much admiration, was laid by Mr. M. Powers, whose advertisement appears elsewhere.

—Ex-Constable Alex. Gee of North Plainfield is reported to have met with remarkably good luck while fishing at Somerville, N. J., one day this week, having caught one toad fish, twelve crabs, twelve weak fish and about a dozen porgies.

PERSONAL.

The two children of Mrs. Minnie Shay of Linden avenue, North Plainfield, are reported sick with scarlet fever.

Miss Lizzie Smalley of Craig Place in the Borough, has gone on a two weeks' visit to her cousin, Mrs. J. S. Irving of Westfield.

Mrs. Boyle (nee Miss Martin) of Mexico, Oxko, who is on a visit to relatives in this borough, will remain until about October 1st.

Mrs. Peter V. Weaver, wife of Marshal Weaver of Dunellen, North Plainfield, has gone on a three weeks' visit to friends at Boston, Pa.

Dr. W. F. F. Ayres, superintendent of Public Schools for Somerset county, has begun his annual visitation to the public schools in the county for inspection.

Mrs. William A. Freeman resumes her playing to-morrow, as the organist at Grace church, a position she has acceptably filled for several years. She returned home Thursday from an extended pleasure trip east made in the latter part of August.

Mrs. Mary Gould, the wife of William Gould of Scotch Plains, died on Wednesday after a two years' ailing from tumor in the abdomen, aged 67 years. The funeral services took place from the late home of the deceased this afternoon. Interment was made in the cemetery at Scotch Plains.

The Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Farrell, D. D., Bishop of Trenton, will administer the rite of confirmation to a number of candidates in St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield at 10.30 a. m. to-morrow morning. In the evening the reverend gentleman will lecture in St. Joseph's church on the subject: "Ireland, the Hope of the Present Hour."

William B. Dunn, a son of the late Aaron Dunn, died at his home on Park Place, North Plainfield, at about eight o'clock last evening after a lingering illness from consumption. Deceased had been a sufferer from that terrible disease for a long time, and for the past ten months had been confined to the house the greater part of the time. He was in the forty-fifth year of his age at the time of his death, unmarried, and was for many years a resident of the borough. The deceased was a soldier in the late war, having served five years in the Fifth New York Cavalry. Later he was employed by a New York firm, with whom he remained for several years, performing his duties with utmost accuracy and gaining the good will of his employers. In this city, where he was well known, a host of friends and acquaintance will regret to hear of his demise. The funeral services will take place from his late home on Monday afternoon.

Timothy Hunting Morse of East Fifth street, who was for twenty years superintendent of the Plainfield gas works, has a remarkable history. He was born in the town of Natick, Mass., May 24, 1801, the third oldest of a family of ten children. At his birth he weighed two and a half pounds, and now at eighty-five years of age is a man five feet four inches high, weighs 175 pounds, and is still a hale old man. At sixteen years of age he learned the carpenter's trade and followed it until the age of thirty years, when he met with an accident which crippled him for life. The flooring in a new building he was erecting on North Bridge, Mass., gave away, and fell a distance of over fifty feet, fracturing his right leg below the knee, crushing his foot, fracturing several ribs and having his skull laid bare in several places. It was the custom in those days among men for every one to drink rum, and he was no exception. One day his wife, to whom he was married when he was twenty-five years old, remarked that she wished it was not the custom for men to drink rum, as it was so unpleasant. Without saying anything about the matter he quietly discontinued the habit, and has not taken liquor of any kind in over forty years. At the age of thirty-six years he was caught in the shafting in a foundry and was wound around it a number of times before the machinery could be stopped. In this accident his right arm was fractured near the wrist, laying him up for several months. He came to reside in Plainfield in 1857, and in 1860 was made superintendent of the gas works, residing in the position he held until 1881, when he resigned. His wife died in 1880. The couple have had four children. The eldest, William G., the architect, who resides in this city, is a bachelor. The next child, a daughter, is now Mrs. Daniel O. Somerfield, of Hot Springs, Ark., and has four children and two grandchildren. The next is a son, George L., who resides in Brooklyn, where he is a prosperous architect. He also has two children. The youngest child is Mrs. William A. Freeman of East Fifth street, her husband being in charge of the refining oil branch in N. J. of the Vacuum Oil Co. The couple have two children, two boys, so that Mr. Morse has in all four children, eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren. He joined Marie Lodge F. & A. M., at Canterbury, Conn., in 1824, and is now the oldest living member of that order for sixty-three years, making him probably the oldest Freemason in New Jersey, and he is as fond as he might live to be one hundred years old.

WESTFIELD.

The Democrats had a lively time at their primary meeting last night. The meeting was called to order by the president, C. H. Lawrence. After the reading of the call the nomination for delegates to the Congressional convention were in order. The Green and anti-Green faction each had their candidate ready. The anti-Green put up Capt. Lawrence, the Green's man Thomas Campbell, who keeps the only tavern in the place, and who has a liquor license. The vote was polled as before. The Green man landed nothing, and of the 98 votes cast J. T. Lyon, Green, received 54 and Capt. Lawrence 44. There was double ballots, which were thrown out giving Gotwals 10 majority. After the senatorial ballot was taken Capt. Lawrence had abandoned putting on his coat and remaining his position as committeeman resigning for a big row, and the meeting adjourned. Just before the business was finished Mr. Lyon got up and said that he was elected chairman of the next meeting, and that he would call it to order. The following committee was elected: Messrs. J. H. Lyon, Co. Ex. Com.; E. M. Bonnell, Co. Com.; Wm. Bonnell, Co. Com.; Samuel Woodruff, Chester R. Church, Garret Runyon and Isaac L. Scudder, Township Ex. Com.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

The W. C. T. U. Dentonity at Westfield.

WESTFIELD, Sept. 13, 1886.

To the Members of the W. C. T. U. of Westfield:

Two years ago last April a band of Christian women organized a society known as the W. C. T. U., to which the object was to improve, in our community, without regard to denominational lines, the temperance sentiment. During the time which has elapsed the utmost harmony has prevailed in the society, and the public has been interested in such a substantial manner as to warrant the hope that the future is bright. The spirit of the meetings has always been evidenced by the cheerful manner they were attended. Many of the ablest men of the clergy of the churches have been present at these meetings and have addressed them in behalf of the cause. Temperance lectures have been given by the ablest men in the land, and the children have been interested in the work by attending the various Band of Hope meetings, which have been held every other Sunday afternoon in the lecture room of the Presbyterian church. Our business men have contributed liberally to the cause, and a healthy public sentiment was being cultivated, which would result in the entire suppression of the saloons in our village. Parents have placed their children in the hands of the ladies of this band, with the confidence that they would be taught by them to avoid the evil effects of alcohol, and consequently by the use of tobacco, and with the hope that the coming of this Society, held September 7, a motion was made and carried that the society adopt the name which changes the entire future work by making it a political society, or third party movement.

Being only a member and not a prohibitionist, I do not wish to express my views in this connection, there is a wide difference of opinion as to the wisdom of the action taken, but it cannot be brought about. As a member who has taken an active part in the work since the time of its birth, I feel that those who voted for the change in the name have, possibly, not have realized what a change it would make in the sentiment toward this society, as well as current sentiment. Many of the ladies have given up work in connection with other lines in order to devote their time and energies to the work of the W. C. T. U., and failing to see where the change will be for the better, have withdrawn their membership. I feel sorry to lose them for their continued kindness since I first accepted my present position, and with sincere regret I tender my resignation as president of the Westfield W. C. T. U.

Yours very truly,
MRS. JAMES L. MILLER.

LETTER FROM THE WESTFIELD W. C. T. U. RELATING TO THE ABOVE.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—At a meeting of the W. C. T. U. held on Tuesday, Sept. 14, 1886, it was decided that a statement, in regard to the late meeting, should be laid before the W. C. T. U., should be placed in the public papers. A committee was appointed, consisting of four ladies—two representing the minority, and two the majority. The ladies are the names Mrs. John Manning, Mrs. Geo. Cosdit, Mrs. John Barbans, Miss Emma Starr. The following statement was then read:

As it has gone to the public that the W. C. T. U. has taken a stand as a political organization, we, the undersigned, as members of W. C. T. U. is not and cannot be a political organization, as women are disfranchised citizens, and therefore cannot vote.

The action was taken hastily, and the only wish of the Union is, that Temperance Hall for the success of the Temperance Cause may advocate public sentiment up to the level of total abstinence, and that the time when the dram-shops shall be banished from the streets by law, looking unto God for His strength and guidance.

Signed for Committee,
MISS EMMA STARR.

P. S.—The foregoing statement was approved and accepted by a unanimous vote and there is no longer a minority or majority, but the W. C. T. U. of Westfield. E. L. S.

STATE NOTES.

John Schmidt, the Newark saloon keeper who a week ago killed his wife because he refused to give her money to get drunk with, Saturday on an indictment for murder, entered a plea of not guilty, and the trial was set down for Oct. 18.

George Isley and his wife, of Jersey City, were yesterday awarded $500 each by a Hudson county jury in their suit for $5,000 damages against the North Hudson County Railway Company for injuries sustained in a collision. They were passengers in a car which was struck by another car while Isley and his wife were riding.

Fire broke out at 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning in Grant & Lee's furniture factory, a two-story brick building at No. 256 Market street, Newark, and when the Fire Department got to the scene the whole interior was enveloped in flames. The building was gutted and the machinery in it destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $6,000, partly insured.

Collector Klotz, of the Internal Revenue of Newark, received official notification from the Commissioner at Washington that he recently adopted law concerning the sale of imitation butter. By this retail dealers are required to pay a special tax of $48; wholesale merchants $480 and manufacturers $600. Steps will be taken at once to enforce the law. Mr. Klotz has appointed deputies and an inspector will visit each dealer and inform him that the law will be in operation on the 1st of October, and will be down against all who after that date sell without the revenue stamp.

AT THE White Front.

What they say must be so. A chapter of Facts. Facts are hard things to get around and sometimes hard to prove, but not so in our case. We have the reputation of selling good goods at lower prices and giving better bargains (and we give them every day in the year too) than any other concern in town, and Ladies will find on visiting our store that our whole Fall and Winter Stock is the largest bargain they ever saw. We don't believe much in quoting prices of what goods have been selling for and what the prices led special reductions are, we would rather and do quote our prices over the counter and you can judge whether they are bargains or not and that Waits deserves the well earned reputation he has, of giving the best value for the money. If there is anything you want in Dress Goods call and see our line of Plain and Combed Cheviots, Cashmeres, Velveteens and Flannels. If there is anything wanted in the Ladies', Gents' and Children's Underwear and Hosiery, come and see Waits's Stock. If you want anything in Red, White or Blue Flannel, Blue and Brown Canton Flannel, Blankets or Comfortables come and see Waits. If you want anything in Dress Trimmings, Ribbons, Buttons, Corsets, Gloves, and in fact if you want anything from a hair pin up to a clothes horse come to the place where bargains are no curiosity and if you don't want anything, come anyway.

A ROYAL PAUPER.

What a Woman Says About Her Paternity.

A DAUGHTER OF A KING,

And Yet Sleeps Upon a Straw Bed and Mends Clothes.

The Peculiar Story Related by Caroline Guelph—Says King George IV Was Her Father and She Can Prove It—How Her Documentary Evidence Was Obtained.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Sun's London special says: Caroline Guelph, an aged woman, appeared at the Camberwell workhouse yesterday and asked the relieving officer to send her answer to the usual request for her name with the information that she was the daughter of George IV. Your correspondent hearing of her application and remarkable statement concerning her origin, visited the woman at her lodgings. She is a hard-working old lady, despite her years and evident struggles with poverty, and bears unmistakable traces of high breeding. Her hair is silvery white, her carriage stately, and her features resemble those of the Guelph type. She was found in a scantily furnished room in a back situation on a fairly genteel street, upon the walls of which hung a few articles of dress that clothes were mended within. The bed in one corner of the little room was of the primitive sort known as a "shake down," and was placed on the bare floor for want of a bedstead. The old lady had just bought fifty-six pounds of coal, which the boy who delivered it placed in a basket.

She greeted me with the utmost politeness, and in the most ladylike manner placed for me the only chair the room boasted, dusting it carefully with the end of her apron. Locking the object of my visit, she walked to the door and locked it to prevent intrusion, and resumed her seat with an expression of inquiry upon her face.

"You assert, I understand, that George IV was your father?"

"Yes, I do assert, moreover, I can prove it. Why, only two years ago the queen visited me at Vauxhall, and listened to the whole of my story. Her majesty wept freely during the recital, and upon leaving gave me a sovereign. Her attendants suggested the propriety of sending me a purse of £500, but as I have since received nothing I conclude that her majesty has forgotten me. I am positive that my visitor was the queen, for she herself told me so, and I was also similarly introduced by different members of the suite attending her.

"George IV contracted a morganatic marriage with my mother in Germany, where I was born. I was christened in St. Peter's church in Vienna, and the Duke of Westminster has in his possession the certificate showing that I was born on Jan. 16, 1816. I do not remember my mother, nor have I any recollection of ever seeing Queen Caroline.

"When I was 5 years of age, I was handed over to the care of a Mrs. Sophia, who received a large sum of money to adopt me, including my mother's marriage certificate. These the Duke of Westminster obtained from the Spanish ambassador, after promising them money, in expectation of which the Spaniard surrendered part of the papers, and afterward, failing to fulfill his promises, originally gave them into relinquishing the rest by threats.

"In addition to the fact that I am the lawful daughter of George IV, I am entitled to the nearest relative of the Duke of Brunswick, to money amounting to £30,000,000 sterling. The Duke of Brunswick made love to me while I was living in Vienna, promising on their farm in Suffolk, and made me an offer of marriage, which I refused. I have written to the Emperor William of Germany, begging him to assist me in obtaining my rights, but have received no answer to my appeal. The late Duke of Bedford had in his custody some of my papers, and present duke, upon succeeding to the title, transferred them to the keeping of the Duc d'Aumale, to whom he gave £600 annually to keep them and prevent their falling into other hands, fearing, no doubt, that it would not be well for him to be known to the queen as their confidant. I have no proof of this, but though they are beyond my reach, they exist, and they in whose possession the proofs are dare not destroy them. Sooner or later they must come to light.

"In quest of these proofs, I went to the house of the Marquis of Tavistock, the eldest son of the present Duke of Bedford, and orders were given to shut the door in my face. Still hoping to obtain some proof that I was what I claim to be, I went again, and this time was admitted to the library of the Marquis of Tavistock, to whom I explained the object of my visit. She treated me very kindly, and expressed sorrow that I had been shamefully deprived of my rights. She unhesitatingly said she thought the best way to proceed would be to petition the queen, and would offer me every help in I lived, but declined participating in influence the high-minded sentiments which characterized her reply. I have since been told that the powerful influence against my rights, and that they are beyond my reach, they exist, and they in whose possession the proofs are dare not destroy them. Sooner or later they must come to light.

"In quest of these proofs, I went to the house of the Marquis of Tavistock, the eldest son of the present Duke of Bedford, and orders were ordered

GOING FOR WIGGINS.

THE CLIMATE OF CHARLESTON UNHEALTHY JUST NOW

For the Canadian Prophet of Earthquake Disasters—He Writes Letters to Say that His Predictions Did Not Apply to the United States.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 25.—Professor E. Shem Wiggins has written a letter to Eugene Cramer, Esq., Secretary of the Columbia Cremation Society, which he modifies considerably the reports heretofore published about why the reports heretofore published about his earthquake predictions. He intimates in his letter that his predictions have been exaggerated by the press, and expresses deep regret that a panic should have been caused among the southern people by these reports. He reiterates the statement that he knew the earthquake force would cross these states on Aug. 31. Professor Wiggins says it is true that a great strain will occur on the 29th inst., but that it will pass several degrees further south of Charleston, and he anticipates no disaster on this meridian. He can perceive no danger south of Charleston. He says neither will any great damage to Mobile, New Orleans and other southern cities, as was stated in the reports of his predictions as published several days ago. In conclusion Wiggins says: "I may add that the 29th will be remarkable for a great storm over the North and South Atlantic, as predicted May 30, 1884."

CHARLESTON, Sept. 25.—For the first time in many weary weeks the people of Charleston have had a quiet night. The earthquake shocks have all but ceased, and with them the hope is indulged once more that the disturbances are over and that Charleston will be allowed a little much needed rest. The apparent indications that point to this is the gradual diminution of the shocks at Summerville, which seems to have been in a continuous state of tremor since Aug. 31. Reports from there say that during the night only two very slight tremors of the earth during the night, not sufficient to awaken sound sleepers. The weather continues to be abnormally fine. With no indications whatever of the dreaded September gale, and were it not for the Wiggins prophecy there would be comparative quiet here. Things would soon resume a normal condition.

Mechanics are arriving daily, and the work of repairing the damaged buildings is making some progress. Centre Street in the business city quite freely, and the business outlook seems to be getting better day by day. The announcement will start a current of travel and soon it will be something of a novelty, and it even attracts attention. The amusement season is announced to open at the Academy of Music on Monday next, with Marion Booth in a performance for the benefit of the relief fund, but it is doubtful if there will be an audience.

While the people go out into the streets and attend to their business in the daytime, there is a dread of darkness which sends every one home as soon as the sun sets. The feeling is natural to those who have been through the horrors of the night of Aug. 31.

A letter was received here yesterday from the Canadian crank, Wiggins, expressing his regrets that his prediction had caused a panic among the people. Wiggins stated that he hoped to be in Charleston on the 29th, but that he regretted that he would be unable to be here. As a matter of fact, Wiggins may congratulate himself that he is unable to come to Charleston. The climate of Charleston would not be healthy for Wiggins about this time.

Another Job for Sedgwick.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Consul General Williams, at Havana, in reply to an inquiry from the secretary of state, says that the report that the Madrid government has sustained the Cuban authorities in their refusal to carry out the treaty agreement, making mutual concessions to American and Spanish vessels trading between Cuba and this country. This will lead to a correspondence between this government and the Spanish authorities to ascertain what the latter means, and ultimately to the revocation of the order carrying the arrangement into effect on the part of the United States, unless the Spaniards conclude to carry out the arrangement in good faith.

A NEW LIFE LINE ROCKET.

Successful Experiments With the New Cunningham Method.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Some experimental tests of the Cunningham life line rocket, intended to be used by the life saving service in carrying a line from the shore to shipwrecked vessels, have just been made here. Several rockets were fired over the arsenal grounds range. One rocket carried a line with great accuracy a distance of 1,000 yards. Superintendent Kimball, of the life saving service, was very much interested in the exhibition and thinks this rocket, if accuracy of aim and distance can be attained in all sorts of wind and weather, may be used with great advantage where wrecks are more than 300 or 400 yards from shore. To be practicable at such distance, it is said, that the gun now used by the life saving service can be depended on to carry a line to vessels in distress, is about 700 yards. The tests of the Cunningham rocket were merely preliminary to thorough tests which will be made this fall on the Sandy Hook ordnance proving grounds to prove or disprove its efficiency for accuracy in delivering lines at distances between 600 and 1,000 yards.

A NEW ELDORADO.

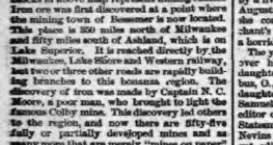
THE FAMOUS GOGEBIC IRON REGION NEAR LAKE SUPERIOR.

The Most Remarkable Iron Ore Deposit in the World—Ore Shoveled from the Surface of the Ground—The Latest Big Bonanza.

Eighteen months ago the now famous Gogebic iron mines had scarcely been heard of. In this short time four or five towns have sprung up in the region, and $40,000,000 of stock have been placed on the market. Money has been made and wrecked at their own sweet will a year and a half ago de now a bustling mining region, with three towns within a radius of six miles and a permanent population of over 10,000 souls.

MAP GOGEBIC IRON RANGE.

The Gogebic range is situated near Lake Superior in the northern parts of the states of Wisconsin and Michigan join. The black blocks in above map represent mining claims. Iron ore was first discovered at a point where the mining town of Bessemer is now located. This place is 350 miles north of Milwaukee and fifty miles south of Ashland, which is on Lake Superior. It is reached directly by the Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western railway, but two or three other roads are rapidly building branches to this bonanza region. The discovery of iron ore was made by Captain N. C. Moore, a poor man, who brought to light the famous Colby mine. This discovery led others to the region, and now there are fifty-five fully or partially developed mines and as many more that are merely "mines on paper" or stock-jobbing snags.



THE RANGE A YEAR AGO.

The leading mining towns are Hurley, Bessemer and Ironwood. They have sprung up in the midst of trackless forests, have all the airs of big cities—fine hotels, electric lights, theatres, saloons innumerable, and all the other gaud and bad things of an eastern metropolis. The iron ore on this range seems to be simply inexhaustible. It runs in two great parallel veins, each several hundred feet in width, apparently as deep as the hills themselves. The deepest prospecting shafts have failed to find bottom. The ore is of the finest Bessemer hematite and will contain an average of 62 per cent. of pure iron. In many respects it is the most remarkable mineral discovery in the world. In the first place the ore is the finest grade in Bessemer, it is the richest ever discovered and can be mined cheaper and quicker than anywhere else. The Colby mine turns out daily more ore than any other mine in the world. In no place else is the ore found practically on the surface in a soft state. The Colby and one or two of the other big mines resemble great sand pits.

A SURFACE MINE.

The surface earth is scraped off, cars are backed up to the pit and the ore shoveled in just as if it was sand or gravel. An ordinary pick loosens the rich ore and that is all the mining that is necessary. The ore looks like coarsely ground red clay. It is worth $5 a ton and can be mined in the surface shafts for less than ten cents a ton. The output of the Colby is 2,000 tons a day, a few others are on the surface mines. The rest are shaft mines, and the ore is taken out of the ground at depths varying from fifty to 300 feet. It costs about $1 a ton to mine the deep ore.

A DEEP MINE.

Two months ago only about a dozen mines in the whole region were shipping ore; now more than twenty-five or more are doing so, and the number is constantly increasing. The grand total this season will be something like 750,000 tons from a ramp which shipped its first ton last August. The ore is shipped by rail to Ashland and there loaded on steamers for Cleveland and Ashtabula, O., and Pittsburg and Chicago. At Ashland the Lake Shore railway has erected the largest ore dock on the lakes. It is a half mile long and ten big bridge can load as it simultaneously. An average of 5,000 tons of ore reach this dock daily. Two other docks even larger than the Lake Shore are soldier way to be completed before navigation opens next spring. Vast fortunes have been made by individuals or companies purchasing small tracts of land, developing a slight of ore and then stocking a company for $1,000,000 or more.

There are now about fifty mines with a paid-up capital of $40,000,000 and these have placed $30,000,000 worth of shares on the market.

JAMES G. BLAINE, JR., AND BRIDE.

A Runaway Marriage—Obstacles to the Course—Forgiveness.

James G. Blaine, Jr., the youngest son of ex-Senator James G. Blaine, is bent on cutting an independent figure in the world. He has been a source of much anxiety to his father, who has endeavored to provide him with the best moral and mental training possible to fit him for life's battle. With this end in view he was taken from the public school and sent to the strictest and most select schools to be found in the country. In all of these he achieved a reputation for exceptional vivacity, to say the least.

While at a school in Washington it was said that he started out one afternoon with the intention of painting the whole Capitol red, and would have gilded the great dome only that he was taken care of in time. His father then put him in the hands of a private tutor, from whose care he is reported to have graduated several times. He was last year at Wesleyan university. It was Mr. Blaine's intention to enter this favorite son of his either at Harvard or at John Hopkins university this month, but young James has an idea he is best fitted for a mercantile career. So to shut off any possibility of further college training and begin at once as a solid business man, he hits on the brilliant idea of taking unto him a wife. Then to prevent, what he considered, idle discussion of his plans with his parents, he determines that the matter should be a secret one. He met and had been captivated by a lively young lady during his vacation at Augusta. He proposed the matter to her and also consented to become the future merchant's wife and save him from being sent to a horrid college.

The young lady who thus offered to see him over his fetters was Miss Belle Nevins, daughter of Col. Richard Nevins, of Columbus, O., and grand-daughter of the late Samuel Medary, editor of The Ohio Statesman. Col. Nevins is the present editor of The Statesman and a prominent Democrat. Miss Nevins had been carefully educated and inherited beauty from her mother, who was famous in that respect.

Two winters ago Miss Nevins took the leading role in an amateur performance of "Paul and Virginia" in Washington, and MRS. J. G. BLAINE, JR.

the ability she displayed led to many flattering offers from theatrical managers to induce her to go on the stage.

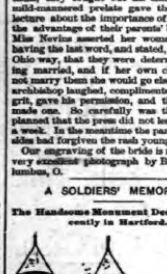
The Nevins family were stopping at a New York hotel when Mr. Blaine came to carry away his bride. They drove around to one of the swell Jewish churches of that city, but the pastor, Father Ducey, refused to marry them without permission from the archbishop, which would require a couple of days' time to secure. So the marriage was postponed until then, and they met their first disappointment. On their appearance before Father Ducey the archbishop regretted that permission was refused on account of their youth, Mr. Blaine being 20 and his bride 19. After a hasty consultation between the couple it was decided that if she was allowed to plead her case with the prelate in person, and her intended could bring some of his inherent magnetism to bear, she would win. The archbishop agreed to do so, inducing Father Ducey to accompany them, they sought out his eminence. This multi-centenarial prelate gave them the usual lecture about the importance of the step and the advantages of their parents' blessing, etc. Miss Nevins asserted her woman's right of having the last word, and stated, in her frank Ohio way, that they were determined on being married, and if her own church would not marry them she would go elsewhere. The archbishop laughed, complimented her on her grit, gave his permission, and the two were made one. So carefully was the marriage planned that the press did not learn of it for a week. In the meantime the guests on both sides had forgiven the rash young couple.

Our engraving of the bride is made from a very excellent photograph by Baker, of Columbus, O.

A SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL.

The Handsome Monument Dedicated Recently in Hartford.

JAMES G. BLAINE, JR.



SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

The memorial arch to the soldier and sailor dead recently dedicated at Hartford, Conn., is one of the unique monuments of the country. It is out of the regulation style. It is built across the end of a stone bridge that leads into the city and is the state's first capitol. The arch is 50 feet span and springs from two massive round towers, each of which is 67 feet in circumference and 80 feet high. Above the archway, about 40 feet from the ground, a sculptured frieze about 175 feet in length and 6 feet 6 inches in breadth runs around the monument. Of these towers it has been said: "They seem like two huge sentinels guarding the bridge, or mighty standard-bearers holding aloft a mighty banner which the Hartford people call the tomb of the men of Hartford who died for their country on land and sea in the war which kept the Union whole."

The memorial is executed in Connecticut brown stone, similar to that of the old stone bridge with which it is connected. The general surface is rock-faced, in keeping with the simplicity of the design, but relieved by buff-colored Ohio stone drawings; and the frieze, which is of light-colored Nova cotia, matches the color of the Ohio stone.

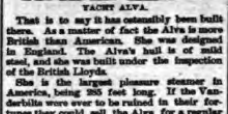
W. K. VANDERBILT'S YACHT

SKETCHES OF A MILLIONAIRE'S PLEASURE STEAMER.

The Splendid Three-Masted Steam Yacht Alva, the Largest in the World—A Library and Nursery—White and Gold and Mahogany—Swinging Dining Tables.

Exaggerated stories have been printed in some of the newspapers about the barbaric and oriental splendor of Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's new yacht. It is safe to say that the best craft of the kind that can be made, but inside or out it makes no display of the lavishly gorgeousness with which it has been credited. From the first the general arrangement have been under the direct supervision of Mrs. Vanderbilt, a lady of exquisite taste who would go in for anything rather than vulgar display.

The Alva is just completed at the shipyards of Wilmington, Del.



YACHT ALVA.

That is to say it has ostensibly been built there. As a matter of fact the Alva is more British than American. She was designed in England. The Alva's hull is of mild steel, and she was built under the inspection of the British Lloyds.

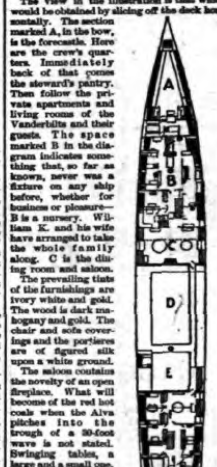
She is the largest pleasure steamer in America, being 285 feet long. If the Vanderbilts were ever to be ruined in their fortunes they could sell the Alva for a regular ocean steamer and get enough for her to keep them out of the poorhouse.

The Alva, they say, cost half a million of money. They say that with the total cost of repairs, her, added to the interest of the first cost, will amount to nearly $10,000 a month. That is more money than the average citizen of the United States sees in his life.

The Alva is a three-master, regular ocean steamer pattern. She is lighted by electricity and steered by steam. The cylinders are 44 and 42 inches, with 41-inch strokes. The propeller is of phosphor-bronze and is 13 feet in diameter, cast in Glasgow.

In interior arrangements the Alva is about as fine as it is possible to have dollars-a-day hotel. The great abundance of bath rooms is one of the most extravagant luxuries indulged in. There are a dozen or more of them.

The view in the illustration is that which would be obtained by slicing off the deck horizontally. The section marked A, in the bow, is the forecastle. Here are the crew's quarters. Immediately back of that comes the steward's pantry. Then follow the private apartments and living rooms of the Vanderbilts and their guests. The space marked B in the diagram indicates the main dining hall, so far as known, never was a picture on any subject before, whether for business or pleasure—B is a nursery. William K. and his wife have arranged to take the whole family along. C is the dining room and saloon.



PLAN BETWEEN DECKS.

The prevailing thats of the furnishings are ivory white and gold. The wood is dark rich mahogany and gold. The chair and sofa coverings and the portieres are of white silk with a small figure upon a white ground.

The saloon contains the novelty of an open fireplace. What will become of the red hot coals when the Alva pitches into the trough of a 30-foot wave is not stated. Swinging tables, a large and a small one, together seating seventeen persons, will dine Mr. Vanderbilt and his friends. The tables are fixed upon a balancing pedestal, so that whichever way the ship tips they will still hold the soup and coffee level.

The Alva is very fine, with a sharp bow. Back of compartment C is D, where the steamer's boilers are, directly amidships. Each side of these are the coal bunkers, which store 800 tons of fuel. Space E is where the engines are. On the starboard side, leading past the boilers and engines, is a long, narrow passage way which connects the dining saloon with the library. In this second passage way only the Vanderbilt or his guest may set foot.

DINING ROOM.

The library is directly aft of the engines. Opposite them is left an open space and in it is a sofa. There the guest may sit and watch in a strictly amateurish and aristocratic way the engines at work. When the steamer was building began, it is said there never was a ship constructed in which so much pains were taken to have everything of the best material, as is the case with the Alva. Every possible precautions have been exercised with every bit of metal, wood, glass and porcelain that entered into the fittings. Each piece of work is would be if, after all, there were left some vulnerable spot, ever so small, unnoticed by her workmen, which would prove at last her destruction. Such things have been.

The library is marked F in the diagram. The smoking room is near by. Adjoining that are the staterooms for guests. The library is finished in French walnut. About it again are no end of baths, hot, cold, salt and fresh. There is a vapor bath upon the upper deck.

Last of all, in compartment marked G in the diagram, directly over the screw, are the officers' quarters, mess rooms, pantry, beds, lockers and all such compartments as the entrances and egress passages, otherwise called companion-way, connect off to itself. The width of the Alva is thirty-two feet.

GEORGE GOULD'S WEDDING.

The Son of the Financier and His Actress Bride.

For nearly two years there has been serious talk that Miss Edith Kingdon, of Long Island, was going to marry Edith Kingdon, a good and pretty actress belonging to Augustin Daly's company. First the story was all denied, then denied, then told as a fact again, until nobody had any opinions left on the subject. Young Gould was known to be rather partial to the pretty actress some months ago his father gave up to him the management of the Grand Opera House, in Twenty-third street, New York. George took bachelor apartments in the building, and gave his personal attention to the management of the theatre with a singleness of purpose that characterizes him in all he does. From that time the rumor was said to be even a better business man than his father. He is modest, quiet, and shrewd. He is a favorite with his brethren of the New York Stock Exchange, and it is no small think himself anybody great. He seems as simple-hearted and friendly as if his father was not Jay Gould.

Although he was fond of the theatre and theatrical people, it is not recorded that young Gould plunged into the wild dissipations and extravagance of conduct usually expected of gilded youth. On the contrary, he has quietly and never had the name of being a fast youth. That is greatly to his credit. When, therefore, he saw pretty Edith Kingdon at her first performance in Daly's theatre, he seems to have fallen in love in the way any honest, manly youth would have done. He sought an introduction to her. She and her mother kept house in a modest flat on Fifty-eighth street, where the young millionaire called.

GEORGE J. GOULD.

Soon he was introduced to her, under her own mother's roof.

That was about two years ago. Miss Kingdon went to Europe in May with Daly's company, traveling with them, playing in London, Paris and Germany. A few weeks ago the company took ship again and started home.

Monday, Sept. 13, she landed from a European steamer in New York. Mr. Gould met her and went with her to her mother's flat. Tuesday morning, Miss Kingdon and her mother boarded Mr. Jay Gould's yacht, the Atalanta, and steamed up the Hudson to Irvington, where the Gould summer residence, Lyndenhurst, is situated, and bedecked and adorn were there. It was a quiet, beautiful wedding at home, with no fuss and feathers.

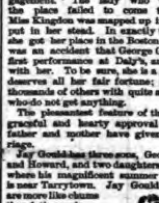
LYNDENHURST.

The new Mrs. Gould is taller than her husband, has handsome features, brown eyes and dark hair, and a remarkably clear complexion. On the stage her manner was lively and dashing. At her wedding she wore a black silk dress with diamond trimmings and diamond ear rings. She was a Brooklyn girl all her later life, though born in Boston. Brooklyn, besides being the home of Henry Ward Beecher, is noted for the beauty of her theatrical as than any other city in the Union. It is noted for its amateur plays. Many actors drift from them into the regular profession. That was what Miss Kingdon did. She went on the real one season, and then played at the Boston Museum. Her short life has been a series of lucky accidents. It was by accident she got her first regular engagement. The lady who was to take the place failed to come to time, and Miss Kingdon was prepped up to a pinch and put in her stead. In exactly the same way she got her place in the Boston Museum. It was an accident that George Gould saw her first performance at Daly's, and fell in love with her. To be sure, she is a good girl and deserves all her fair fortune; but there are thousands of others with quite as much merit who do not get anything.

The pleasantest feature of the affair is the graceful and hearty approval Mr. Gould's father and mother have given to his marriage.

Jay Gould has three sons, George, Edward and Howard, and two daughters. Irvington, which was the magnificent summer residence is, is near Tarrytown. Jay Gould and George are more like chums than father and son.

Next only to the marriage young Gould was down at his desk as though nothing had happened. He is one of the hardest working business men in New York. The young couple will set up housekeeping in the Navarro flats. This is a fine structure of eight buildings, put together in the form of a hollow square, with central court. It is somewhat on the co-operative plan, families in many cases owning their apartments. The apartments are on the second floor, and Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth streets, near Central park and Seventh avenue. Some of the large suites contain fourteen rooms and cost for $12,000 a year.



MRS. GEORGE GOULD.

Jay Gould's wealth is estimated anywhere from $60,000,000 to $100,000,000. He is not fond of talking how much he is worth of course, but he has a way of letting it leak out. His son George is a vice-president of the Western Union company, and director of several of his father's railroads. He preferred to go into business to paddling himself, however, and his father allowed him to do as he pleased. He now has an income from his own investments of $40,000 a year, quite enough for one little man and his wife to live on.

George Gould has very black eyes and dark hair and brown skin. He is 34 years old. His vacations are usually spent in Europe, where over his father's western railways, getting the lay of the land. He was married in Paris, and not long since that he invited Jay Gould to be a son. Mr. Sage said of the youth: "He is young and full of energy. He will have to take up the reins when his father drops them. While I have no one to come after me."

Points of Interest.

American iron is not good for making Bessemer steel, rails, because it combines too much phosphorus.

At the hour of the earthquake in Charleston a fountain gushed on the Superior suddenly shot down to a stream in five minutes time.

A railway train on the New York Central road recently ran from Syracuse to Rochester at the rate of over sixty-seven miles an hour.

The United States consul general at Hamburg proposes a permanent exhibition of American goods in that city, for the purpose of introducing our products into Germany.

Contrary to the general supposition, dynamite as an explosive does not expend its chief force downward, but flies equally in all directions. This is what the professors say, though how they found out they do not explain.

In accounting for the direction of the earthquake, scientists say a line of weakness in the earth's crust extends from Troy, N. Y., southwestward along the line of tidewater, past Baltimore, Washington and Richmond, losing itself in a broad expanse south of Raleigh. The cause of the shock seems to have been a renewed faulting or displacement along the line where it crosses the Carolinas.

DRIVING ACROSS THE TRACK

Caused a Shocking Accident in a Connecticut Village.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 27.—About 11 o'clock yesterday morning a shocking accident occurred on the New York, Providence and Boston railroad, at the village of Poquonoc, Conn., Benjamin Gardiner, a farmer, his wife and the wife of their son James, while on their return from meeting, in a wagon, were struck by a west bound express train going at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The horse was killed and the wagon broken into kindling wood. Mr. Gardiner was hurled forty feet from the crossing, receiving fatal injuries. His wife was killed outright, and Mrs. James Gardiner died before she could be removed. The accident happened at a crossing just about a mile from the station at Noank, and as the railroad is banked up at that place the engineer, Charles Colburn, did not see the party until within twenty yards of the crossing.

THE WASHINGTON SUNDAY GAZETTE ASSERTS AS MUCH.

Governor Hill, of New York, and President Cleveland ag Not Rivals for the White House, but are the Best of Friends.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The Sunday Gazette published a half column leading article under the caption of "Significant" in which it asserts that President Cleveland and Governor Hill are in hearty accord, and that the latter is not a presidential candidate. "There has," The Gazette says, "been a good deal of talk in certain quarters and not a little parade in certain newspapers over what has been styled a clash of interests between President Cleveland and Governor Hill. It has been asserted that the latter has the 'presidential bee in his bonnet,' and that he is deliberately trying his best to lift himself to the executive chair at the expense of Mr. Cleveland. All this and much more of the same tenor has been said and published, until quite a pretty little bubbub has been raised. The object seemed to announce that it has the best authority for denying in toto the truth of these or of any similar stories, and makes the contradiction in the most full and unequivocal terms.

"No man," The Gazette's informant says, "protests more than does Governor Hill against the use of his name in connection with the presidency by the small body of disappointed politicians throughout the country."

Governor Hill's ambition, according to The Gazette's authority, is to keep the state of New York, with all the discordant elements incident to the politics of large communities in the Democratic line, and to run again for governor in 1888. He is not and will not be a candidate for president in 1888. He is yet a young man, and he knows it. He says, the Gazette says, that he will be if public sentiment does not force the renomination of Mr. Cleveland the next Democratic candidate for the presidency will not be a New York man. The article concludes as follows:

"Notwithstanding the attempt to prove to the contrary, we are in position to state unqualifiedly that Cleveland and Hill are working in perfect harmony, and in no manner can any contests involving either one be brought about by the newspapers. We repeat that upon unquestioned authority that the relations between President Cleveland and Governor Hill are of the most friendly character, and will continue to be so. There is no contest, and no want of harmony in the Democratic party in New York except such as are unavoidably incident to purely local affairs, which will not interfere with any national questions or movements. Any calculations based upon a different state of affairs will surely come to grief."

SALVATION ARMY OFFICERS.

Gen. Booth Arrives in This Country to Salute the Army.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Gen. William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, was a conspicuous figure among the crowd of passengers on the Aurania's dock as she came up the North river yesterday. He had a chimney-pot hat pulled down upon his gray head and a heavy overcoat over his fiery red and gold uniform. Copies of The War Cry stuck out of one pocket of the general's overcoat. Commissioner Smith of the army in America came down to the pier in a red fatigue suit and flaming red cheviot with a subordinate's coat over the uniform. Commander Smith pulled out his flag and tried to wave it too. But a citizen in the crowd who didn't like the Salvation Army, made a quick lunch for the flag and struck Commander Smith in the chest. The commander tried to hit back, and there was a short, sharp and decisive mêlée, which ended in the triumphant waving of the army flag. Then Commander Smith rushed to the gangplank, knocking sundry citizens hither and thither in his haste, and shouted "Hallelujah" in vociferous welcome as Gen. Booth stepped upon the pier.

The general heeped War Crys upon a group of reporters who surrounded him, and then hurriedly denied that his son, who married Miss Maude Charlesworth, was going to bring her to wait.

Booth spent the night at Broker Morris Smith's house, Brooklyn, and to-day he starts for Toronto. He is going to return to England on Dec. 11, and will then travel and make speeches. It is his first visit to America, and he will inspect the finances of all the American branches of the army during his travels.

The Galatea Observed the Sabbath.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Sept. 27.—Sunday would have been a busy day for the natives and the thousands of people who visited the harbor to see the yachts doubtless regretted that they had not arrived on Saturday, as expressly permit a contest on Sunday. The breeze was twenty-eight miles an hour. Such yachts as took a spin outside carried only two sails. The Mayflower went out about noon with jib and foresail sail. She stood out for Nahant. Two hours later, coming back, she had added the mainsail. The Galatea remained at anchor and observed the Sabbath strictly.

Buried with Her Bridal Robes.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 27.—The remains of Mrs. Jennie Rudolph, the bride of six weeks, who committed suicide on Friday last, were buried yesterday in the Baltimore cemetery. The funeral was attended by a large procession of people. The body lay in the same parlor in which she was married on the 16th of August last. It was clad in the white satin robe which she wore on her wedding day, and the young gentlemen who acted as ushers upon that happy occasion were the pall bearers now. Rev. H. Schleh, the minister who pronounced the words that made her a wife, officiated at her funeral rites.

Played at Being Dead.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—Willie Lowden, aged 8, died yesterday in great agony from injuries received by the boys with whom he was at play. Willie was playing at being dead and the excavation in the sidewalk served as a grave. His companions lowered him into this and placed a heavy stone slab over him upon his stomach. While he was in this situation and unable to help himself they jumped upon the block until Willie's body was covered with blood. The stone slab which had followed the boy was otherised and his stomach opened when it was ascertained that recovery was impossible.

Walked Off the Wharf.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—Two unknown men, supposed to be commercial travelers, were drowned from the steamer Keystone State at 10 o'clock last night. The steamer St. Lawrence was lying at the wharf waiting for the boat of midnight, when she will start on her trip to Maysville. The gang plank, it appears, was not in the usual place and the night was dark and rainy. The men walked off the wharf boat into the river and were drowned, about ten minutes apart. The people aboard the steamer made efforts to rescue the two men, but without avail.

THE HEAVIEST MAN IN JERSEY.

Death of Capt. Busch—A Well Known Heavy Weight.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 27.—Herman D. Busch, the fattest man in New Jersey, died at his residence in Hoboken yesterday. He was perhaps as widely known out of the state and in it as any resident of New Jersey.

Mr. Busch was born in Germany fifty-seven years ago. He came to this country in 1844, and twenty years later built Busch's hotel at Hoboken, where he has since lived. He founded the New York Schnetzen corps, of which he was captain. He also was the originator of the New Jersey Schnetzen corps.

In 1875 the people of Hoboken elected him to represent them in the legislature. Of them was enormous, he weighing 320 pounds. So great was his size that it was with the utmost difficulty that he could pass down the aisle in the assembly hall. To enable him to do so and to permit others to pass down when he was in the aisle, it was widened. There was not a man in the legislature number that he could sit on, and one was constructed expressly for him. His great weight was the subject of much mirth and merriment at times in the assembly. All this and much more of the same tenor has been said and published, until quite a pretty little bubbub has been raised. The object seemed to announce that it has the best authority for denying in toto the truth of these or of any similar stories, and makes the contradiction in the most full and unequivocal terms.

UNCLE SAM'S NAVY.

THE PRESENT AND THE FUTURE WAR FLEET.

Chief Constructor Wilson's Estimates of the Life of the Vessels Now in Use—A Better Navy in Prospect—The New Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Chief Constructor Wilson estimates the active life of the wooden war ships of our present navy as follows: The Tennessee (the only one classed as first class), six months; the Richmond, Hartford, Vandalia, second rates, and the Mohican, third rate, ten years; the Lancaster and Brooklyn, second rates, and the Adams, Alliance, Essex, Enterprise, Nipsic, Tallapoosa and Yantic, third rates, six years; the Hartford, Richmond and Pensacola, second rates, and the Fundulus, Gettysburg, Quinebaug, Swatara, Galena, Marion, Iroquois and Kearsarge, third rates, five years. These, together with the iron ships unnecessary, Alert and Ossipee, third rates, and the Michigan, Palos and Pinta, fourth rates, constitute the available fighting force of the present navy. The most powerful of their weapons are the converted guns, but by reason of perhaps two million hundred acres for operations against wooden ships and ancient fortifications, or for attacking towns, but insufficient against the modern armor. The very best of these ships is held by our naval authorities to be for behind the times as a reliance for offense or defense in actual warfare. The list of ironclads consists of seven vessels, some of which, but none of them is in condition for service at this time.

With this showing the United States is placed by her own authorities at the foot of the list of naval powers in the essential matters of ships and guns, there being three fourth American, two fifth rate and fifteen or twenty sixth rate powers which outrank us. That portion of our prospective new navy whose construction has already been sanctioned gives a better promise of naval power in all classes, and the aggregate of something more than $20,000,000, and the halt of which, barring accidents or the failure of appropriations, is expected to be ready for use four years hence. They are required to be built entirely of metal, and no device known and approved at the date of their building for protecting the vitals of the machines has been or is to be omitted in their construction. Their armament throughout will be of the modern high-powered guns, the largest of which are 8-inch breech loading rifles, being the twelve-inch breech loading rifle, carrying a missile which weighs more than 800 pounds and requiring more than 400 pounds of powder for each discharge. The theoretical range of such weapons is about twelve miles, but difficulties in the matter of elevation and otherwise serve to reduce this somewhat in practice.

Seven of these ships are to be armored, the heaviest probably carrying sixteen inches of steel on a protected deck. They will be "protected cruisers"—that is, vessels whose thick lower decks of steel dip their edges below the water line and serve as a protection to the machinery, magazines, and other vital parts of the ships. The others will be four steel cruisers, two gun boats, one first class torpedo boat, and one dynamite gun cruiser. Of the steel cruisers the Atlanta, 3,000 tons displacement, is already completed and receiving her armament. The Atlanta, 3,000 tons, is on her trial trip and her armament is being tested, while the Boston, 3,000 tons, and the Chicago, 4,500 tons, are under construction.

Five of the armored vessels are of the double turreted monitor class, each designed to carry four heavy high powered guns, throw 1,000 pound shells with a battery range of ten miles. These ships were planned ten years ago. Doubtless if planned to-day some change would be made, but they are nevertheless spoken of by Chief Constructor Wilson in his last annual report as the best type of coast and harbor defense vessels in existence. Though not designed for cruising, they are in emergencies to be sent abroad, their seaworthiness having been well tested in the past. Congress has also authorized the construction of dispatch ships, and the work is progressing rapidly. The Miantonomoh, 2,815 tons, will be ready for service this year; the Puritan, 6,000 tons, her keel was laid in 1882, will be ready early next year; the Monadnock, 3,815 tons each, are now receiving their machinery.

With all these vessels afloat the United States as a naval power will outrank Brazil, Chili, the Argentine Republic, China, Japan, Greece, Norway, Portugal and Sweden and will be ahead of Turkey, Spain, Holland and Denmark. She will still be outranked by England, France, Germany, Austria, Italy and Russia.

Accident on the B. and O.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 27.—The passenger train on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore and Ohio railroad, coming south last evening, met with a serious accident. At Canton, the locomotive, No. 776, exploded with terrific force, killing the engineer in a sudden stop, and when the steam cleared away it was found that the locomotive was ripped and the forces of the concussion was so great that the baggage car had telescoped the foremost passenger coach, injuring its two occupants slightly. Their names could not be learned. The engineer, Jeremiah Morningstar, received a severe scalp wound, while Fireman Charles Lisor was terribly scalded and will die.

Kate Field Indicted.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 27.—James B. McKean post, G. A. R., has formally expressed approval of Kate Field's investigation of Mormonism, and commended her to the commander-in-chief as specially fitted to present the facts in the case through the G. A. R. to the country. They have also requested the ex-in-chief to command her in the good work to the colonies everywhere.

Sent Down by a Schooner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The sailboat Emma was run down and sunk in the East river yesterday by a schooner which did not even stop to the steamer. Two of the three young men in the sailboat were rescued, but the other, George Ellis, of this city, owner of the boat, was drowned.

THE PRESIDENT RESTING.

The Distinguished Member of Parliament Corrects an Error.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Justin McCarthy was greatly benefited yesterday after his voyage from Europe, and rested quietly all day in his apartments in the Hoffman house. Mrs. Clough (S. Pearl), the junior of counsels with the honorable member for North

JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

Longford, sat at the window, not far from him, industriously adding to her portion of their new novel, "The Ladies' Gallery."

"I would like to say," remarked Mr. McCarthy, "that I consented to-day in leaving the reporters under the impression that I was an ex-member of parliament at present. The fact is, I am a member for North Longford, which I represented before I went down to contest the borough of Londonderry. While the election for Londonderry was going on, which resulted in my favor, I could have defended me by three votes, my cause was also before the Longford election, where I was returned many hundred votes ahead of my opponent. I am not until my petition against Lewis, which I believe will be successful, is passed upon. William O'Brien and T. M. Healy are now members of parliament. The only possible reason that the constituencies which they lost in Ulster were the ones which they represented was that they were jailed. Other seats will be easily found for them of course."

This evening the Irish Parliamentary Fund association, of which Rogers Kelly is chairman, will hold open house. Mr. McCarthy will a request that he make a convenient evening for the dinner which that body proposes to give him.

CRITICISM FOR THE COMMITTEE.

The New York Yacht Club Managers Taken to Task.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—The Herald says: "Judged from a conservative standpoint, this year's New York Yacht club regatta committee is not the equal of last year's. In the last race at Newport the course was changed without informing all the yachts, and the Mayflower's time allowance was a mile. On the evening of the race the committee left for New York before any of the yachts finished, and were not where they should have been to hear complaints, if any there made, but no hearings could be had, and the manner in which the various decisions were made shows that not much thought was given to the details of the race. The Galatea was barred out for making the Galatea foul the mark, when such was not the case, as Lieut. Hemphill says. Again, the Cinderella was decided all right and was third not. On the prize, only to be ruled out a few days afterward. The Clara, on the first day, was ruled out for fouling, when she did not. A third time the Cinderella's case came up for the consideration of the committee, and she was barred out a second time for not having a club measurer on board. The fact is, in the case of the Clara was reconsidered, and she has been awarded the cup. The above decisions were made in so many days. The Galatea also ruled out for fouling. Again the question arises, how could the committee 'rule out' a boat that had no chance for the cup, being beaten as she was by the Mayflower. Had the Galatea won the first, she could have been ruled out for fouling."

A Reporter Shoots a Politician.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—The primary election of Saturday resulted in a tragedy yesterday, in which a prominent politician was fatally wounded by a newspaper reporter. Frank Waters, of The City Item, an evening paper, indulged in some strictures on the part taken by the police in the contest of the Eighth ward. He was on his way down town in a street car yesterday he was halted by Joseph Baker, leader of the dominant faction in the Eighth ward, who insisted that the author of the articles Waters replied that he was, whereupon Baker called him a liar. Waters responded with a blow, and Baker drew his revolver. Waters was only a second too quick for him, his weapon and his shot followed Baker's almost instantly. After the first shot the two men clinched and fell to the floor, each firing as they fell. Waters was uninjured, but Baker received a ball through the abdomen and bladder and will die.

Fort Riley Made a Regimental Station.

EL PASO, TEX., Sept. 27.—The record brought with Merritt to the Custer massacre has called attention throughout the country to the importance of Fort Riley as a center of military forces in the southwest, and a supply depot of clothing, arms, ammunition and quartermaster stores. As one of the first results of the attention thus called the force at Fort Riley has been largely augmented. Col. Douglas, who is the post commander, will make it regimental headquarters. The adjutant, commissary and quartermaster will also make it their headquarters, and a post trader will soon be appointed, and will open a large store in a few days.

He Loaned His Credit.

HARTFORD, Sept. 27.—Letters have been received here from Bartholomew's friends in Montreal, saying that it was always his belief that he could liquidate his own obligations, and that it was his opinion that the corporations of which he was president would eventually make themselves good. Meanwhile he loaned them his credit. He offers to do all in his power to help his creditors to realize on their claims. The insolvency of the Hartford Silk company is shown by its statement. The Union Manufacturing company's statement is not yet ready.

Died in Terrible Agony.

SHELBYVILLE, Ills., Sept. 27.—Mrs. Andrew Christelong, a resident of Okaw township, while alone was seized with an epileptic fit and falling upon a cook stove was literally roasted to death. An eyewitnessing herself when consciousness returned large pieces of flesh adhered to the stove. She died in terrible agony.

Sun Burn by a Schooner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The sailboat Emma was run down and sunk in the East river yesterday by a schooner which did not even stop to the steamer. Two of the three young men in the sailboat were rescued, but the other, George Ellis, of this city, owner of the boat, was drowned.

FOUND IN ILLINOIS.

A PENNSYLVANIA COUPLE OF ELOPERS ELUDED SEARCHERS

And Were Almost Forgotten—A Well-Managed Sensation Revived By the Discovery of the Parties in Rockford, Ills.—History of the Case.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Sept. 27.—On April 12, 1881, A. M. Haswell, a prosperous resident of this city, eloped with Mrs. William McClary, who lived with her husband in the fashionable quarter on West Fourth street. Nothing has been heard of them since then until now, when the report that they had been found in Rockford, Ills., set the whole city in a whirl of excitement, and the old scandal was revived. Haswell was an illegitimate, and did rived. Haswell was an illegitimate, and did as a thriving upholstery business here. He deserted a comely, intelligent wife and interesting children. Mrs. McClary is a daughter of the then millionaire Peter Herdic, and as Piers Herdic was well known in social circles. She was in every way inferior to the wife that Haswell so cruelly deserted. Mrs. McClary took with her two children, both boys, one an infant, and the other 4 years old at the time. She is now a well preserved woman of 40 years.

The guilty pair on leaving Williamsport moved about the country in an aimless way, and had no abiding place until a few years ago, when they went to Rockford and settled down. They moved in good society, were well received socially, and, to outward appearances, were all right. They attended church quite regularly, and Haswell became in considerable degree a church supporter. A gentleman from Williamsport happened to meet them in Rockford last week, and first brought the intelligence of their whereabouts to Mrs. Haswell. Informed of the discovery and at once announced her intention of suppressing Haswell, who, she says, owes her money. Mrs. Haswell is a fine looking woman and has universal sympathy, having had a bitter struggle since her husband deserted her.

The facts of the elopement are as follows: Mrs. McClary met Haswell at her home while he was doing some upholstering there. She conceived a liking for him and began to visit his shop. When Mrs. McClary died Haswell, he assured it and said it would not do for him to offend a profitable customer by requesting a discontinuance of her calls. One night in June Mrs. Haswell strolled up Fourth street after dark and saw her husband a few steps from McClary's residence, and saw Mrs. McClary come down the steps and meet him. As she stepped up to Haswell the deceived wife pounced upon her until she gasped for release. Then Haswell pulled his wife off her and Mrs. McClary ran sobbing into the house. The next episode occurred at the funeral of a child of Mrs. Haswell's, when Mrs. McClary sent a heart of English violets, with a white lily in the center, with orders that it be delivered only to Haswell. Mrs. Haswell threw it into her husband's face, and then it was unceremoniously consigned to the street. Finally Mrs. Haswell got a bill of separation requiring Haswell to pay her $10 a week, which he has not done since the elopement. He owes her nearly $4,000. McClary, the deserted husband, obtained a divorce and is now living in Delaware. He expects to be married again in a short time. When his wife decamped she took all the silver and table linen in the house, besides $300 in cash belonging to her husband. Haswell and Mrs. McClary are living as man and wife in Rockford. They have had two children and are doing well.

IN DEBT TO THE GOVERNMENT.

What Gen. Rosecrans Has Discovered About a Loan.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—A Washington special to The Tribune says: Gen. Rosecrans, the register, has discovered that there was nearly $1,000,000 due the government from a monopoly in this district that has been flourishing for nearly fifty years. May 24, 1830, an act of congress was approved creating a corporation to build a canal from Georgetown to Alexandria, Va., authority being given to carry the same across the Potomac by means of an aqueduct. The sum of $100,000 was donated by congress to assist in this work. In 1837 the secretary of the treasury was authorized to loan $300,000 to the canal company in order to complete the canal and bridge. To secure this loan the corporate authorities of Alexandria were required to deposit the stock held by them in the canal company in the hands of the secretary of the treasury, to be sold by him at such time as the payment of the proper time had arrived and the government thus be reimbursed for the loan. Under the act the United States paid over to the canal company in 1837 $150,000; in 1838, $100,000; in 1839, $50,000. But it never received any certificates of stock. In 1867 a lease was entered into by the secretary of the canal company by which all the canal and its works were leased for ninety-nine years at the rate of $10,000 per year. This lease was supposed to have been duly authorized by a vote of a majority of the stockholders of the company, particularly the corporate authorities of Alexandria, the authorities representing and voting the stock which was pledged to the secretary of the treasury and upon which a loan of $300,000 had been obtained forty years before. The terms proceeded as soon as they had secured the lease to expend $25,000 in repairs, and have ever since been enjoying a net profit of from $12,000 to $18,000 per annum.

A Child Killed by Rats.

SHELBYVILLE, Ills., Sept. 27.—William Reynolds, a farmer living five miles north of this place, has just lost his child, 6 months of age, in a most terrible manner. The infant was placed in the crib in the room occupied by its parents. A lady in an adjoining room heard the child cry near morning, but supposing the parents were awake said nothing. In the morning Mrs. Reynolds discovered that her babe was dead. Rats, which are very numerous about the premises, had killed the child, and literally denuded the bones of the face and otherwise terribly mutilated the body.

Suspicious Fires.

SHAWNEGAN, Me., Sept 27.—There is great excitement in Harmony over the apparent efforts of an incendiary to burn the town. On Friday Ernest Willis' building was burned, and on Saturday the buildings of C. A. Leighton, of Harmony, and John Dore and Ethan Smith's buildings in Wellington, just over the Harmony line. This makes six sets of buildings burned in Harmony since Monday, all in the day time and about 5 p. m. Appearances indicate that something like a coffee fuse was used. Detective True, of Portland, has been sent for.

Single for Charleston.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Hermann, the magician, gave a performance at Wallack's last night for the benefit of the Charleston sufferers. Mr. Wallack gave the use of the theatre free. The net proceeds were $1,200.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—For New England and the middle Atlantic states, local rain, followed by fair weather, slightly colder, westerly winds.

SUNDAY AT CHARLESTON.

Worshippers Gather Propped Up Walls Waiting For Wingless.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 27.—The fourth Sunday since Charleston's awful visitation passed without any startling incident. The city was crowded with visitors, and the streets presented a lively appearance. The Catholic Cathedral was badly shattered by the earthquake, since which event the regular masses of the church have been celebrated in the open air in a chapel temporarily erected in the lot adjoining. Bishop Northrop gave notice that hereafter the services would be held in the church building, the four walls, of which had been propped up. The first impulse of a stranger on entering the church and seeing the shattered condition would be to get on the outside as speedily as possible. Notwithstanding this, thousands of persons attended the services and sat unmoved to the end, many participating in the communion. The bishop himself conducted the services at 11 a. m. Religious services in all the other churches were largely attended.

The signal office here applied to the weather bureau at Washington for indications covering the period of Wiggins' predicted earthquake. The following dispatch was received from Gen. Hazen:

There are at present no indications of any severe atmospheric disturbance between now and the 30th. Timely notice will be given you should any change appear.

WILD POLICEMEN

Create a Sensation in New Orleans—A Chinaman's Fate.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—Saturday night Police Officers Maberry, Evans, Sontag and Saunders, who had been stationed at the Fifth ward poll, were returning to their homes in an intoxicated condition. On Burgundy street they saw two negro girls sitting on the steps, and applied the beastly epithets to them. The girls rose to leave, when they were knocked down by the officers. A negro named James Smith came along, and was ordered to move on. Before he could comply one of the officers seized him by the throat and another placed a revolver to his head. The negro broke away and ran down the street, pursued by the officers, who fired a dozen shots at him, and he received two slight wounds. While the shooting was in progress Hung Lung, a Chinese restaurant keeper, put his head out of the window to see what was up. As he did so Saunders took deliberate aim and sent a bullet into his right eye, inflicting a fatal wound. The negro and all the officers were arrested. The three officers claim that the negro killed the Chinaman, but all witnesses agree that the assault on Smith was unprovoked, and that he did nothing but run.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
CARD TO THE PUBLIC.
This company is prepared to receive applications and to make contracts for incandescent lights for dwellings, stores and public purposes.
The rapidity as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, in each section of the residential portion of the city, the necessary mains will be extended, and from that time the supply of lighting will be commenced will depend somewhat upon the number of applications for light and the distance.
The supply to the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the building of the necessary station. The delay for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in consequence of the unusually backward season, but the station building line after having commenced building operations, as also on account of the lost by fire of two engines, which will be immediately replaced.
The system has been decided in lieu of expending money upon a canvass for light consumers to appropriate the amount which would have been used for that purpose to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 600 lights, situated in the business section and 200 in the resident sections.
A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Mallard, rear of his store, on Somerset agent, 25 and 27 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will receive applications and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30 a. m., and 4.30 and 5.30 p. m.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

His Erratic and Dramatic Career Told by Truthful William Nye.

Perhaps the world has never had a better example of success from a small beginning than we find in the history of William Shakespeare, the man who wrote Francis Bacon's works for him.

William was born 322 years ago on the 23d of last April. His father, John Shakespeare, was a yeoman, or huckleberry, and as we run our eye down the biographies of the eminent in all professions, we are struck with the wonderful frequency of the farmer boy and the son of the laboring man.

John Shakespeare was popular among his neighbors, however, and was frequently elected to office. Among other offices held by him was that of justice of the peace, and should a case come over you to sit in a great post, and write tragedies that would make a man's hair stand up on his head, I hope he will not forget that his father was once a Justice of the peace, thus giving him a start which he could not overestimate.

At the age of 18 William became entangled with Anne Hathaway, according to the ideographer, and, though she was eight years his senior, married her in another parish one day under special license. Three children blessed this union right away, to use an Americanism, two of them being twins, the other one otherwise.

We may readily see that Shakespeare's lot, at the age of 21, with a wife eight years his senior, three small children, and a father who was unable to provide for his wants, was anything but a cheerful one.

Will Shakespeare at twenty-one.

Shakespeare now got into trouble with Sir Thomas Lucy by killing some of Lucy's deer, and writing a severe ballad on him, which he nailed to the gate. As a result of this incident, he resolved to go away from Stratford.

He said that the place was not big enough for Sir Thomas and himself, and as Sir Thomas had a great many ties to bind him to the place, while he had nothing but his little family and a shawl strap, he thought it would be better that he should go west. He, therefore, went to London. On his arrival he found that he had brought the shawl strap, but had overlooked his family.

He soon got a situation in the theatre at London. He first appeared on the English stage with a roll of carpet under his arm, and proceeded to theorize it down. It was necessary at that time to nail the stage carpet down with tacks, and while doing so the great bard knocked off the nail of his favorite thumb. He then put this on impromptu for a time in front of passion so realistic that he was greeted with applause and an encore, whereupon he came forward and knocked off the other thumb nail in that great scene.

He now began to write plays daytimes and act put on the stage nights to crowded houses. He was a poor penman, and so soon learned to write out rapidly after which he was engaged by Sir Francis Bacon to do some writing for him. Shakespeare is said to have played the Ghost in his own "Hamlet," though this is not yet fully established. After playing one-night stands for a few weeks, and coming home with Hamlet's feet tied up in the graveyard scene, and Ophelia's face sticking out of her shoes, William, no doubt, looked like a man who had been playing Ghost, and this, no doubt, was the origin of the report.

"Venus and Adonis" was one of the finest poems written by Mr. Shakespeare. He took it to the editor of The Stratford Appeal, who paid him in order to induce the poet to let Shakespeare the paper a year free, and told him that, should any other item of news come his way, he wished that he would send it in.

Shakespeare had a large number of plays, all of which were well received, though he never got a just remuneration for his work. Could he have received a royalty on the plays up to the present time, he could have spent his summers by the side of the sounding sea—down by the skimmering, sunlit sea.

It is strange that Shakespeare should have written so well, when we stop to consider that he did not strive for fame. He did not seem to hanker for fame at all. He wrote his plays just as I strive mean of to-day writes his gorgeous posters, simply to order, and yet Shakespeare will be quoted and reproduced centuries after the pictures of the hippopotamus, with the large red mouth, shall have passed into oblivion.

But there is a lesson in the life of William Shakespeare. When we censure indorse his manner of going to London in a brown study, and forgetting to take his family with him, we must admire the truth and strength shown in his works, and, above all, his great perseverance. All men are created for some place in the great economy of nature, and they are largely successful or unsuccessful as they keep on, or fail to keep on, that place. We realize this when we see a man cross-questioning his superiors on the witness stand, or talking to jury duty against duty, when he ought to be a justice at the pound. We realize it every day when we see round men in square holes, and square men in round holes.

Shakespeare died in 1616, leaving a wonderful dramatic monument by which to perpetuate his name, and an autograph which looks like the tree and fall of Billy Patterson.

Shakespeare's dust lies buried in front of the chancel of Stratford church; but, to me the words of a mere modern poet, his soul seems everything. He was a great Englishman, and I respect him all the more because he refreshed from riding through America on a night train, and then writing a book on it titled: "The United States: Its Land and Its People, Its Soil, Products, Politics, Social Customs, Insects, Mammals, Public Buildings, Hotels and Most Other Famous."—Bill Nye in Cincinnati Graphic.

One Cazardly Believe It.

"My-dear," said Mrs. Scaggs to her husband, "what is a canard?"

"Don't you know what a canard is?" queried Scaggs, rather sourcastically; "why the word itself conveys its own meaning."

"Does it? Well, really I can't see it. What does it mean, dear?"

"Why, a canard is something one cazardly believes, of course."

"Oh, to be sure! Why couldn't I think of that!"—Tid Bits.

THE LIME KILN CLUB.

The Picnic Passes Off Quietly—The Games, Winners and Prizes.

Delegates to the seventh annual election and picnic of the Lime Kiln club began to arrive at midnight on Wednesday night. The first one to put in an appearance was Col. Dodo Rockafellow, of Covington, Ky. He made the trip afoot, in exactly twenty days. By midnight on Friday 207 honorary members and delegates had appeared and been furnished quarters. Among the very prominent delegates present were thirty-four colonels, seventeen generals, fourteen judges, twenty-one professors, thirty elders and six sirs. The most commanding and the best dressed delegation was from South Carolina, and consisted of Gen. Trouncin' Smith, Col. Danforth Gore, Professor Oscillation Baker and the Rev. Carmine Pathfinder.

As each delegate arrived at the hall he was dunned off with a horse brush, given a pint of iced tea and assigned to quarters with some local member. The only cases of attempted fraud were where the ghost of a delegate tried to be a delegate from the White Rose branch club, at Saulsbury, O. The credentials he submitted proved to be a recipe for mixing a German sausage, and when flung down on the back and stepped on he admitted that he was one Samuel Davis, of Toledo, who wanted to learn the inside workings of the club and get about persuading Giveaway Jones. The way he was hustled down three pairs of stairs will live in his memory for a hundred years to come.

A business meeting was held in the library Friday evening, at which all committees reported. The thanks of the club are extended to the many Detroiters who came out to the front to make the banquet a grand success.

At 8 o'clock Saturday evening, preceded by a band which threw off sweet strains at every stop, the procession marched to the foot of Eighteenth street and embarked on a barge to be towed down to Fighting Island. Most of the local members were accompanied by their wives and children. Among the banners in the procession were noticed those bearing legends as follows: "Never let go of a spring chicken to look for an old hen," "Five hundred years hence the black will be on top," "The man who poisons a watermelon deserves the rope," "We have got our heads above water."

At the island everything had been arranged for a good time. Before beginning the games which were to test the strength and agility of the members, Brother Gardiner mounted a barrel and made a brief speech. He referred to Cleopatra, the siege of Troy, the New Orleans exposition and the recent trouble with Mexico, and expressed an earnest wish that every member should stand ready to lay down his life in case the United States declined to go in and give France, Germany, Austria, Roumania and Russia a gentle drubbing. His remarks were received with such enthusiasm that Maj. Powhattan Green, a delegate from Virginia, fell in a fit and had to be sucked in. In five or eighteen minutes before he came to enough to miss his Waterbury watch.

Maj. Powhattan Green had a fit.

The following is a list of games, winners and prizes:

Throwing an anvil—Prize, an oil painting of a canal boat going ashore in a dreadful storm. Won by Capt. Behemoth Smith, who succeeded in throwing it on Elder Toots' left foot.

Standing jump—Prize, a kerosene lamp with a green body and warranted not to explode. Won by Professor Serious White, who broke a pair of six shilling suspenders in so doing.

Foot race of 100 yards—Prize, a decorated wall basket, which can also be used to hold a family Bible. Won by Harry Jones, a barber of one hundred dollars to be paid all soldiers and sailors of the late war, widows of the same, eighteen hundred and twenty, and the widows of such soldiers and sailors as may have since married: provided, further, that this act shall not be construed to entitle any person to a pension under the laws of the United States.

A QUESTION OF BELIEF

CAUSES A SHAKING UP IN THE AMERICAN BOARD OF MISSIONS.

A Theological War Impending That is Agitating the Congregational Denomination — What The Andover Review Will Say in October About the Matter.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—The Andover Review for October will devote all its editorial space to the consideration of the action of the Prudential committee of the American board in the rejection of missionaries and of candidates for the ministry, and the papers have offered themselves for the missionary field. This looks like the beginning of the long expected theological war over the new Andover doctrine of probation after death. From advance sheets of The Review the following statement of the situation is gleaned: The first point is the rejection of Rev. Mr. Hume. The case in brief is that Mr. Hume, in an address before the Andover seminary, gave expression to views which hinted that perhaps the millions of heathen who never in the state of probation rather than in hell fire, and implied a belief in universal salvation. Although he is the son of ex-missionaries, and has himself been a missionary in India for twelve years, he was attached before the American board, and that body has refused to return him to his field, as well as rejected other candidates on the same ground—that they had not enough hell in their belief to suit the board.

Apropos of this state of affairs, The Andover Review says: The refusal of this prudential committee to consider the case of the men and women who wish to become missionaries, but will not accept the doctrine of eternal punishment that Dr. Alden insists on, is thus treated—The complete policy of those who support the committee's action is to misinterpret the motives of those who plead for the heathen and to represent their influence as almost inappreciable; and on the other hand, to magnify the importance of the opinions held by a few persons who are lacking in theology and subversive of all religious effectiveness some of proportion has been lost. The theory which is opposed is just before the public and of the attempt, but the numbers and influence of those who hold the theory is put before the small out of the question. The attempt to have action with the ignorance and distortions. The hypothesis in question, even if true, cannot be raised, either by its supporters or opponents, to the rank of the controlling fact. That fact will always remain in a place of only secondary importance. But it should not be denied that the number of those who adopt it as a belief is large enough to endanger the usefulness of mankind and of those who consecrate the liberties of others to hold it, is by no means inconsiderable.

After giving the reasons for which Mr. Hume pleads with great earnestness to be allowed to go back to his mission field, the editors of The Review say: The Christian public will judge the policy of the intrenched in the prudential committee room by its fruits. It has begun its career by refusing or discouraging the missionaries from the new striking down tried and faithful missionaries. Like the fatal power personified by the poet: "It loves a shining mark." It has rejected some of the best men and most gifted women which three leading institutions on which the board depends for its missionaries can supply.

It is now forbidding to return to his work, at a time of unusual need, one of the best missionaries of the board, who affirms that he holds to-day every doctrine which he ever held, and who is ready to sign any creed more and more that God is Christlike. It is a policy whose next step must be to recall missionaries now in the field, and whose immediate result is and must be, in spite of all appearances already for too feeble, a curtailment of work where such a process imperils what has been won, and a lowering of the standard and quality of service.

Shall such a policy be sustained? Do the free Congregational churches of this country believe in keeping back such a man as Mr. Hume? Do they believe in the right to withhold what they grant to their pastors? Are they ready to take the responsibility of withholding from service men whom, by all the signs of spiritual earnestness and power, God has called, and who offer themselves, moved, as they believe, by the spirit of God, and in love of Christ and of their fellow men, to go to the heathen, preach Christ, and Him only!

It is said that the suspicion of laxity in doctrine, even though it fall short of open and positive dogma. This is a double-edged sword. It is wise not to handle it. The argument always springs up when a contest against error is on foot. The answer when by a missionary of the board is conclusive: "The board wants men."

The Review shows that the necessity of harmony in foreign missions, insisted upon by Dr. A. C. Thompson's recent pamphlet, "On Future Probation and Foreign Missions," in no way militates against the independence of both the Japan and India missions of the American board are practically unanimous in their favor.

Black From Europe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Among the recent influx of Americans from the continent vacation on the steamer La Bretagne, from Havre, are two, who is destined to take rank in opera with Mary Anderson in the drama. Miss Montague opened her season at Dresden, under the direction of Lessing, the celebrated teacher, whose pupils hail from all parts of the world. Miss Huntington made a favorable report of the debut of the American. She was seen with the Boston ideas of quality, with whom she is under engagement for the coming season. She will also appear in Berlin and Vienna. Miss Huntington, who is a handsome blonde, says she has had flattering offers in Europe for the next succeeding seasons, but made no engagements. She is an American lady, who sang at court without, which is considered a rare honor, has been achieved through indomitable "grit" and consistent devotion to her chosen art, for which she has thoroughly equipped by a powerful and commanding presence and superior voice.

Three Railroads Merged Into One.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The Chautauqua Lake Railway company, the Westfield and Chautauqua Lake Railway company and the Jamestown Railway company, have by vote agreed to merge their interests into one company, to be known as the Chautauqua Lake Railway company. The officers of the new company are: Hon. W. D. Marvin, Jamestown, president; John C. Williams, Cleveland, vice president and manager; Daniel H. Tyler, Jamestown, secretary; Benjamin F. Day, Buffalo, treasurer. The road from Westfield through Jamestown and Falconers will be pushed to completion in time for next spring's lake traffic.

Caused by a Lamp Exploding.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 28.—A lamp exploded in the home of Mrs. Flanagan, on the Soho hill flats, evening, totally burning her clothing off, aged 5, and her 24-months old babe. Mrs. Flanagan, in her efforts to save the children, was also badly burned. Both children are dead. Ralph McGuire, a neighbor hearing the family's misfortune, ran to their assistance, and had his hands and arms badly

THE RECORD NOT BEATEN.

Last Day's Winners at the Lynn Bicycle Races.

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 28.—The third and last day of the international bicycle tournament found the track in a better condition than on any of the previous days. The attendance was large. The first race on the list being no attempt to beat Gideon's wonderful record, resulted as follows: Hendee, of Springfield, first; Ives, of Meriden, second; Stone, of Me, Lonia, third. Time 2:41 2-5. Hendee's record record, 2:30. It is reported that Gideon intends to throw the race, the champion refused to start, declaring that if Hendee should beat him nothing he might subsequently do would count. The race is before the public. He preferred to take no risk of misrepresentation. The second race, a three mile amateur bicycle, 9:30 class, was won by Gideon on account of lading, the time being 9:04 2-5.

The third race, a two-mile professional bicycle, was won by Woodside, of England; Crochon, of Scotland, second; Frazier, of Smithville, N. J., third. Time, 5:30.

Fourth race, a three-mile amateur handicap bicycle—Goodell, of Fitchburg, first; Rich, of New York, second; Hatcher, of Salem, third. Time, 9:10 2-5.

Ninth race, one mile amateur consolation bicycle—Kavanagh, first; Warden, second. Time, 3:03.

A ROYAL MARRIAGE

To Take Place at Dresden on the Second of October.

DRESDEN, Sept. 28.—Dresden begins to feel the excitement of the approaching marriage between Princess Marie Josepha, second daughter of H. R. H. Prince George, duke of Saxony, and H. I. H. Otto, archduke of Austria, to take place on Sept. 30 at the royal court in Dresden. In the morning of the marriage day the bridal pair will, after the civil act of being united in wedlock by the Standesamt, proceed to the church, having the bride with the customary nuptial garland in the queen's drawing rooms, repair through the passage connecting palaces established, to the church, decorated for the special occasion, where the ecclesiastic benediction will be given by the bishop. After this the solemn high mass will be performed by the members of the royal musical chapel, under the ringing of bells and the discharge of cannon. After their return to the palace the young couple will receive the congratulations of their relatives and the court. A grand dinner will follow at 5 o'clock, and in the evening a gala representation at the Court theatre. A ball will conclude the festivity of the day. On the day following a grand ball is in contemplation.

There is a rumor that the eldest son of Prince George, of Saxony, heir presumptive to the Saxon throne, is to be engaged to the Princess Marie Valerie, youngest daughter of the emperor of Austria.

Paying For the Dead.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 28.—Claim Agent Hall, of the Buffalo division, is now in the city, settling up the claims of the men killed and injured by the Nickel Plate disaster at Silver Creek. The first claim to be settled was that of William Hedden, a brakeman, for $100. Claim Agent Hall says it will be very difficult to settle the death claims, that he has approached the heirs of those killed, but they have refused his propositions. At the time the Nickel Plate was built its managers attempted to secure property in Erie county at a reduced valuation, consequently the antagonism of the farmers is very great all along the road, and Mr. Hall is anxious to keep out of court, fearing the juries. He estimates it will take about $100,000 to settle the deaths.

Wiping Out the Indians.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The northwest Indian commission that Commissioner Atkinson sent out soon after the adjournment of congress has been a working committee. It has negotiated treaties with five of the Chippewa tribes, who agree to cede their lands to be sold for the benefit of their civilization fund and remove to the White Earth reservation. Congress will undoubtedly ratify the commission's work, which will wipe out all the vast Indian reservations north of the Northern Pacific road, with the exception of the White Earth reservation, and open up more than 3,000 square miles of territory to settlement.

Want to Boycott Spain.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—A delegation of New York city owners is in the city to urge the repeal of the president's proclamation, issued in 1884, suspending all discriminating duties against Spain. The delegation conferred with the president and Secretary Bayard and received assurances that the subject would receive prompt attention. The delegation claim that the president's proclamation is only confined legally to the duties on goods coming directly from Spain, while Spain reciprocates the privileges conferred by it, and that Spain has so much increased the duties as to discouraged to expect the repeal of the proclamation at an early date.

Another Bond Call.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Acting Secretary Fairchild has issued a call for $15,000,000 5 per cent bonds, to mature on Nov. 1, next. The bonds included in this call are as follows: 626, original number 50 to original number 1,000, inclusive; 1,000, original number 647 to original number 776, both inclusive; 2,000, original number 780 to original number 940, both inclusive; $1,000, original number 1,025 to original number 1,284, both inclusive; $10,000, original number, 7,309 to original number 8,810, both inclusive. Total, $15,000,000.

Red Cross Officers Go to Charleston.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Clara Barton, president of the National association of the Red Cross; Dr. Hubbell, the general field agent, and Boston Mary Wentz Barnet left here last night for Charleston, S. C., to act as advisory agents of the city authorities and inform the country of the needs of the Charleston people.

Cashier Gould Before a Grand Jury.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 28.—The grand jury resumed the hearing of evidence against Cashier Gould, of the defunct Canal bank, for his private books, giving a history of his past transactions, and it is known that such books exist. Mr. Gould has failed to find the $65,000 required for his bail.

Killed Himself in a Lodging House.

BUFFALO, Sept. 28.—Wm. Bowers, aged 26, supposed to be a telegraph operator from Pittsfield, N. Y., shot and killed himself in a lodging house. Cause unknown.

THE TEANECK BURGLAR

FOUND GUILTY AFTER A BRIEF TRIAL—HIS OWN DEFENSE.

The Story of His Crime Related by the Man He Shot While Trying to Escape. "Kill Him! Kill Him!" Different From "Pray For Him."

HACKENSACK, Sept. 28.—The trial of John Bunn, alias Higg, for shooting George S. Bunn, Jr., at Teaneck railroad bridge the night of May 5, with intent to kill him, took place yesterday. He had no lawyer, but defended his case in person. The court room was filled to its utmost. Among the many persons from Englewood who were present were Mrs. Cox with six of her eleven fine children, the Rigg-wood lawn tennis club, and seven of the jurors, two of whom were also deeply interest in the popular young man, who was principal witness for the state. Young Mr. Cox told his story of the crime in detail.

During the recess Higg watched his victim closely, and from time to time jotted down ideas in a labored, methodical manner.

Prosecutor Campbell, of Bergen, and Campbell followed, and Judge Skinner informed Higg that, as counsel for himself, he would be permitted to cross-examine the witnesses for the state, which he accepted. One's face as if criticising the cut of his beard, and said:

"I had something here dot I would like to show to de jury."

"Well, that will come later on," replied Judge Skinner, in a voice that admitted of no parleying.

"All right, your honor," responded the burglar suavely, in broken English, "youst as you say."

Then followed one of the most extraordinary cross-examinations ever enacted in a court of justice. The victim of a would-be murder sat in a witness chair to be cross-examined by his assailant, who had been locked in a cell either for a full minute. Finally the burglar broke the silence by selecting from among the papers lying on the desk in front of him a photograph of Mr. Cox.

"Mr. Cox," said he in a pleasant voice, "please read dis paper and tell me if you told dot man to weake vat his dere?"

Mr. Cox looked at the card and stood a copy of a letter dictated by him to a friend whom he frequently met at the Fulton street prayer meeting in New York. It was one of his prayers for both himself and the burglar. It prayed forgiveness for the hardened, erring man.

"Yes, I wrote it," responded Cox, after fingering the clipping, "at the time I was in bed and thought I would die."

The burglar's eyes glistened—his voice lowered to a hoarse whisper.

"Was dot your feeling at dot time?" he inquired, almost tremulously.

"It was," responded Cox.

The court room was still as death. The victim's statement of his enemy, when face to face with him, drew tears from many eyes. The burglar stood like a statue and appeared to be moved. Prosecutor Campbell, apparently, evidently thinking his emotions would convert him upon the spot. Not so. Rigg shrugged his shoulders, waved his hand at the jury and said triumphantly:

"Gentlemens, I only wanted to show the jury dot a man sick abed and a man geckled feel dyfferent. He like to have different things."

Continuing rapidly, he asked:

"Vat did you say to your broder when he had me down and was hammering me mit a pistol?"

Another dramatic scene followed.

"I said, 'Kill him! kill him!'" replied Cox, visibly affected.

"Ah!" exclaimed the burglar, "dot vas different from 'Pray for him!' Is dot not so?"

This last query, addressed to the jury in a cunning, crafty tone, caused a titter in the court room, for which both Cox and the burglar fined. Both the witness and the burglar lawyer now commenced to engage much other in a series of conversational reminiscences on the tragedy. The spectators held their breath as questions were put and answered. A look of triumph spread over the burglar's face from time to time as he tried to entrap his victim.

The wily burglar's defense did not appear quite as plain as it might, and the jury began to look weary.

Rigg tried every ruse he could to lead his victim to make a misstatement. He argued so ably that the town lawyers looked amazed. Never did his large, intelligent head dent him. His ideas were clear and, although crude, bore evidences of many hours' study in his cell.

When he had finished his cross-examination of Cox he looked at the jury with an air of confidence, as if he expected a return look of encouragement.

When Rigg finally made his last appeal to the jury he said, assuming a dramatic attitude: "Gentlemens, when I went into the fields last harvest time I went to Teaneck to take a nap. I was aroused from sleep by some people who were coming in at the door. I never intended to commit robbery or shoot anybody. They fought me and I fought back. You have heard my defense."

The jury retired and after an absence of thirty-five minutes returned. Rigg jumped to his feet and calmly awaited the verdict.

"Guilty," answered the foreman impressively.

Rigg shrugged his shoulders, cast a withering look of contempt at the twelve men and carelessly sat down. As the spectators and the Cox boys filed out of the court room they took a hearty look at the man who so gallantly defended himself. There is little doubt that Rigg will receive fifteen years' sentence, as he was found guilty on all three indictments. He will be sentenced some time this week.

The President and "Prince Karl."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—"Prince Karl" was brought out here to-night at Albaugh's Grand Opera house, with Richard Mansfield in the title role. A crowded house, which included the president, Mrs. Cleveland, Col. and Mrs. Lamont, and a party of friends, in one of the private boxes, greeted Mr. Mansfield on the opening night. It was altogether a big ovation. The crowd called Mansfield before the curtain between the acts, and in many ways manifested their appreciation and appreciation of the actor's versatility and genius.

Mrs. Parnell's Remarks.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Parnell, addressing a meeting here, said that Americans looked to the day when Ireland would become practically independent and demanded home rule for Ireland. In their victories of the past, she said, Irishmen had achieved more than the people of Ireland could accomplish in the present hour. Their chance would soon come. England was in arms against Ireland and Americans were rejoiced to see it.

Connecticut's Convention.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 28.—A. E. Burr, of Hartford, was selected by the Democratic state committee for temporary chairman to-day. E. E. Cleveland, of Hartford, seems to be the favorite of the party organizers, and John Dwaney, of New Canaan, has appeared. Only the strongest country support for Governor. There will be a hot contest between Law, of New Haven, and Mahon, of New London, for secretary of state.

ADVERTISING CIGARS.

The Chicago Foolishness Seized Two Papers for Smoking.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The Evening Mail and Telegram have just under the ban somewhere, at least, in the department of justice, in the matter of the Globe Cigar, Co., Lich, the superintendent, shipped last Thursday's edition of the Telegram and Thursday's edition of The Mail. The first named was in 2,412 packages, about 40,000 pages, of the Thursday edition, and the latter's mail was about two pounds. The large amount excited suspicion. An investigation was started, with the result of ascertaining what is considered good evidence that the papers were designed by distribution solely in the interest of a certain brand of cigars. The Mail's edition sent to the editor weighed 1,540 pounds, about 15,000 papers, and was found to contain the same advertisement. Gen. Lich maintains that the papers should be paid for by distributors rather than by the cent for every two ounces or fraction thereof, if in bundle, or one cent on each paper if single. The postage in that case would be eight or nine cents per pound instead of one cent per pound. In the case of The Telegram, the papers were wrapped, directed and sent to the office by a Scandinavian advertising agency, which has a bureau of furnishing names and addressing and mailing circulars, newspapers, etc. The additional amount of postage which Gen. Lich claims is due on editions of The Telegram is nearly $200, and in the case of The Mail about $100.

INDIANA DESPERADOES

Make a Bold Dash for Liberty and Get Lead Instead.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 28.—A daring attempt to escape was made at the North penitentiary yesterday. Frank Whiting and Charles Havens, two Indiana desperadoes, broke from their cells about the third floor of the shoe shop, just as an engine was pulling out of the yard with a train of cars. They jumped on the engine, overpowered the fireman and pulled the throttle wide open. As they passed through the gate the guard on the wall shot and instantly killed Whiting. and Havens leaped of as soon as he could with safety. The guard fired several times after having been wounded by a pistol shot. Whiting was serving ten years for burglary and Havens four years for a similar offense. Whiting has been under sentence of murder out against him. This was their third attempt to escape within the last six months. The first time they got outside of their cell door, but were discovered by the night guards. The second attempt was made about a month ago, when they dropped out of the prison by means of cords, and tried to scale the wall by splicing some ladders. They were again discovered and have since worn a ball and chain as a memento.

Both Whiting and Havens was members of the famous Harter gang, of whom five members are now doing time here.

A Prize Essay.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Chairman Stoddard, of the Free Trade club executive committee, announces the following as the subject of the prize essays to be read at the next annual meeting of the association: "Laws of Diversion; Their Influence on Industry, Trade and the Advisability of national legislation." Full information may be obtained by addressing L. B. Proctor, at the Capitol, Albany.

That "Disgusted Feeling."

HULL, Eng., Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the National league to-day it was resolved not to pass a resolution denying the statement of the letter sent by a "Disgusted Feeling" to The Eastern Morning News, but to await the events spoken of. The language of the letter is extremely violent. It says the Irish will cause many Irish employes to be dismissed by their employers.

Gave Himself Up.

BRAINERD, Minn., Sept. 28.—A man named Davenport came in yesterday and gave himself up to the police, saying he had killed two men named Pollet, father and son. He claims that the men tried to drive him from his claim on a piece of land near here, the ownership of which is disputed, and he acted in self-defense. He was put in jail pending an investigation.

Hanlan After Beach.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Edward Hanlan has challenged William Beach to row a race on the Thames for any sum up to $25,000, and has offered to row for $10,000 at any distance. Hanlan to give Beach $10,000 in the former case, and Beach to give Hanlan $10,000 in the latter. Beach has declined all the challenge.

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 28.—Nelson Gavels, the 7-year-old boy stoned some months ago at Des Moines, Ia., was found here yesterday. He said the doctor was a tramp, who had several times spelled him to add him in begging. The tramp was arrested a few hours later.

E. S. Stokes In Pottsville.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—E. S. Stokes, proprietor of the Madison Square Garden for Lord Lonsdale yesterday and, informing him that he desired to maintain the creditable reputation of the hotel, expressed a desire that Violet Cameron's name might be omitted. Shortly afterward the actress left the hotel.

A Rich Lead Find.

GALENA, Ills., Sept. 28.—A very valuable discovery of mineral is made west of Galena, adjoining the celebrated Comstock lead mine, which yielded 6,000,000 pounds. It is believed the new find will be equal if not excel the Comstock. The owners are six miners who were comparatively poor men.

A QUESTION OF BELIEF

CAUSES A SHAKING UP IN THE AMERICAN BOARD OF MISSIONS.

A Theological War Impending That is Agitating the Congregational Denomination — What The Andover Review Will Say in October About the Matter.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—The Andover Review for October will devote all its editorial space to the consideration of the action of the Prudential committee of the American board in the rejection of missionaries and of vacillation both men and women) who have offered themselves for the missionary field because they believe the heathen dying at the rate of 1,000 per minute, will be lost. Since the time when the first missionary was sent to the heathen and to represent them to the heathen and to represent them to the heathen, the Andover Review says: The refusal of the prudential committee to consider the case of Mr. Dike, a missionary in India for twelve years, because he declined to subscribe to the articles of belief, and that body has refused to return him to his field, as well as rejected other candidates on the same ground—that they had not enough belief in their belief to suit the board.

Apropos of this state of affairs, The Andover Review says: The refusal of the prudential committee to consider the case of Mr. Dike, a missionary in India for twelve years, because he declined to subscribe to the articles of belief, and that body has refused to return him to his field, as well as rejected other candidates on the same ground—that they had not enough belief in their belief to suit the board.

The simple fact is that the leaning of the large majority of the members of the board is in the direction of a theological war over the new Andover doctrine of probation after death. From advance sheets of The Review the following statement of the case is taken: The second first point is the rejection of Rev. Mr. Hume. This case in brief is that Mr. Hume, in an address before the Andover seminary, gave an opinion in his views which hinted that perhaps the millions of dead heathen were in a second state of probation rather than in hell fire, and in their belief to suit the board.

Apropos of this state of affairs, The Andover Review says: The refusal of the prudential committee to consider the case of Mr. Dike, a missionary in India for twelve years, because he declined to subscribe to the articles of belief, and that body has refused to return him to his field, as well as rejected other candidates on the same ground—that they had not enough belief

REPORTER FLOGGED.

SENSATIONAL TERMINATION TO A PUBLICATION IN JERSEY CITY.

The Gotham Tonsor Himself Aggrieved by a Published Accusation That Some One Had Committed Forgery—She Seeks Revenge With a Horsewhip.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 28.—Thomas Gannon, a wealthy coppersmith, who lives in Jersey City, has a wife and two daughters and a widower. He has two pretty daughters, Maude, aged 18 years, and Minnie, aged 16. A few days ago an article appeared in The Jersey City Journal telling how two young society girls had committed forgery by forging the amounts of two checks given them by their father for spending money. The article, which was a column long, with a display head, went on to tell how the father had let the forgery, throughout his daughters' excitement, and was only prevented from carrying out his threat by the intervention of the parish priest. Of course names were not mentioned in the article; but it was so worded that many who read it and knew the Gannon girls, readily saw that they were the persons referred to. George Lenhart, a reporter for the Journal, made no secret of the fact that he had written the article. At midnight on Friday last an American District messenger appeared at Lenhart's house and left a verbal message that a man wanted to see him at John J. Hisley's saloon to question him about the particulars of a murder. Lenhart hurried to the place. As soon as he entered the saloon a man struck him a stinging blow in the face with his fist. Before Lenhart could recover from his surprise his assailant had escaped. Lenhart did not know at the time who his assailant was, but yesterday he learned that he was Raymond Gilchrist, the 20-year old son of ex-Attorney General Gilchrist, of New Jersey. He caused young Gilchrist's arrest for assault and battery, and also for conspiracy with John J. Hisley, the proprietor of the saloon in which the assault was committed. Hisley, also was arrested. He gave bail for examination. Young Gilchrist gave as a reason for the assault that he was a friend of the Misses Gannon, whose character had been grossly assailed by the publication.

Last night Lenhart was assigned to report the meeting of the board of education for the Jersey City News. The meeting room, on the second floor of the department's building, was crowded with politicians when he made his appearance. They delighted at him and he was forced to call out: saying a word.

While the meeting was in progress a tall young lady in a black silk dress, over which she threw a black cape, and a large shady hat, slipped up the stairs to the meeting room. It was Miss Minnie Gannon. Without attracting much attention she stepped up to the door, which divided the members of the board and reporters from the lobby.

"Are you Mr. Lenhart?" she asked, as Lenhart turned his face toward her. He was startling only a few feet from the railing, and before he had a chance to reply she drew a long horsewhip from beneath her skirts and began to rain blows on Lenhart's head and shoulders.

"Now dare you publish such a story about me!" she exclaimed, as she brought the whip down again and again. The lobby shouted words of encouragement to the young lady. Lenhart took refuge behind one of the commissioners, and a friend induced Miss Gannon to leave the room.

"If I were a man I would fix him," she declared, as she was led down stairs. "As it is, it is well came down stairs I will give him the worst thrashing he ever got."

Breaking away from her friend Miss Gannon returned to the room and again assailed Lenhart, who called to the president of the board for protection. Encouraged by the shouts of the lobby, Miss Gannon made a fiercer attack on Lenhart. This time he grasped the whip and tried to get it away from her. In their struggle the door was demolished, and the lobby rushed in on Lenhart, and but for the interference of the commissioners he would have been roughly handled. Satisfied that she had been sufficiently revenged, Miss Gannon left the building with some friends. In the street she was met by her father, who asked her if she had given it to him.

"Yes," she replied, "and good, too. He has injured me, and I guess I have cut him well for it."

Miss Gannon went home with her father. Lenhart is 21 years old, and is married.

THE DEATH OF EDITOR GREENE

Calls Forth Resolutions of Respect from the Boston Journalists.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the Boston daily press Col. Edmund Worthington, of The Traveler, in the chair, Col. Clapp, of The Journal, briefly announced the death of Col. Greene, for many years connected with the Boston press. Appropriate remarks were made by the members. Col. Charles H. Taylor, of The Globe, offered the following memorial of respect, which was unanimously adopted:

In the death of Col. Charles Gordon Greene, for many years the oldest member of the Boston Press Association, we, as members of that association, recognize the loss not only of an honored associate, but of a distinguished member of the journalistic profession, an eminent citizen, a cultured, scholarly gentleman. We desire to express our high appreciation of those qualities of character, which, manifested throughout a long and useful career, gave him in so marked a degree the respect, esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens, and especially of his professional and kindred associates. To our minds the intelligence of his death comes with a deep sense of personal loss. We tender to the surviving members of his family our personal sympathy in the bereavement which has come to them, assuring them that their loss is also our own.

ANOTHER EARTHQUAKE.

Charleston Becomes Demoralized in Consequence—Hearing the 28th.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 28.—At 5:05 yesterday afternoon another shock of earthquake—the first heavy shock since Sept. 31—was felt here. The movement of the earth was evidently horizontal, and the tremor was accompanied by the usual rumbling sound, which could be distinctly heard for several seconds after the movement had ceased. Those who were out in the thoroughfares did not feel it, but those who were indoors felt the houses shaking, and those who were sitting on the ground down felt the motion of the earth very distinctly. Advices received from Savannah, Orangeburg and other points in the vicinity indicate that the shock was very general throughout eastern South Carolina and Georgia. Coming along almost on the eve of the Wiggins day—the 28th—the shake this evening has greatly demoralized the people here.

VANDERBILT'S NEW YACHT.

An Expensive but Elegant Pleasure Craft About Completed.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 28.—W. K. Vanderbilt's handsome yacht Alva, will, in all probability, be launched next Saturday. Her cost so far is said to be $250,000. She has been built entirely of steel and will rank in the highest class in the Lloyd shipping registry. She will have three masts and will be schooner rigged with a square top sail on the foremast. The crew and every thing else except the officers will be of the English type. The law requires that the officers shall be American citizens. They are as follows: Captain, Harry Morrison, late master of the American line steamship Ohio; chief officer, J. M. Cushing, formerly of the American and Red Star lines, and chief engineer, James H. Hand, late special United States inspector of foreign steam vessels.

Secretary Lamar's Nuptials.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Secretary Lamar will undoubtedly wed at an early day. He has leased the large four-story brick house, No. 1215 N street, from Capt. S. L. Brown for three years. The house is handsome and beautifully furnished, and within a square of Thomas circle, the best and most eligible part of the city.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
CARD TO THE PUBLIC.
This company is prepared to receive applications for lighting by electricity for incandescent lighting for both domestic and business purposes.
As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, in each section of the resident portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed. The dates at which domestic lighting will be commenced will depend upon what time the number of applications for light and heat warrant.
The supply to the business section of the city will probably be very shortly after the fulfillment of the contract with the city for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in connection with the company having consented to set back their building line after having commenced to build, which has caused the removal of the brick by five of material which cannot be immediately replaced.
The company has decided in lieu of expending money upon a convert for light consumers to appropriate the amount which would have been so used for that purpose in the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants requesting 600 lights, namely 300 in the business section and 300 in the residence section.
A large room has been rented from Mr. Mulford, real estate and insurance agent, 18 and 27 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will receive application and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 8.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6 p. m.

Queer Wrinkles.

Lawyer to witness—What is the defendant's character for veracity, Uncle Rastus?

Uncle Rastus—Veracity, sah! Why, I has seen dat Sam Johnsing eat a bull hash.

A BAD BREAK.

"You," said the chairman, sadly, "our temperance meeting last night would have been more successful if the lecturer hadn't been so almost intoxicated."

"What do you mean?"

"He tried to blow the foam from a glass of water."

A TRUSTWORTHY ANIMAL.

Liveryman to customer—Horse, sir, is as good a hoss as ever pulled a waggin. As' you needn't be afraid of him; he's puffectly safe as' reliable.

Customer eyeing the animal dubiously)—I don't know 'bout that. I'd hate to trust him with any oats.

WILLING TO DO WHAT HE COULD.

Madam (looking for cottage board)—You have plenty of pure milk, Mr. Haywed?

Mr. Haywed—Yesum.

Madam—I shall want milk from one cow for the baby. And eggs—have you plenty of fresh eggs?

Mr. Haywed—Yesum, but I don't believe I'll give 'em to you from one hen.

BUSINESS ENTERPRISE.

"What's the price of sausages?"

"Twenty cents a pound."

"You said twenty-five this morning."

"Ya; dot was ven I had some. Now I shall got most all mein hogs for twenty cents. Dot makes me a rebutation for selling cheap and I don'd lose noddings."

THE PERILS OF BOARDING.

"You look thoughtful to-night, Dumley," remarked Featherly, as he stretched himself on the bed.

"Yes," sighed Dumley. "I've just got a note from the landlady."

"What does she say?"

"She says that I must pay my back board at once or her daughter will sue me for breach of promise. I'm thinking what I'll better do.—New York Sun.

A Humorist's Trials.

A humorous lecturer is reported by The Philadelphia Times as relating this incident:

I gave the show in the hotel dining-room and had everybody roaring with laughter, except one awful, solute looking man, I tried my funniest page upon him and I was 'bout to awaken a gurgle or at least a smile. But all in vain. His face was as solemn as a tombstone through it all. After the show, he expressed surprise at my want of the real melody can come up and give me a congratulatory shake. "I must thank you, sir, for a very pleasant evening. Your performance was very clever. I should laugh, sir."

Artemus Ward used to tell a similar but a much better story. He said that once while on a lecture tour, night found him at a small town in Nevada. In the landlord of the hotel he recognized a friend of his boyhood who gave him a hearty greeting. Supper over the landlord said to his guest: "Now, Brown, we hardly ever have any show of any kind in this place, and I don't think we ever had a lecture. Can't you give us your lecture up in the hall room? It will please the people, and I'll call it a favor as a great favor if you will." With characteristic good nature, Artemus consented. The hall room was well filled when he rose to speak, and before he had been on his feet a minute he made an observation which provoked a roar of laughter. At which the landlord, his face white with rage, rose and shook his fist at the platform, with the remark: "One minute, Mr. Brown." Artemus paused, and the landlord having taken his place beside him, drove a revolver from the pocket of his coat before the audience, and: "Ladies and gentlemen, the speaker is a particular friend of mine, and if he's interrupted agin, d——— me if I don't shoot!" You can imagine the rest. Artemus proceeded, and although he gave them his funniest lecture, he reported that there was afterward no further "interruption."—New York Sun.

Died at His Post.

Some time last fall a well known huntsman here lost a very valuable pointer dog near Big Sewickley, and the most strenuous exertions made to find the animal proved fruitless, as finally he was given up as hopelessly lost. Last Monday the owner of the dog, in company with three other gentlemen, were traveling through a section of the Big Sewickley woods, when they came upon the skeleton of a dog in attitude, the left forepaw raised and the tail sticking out straight as a ramrod. His bones being left in position by the sun dried cords the[illegible]. The collar around the neck established beyond a doubt that the remains were those of the long lost one, and a further search brought to view, about a rod from the dog's nose, the bones and feathers of a pheasant. The mystery now became clear as day. With the wonderful mild instinctable instinct that controls birds and brutes, the pheasant had lain perdue, afraid to rise, while the dog, like the Roman sentry at Pompeii, had died at his post of duty. The hunter exhibits the recovered collar as proof positive of the truth of his story.—Pittsburg Sportsman's Referee.

The Clerk Could Go to Bed.

A countryman and his son "put up" at a city hotel. Son out seeing the town. Old man calls from his room at midnight and says to the night clerk:

"Has my son come in yet?"

Night Clerk—Guess not. Haven't seen him.

Old Gent—Well, you needn't set up for him any longer.—Texas Siftings.

Medicine Could Not Harm Him.

"Look heah, Unk Reub," said Dr. Jim, addressing an old negro, "yer knows dat I'se er graduate of de medical perfessuh, does yer?"

"Reckon dunno it."

"I'se yer color, ain't I? Well, den, why does yer 'pize me so yer don't 'tend to my own business? Yer wife's been sick, an' I'se come heah ter see her. Now, look heah, hesse go ter see de lady, an' I'll prescribe yer dat er I done do her no good I won't do her no harm."

"You does, does yer? Jes' wunts ter."

"All right; thankee, mh."

"Dar was er time when yer most er done her harm, but you hain' do it now."

"Why so?"

"Cose de lady died de mawnin', mh."—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE WORLD'S PROGRESS.

MOVEMENTS IN THE SCIENCES AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS.

Children Who Have Invented a Complete Language—Underground Wires in Europe—A British Surgeon Cures Epilepsy—How Artesian Wells are Bored.

The machinery for boring gas and artesian wells is now not uncommon. The great derrick and the steam engine puffing noisily away by its side are familiar objects in many landscapes.

It is for wells of over 1,000 feet deep, whether for gas, oil or water, that the large derricks are used. Sometimes several months are required to complete one of these deep wells. Motion is conveyed by belts from the engine to the boring machines.

The diameter of the well is generally 6 or 8 inches, but may be either smaller or greater, as desired, though seldom less than 3½ inches. All the tools and appliances for wells of several different diameters being regularly manufactured. The principle upon which the well is drilled is that of free falling tools, suspended by a cotton and worked by steam power, the weight of the tools shall be so great as to give blows of sufficient force to pierce the hardest rock.

MACHINERY FOR BORING DEEP WELLS.

It is to yield force to these falling tools that such great height is given to the derrick. The power from the engine is taken by a large band wheel, on one side of which is a crank that gives the up and down motion to the pitman working the walking beam that raises and drops the tools in the well in the operation of drilling, the crank having, as will be seen, several holes for connecting it with the pitman at different distances from its axis, to vary the length of strokes given by the walking beam.

The boring tools and a sand pump for bringing up the debris that is bored out go down into the bottom of the well. They are shown near the left of the illustration, just touching the derrick floor. A suction valve is at the bottom of the sand pump. The blow is given by the auger stem just above the bit. The stem engaged is omitted from the illustration. It stands at the right. The bands passing from it to the boring machinery are seen.

In the oil regions, for drilling a 5½-inch hole, generally from 50 to 60 joints of tools, the weight of the tools will be about 2,500 pounds. For a hole of 6 inches in diameter, 1,000 feet more is added, and through granite, flint and other hard formations, as is often necessary in drilling deep wells for water, the weight of the tools will be 3,000 pounds or more. In some of the hard formations found around New York, when deep wells were to be made of 6 to 8 inches in diameter, the heaviest tools ever yet employed in such work have been used, the weight of the string suspended from the derrick equaling 4,000 to 4,500 pounds.

SHALLOW WELL BORER.

Fig. 2 shows the machinery usually employed in boring for water and in wells 100 to 600 feet deep. For wells less than 300 feet deep horse power may be used to run the machinery. Below that it must be steam. A Kansas man has invented an important addition to well boring machinery. His improvement is called "fishing tools." They consist of a contrivance for removing obstructions or broken tools from the well.

Artesian wells are now being made all over the country. They solve the problem of water in many parts of the west, and consequently of converting desert into fertility. Once started the flow is often several hundred gallons of water per minute, and there is no perceptible diminution as the time goes on. The boring tools proper consist of a rope socket, sinker bar, jars, auger stem and bit. These are screwed together, forming the string of tools, and there is, in addition, the rope socket, screw, hung by a hook from the walking beam, and made to grasp the cable when the tools are down in the well. The jar is a device to prevent the bit from getting fast or becoming wedged in the rock.

Children Inventing a Language.

Strange stories of how children sometimes invent a language of their own are well authenticated. Twin boys were born to a respectable Boston family. Miss E. H. Watson, the writer, tells of them:

They were constantly together, and an intense affection existed between them. As the usual age, the autumnal equinox, "these twins began to talk, but, strange to say, not their 'mother tongue.' They had a language entirely their own, no parent could induce them to speak anything else. They persistently refused to utter a syllable of English. Their mother related how although she could not understand their language, she observed, by attention, to discover what they wished or meant." The important information is added that "even in that early stage, the language was complete and full; that is, it was all that was needed. The children were at no loss to express themselves in their plays—their 'chatterings' with each other all day." At last they were sent to a school, where they gradually learned English as children learn a foreign language, and the memory of their own speech faded from their minds.

Dr. E. R. Hun, of Albany, has given a clear and scientific account of a similar phenomenon, with specimens of the language. In this case the speech was invented by a little girl, aged 4½ years, in conjunction with her brother, aged 3 months, and named herself. About twenty of the words are given, most of which were used in several allied acceptations, as, man, meaning both cat and furry; wawa, water, wash, wash, bath; bus, soldier, music; ode, to send for, to go out, to take away; wata-senior, black, darkness, a negro. The language had its own forms of construction, as in wata-senior, "black fur" (literally furs dark) when the adjective follows its substantive. Dr. Hun adds: "The boys have language reached and freely, and when she is with her brother they converse with great rapidity and fluency."

Further inquiries have shown that such cases of true language are by no means uncommon, and these cases should, it is considered, are, after all, merely intensified forms of a phenomenon which is of constant recurrence.

Those who adhere to the doctrine of the pre-existence and repeated re-births of the same individual would explain the phenomenon by declaring that the children had brought the strange language with them from other spheres and other lives.

Underground Wires in Europe.

In Paris the excellent system of drains enables the telegraph engineer to lay his wires in lead pipes fastened to the top of the arch. Throughout the whole of Germany the exigencies of war and civil life led to the formation of the underground system of telegraph wires in 1868. In Vienna both telegraph and telephone wires are carried in leaden pipes on the front of the houses. In London most of the telegraph wires are buried, but the chief nuisance there, like here in Berlin, arises from the overhead wires. These are broken daily. It is cheaper to swing a wire in mid-air than to carry it underground, for three reasons: First, the aerial line need not be insulated; secondly, the cost of tubing and of excavation is avoided; and, thirdly, the engineer can take short cuts overhead instead of being compelled to follow all the awkward angles of the streets. The underground overhead wires in Europe are doomed.

JOTTINGS.

—A young cyclone passed over the city shortly after one o'clock this morning, the wind blowing a perfect gale.

—Those who wish to become card-holders at the Public Library can obtain the proper blanks at the library on Friday morning, October 1st.

—Thatcher, Primrose and West minstrels last evening had their usual full house, at Stillman Music Hall—a large audience, whose they greatly amused.

—Messrs. Ford & Stiles, the undertakers, not to be behind the times, have purchased a handsome new hearse. The vehicle arrived on Monday evening.

—The Park Avenue Social Club has secured more commodious quarters over City Judge Ulrich's office on East Front street, and moved thereto Monday evening.

—An aged man slipped on an apple peeling in Mr. Ira Powell's store on West Front street yesterday afternoon and fell heavily on the sidewalk, but fortunately escaped serious injury.

—Articles of incorporation were drawn up yesterday by City Judge Ulrich, incorporating the Women's Christian Temperance Union of this city. The papers were filed in the county clerk's office in Elizabeth to-day.

—Mr. R. V. Seaman is putting up two pretty new houses on Tenth street for Leo Daft, the electrician. The houses are near the corner east of Putnam avenue, and are to be finished by January 1st. Mr. Seaman has also just finished a new house on Fifth street, near Liberty, for James Keet's of Fourth street.

—A visitor remarks that the drive from Plainfield to Fanwood and from thence to the city again by way of the Valley road, combines a better roadway, more beautiful surroundings, and more picturesque scenery than can be found in any other part of this State, and far surpassing the mountain scenery of the famed Delaware Water Gap.

—The result of the Democratic State Convention at Trenton yesterday was freely discussed in this city last evening. The baker's dozen who comprise the Green element was highly elated over the result of the contest for Gubernatorial honors, while the anti-Green element of the Democracy had but little to say. Betting was freely indulged in during yesterday, but very little odds was offered by either side. A prominent Democrat of this city was asked last evening how he liked the nomination of Green for Governor, "I do not like it," said he, "and I'll vote for the other man, whoever he may be."

—Mrs. Anna Kennedy of Newark is employed as a domestic in a family on East Front street. Together with her child they occupy 4 rooms in the top of the building, and about seven o'clock last evening Mrs. Kennedy alleges a strange man, whom she describes as being tall and slim, entered her bed chamber and assaulted her. The child's cries attracted the attention of the inmates of the house, who went to her relief and found the woman lying apparently helpless on the floor, and to whom she related the above circumstances. The woman at once informed the police of the affair and telegraphed to her husband at Newark. The police have been made by the woman is absorbed by the police.

—Justice Mottyns has rendered his decision in the case brought by Mrs. S. C. Littlestern vs. Harry Cooch to recover three months' rent for house on East Front street. The case was tried before Justice Mottyns on Friday and Saturday last, and reserved at the time. The complainant testified at the trial to having verbally leased the house to the defendant for one year, payments to be made quarterly, and after occupying the house for one month and eighteen days, the defendant moved out, leaving the rent unpaid, and even for the remainder of April, May and June that the case was brought about. The defence claimed to have been driven from the place by vermin, and produced witnesses to substantiate his statement. Justice Mottyns, after reserving his decision for the purpose of satisfying his mind upon the law or on the subject, has rendered judgment in favor of the complainant for $75 together with the costs of prosecution.

Knocked Down and Robbed.

Numerous complaints of depredations committed by tramps both in this city and the borough of late were heard the author ities last night themselves in ridding this locality of the nuisance. Several arrests were made in the borough a few weeks ago and the offenders were sent to Somerville jail. This was thought to have a telling effect on the band of tramps, but instead of going about from place to place in North Plainfield, and who were finally forced to seek more secluded quarters. Some weeks ago a rendezvous was located along the brook in the rear of Mr. D. M. Roop's residence on West Front street where tramps congregate daily and loiter along the banks of the brook and at night ply their vocation of stealing whatever they can. Yesterday morning a man apparently about fifty years of age was met upon by four of these burly tramps in the rear of Mr. Roop's residence and gagged and robbed. Mr. Roop who was at home at the time says he saw the tramps attack the man and hastened to the place but before he arrived there the men had accomplished their design and taken to the woods. The man, whom name could not be ascertained, had a Mr. Roop that he was knocked down and his mouth stuffed with wadding. The robbers stole $18.40, all the money he had, together with some new articles of clothing which he had just purchased. Mr. Roop says the man was evidently employed by a farmer, had been to town to make some purchases and was attacked and robbed on his way home. He says the man did not appear to be seriously injured by the rough treatment he received, but seemed to be thoroughly worked up by the shock.

Thrown from Their Carriages.

Gideon R. Giles, one of the partners of the firm of L. D. Cook & Co. of Bound Brook, in company with his wife, was returning from New Brunswick on Monday evening, when a spirited horse, on Monday evening, when their vehicle was run into by a carriage belonging to William Hoffman of Bound Brook. Both wagons were overturned and the occupants hurled with great force into the ditches on either side of the roadway. Mr. Morrison was slightly injured, and Mr. and Mrs. Giles received severe bruises about the head and body. Mr. Morrison's horse broke from his surroundings and ran all the way to New Brunswick.

—Plainfield's delegation to the Gubernatorial Convention arrived home on the 7.30 p. m. train last evening, apparently not in the best of spirits.

—The next attraction at Music Hall, and one of the most important of the season is that of the McCaull Opera Co. in the "Black Hussar." Seats on sale to-morrow morning.

—Fred. Farrin, whose card among our estimationals appears to-day, is enthusiastically spoken of by those who know him here as a man of distinguished ability and success in teaching language.

—The annual convention of the New Jersey Sexton will take place at Phillipsburg, N. J., to-day. Ex-Chief T. O. Doane, Chief Salvanus and Sexton Hedmann are among the delegates from this city.

—David W. Silvers has been nominated to the office of mayor by the Prohibitionists of Elizabeth. To-night the Prohibitionists in the First and Second Districts of Union county will nominate an Assemblyman.

—A baby carriage left standing in front of a North avenue store yesterday morning was overturned by the wind and rolled over into the gutter. An infant was in the carriage at the time, but escaped serious injury.

—A young man named Michael McCarthy was severly burned on his right arm while lighting a fire with kerosene oil at Dixon's on West Front street yesterday afternoon. The wound was dressed in Mr. W. W. Cornell's, adjoining.

—A large and beautiful water-color drawing of the proposed new Hillside cemetery is on exhibition at the office of Messrs. A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue. The drawing was executed by Mr. F. G. Moeller of Nassau, N. Y., and is a beautiful piece of workmanship. It pictures all the various buildings, driveways, mounds, fountains, etc., together with a bird's-eye-view of Plainfield.

—The heavens to the south of the city were brilliantly illuminated about one o'clock this morning, which caused people to suppose that a large fire was in progress. The illumination was pronounced by Dean Rodman and the colonists retired to their homes tranquilized and pleased.

PERSONAL.

Mr. G. J. Muller, a resident of Rahway, but doing business in New York city, was severely injured on the head Monday night while jumping from a train which did not stop at Rahway.

About twenty-five invited guests were present at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Van Dyke of East Front street on Monday evening, the occasion being the tenth anniversary of their marriage. A collation was served and a good time had by those present.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Will Bailey, who died at the residence of his parents on West Third street during Monday morning, took place from St. Mary's church at half-past nine o'clock this morning. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

At the Democratic State convention held at Trenton yesterday William H. Hadley of Bridgeton was appointed vice-president from Somerset county, and Judge I. F. Wodenworth of this city was appointed as a member of the committee on Permanent Organization from Union county.

Mrs. Henriette Bottenhamer died at her home on Somerset street, near Dover, which, during eighty-four years, had been her only home. Deceased was almost fifty years of age at the time of her death and had been ailing for a long time. Fully half a dozen clergymen had formed in the region of the afternoon within a year past, and Dr. Long was among the physicians. Deceased is a sister of Mrs. Conrad Mosley with a view of prolonging her life.

W. C. T. U.

Proceedings of the Ninth Anniversary.

In spite of the fulsome heat last evening a large number of people assembled in Reform Hall to celebrate the ninth anniversary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. After an anthem by the Dunham Choristers Mrs. A. M. Powell read the Scriptures and Rev. W. K. Honeyman offered prayer. Congregational singing followed, after which Mrs. Powell made the annual address, delivered her annual address. She spoke of the organization of the union and then of the year's work. Mr. Ebsell's efforts on Sabbath observance had been greatly blessed. The other prayer meetings were kept up through all the year and were well attended and greatly benefited. The kitchen garden work was commended and the cooking department a great success. The liquor mission had performed a great work. The winter's course of lectures was not only financially successful but universally pleased. Some very interesting facts were given to show that temperance men would be greatly benefitted by prohibition. The Y. W. C. T. U. was organized during the year and was rapidly growing, and everywhere popular. The department of Social Purity was a new one, but one of great importance. Several recommendations were made and the duty of studying hygiene insisted on. The Union Signal was warmly commended and all urged to subscribe. Thanks were given to the sisterworkers for their kindness and dainty refreshments and a fine tribute was paid to the former president, Mrs. J. W. Yates. The entire address was listened to attentively, and was an admirable and comprehensive summary of the year's work, creditable alike to the president and the union. It was full of information, and was read in a clear and distinct voice so that every one in the hall heard every syllable. A beautiful solo was then warmly rendered by Mrs. J. K. Myers in a style that charmed the hearers and called forth much praise.

Mrs. Ella F. Poole of New York city was introduced and at once captivated her audience, by her easy and pleasant manner and forcible and well chosen words. She said that in Pennsylvania a family had a cat and two kittens, which suddenly disappeared. After searching it was discovered that a pilot snake had destroyed the kittens and the mother cat at once began to destroy snakes. So the liquor traffic destroys our children and we propose to destroy that traffic. That was the reason why the W. C. T. U. lived. The tariff is a great question, but not one-tenth as important as the question of protecting the home. In Michigan they want salt protected, but not in New York. In Ohio they want the wool protected, but not in the east. Men can't agree as to the things to be protected, but women can. Women feel that the home should be protected, and all agree as to the protection needed, viz: prohibiting liquor selling. Wooden blocks were exhibited to show the amount spent for bread, meat, clothing, shoes, sugar, tea and coffee, education, missionaries, tea, missionary societies, tobacco and the liquor bill, and the block representing the liquor bill was far longer than any other.

There is $600,000,000 spent directly for rum, and as much more indirectly, and only $100,000,000 million for education. Destroy rum and our land would be saved. Destroy rum and our land would be saved. Where blessed. Use that $600,000,000 aright and see what a blessing it would be. Consider and how soon hard times would depart. Every church in the land is in favor of Prohibition and we must stand by the church and stand up for prohibition. This evil is protected by law, and therefore we must change the law and so save our children. We must vote down this curse. Only ballots could save our nation. When in Colonial history were men unable to lift a day's beam the master-builder cried to the women to help, and then it was put in place. The women put in the ballot, and the cause of prohibition will be put in its place in due time. In the Roman army it was death to leave the ranks. At times the commander would seize it and hurl it amidst the enemy, whereupon the soldiers would rush for it and win the battle. Let the women help in, and then secure a victory. So now our ballot has been buried into the midst of the enemy, and it is death to flee. Let the women go forth and secure it, and by securing it we gain a victory over the saloon and save our nation.

The business of the session of the day was brilliantly illuminated about one o'clock this morning, which caused people to suppose that a large fire was in progress. The illumination was pronounced by Dean Rodman and the colonists retired to their homes tranquilized and pleased.

Somerset County Courts.

The Fall term of the Somerset County Courts opened at Somerville yesterday morning before Judge Magie and associate Judges Cutler and Judge Magie delivered the charge to the jury, particularly setting forth the different degrees of murder and manslaughter and also stating what constitutes a riot, a rout and an unlawful assembly, the latter referring to the recent riot in the borough. The most important cases for the term is the trial of an old woman charged with murdering her husband at Bound Brook. After charging the jury Judge Magie adjourned court until Friday morning at ten o'clock. Meanwhile the Grand Jury will remain in session. The following is a list of the names that are announced:

Supreme Court Cases—James N. Pidcock vs. The New York, Lake Erie & Western Railroad Co.; Chas. Bodwell vs. Martin Weber, et als.; John Dayton vs. Helen Webster, implanded; Carl Polak vs. Caroline Herbert and Samuel Herbert.

Circuit Court Cases—James T. Hoagland vs. Alfred Percell, Jr. (plevi.); William Zeh vs. William L. Tompkins (plevi.); Peter Q. Hoagland vs. Peter W. Young, in Scire; Peter Q. Hoagland vs. Peter W. Young, in Scire; Abram S. Meyrick, assignee of William H. Gaskill vs. Chauncey P. Williamson, court; The Millstone Turnpike Co. vs. Jacob Young, court; William J. Conroy vs. Thomas R. Shaw, court; Adolph Wasserman vs. John Cooke, court; John S. Applegate and Edward Baker administrators of David G. Vanderveer, deceased vs. Paul Boardway, court.

Hot for Philadelphia.

To-morrow morning at 7.30 a. m. a special train will leave for Perseverance Lodge of this city will leave for Philadelphia. Unless the weather is stormy the train will positively leave. A cloudy and cool day will be preferred to a hot one for excursionists. Arrangements have been perfected to have the train stop at the most convenient points so that guests can get off who desire to spend the day at Fairmount Park and the Centennial buildings. Excursionists can also by securing their tickets at the Zoological Garden, obtain admission for 20 cents, children eight cents. It is believed that this will be one of the most popular excursions which has ever left our city. No pains have been spared to obtain low rates for the benefit of the excursionists, whereby the excursionists can gain admission for 25 cents, a reduction of 10 per cent from usual rates. The procession is invited on Chestnut street near Twenty-second street.

Justices' Court Notes.

An action upon contract case brought by Sherwin vs. DeCamp will come up for trial before Justice Nash of this week.

The following cases, all brought to recover debts, which have been long since before Justice Nash Monday have been adjourned over: Gaylord vs. Warnock, Oct. 5th; Gaylord vs. Wyckoff, Oct. 8th; Gaylord vs. Weber, Oct. 4th; Gaylord vs. Udall, Gaylord vs. McCarty, Oct. 24.

The cases of Gaylord vs. Terry and Gaylord vs. Hallenbeck were settled by the defendant in each case paying into court the full amount of the claims, together with the costs of the prosecution.

—The stone flagging in front of the post office has been relaid and its appearance is greatly improved thereby.

—An obnoxious odor is emitted from a vacant lot at the corner of Third and New streets which is very offensive to a sensitive person passing in that vicinity.

—Theodore Gray, the builder, has finished this summer two houses on Park Place, and is now having another house erected for him by Mr. Baum, the builder, to the same locality.

WESTFIELD.

Adam Miller has sold out his pool rooms to H. Ides of Bayonne.

Chas. F. Conant and his son, Foster E., have gone for another visit to Saratoga.

John Ingram, jr., is still confined to his bed, but a change for the better has taken place.

Miss L. Fitzer of Plainfield, who has been visiting her friend, Miss Emma Darch, has closed her visit and returned home.

Joseph Moffatt has rented the last one of Mr. Bird's cottages on Elm street to Charles F. Conriney. Mr. Moffatt and family will begin building on Broad and Downer streets.

Ghosts are around at West End. Wm. Day says that one of them threw a pail of water on him, but Chief Runyon says that on the nights following he was pulled out of bed. If this keeps up he says he is going to remove from that neighborhood.

STATE NOTES.

Charles Gallishe, a veteran of the war and well known in Newark, died yesterday.

Thomas Elliott, a well known resident of Mendham township, was thrown from his horse on Monday night and instantly killed.

The Newark Trades Assembly has nominated Ed. Hughes for Tax Commissioner, John Crosby for Water Commissioner, and John W. Gill Trustee of City House.

John Magee, aged three years, was blown in the nose and cheeks yesterday afternoon on a gun, which was discharged by a savage dog. The child's face was badly burned and by the brute's teeth. Officer McCracken shot the brute. The boy's wounds were sewed up.

The women enfranchised by escaping gas Sunday night at Rogers's Hotel, Hoboken, is said to have been a Mrs. Wilson, wife of an engineer on the Hoboken ferry. It is believed that the committed suicide. A lady who visited the room found the woman dead and the gas escaping. She called for help and the family rushed to suppress.

Eighty ribbon weavers in the Pioneer Silk Mills at Paterson struck yesterday because the firm refused to discharge a girl with whom they objected. Every effort had been made to avoid a strike, but the girl was retained in spite of a committee of men that waited upon the proprietors. The girl, they had been informed, was a spy, and they had been ordered to discharge her. Their refusal to do so has set work.

All rooms open for Fall and Winter guests by 1886 and will, notwithstanding the urgent demand for the public good not be allowed to falter in my endeavors to make of the Park House in fact as in name, April 30th, 1886.—Tested Park House, made thorough renovation of water and sewer pipes and plumbing and found everything in excellent condition. The cellar, 6-4 here, inspected and found in good condition. Also, was a credit to model houses, having evidently been kept in order and not a case of sickness in the house. Have cleaned great number of rooms in my time and am familiar with the Park House as a credit to our city.

LORD LONSDALE TALKS

HE WOULD LIKE THE AMERICANS TO SPEAK WELL OF HIM.

His Relations to the Jealous Frenchman and His Handsome Wife—He is After Gold—Only That and Nothing More—But Would Fight if Necessary.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Miss Violet Cameron's husband, David De Bensaude, got out of bed in the Morton house at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and went up to Delmonico's and breakfasted with Business Manager Lord Lonsdale. Violet Cameron and her sister, Miss Constance Loseby, were at their new quarters in the Hotel Madison. Although Lord Lonsdale had engaged rooms at the Madison, he did not occupy them.

Miss Cameron does not regard herself as ejected from the Hoffman house. She states that she desired to be nearer the Casino, and she would have made a change anyway.

Lord Lonsdale, in speaking of De Bensaude's frequent visits to him since the arrived on Sunday, said last night:

"Perhaps De Bensaude is pleased to see my boy. Of course, I don't know that he is, for he hasn't asked me for any money. If he did he wouldn't get a confounded cent. Of course, he has come nearer to me since the trouble, but in his conviction he has never led up to it yet. The Bensaude or Bensaude or What's-his-name—I hardly know—first asked me to act as a witness. I positively refused to see my wife. There was some trouble between them over some funds, and they wanted me to act as trustee. I had known Miss Cameron for a number of years, and all I could do to help them through the rumpus. Then this man tried to drag my family into his affairs, and finally attempted to blackmail me. He got out of Paris in a hurry some months ago and had me fined forty shillings in a Newcastle police court. After that he got up the story that I had been criminally intimate with his wife in order to blackmail me. He is anxious to talk about me when I am not present, but you ought to see how slow and quiet he is when I am on hand. He knows that not a word or a word of truth in his story about the relations between his wife and myself. The fact that he calls upon me to offer ought to convince people of that. No, I don't care what people say of me. I should like them to speak well of me, and particularly the people here, but if they are bent on disliking they can, and right welcome will they be.

"My wife knows exactly my relations with Miss Cameron and this opera company. She knows and trusts me. That is all I care for. Lady Lonsdale has been very ill or she would have come over with me. I expect she will join me here just as soon as she is well enough. I should like them to speak well of us, and particularly the people here, but if they are bent on disliking they can, and right welcome will they be.

"I do not like to say harsh words, but I should like to say that when Mr. Stokes spoke to Miss Cameron and advised her to leave his hotel, saying that De Bensaude was hanging around with a pistol to shoot her, he did a cruel act. Miss Cameron is highly sensitive and very nervous, and Mr. Stokes carried off to this hotel. I have taken adjoining rooms in order to prevent De Bensaude from annoying her.

"And all the reason I had for taking the rooms was that De Bensaude threatened to crack my head if I took rooms in the same hotel with Miss Cameron. My head is not cracked yet, you see, and I have not yet decided to let De Bensaude shoot me if he really believes down deep in his heart that my relations with Miss Cameron are not other than those of business manager of her opera company. He has not shot me yet. I'll say a thousand to one that I can make a shot useful, but I am not anxious to have Jack in the street I should brush him aside and have as little of a scene as possible. I want it understood that I am in this thing only as a business matter. I am to make 10 per cent of it. Of course, De Bensaude has got to make a livelihood, but he will not make it out of me if I can help myself."

Lord Lonsdale, Miss Cameron and Miss Loseby had supper at the Hotel Madison at midnight, and then Lord Lonsdale strolled down Broadway in his room in Delmonico's.

Ten of the chorus girls of the Cameron Opera company saw "Erminie" at the Casino last night. Lord Lonsdale's valet in a silk hat was also present.

To Investigate the Fisheries.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—The sub-committee of the committee of foreign relations of the United States senate has gathered here to confer on the preliminaries of the investigation on the fishery question in accordance with the vote passed at the last session. Senator Edmunds, chairman, presided. The other members are Senators Morgan, of Alabama, Frye, of Maine, Dawes, of Mass., and Saulsbury, of Delaware. They will consider the fishery question in general but have not yet decided as to the order of procedure. The sessions will be public or private is yet undecided.

To Harmonize With Trades Unions.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—At a conference of the committee of the National and International Trades unions with the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, for the purpose of arranging for action at the forthcoming general assembly at Richmond, positive assurance was received from General Master Workman Powderly and other members of the executive board that they would use every endeavor to establish satisfactory relations with the trades unions. The committee has issued an address to the trades unions on the subject.

Another Comet Discovered.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—Dr. Krueger, of Kiel, Germany, has received a dispatch from the Cape of Good Hope announcing the discovery of a comet, on the 26th inst., by Professor Finlay. Its position on that date, 6 hours Greenwich time, was right ascension, 17 hours 2 minutes 3 9-10 seconds; declination south, 26 degrees 1 minutes 6 seconds. Its daily motion was 29 minutes of arc in right ascension and 3 minutes south. It is described as being one minute in diameter with central condensation and very faint. Its shape is circular.

Gould's Indictments Not All In.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 29.—Ex-Cashier Gould of the bankrupt Canal bank of Gardiner will be taken to the circuit court to answer to the indictment found against him by the grand jury. As this was the last day of the term of the jury Mr. Gould did not care to plead till he could hear what other indictments would be found, and no attempt is being made to secure his bail. The grand jury will report more indictments. Expert Lemoon, of Boston, is going over the accounts of the bank from by Rem.

A Session Who Rolls a House.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 29.—The mystery of a constant rolling motion in the residence of Senator Sound in the poor box of St. Albans fashionable episcopal church here was dispelled by a detective, who arrested himself in the night time and found Senator Sound for twenty years sexton of the church, in the act of stealing from the box. The senator, although he has but a small salary, has built a fine house. He admitted his guilt to the rector.

CIGARMAKERS WANT

Labor Union Labels to be Abolished. Other Matters.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—The cigar manufacturers' convention was called to order by President Helman, of the National Cigar Manufacturers' association. A resolution that all members be requested to register all future trade marks in the labor bureau of the Legal Protective association of New York, and said bureau to be open for inspection, was adopted.

A resolution to the effect that congress should abolish the tax on cigars was reported adversely. A national discussion ensued on the committee's report, and the report was finally postponed indefinitely.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Frye, proposing a label for the use of such manufacturers as may desire it. The resolution was rejected. A resolution abolishing the drummer's tax was adopted. A resolution asking for the passage of a national bankruptcy law was adopted. Also one providing for the establishment of an industrial school for instruction in apprenticeship. A resolution favoring the apprenticeship system was carried, the original resolution being lost. A resolution favoring abolition of the stamp on imported cigars was adopted.

A resolution was introduced by Mr. Gumpert, abolishing the use of labor organization labels. Adopted.

An executive committee was appointed, consisting of Edward Hyman, New York, chairman; George C. Frain, Reading; R. Barron, Baltimore; Solomon Roth, Cincinnati; Oscar Piles, Rochester, N. Y.; Albert Gumpert, Philadelphia; Frank Melroy, New York; R. Mowne, Philadelphia; David Hirsch, New York.

It was decided that the next convention shall be held in Baltimore, in the last week of October, 1887.

STAMPS ON BEER KEGS

Causes a Lockout of Coopers in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 29.—The men employed in Phillip Goerre's cooper shop have been locked out for several days past. The question at issue is one of general interest to manufacturers, and is one that is attracting widespread attention. The difference, as stated by Mr. Goerres, is that he employs Knights of Labor coopers, and that one of the clauses in the agreement between employer and workmen is that the union stamp shall be affixed to every keg made in his shop. The men insist that the stamp shall not be placed on the kegs until they are sold. He says that each keg he branded as it is made. He now has 2,000 kegs in stock and in six months he will have 5,000 more. He has contracted kegs in his shop, and that he will be under the control of the men, as unstamped kegs are unsalable. Mr. Goerres locked out his employes in preference to placing himself in this predicament. The master workman of the coopers' assembly, Knights of Labor, supports the men in their position and, as the manufacturers will oppose the stand taken by the Knights, further trouble is expected.

United American Mechanics.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 29.—The forty-second annual session of the United American mechanics is in progress in this city. There are delegates present from the states of Virginia, West Virginia, California, New Hampshire, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and other states. The report of the committee on credentials favored the admission of eighteen newly-elected delegates representing Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland constituted the business of the first day.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: National councillor, Charles H. Spate, of Baltimore; vice-national councillor, James R. Ritchie, Philadelphia; secretary, John Zerver, Philadelphia; treasurer, James H. Shinn, New Jersey; marshal, John W. Hinkle; assistant marshal, Thomas Bolton; Wright, New Jersey; doorkeeper, Thomas Nichols, Massachusetts.

A motion was made to strike the word "mechanics" out of the title of the order making the name "The Order of United Americans." This will be acted upon to-day.

Trouble About the Garfield Monument.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29.—The erection of the Garfield monument continues to interest the people, and the matter is being discussed very freely since the exposure of the shoddy work of the trustees and contractor in the building of the shaft. It is understood that suits are soon to be brought to collect back to the fund to compel the trustees of the monument to reveal the price agreed upon for its erection. They have been figuring on the cost, basing their estimate on the claim that some $20,000 will be saved by lopping off seventy-five feet at the top of the monument. That would be $266 per foot. At that rate the remaining 175 feet would cost $46,550. Allowing $25,000 for extras about the base and the $20,000 for interior decoration, the monument will be finished. They believe that the contract price will not exceed $90,000.

Janitor Titus on Trial.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Sept. 29.—The trial of James Titus, janitor of the Methodist college, at Hackettstown, for the assault upon and murder of Tillie Hull, a student at the college, on the night of April 5, began here yesterday. The case attracts much interest and a large crowd was present. It will be remembered that the girl, who had gone to a party on the evening of April 6, was found dead in the college grounds the next morning with evidences of assault and murder. Physicians were summoned, who made an examination and who is supposed to have been aroused by the girl when she sought admission on entering from the party. Titus is defended by J. G. Shipman and Ira and by Mr. Beasley, son of the chief justice of this state.

Wait For Diplomatic Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The state department is said to intend to take the position that the information in possession of the government is not sufficient to warrant a revocation of the presidential proclamation of 1884 proclaiming neutrality in Cuba against Spain. The only information of Spain's failure to adhere to her part of the agreement comes indirectly through a branch of the Cuban government, and it is claimed that diplomatic correspondence should precede any action by this government.

That Bogus Treaty.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Both the authorities at the British foreign office and the members of the American legation authorize the statement that the published reports circulated concerning the conclusion of a treaty containing the settlement of the Canadian fishery questions are wholly without foundation, and that no treaty has been proposed by either government.

A Pitiable Flight.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—The officers of the Humane society have found a 5-year-old boy named Freddie Quinn, at 26 Castle street, lying covered with filth and vermin. A raw sore on his head contained hundreds of maggots. The boy's father, a boiler maker, will probably be arrested for neglecting the child, whose condition is serious.

STATE CONVENTIONS.

New Jersey and Connecticut Democrats Make Nominations.

CLEVELAND AND GREEN

Head the Two Tickets For Governor of Their States.

Large Attendance at Both Conventions and a Nomination on the First Ballot in Each Case—The Candidates and the Platforms Adopted for the Campaign.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 29.—The New Jersey Democratic State convention held here yesterday nominated Leon Abbett, of Hudson, S. Green of Elizabeth as the Democratic candidates for Governor.

The large and comfortable opera house, and the opposition was very bitter but not sufficiently strong to defeat Green, who was nominated on the first ballot. Mr. Green, however, is universally discovered that they were no one on for such wire-pullers as Mike Ryan and Billy Gray, they did the only thing they considered possible, left the convention poll un-ll, refusing to make the nomination unanimous. Gray declared that he would do all he could to defeat the objectionable candidate. The representation from all sections of the state was the largest in many years, and unusual interest was manifested in the proceedings. Taylor opera house was elaborately decorated for the occasion, and the gallery, whole body of the house was devoted to the delegates. The gallery was crowded with spectators. The weather was so warm that nearly every man had a fan. Over the heads of the delegates and many of the spectators took off their coats and endeavored to keep comfortable in their shirt sleeves. All the counties were called to order at 12:30 o'clock by Hon. Rufus Blodgett. Judge John W. Westcott, of Camden, was chosen temporary chairman. He addressed the convention in the style of Democracy, with a view to the best interests of the party. The two great questions to be solved, he said, were labor and the relations between capital and labor.

After the appointment of the various committees the convention took a recess preparatory to the permanent organization.

When the convention reassembled at 2:10 o'clock Hon. Allen L. McDermott, of Hudson, was chosen permanent chairman, and the permanent organization was completed.

Chairman McDermott spoke briefly against corporate monopoly and aggressive capital and in favor of labor organizations.

A report of the committee on credentials was adopted admitting nine more delegates from Essex and Hudson counties respectively and three more from Cape May county, thus giving one delegate from each polling precinct. This increased the total number of delegates from 698 to 850, making 339 necessary to a choice.

The committee on resolutions reported a platform, which expressed regret at the removal from office of United States internal revenue generals and statesmen—including Grant, McClellan, Hendricks, Hancock, Seymour and Tilden, indorsed the administration of Governor Abbett, condemned the importation of convict and pauper labor, applauded the efforts of the Democratic members of representative to restore public lands, commended popular education, sympathized with labor in its contest with capital, favored a reduction of the public debt and eulogized the work of Parnell and Gladstone and Parnell in their struggle to secure the natural right of self-government for the Irish people.

The counties were then called in alphabetical order to nominate candidates for governor. When Atlantic county nominated Judge Robert H. Green, of Egg Harbor, it sounded the keynote of the convention. Other names were mentioned, including those of Rufus Blodgett, of Monmouth; Augustus W. Cutler, of Morris; Andrew Hillegas, John McGregor and David Dodd, of Essex; Judge John W. Westcott, of Camden; Charles E. Hendrickson, of Burlington, and John Hopper, of Passaic. The progress of the first ballot showed Judge Green to be far in advance of all competitors, and before the result could be announced there was a general stampede and changing of votes in his favor. He had received 366 votes, being 7% more than a majority, against 145 for Blodgett, the second in the race.

An effort was made at the start to make the nomination unanimous, amid vigorous "noes," from the delegates who had stood down whose objections the band struck up and played vigorously as the convention adjourned, about the fri. n's of Green followed.

SKETCH OF THE CANDIDATE.

Robert S. Green, the nominee, was born at Princeton, N. J., March 26, 1831. He was graduated from the College of N. J. in 1850 and admitted to the bar in 1853. From 1857 to 1861 he was City Attorney of Elizabeth, and from 1861 to 1863 was Mayor. In 1872 he was a member of the city council of the same municipality. He was Surrogate of Union county from 1863 to 1868, and Presiding Judge of the Union Common Pleas from 1868 to 1873. In the latter year he was a member of the convention which framed the present constitution of the state. He was a member of the law firm of Brown, Hall & Vanderpool of New York city, in 1874, and afterward of the firm of Hall, Green & Cassing, of the same city, with which he is at present associated.

The first ballot for delegates-at-large to the Republican convention was declared by Senator McPherson, Governor Abbett and Miles Ross.

THE CONNECTICUT CONVENTION

Paid Their Respects to the President and Nominated Governor Lounsbury.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—The Democratic state convention was called to order at the New Haven opera house yesterday by Hon. Isaac Toucey, chairman of the state central committee, who presided at once to business by calling to the chair Hon. A. R. Burr, of Hartford, who had been selected by the committee. Mr. Burr's remarks, cheered had been given the chairman, he addressed the convention, congratulating the party on the flattering prospects, which, he said, seemed to promise success to the Democratic party in the state and country. He reviewed the last national campaign, and said that fortunate indeed was it for the welfare of the country that the man who was then chosen by the votes of the Democrats and of the Independents, who felt that the time had come when it was their duty to abandon their party and its principles, was now their country. As Democrats, whose principles are the principles of the constitution, we thank those Independents for the aid they render.

In the man who was succeeded they have not been disappointed. We look for no perfection in any individual, but we have found Cleveland true to his records. His administration has been clean. He has adhered to the limitations of the constitution and is growing stronger in the confidence of the people.

After a platform and sundry resolutions were adopted, the following nominations were made: Honorable Edward Sylvester Cleveland, of Cleveland, was nominated for governor, receiving 340 of the 380 ballots cast. The nomination was made unanimous by acclamation amid tremendous applause.

T. W. Alsop, of Middletown, was nominated for lieutenant governor by acclamation. Other nominations were: R. F. Mahon, of New London, for secretary of state; Samuel Bradley, of Stamford, for treasurer, and Dr. R. I. Griswold, of Rocky Hill, for comptroller.

POTOMAC RIVER ROWERS.

Winners of Events in the Annual Regatta.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The fifth annual Potomac river regatta was rowed yesterday, under the most favorable auspices. Though the air was balmy, the heat was tempered by a strong southeasterly breeze, which, however, only rippled the surface of the water. All the races were a mile and a half, straight away.

The first race was a four-oared gig race between the Columbias, of Washington, and the Jesse, of Philadelphia, which was won by the former by two lengths. Time 9:37 1-4.

The junior four-oared race was won by the Potomacs, of Washington, beating the Alcyons, of Elizabeth, N. J., by over half a length. Time, 9:16 3-4.

The junior single was won by Baker, of the Plate Printers, with Houston, of the Ionas, second, Northey and Reed, of the Potomacs, bringing up the rear. Time, 10:17 1-4.

The senior fours was won by the Potomacs, Columbias second and the Fairmounts, of Philadelphia, third. Time, 9:36 3-4.

The light weight fours was won by the Potomacs, Columbias and Analostans, of Washington, respectively second and third. Time, 9:24 1-4.

The senior single was won by Kearney, of the Potomacs, Baker, of the Plate Printers' association, second, and Noordsey, of the Potomacs, third. Time, 9:33.

The light-weight single was won by the Potomacs, the Columbias being 10 seconds behind. Time, 7:59 1-2.

NEW YORK'S TAX LEVY.

What the Assessors Find in the Matter of Appraisements.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The report of the state assessors, adopted by the state board of equalization, declares that the county returns of valuations for the year 1886 are very obviously untrue. This is especially the case with New York county, where it is a notorious fact that the total value of property has increased enormously, and a reduction of assessment is asked for. The assessors find that farming lands have decreased in value, as a whole, 20 per cent during the past fifteen years, while real estate in New York and Brooklyn has more than doubled in value. The assessors recommend that the legislature shall order a general assessment of real property of the state, amounting to $187,880,644, or about 5 per cent. on the total assessed value.

To Resist Eviction.

DUBLIN, Sept. 29.—The regular fortnightly meeting of the National league was held in this city yesterday. Mr. Harrington, M. P., treasurer of the league, announced that the receipts since the last meeting amounted to $15,000. He stated that he expected there would be a large increase in the number of evictions during the coming winter, and that he intended to devote all the above donations of those thereafter received to the relief of such sufferers. Mr. Dillon addressed the meeting. Mr. Dillon said that peace depended on the action of the landlords. Two thousand families already under notice of eviction during the winter months. It was, he contended, the imperative duty of the people to continue to resist within the law these evictions, whereby victory was certain.

Nominated for Congress.

SYRACUSE, N. Y. Sept. 29.—The Republican congressional convention of the Twenty-seventh district, comprising Oswego, Wayne and Cayuga counties, to-day at Lyons, renominated ex-Congressman Newton W. Nutting, of Oswego, by a vote of 23 to 13 for S. E. Payne, of Auburn, the present representative. Nutting's nomination was made unanimous.

TOLEDO, Sept. 29.—Hon. Frank Hurd was yesterday nominated for congress by the Democrats of the Toledo district. His opponent was Ellis, of Sandusky. Mr. Hurd was nominated on the first ballot.

Cincinnati Switchmen Strike.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 29.—After negotiating for several days the railroad switchmen have made a break in the situation and come out for their demands. Fifty switchmen employed in the yards of the Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Indianapolis and Chicago and Mississippi roads have quit work. They stated that at the last conference the officials had certain proposals which they failed to keep. On the Ohio and Mississippi road the trouble in reference to Sunday work. The men left quietly, and at the time of the day their places had not been filled. It is probable that the men in other yards will make a similar move to-day.

Fearful Work of a Storm.

RED CITY, Mich., Sept. 29.—Losses from Saturday's rain storm will amount to more than $100,000. At Carey, Mich., lightning struck a tree, which fell on a house occupied by James Barrows, killing his child and injuring his wife. Christopher Gable's barn, near Bad Axe, Mich., was visited by lightning Sunday night and totally destroyed with its contents. At Hersey the dam and bridge were carried out and Hall & Manning's steam saw mill was damaged. The railroad tracks were badly washed out all the way to the west of this county, but have been repaired and traffic resumed.

Ex-President Gowen in Politics.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—Ex-President F. B. Gowen has been nominated by Democrats for congress in the Schuylkill district of this state.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The first cabinet meeting for more than six weeks was held yesterday, Postmaster General Vilas, Secretary Lamar, Acting Secretary Fairchild and Acting Secretary Whitney being present in attendance. The meeting lasted two hours and a variety of minor questions were discussed.

The treasury department has decided that tobacco packed in round, corded bales packed and tied at the ends is sufficiently manufactured to be dutiable at forty cents per pound.

In every case submitted to him by the treasury department Acting Attorney General Jenks has decided that coverings used in transportation of merchandise are exempt from duty.

"The Dancing Derby."

The new plan choice it is made in Chicago by nailing four of the wooden legs under the rim of a man's hat by means of pins run through the cloth. On pieces of paper the letters of the alphabet are inscribed and on are the words "yes" and "no," or separate bits of paper. Persons with questionable or electrical qualities drive much fun from making the spirit-rappers words by hopping from letter to letter. The top is called "The Dancing Derby."—New York Press.

CHARLESTON UNEASY.

OCCASIONAL QUAKES CAUSE THE PEOPLE TO FEAR

That Possibly Wiggins May Hit With His Predicted Disturbance—Many People Went to Bed With Their Boots On—The Earth Cracks in Edgefield.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 29.—There have been further shocks felt here since 1:00 p. m. last night, but none with the two light shocks that one, happening yesterday, has caused a full fortnight's uneasiness throughout the general feeling of nervousness which prevailed in the city. A good many people who professed to have no faith in Wiggins are now beginning to think that perhaps he may be right after all. At any rate considerable anxiety is felt for what may come forth. That a great deal will be felt if no serious disturbances occur during the next twenty-four hours. Extra precautions were taken by a large number of persons in the way of getting ready for bed to sleep, and many went to bed with their boots on.

Advices were received here from Edgefield county which state that on Friday morning at 3 o'clock a very earth quiver was felt there about 2 o'clock. It was found after daylight that there were large cracks in the earth running north and south fifteen feet to fifteen hundred feet in length, and from one to three inches wide. From some of these cracks strong sulphurous smoke arises, and in one instance where one of these fissures passes through a cotton field the smoke or fumes arising therefrom has apparently killed all vegetation for fifteen or twenty feet on either side of the cracks.

The Boys Wanted to Go West.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—The 14-year-old colored boy, Warren Fuller, who placed an obstruction on the Providence railroad track near Clarendon Sept. 19, was arraigned to-day and held for the grand jury in $1,500 bail. He has confessed his crime, saying that he and three other boys, whom he refuses to name, put the obstruction on the track intending to wreck a train, rob the passengers, and go west with the proceeds.

Pastor Staunton's Trial.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 29.—The trial of Pastor Benjamin Staunton of the Fort Greene Presbyterian church for beating and choking his wife, and for allowing Mrs. Mary Laidler to remain at his house in opposition to the wishes of his wife, and treating her in a manner which caused his wife to be unhappy, was continued yesterday before the Brooklyn Presbytery, in the Franklin Avenue church.

A Boston Solvationist Dead.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—About a year ago Lawrence Burns, a member of the Boston Salvation corps, was kicked by a Cleveland street hoodlum while on his way to the depot with the corps, en route to the provinces. In a few weeks a lump appeared under his chin, caused by a knot in the lariat. This developed into an abscess which was unskillfully lanced and threw him into quick consumption, from which he has just died.

A Young Forger.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 29.—Myron W. Maynard, a 16-year-old son of a prominent retired fabric, is discovered to have forged signatures to several small checks, which he passed at stores in this city, and at Jordan, Marsh & Co's, Boston. He secured about $115 in this manner and has disappeared. He has been known as a very bright boy, but inclined to be fast.

The Highest Tide Yet.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The tide in the harbor rose higher yesterday than has been known with two exceptions within the memory of old river men. The occurrence is attributed by some to the planetary conjunctions. Cellars along the river fronts were filled with water, but goods were removal in time to prevent much damage.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—For the Atlantic coast states fair weather, slightly cooler, with brisk northerly winds.

RIDDEN ON A RAIL.

The Cause of a Demolition in Marion, Ohio.

MARION, Ohio, Sept. 29.—The greatest excitement was occasioned here by the appearance of several hundred men, mostly employes of the Huber works, bearing in their midst the form of B. J. Conwell astride of a fence rail. He was accused of being too intimate with the wife of J. B. McClinton, and McClinton's friends at the Huber shops took it upon themselves to thus stop further annoyance to that gentleman. The whole crowd chased Conwell into the country, stopped him in a watering trough and bound him upon the sharp rail. It was their further intention to tar and feather him, but they desisted upon the well-timed speech of Mayor Gaily. There was talk of arresting the leaders, but no arrests will probably be made, although many citizens condemn the act. The majority of the Huber employes are men of high character.

DEATH FROM A SPARRING MATCH

A Short Method of Disposing of a Case at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—The trial of Charles Archibald and Robert Hamilton, accused of murder in causing the death of John Cameron in May last during a sparring match between Archibald and Cameron, was had yesterday. The defense claimed that the sparring match was a friendly one, that Cameron's fatal injury on the head was received accidentally, and that Hamilton was a mere looker on. The prosecution argued that the sparring match being itself a violation of law, those concerned were criminally responsible for the results. Archibald finally plead guilty to manslaughter. The prosecution thereupon consented to the withdrawal of the case against Hamilton, and Archibald was sentenced to four and a half months' imprisonment, to date from the 24th May. Both the prisoners were therefore released.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications and to make contracts for incandescent lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient consumers of light are obtained, in such portion of the business portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed. The date at which domestic lighting will be commenced will depend somewhat upon the number of applications for light and their location.

The supply to the residence section of the city will commence very shortly after the fulfillment of the contract with the city for street lighting. A large delay in the necessity is incurred in consequence of the contemplated change in the water power, but the fulfilling line after having commenced building operations, as also on account of the loss of 500 in the machinery thereof.

The company has decided in lieu of expending the money to put a canvas for light consumers to appropriate the amount which would have been used for that purpose to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 500 lights, namely 300 in the business section and 200 in the residence section.

A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Mulford, real estate and insurance agent, 25 and 27 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will receive applications and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

PICTURES OF A NEW ROSE AND A FASHIONABLE PIG.

A Model Straw Rack — How to Box Out the Peach Tree Borer — Washes and Rots — Best Way of Drying Fruit — The Wilder Rose.

We present to our readers this week respectively pictures of a rose, a pig, a straw knife and a peach tree box. All are unrivaled in their line.

Marshall P. Wilder Rose.

Our artist has here sketched one of the new roses, the Marshall P. Wilder. It is a beauty, and becoming very popular. It belongs to the finely known as the Hybrid Perpetual. This family of roses comes nearer being constant bloomers than any others that thrive in our southern climate. All are of some shade of red or pink. The Wilder rose is named from the famous horticulturist. It is an exquisite rose, being a seedling from the royal Gen. Jacqueminot, or "Jack," as it is now stingily called. The buds are rather conical in shape. The petals are very full and closely packed, and the flower is level-topped and of great fragrance. It is of a rich, lively crimson color, with the outer petals of a dull, dark red.

THE WILDER ROSE.

Often there are as many as seven Wilder buds upon a single spray. A rare quality about this rose is that it is never without buds and blossoms from June until frost. It is also very hardy, and a splendidly vigorous grower.

Peach Tree Box.

This simple little device is said to prevent the depredations of the peach borer. It has stood the test of several years' trial. It is simply a box of four pieces of plank, about fifteen inches long, of wood that will not easily decay. It is made around the tree and sunk an inch or two into the ground. Thus the moth, from which the borer is produced, is unable to pass under. The sides of the box should not be more than two or three inches wider than the trunk of the tree. As the trees grow, the boxes can be replaced by larger ones. The spider, that is almost sure to spin its web at the top of the box, provides ample protection where the box is small.

Straw or Hay Hook.

A convenient hook for pulling straw or hay out of a stack, for distribution among sheep or cattle, is here shown. It consists of a stout pole pointed at one end; a slit is cut through it and a hook is pivoted as shown in the engraving, so that it will be pushed back when it is thrust into the stack, and drawn forward when it is pulled out. A strong cord helps to draw the hook back. When the hook is pulled out of the stack, it brings a quantity of straw or hay with it.

STRAW OR HAY HOOK.

Best Way of Drying Fruit.

The cheapest and best way of drying fruit, says an exchange, is to lay it on lengths of chess cloth, suspended in a frame out of doors, in full sun, with white mosquito netting over to keep off shrubs and insects. This allows the air to reach both sides of the fruit at once, and when you want to turn it the whole can be swung over on another cloth, leaving the first ready for a new batch. Apples should be pared, cored and cut in eight pieces. Peaches should not be pared, for the richest flavor is lost with the skin. They should have the fur removed by dipping baskets of them a moment into weak, boiling lye of wood ashes or common potash, and wipping with coarse towels. Common peaches only need to be cut in halves to dry. We had peaches dried in this way last winter, which, when cooked, would be hard to tell from the best canned peaches in looks, with richer flavor.

A Pig's Portrait.

Following is a picture of a sow whose owner considers her so handsome that he has named her Kentucky Beauty.

KENTUCKY BEAUTY.

She is a thoroughbred Chester White. This is one of the favorite breeds of the country. When full grown some of Chester White's have dressed to 1,000 pounds weight. One slaughtered recently at 21 months old weighed, dressed, 704 pounds. This breed is very strong and hardy. Yet Cromer, in "How the Farm Pays," says they eat potash too slowly and have too much bone and offal to be the farmer's most profitable hog. They are also great feeders.

Cromer's economy shows all others the Berkshire. He says they are easy feeders and weigh dressed 250 pounds at eight months, and that their pork is a lean kind, and its flesh is of superior quality. Next to the Berkshire Mr. Cromer approves the Poland-China breed. Swine can no longer be kept and fed with profit till they are nearly or quite 2 years old. Quick to grow and early to mature is the only rule of profit in pork in our time.

Now Is the Time to Take Stock.

If farmers universally kept account with their land, charging each field with cost of cultivation, and crediting it with the net sales of product over cost of marketing, they would be surprised at the amount of land which did not pay expenses. It is this condition of affairs that, if it might be called, that is the great drawback to successful farming. In an extensive acquaintance with farmers in a great many different districts, I am amazed and astonished that he did not know any farm of more than fifty acres where every acre paid expenses; on most farms of 100 or more acres all the profit, where there is any, is made from ten to twenty acres. In other words, those farmers would be practically better off, so far as profit is concerned, if they had half or a quarter as much land as they possess. With the smaller area they should have more working capital per acre, and this the sale of their superfluous land would give.

It is a fact that there are spots in otherwise fertile fields destroy all chance of profit, and compel the farmer to work them at a loss. How many places are there this year where miles after meadow after grain fields are drowned out the crop, thus losing the use of the ground, labor and seed in plowing and sowing, all of which has to be made up from the more profitable parts of the farm. Were it not for these drawbacks, farmers need not lose money even at prevailing low prices.

Most farmers will now admit that for several years they have cultivated more land than they could well afford. If they had restricted their work to the area that they could fit in the best condition and cultivate thoroughly, the profits would have been greater. —American Cultivator.

The Fowls.

At this season of the year, when prices are usually low, many are prone to look upon the dark side of poultry keeping, but as such depression is caused by a desire to reduce stock, at a point in the season when the cares of adjuncts become less frequent, and prices for poultry and eggs rise until the hens begin to lay abundantly in the spring.

Before cold weather sets in all the hens that have moulted or show signs of moulting, as they will complete the process and begin to lay before cold weather comes on. Though the rule may not be infallible, yet the hen or pullet that begins to lay on the approach of winter will generally make a good winter layer, while the one that does not commence before cold weather usually postpones operations until spring. The hens intended for market, therefore, should be those that have not moulted, as moulting requires about three months.

Another point is that a moulting hen is usually fat. This is because she stores in her system the fat of the food, while the mineral and nitrogenous elements go to the formation of feathers. Hence, a hen may be very much debilitated by the shedding of new feathering, and will be very fat. Do not feed for a moulting hen in oatmeal, with meat and milk, whenever such can be procured. Feed very little corn, as she should not be made very fat.—Rural New Yorker.

Good for Cheese Making.

Five or six years ago there was a novice of a cheese maker in Manitowoc county, Wis., who drew the whey when rather sweet for those times, salted his drained curd, heaped it in his vat and then went off to dinner, three-quarters of a mile, which took him out of the factory about an hour. We remember he was spoken of as running great risks, but somehow he always had good cheese, but the stupid crowd concerned (we should) not see them that it was his method. We can now see that he was practicing substantially the same as that now called the Arnold, Curtis or Harris method, cut out the curd, the mineral and nitrogenous elements go to the formation of feathers. Hence, a hen may be very much debilitated by the shedding of new feathering, and will be very fat. Do not feed for a moulting hen in oatmeal, with meat and milk, whenever such can be procured. SOCIALISTS SNUBBED.

DR. AVELING AND MR. LIEBNECHT UNWELCOME VISITORS

At the Manhattan Club House—Mr. Brown, a New Member, Gets Himself Into a Predicament—Cards Issued but Countermanded—How It Happened.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Nearly all the members of the Manhattan club are men of property and position, and they never tire of telling of Mr. Willard Brown but not been a very new member of the club he never would have introduced to the club two well-known Socialists, Messrs. Aveling and Liebknecht. Mr. Brown was introduced to Dr. Aveling in England by Mr. Henry Irving, and this alone was a sufficient guarantee to Mr. Brown that Dr. Aveling was not dangerous. A friendship sprung up between them, and it gave Mr. Brown pleasure to meet Dr. Aveling's friends. He tried to make things pleasant for his friend and Mr. Liebnecht. Mr. Brown presented Dr. Aveling and Mr. Liebnecht with cutting them to the freedom of the Manhattan club for two days.

On Tuesday he conducted them through the Lotos club house, and thence led them up to the Manhattan club house, into which he showed them with much pride. Many of the club members were at dinner when they were admitted by the gray-haired servant. Mr. Brown proudly escorted them the extent and grandeur of the representative Democratic club of this city. Then he led them out on the balcony that runs along under the windows of the billiard room and gave them seats. The night was not particularly bright, but Dr. Aveling is a striking-looking man, with a face that would attract attention even in a crowd. Soon a number of gentlemen were their lounging about discussing politics and other topics of the day. Among those on the balcony were Mr. Thomas Fortune Ryan, Mr. Benjamin Harrison, Mr. John W. Davis, Mr. John H. Rutherford, Mr. Cyrus Yale and Mr. Myers, the well known banker and broker. Mr. Myers caught a square view of Dr. Aveling's face, and—and it from a portrait he had seen. Dr. Aveling and Mr. Liebnecht were peacefully smoking their cigars. Mr. Myers hurriedly announced to the gentlemen around him that a Socialist was present. Then he pointed Dr. Aveling out, and a discussion concerning the propriety of his presence was begun. Mr. Brown, not seeing anybody around whom he knew very well, had started out in search of somebody to whom he could introduce his guests. He met Donald Coleman in the dining room, and, leaning over him, proudly said:

"I have two distinguished friends from abroad whom I would like to present you."

Mr. Coleman agreed to go along and be introduced, and he was shortly engaged in an animated conversation with Dr. Aveling and Mr. Liebnecht about music and art. The discussion among the gentlemen on the other end of the balcony had resulted in sending a message to Mr. Gilbert, one of the governors of the club, requesting his presence. None of the gentlemen wished to hurt Mr. Brown's feelings, but it was made clear that his guests couldn't visit the club. The statement that cards had been presented to them fell like a bomb in the midst of them. Mr. Gilbert called Donald Coleman to his side, where a crowd of excited gentlemen surrounded him. "Don't you know those men?" exclaimed Mr. Harrison. "Why, they are the Socialist Liebnecht."

The commissioner said he didn't know that, and was sorry for it. Then another informal meeting was held, in which Governors Gilbert, Yale and Coleman took part. The exclusive gentleman said that unless Dr. Aveling and Mr. Liebnecht were immediately required to go away and their cards of admission were cancelled he would resign from the club. "Those men are over here," he added, "in the interests of the Socialists who are under sentence of death in Chicago. They are enemies to the free institutions that Americans love."

The three governors called Mr. Brown to one side and told him that his guests were unwelcome visitors and must withdraw, and that the cards that he had given to them must be revoked. Mr. Brown expressed his sorrow that his guests had caused displeasure, but reminded his fellow members that he only wished to treat the foreign gentlemen courteously, as they had treated him, and that he was a new member of the club and knew nothing of its prejudices. Then he bid his guests out, and the old servitor at the door was told to note them well and admit them no more.

Dr. Aveling and Mr. Liebnecht went to Philadelphia yesterday.

Charlestonians Breathe Under Shock the 30th Has Passed.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 30.—The newspapers and scientists had done all that could be done to counteract the unnatural control by Wiggins' of great portions of terrible convictions yesterday, but no amount of assurance was sufficient to restore confidence to a people whose nerves had been shattered so terribly as were those of the people of Charleston. The sharp shocks on Monday and Tuesday made hundreds of converts to the Wiggins' predictions, and when day dawned yesterday it was upon a community dazzling in its consternation upon the brink of a fearful calamity. As a matter of fact the day passed without event. The usual tremor which took place almost every twenty-four hours was not felt, nor were there any signs of the outwarding. Local disturbances predicted by the Canadian prophet. The weather was worse last the day was bright and clear, with no signs of rain even. There is naturally a widespread feeling of relief, fraught however, with some uneasiness. The people were invited to flock at Wiggins, and to-day everybody went to work with brave hearts and renewed hope and confidence that the worst is over.

BURIAL OF BISHOP SHANAHAN.

A Notable Gathering of Catholic Clergymen at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 30.—Bishop Shanahan was buried yesterday in a vault near the Pro-Cathedral. Archbishop Ryan celebrated the requiem mass and a choir of priests sang. Bishop O'Hara, of Scranton, delivered the eulogy. Thousands of people attended the funeral. Archbishop Ryan was assisted by Bishops Watterson, of Columbus, O.; Kane, of Wheeling; O'Hara, of Scranton; Mullin, of Erie; Phelan, of Pittsburg; Conroy, of Albany, and Gilmour, of Cleveland. The choir of priests, numbering 200, was from Philadelphia. A sad and impressive part of the funeral was when the priests carried the remains of the deceased up and down State street, returning to the cathedral, where the body of the much-loved bishop was laid in the final resting place.

Overseers for Harvard.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Hon. E. Rockwell Hoar has been re-elected one of the board of overseers of Harvard college. Henry W. Putnam was elected as one of the overseers for six years. He is the only new member, the remainder of the overseers being re-elected.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

This company is prepared to receive applications and to put in apparatus for incandescent lighting for both domestic and business purposes.

As rapidly as sufficient customers of light are obtained in any section of the city or portion of the city, the necessary mains will be constructed. The date at which domestic lighting will be commenced depends entirely upon the number of applications for light each locality may furnish.

The supply to the business section of the city will commence very shortly after the fulfillment of the conditions of the city for street lighting. Some delay has necessarily been incurred in consequence of the contemplated change in the style of the poles, but building line after having commenced building operations, as also on account of the late hot days of August, which have so materially replaced.

The company has decided in lieu of entering upon a contract for light with consumers to appropriate the amount which would have been used for such purpose to the fitting and wiring free of cost the premises of the first applicants aggregating 500 lights, in any part of the residence section and 200 in the resident sections.

A temporary office has been rented from Mr. Halstead, the real estate and insurance agent, 25 and 27 North avenue, opposite the railway depot, where a representative of the company will receive applications and furnish information between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30 a. m., and 4.30 to 6.30 p. m.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE GIRL BABY AND HER FIRST HOUR AT SCHOOL.

Physical Health of Women—Utilizing Stale Bread—Short Visits the Best—Diseases Breeders—Home Files—Earache and Legaches—Notes and Paragraphs.

To-morrow my baby will be my baby no longer. She is going to school. Her world is about to widen, her life is about to broaden, but I, I shall lose my baby!

What a short six years they have been! They brought her and part her on the pillow beside me; I put my finger near her hand and she grasped it. Heaven came closer to me then I had ever dared hope it might. The first day that I set up mine eyes I gave her to me and I held her in my arms. My own little baby! I wanted no past, no future; I was supremely happy in the present.

Then she lay in her crib and followed me with her eyes that was bliss. When she cooed to me! When she stretched out her little hands to me! When she laughed as I came near her! Ah, God be very good to mothers, and I wondered why such joy should come to me. Perhaps there was a pang of sorrow as she fell off her long clothes. Yet the coming State of short, the creeping figure, the standing steps, the final walking, these made the change a time of fulness for the mother, and this baby was still all my own.

She grew in everything except in getting along without me. Mamma has been the pivot around which her life has revolved. She has known no will but mine, no pain, her disappointments, her failures and her joys. In my ear she has whispered the wonderful thoughts that childhood lives upon. No mystery could reach so high or go down such depths but that mamma could answer it. No danger could threaten her that mamma's arms were not a safe refuge from. No pain so severe but that mamma's kiss could relieve it.

How many hours in these six years have we two been together! Ah, me, we shall be lost one from this on, but we have been but one thus far. Not any less evil for her than I am, are the hundred heroes of stories that I have evolved for her; they seem very real indeed, to me. If I have experienced her joy has no less been my "vicarious," and has related tales fully as impossible as the Arabian Nights. Of late she has wandered further away, but never so far but that she could run quickly home if her fear was aroused. She has brought with her thoughts gathered from other children, but they are brought to be tried in the crucible of mamma's judgment and valued. When she "keeps house" I often take tea with her, and she cannot take more pleasure in the "make believe" than I do.

But now she is going to school! I shall lose my baby; I have lost her. She will leave the door with kisses on her lips, and my words in her ear, but she will come home full of words of companionship, of ideas. She will pass into a world where I am not; where I can only follow at a distance; and she will never again be wholly mine. Oh, good teacher! she is but one of fifty in your room, and, perhaps, in your eyes, one of the least interesting. But, oh, she is my one ewe lamb, and heaven shines on me out of her eyes. I must have shone on her in like wise.

Your praise will count with her greater than mine; your frown will be more fearful than all my thunders. She was a baby a half an hour ago, but she is one no longer. I shall pick up most of the playthings and put them away. To-morrow night she will look on them with scorn, she is a child, not a baby no longer, and she will have put away her baby things.

So I sit here pitying myself while I pray her to my heart. She is full of the happiest anticipations, but I whisper to my aching heart—I am about to lose my baby.—William H. Maher, in The Toledo Journal.

Short Visits Are the Best.

It is not always wise to make a rule that callers be not admitted during the evening; on the contrary, a guest may be heartily welcomed if it is known at the outset that he has come for a short time, that he is cheerful, and friendly, and conversing, in brief, worth listening to and entertaining. From the borrowing visitor at all times, good Lord, deliver us. But the ill-concealed gloom that settles down upon one friend as the hours pass, while the clock strikes the succeeding half hours, and each member of the family in turn comes despairingly to the rescue of the faltering conversation, is a deplorable thing. We are responsible for the state of our consciences, and if we have allowed them to become so dull that they do not give us the unmistakable warning to go away, then we must not fret if we are warded off, dreaded and called bores. I was delighted to hear some one say, the other day, that she did not think she had any right to spend two hours at a time with any friend, without a special invitation, since it could not fail to be an interruption; and it gave joy to my heart to find one person so respected the rights of others. Picture some one, who has assured himself that he is not likely to find amusement under his own roof, sitting forth in search of a more agreeable place in which to spend the evening. He hunts from door to door, finding that one family has honestly paid its money and gone to a play, another is dining out, the third enjoying its invited guests, while at the fourth he is met at sight with the information that the ladies are engaged. Perhaps at the fifth he gains an entrance.

One person rises hurriedly from the sofa; another comes reluctantly from a desk, where many notes and letters must be written at some time during that evening, and the stricken group resigns itself to the demands of friendship and society. The master of the house retires solemnly to his vocation, with a heavy sigh. It may be 8 o'clock when the guest comes; it may be 9, and he may be kind-hearted and unobjectionable; he may be even entertaining and interesting; but he stays until after 10; everybody thinks that he never means to go, and inwardly regrets his presence. For half an hour he could have been one of welcome; in that time he certainly could have said and done all that was worth doing, and have been asked to stay longer, or to come again soon, when he took leave.

There is no greater compliment or tribute to one's integrity than to be fairly entrusted to sit down for ten minutes longer. Of course, we treat each other chiefly in an evening visit, and it is a great deal better to come away too soon than to stay too late. In a large, over-worked and over-hurried city life, sacrificing is so prevailing a habit of society to one's self, or even a part of one. We all wish—or ought to wish—to make life pleasant for ourselves and other people, and are ready to be generous (even with our time), but no one likes to be plundered and defrauded. It is the underlying principle of our neighbor's action and comfort to which we appeal, and the thankful or resentful when he comes to visit us.—Atlantic Monthly.

To Utilize Stale Bread.

A great deal of bread is thrown away by those who can ill afford it, from the lack of knowledge how to utilize it. On the farm, in most instances, of course, stale bread is not wholly lost, for if not a dish it makes good feed for the poultry, or may be given to the pigs, but this is not the best way to make use of it, even by those who have poultry and pigs. There are many ways to use stale bread. It makes delicious griddle cakes when soaked in cold water. Three small slices, with water enough to cover them, should be sufficient, when the milk and flour are added, to make two quarts of batter. Some prefer to put in one egg, while others like them fully as well without.

When the bread is soaked soft, make it fine with a spoon, add the milk and sufficient flour to stiffen enough so that the cakes can be easily turned. If sour milk is used add to the batter one even teaspoonful of soda. If you do not have sour milk, twice as much cream of tartar as soda. French toast, always a favorite dish with children, can be made of this when cut from a stale loaf and moistened in milk and then one egg to a pint of milk—and then fried on a griddle with a mixture of butter and lard or butter and beef drippings, and may be eaten with sugar or syrup, like griddle cakes. Pieces of bread which are not too hard can be made into a resemblance of turkey dressing. Cut the bread into dice, and fry in butter a quantity of gravy from which fat can be taken, left from any kind of roast—though a piece of butter will do as well—thoroughly grease the bottom of a pudding dish, and with some little chunks of butter and plenty of seasoning; then pour enough boiling water on to moisten it, cover tightly, and in a moment it will steam through and you can stir it, and either brown a little or have it moist, like dressing. It should be eaten with gravy over it, and is a good substitute for potatoes.

The little dirty, hard pieces and crusts which, always accumulate can be put on a pie tin in an oven that is just hot enough to dry and make them a light brown; then roll fine and put away to use in making croquettes, frying fish, etc. Even these slightly browned crumbs make excellent griddle cakes with the addition of one egg and a little more flour and milk to a batter. Stale bread may be utilized in making a custard pudding, also. The fact is that where economy is the rule bread will not be thrown away.—Chicago News.

Physical Health of Women.

Now the laws that govern physical health and the conditions that promise it are far better understood and more generally obeyed by this generation than by any preceding one. Instead of people going to bed at dead beds, in well ventilated chambers, rise to take their stimulating bath in a comfortable bath room, breast themselves in flannels and heavy suitings when the weather requires them, eat their well cooked breakfast of well chosen food, wrap themselves sufficiently, and wear thoroughly good and healthful shoes, they thoroughly fortified, seek to spend as much time out of doors as their affairs will permit. Young women ride, skate, bowl, play billiards, go out in all weathers, and in most ways lead far more healthful lives than their mothers did.

If, with all these offsets, the stimulating influences of their lives still tell upon them with harmful effect, making the old trouble more frequently manifest, and new troubles at their time, the cause, we think, is to be found in their emotional precocity. From the baby of 2, stimulated by mornings and nightings to a dramatic passion of affection for its mother or its nurse, to the maiden of 18, ready to toss her heart to the first empty fellow that comes by, it is hard to say that every girl is hurried in her emotional development.

A certain famous teacher once declared that she would not have in her school a pretty and charming under-teacher, who "fascinated" the pupils, because they were there to have their minds and not their sensibilities developed. Such a course would be abnormal. But no experience is to commence than this. The late hours, the familiar mingling in the festivities of their elders, the reading of sentimental books and papers, the stimulating effect of complex diet—the dressing, in a word, of the more sophisticated life around them—prepare girls to spend their all of sensibility in their early youth, and leave them but a dull monotony of middle age.

If we are to have wives and mothers equal to their high offices, we must protect and shield our young girls from the blighting and indoctrinated by this terrible "go" of American life. It is not study that will hurt them; it is the over-sensibility that study does much to smother. It is not thinking that will wear them out; it is feeling.—Harper's Bazar.

Disease Breeders.

Far too many houses, both in city and country, are positively dangerous. Many city houses stand on made land, or at least that which was formerly swampy. The foundation walls, when not laid in cement, are often stand on posts alone—are built of solid masonry, but with no cement either outside or in. Such walls are open to take up water nearly as rapidly as a sponge. Then if slowly trickles down the inside, emitting malaria, forming a fine soil in which all manner of fungi grow, ready to break out the moment the warm, sunshiny days of spring bring the heat and the moisture about him a little closer and relief is sure.

A croupy cough can often be loosened and prevented by swathing the throat with dry, warm flannel, and a thick cloth is laid around the throat and chest often helps so speedily that it is not necessary to slacken the child with pause, or to wake the house kindling fires and getting a poultice.—Charles Potter, in Good Housekeeping.

To Get Rid of House Flies.

I have discovered a great way to destroy house flies. It has the advantage of cheapness, and also preventing dead flies from falling into everything, as they do when poison is used. Take a common glass pan, or tumbler, of melted resin and tender oil. Stir until thoroughly mixed, which will take only a minute. While yet a little warm spread thin and evenly on the window sash. It will not spoil stick fast, and soon pull themselves down. When the papers are covered two or three thicknesses deep, put in the stove and replace with another one. Be sure to open the door, or oil prevents the resin from hardening, and has the peculiarity of not evaporating. The oil leaves only enough to coat. Ten cents will buy enough to kill all the flies in a hotel.—Cor. Western Rural.

Rules for Living Well.

If living well consists in living neither luxuriously nor expensively, in what, then, lies the secret, and how may the man of moderate means manage to live well? If the question is not a difficult one to answer, and we will put that answer in the shape of a few short rules:

1. Pay with judgment.

2. Buy the best, for the best is always the cheapest.

3. Let your economy regulate the quantity, not the quality.

4. Let your cook be a cook, and one that knows how to utilize what is now thrown to the dogs, or otherwise wasted.

5. Study simplicity in the number of the dishes, and variety in the character of the meals.

6. Let the housewife be watchful enough to trace the leaks that are liable to spring in every larder.

7. Let the mistress be indeed the head of her own household and of her own kitchen.—The Christian.

More About Millinery.

Velvet and plush bonnets and hats are to be worn this season. The brims are cut in the rude, plainly faced with pieces cut to fit exactly, and but very few shirred brims are seen. There are turbans made entirely of feathers; also hats and bonnets made in part or altogether of feather trimming. Bands of this trimming are seen on large hats, and brims are bound with it. Plushes with small polka dot effects are among the new goods for making and trimming bonnets and hats, although fancy materials will be more used for trimming than for the body fabric.

Now hats made of boucle woolen goods laid smoothly over the frame are light and very stylish, and need but little trimming. Other hats have a scarf-piece of velvet, plush and Astrakhan brims, and there are bindings and facings of Persian lambskin. Hats that look like corduroy come in gray and brown and are made up ready for trimming.

Bonnets and hats generally in jet, although a few are shown in fine and copper color. They are trimmed with tulle and velvet flowers or beaver, also with velvet bows, loops and ends, and with jet and tulle wreath. A charming bonnet in this style is trimmed with algerons of picot-edged velvet ribbon and long straw color. Other bonnets made of beads are in pale blue, pink, gold and crystal. Ostrich tips with pearl bead drops are used for trimming with picot-edged velvet ribbon.

Straw hats will be worn until the very coldest weather. Brown, navy blue, deep olive and black are the favorite colors. Straw hats for late autumn are faced with velvet or plush, and the same material enters largely into the trimming. Loose bunches of dark flowers are used on hats that match the dress, and to take out the tints of fruit in dark "blooay" colors are used. Peacher, plums, blackberries, bunches of currants, bright fall leaves and small ears of ripe corn are used. If you want anything new to the place where you can find bargains every day is the eye.

Children's Clothing.

There are now trimmings of all kinds that come ready-made for children's clothing. The new braids, galloons, machinery, are handsome and seem almost indestructible. There have been for some time these ready-made trimmings for white goods, dresses, aprons and underwear. This season these ready-made trimmings come in new and different fabrics adapted to wider in bands of applique work, silk and mohair, three to five inches wide. They are very attractive, and come in the new shades.

Flannel, with one edge embroidered, is sent in patterns from the simplest designs to the very elaborate. These are worked with one color only—white, but red, pink, pale blue and gray; and a lady embroidering a flannel skirt nowadays would be thought old-fashioned.

Children's clothing, so far as seen, is very warm and sensible looking.

The sailor blouse suit is again the favorite for small children who are always wriggling out of their dress and need room to play.

Any dark flannel or serge is chosen; the skirt is finished above the hem with a band of braid, or silk, or flannel, pinked out like a finger wide, and then laid in two-inch side plaits. Care should always be taken to well lap the plaits and fasten firmly, that one and may not give way, letting the plait slide and ruining the whole effect of a very pretty costume. We always advise attaching the skirt to a good strong elastic waist; the blouse, of course, is made to match the skirt, and the sailor collar meets to a point low in front, and often the trimming forms the sailor's knotted neckerchief.

We there of no prettier traveling suit for a child than the sailor blouse.

More elaborate frocks are made quite like the older misses'. The skirt has two rows of velvet and is box plaited. The bodice is tight-fitting, has pointed plastrons of velvet both back and front, with folds of the material bordering them. A sash in soft folds encircles the waist and gives very pretty effect to the back. The sleeves are very full, gathered below the elbow and again at the bottom into velvet cuffs. One of the prettiest dresses imaginable for girls from 6 to 9 years.

Another pretty little dress is made of wool goods and velveteen. The latter forms the front of skirt and basque, with wool sleeves. The wool goods is laid in box plaits in front, also at the back, and is very full. Wide sash ends with soft bows and ends of velveteen.—New York Fashion Bazar.

For Parade and Dress Trimmings.

Fine glass beads, usually black, are freely worn for dress trimmings, and are brought out in all the new designs, such as fringes, braid, velvet or passamenterie stripes. The beads are very small and are not set close together, yet their sparkle brightens up the effect to a certain extent. There are also cord stripes woven in that look like rows of passamenterie, and others are like bourette cords with rough threads knotted at intervals. More than all else, however, are the velvet stripes, which come to various widths, but are handsomest when an inch and a half or two inches wide. These may be of the color of the dress, or of velvet in contrast, or otherwise, or they may be made up of narrow stripes of various colors forming broad stripes. Fine velvet stripes are again seen, also tapestry stripes, and these are handsomely combined with stripes arranged as side bands. Cashmere colors, as rich as those seen in India shawls, are woven in stripes alternating with velvet or plush stripes of cardinal, copper, red shades, or of rosewood, mahogany, navy blue or the reddish heliotrope tints that are now so fashionable in dress goods. Some of the new stripes are in gray and white, or other
